IN RE Κερκίδος.

“Life is the garment of Eternity,
Which be the vestment of God Himself.
Each man be the keeper of an golden thread
Spun from the radiant heart of God.—
This he plies at will, making or marring
The perfect pattern.
Yea, man is a bobbin,
Slipping the woof of Hope
'Twixt the warp of Faith
Upon the loom of Love . . .
Despite his rebellions
He must lend him unto the weaving;
And that which is not perfect
He shall RE-WEAVE . . .
This is the mercy of this Just God,
Whose labours are perfect.
Man, in his fulfilment of this Perfection, (Having inherited the power of creation), Createth HIMSELF unto perfection.
—This is the Law of the Perfect.—
Man is the bobbin,—
At weaving the vestment of God,
Who, in His love, requireth Perfection,
Wherein is reflected His own Countenance,
And man's kinship in full is declared.”

NOTE

I do not feel that I am under any obligations to the public or private libraries, the authorities of which have allowed their MSS. to be photographed at my expense, as this is an insurance on their part against destruction of such records by fire, and I have had to provide such libraries as a rule with two and sometimes three copies of each MS., which copies are probably kept apart from the MSS. themselves. But I am, of course, under considerable obligations to the Librarians of these institutions. I cannot name them all, but those who have given more of their time than others, and who never fail to show the most tireless courtesy, are Father (now Cardinal) Ehrle of the Vatican and M. Henri Omont of the Paris Nationale, to whom I beg to extend my warmest thanks publicly. I must also mention Mr. Popoff of the Library of the Holy Synod, Moscow, who took much trouble years ago to furnish me with working photographs of the Moscow codices, and mounted them all personally in an album.

AS TO ARCHAEOGRAPHY

Words are instruments of reasoning, not objects of science.

WILLIAM OF OCCHAM.

When we hear a stream called Wans-beck-water and know that the three words of which the word is made up all signify 'water,' the first being Celtic (as in Wan's-ford, A-von), the second German (beck = bach), the last English, we at once recognize three changes of inhabitants to whom the former name successively lost its significance.

It is painful and humiliating to reflect how much, after all one's thought and labour, the execution of a task like this must fall short, not merely of the exactions of a rigorous criticism, but even of one's own imperfect conceptions. It may be, indeed, that what I have attempted in this book is not yet to be effected by one man and at one effort, and perhaps, in reference to its wider scope, all that I can hope to do, is to awaken the dormant energies of some young student, who may be qualified at a future period to solve completely and finally the great problem. . .

J. W. DONALDSON. PREFACE TO THE NEW CRATYLUS. 1839.

"Es ist nicht zu vergessen, dass für die Apostelgeschichte, die Katholischen und Paulinischen Briefe, und die Apokalypse, die Kleinschrift-Handschriften eine grössere Bedeutung haben als für die Evangelien, weil die Grossschrift-Handschriften hier in viel geringerer zahl vorhanden sind."

C. R. GREGORY. TEXTKRITIK. p. 263.

"As it is admitted on all hands that the text of the Apocalypse is less satisfactorily represented in our printed editions than that of any other part of the N.T. I deeply regret that scholars should have published a revision of it, even within the last few years, without having previously sought to add to our existing store of materials, or at least to test their accuracy. . . I cannot doubt then that the present contribution will be welcome to those who desire to see the text of the Apocalypse settled on a firmer basis: a task not only less toilsome, but (I will venture to say) less precarious in its results than the criticism of the Gospels: so much easier is it in this instance to distinguish the broad tide-wave of ancient evidence from those local currents which bewilder the inexperienced voyager."

SCRIVENER. CODEX AUGIENSIS. Introduction, pp. lxxviii, lxxix.

"On the whole we must admit that no very definite conclusions have as yet been reached, and I propose to begin the examination de novo, not with the hope of resolving the whole of the ambiguities of the ancient Western textual history, but because it is only by trying patiently to solve a part of the problem by a new examination, that the way can be made for some one else to solve the remaining part."

PROLEGOMENA

General.

The Apocalypse of St. John is a work which we cannot neglect. It is difficult to understand, its sub-divisions are almost too intricate to follow or to harmonize, but it is certainly not a fairy-tale. It does not seem to be a succinct history of events to come, but presents a series of visions which seem partly to overlap. It has fascinated many including the great Newton, who wrote a commentary upon it.

Its "periods" agree with the principles of the book of Daniel, and, however hard to interpret, we must take it into consideration in the last days, when we are face to face with the fulfilment of prophecy.

Before the great war of our days, who would have thought that the destruction of a third of the ships of the world (Apoc. viii. 9) could be intended literally? Yet such an event actually took place, because twelve million tons of shipping out of thirty-six millions were sunk. In the light of that event, the prophecies, so crowded, so diverse, so intricately presented, must be taken in all seriousness.

As prophecy meets fulfilment, the rest of this extraordinary book will be more easy to understand. In our time, apparently, great and perhaps increasing earthquakes must take place. We have already had a serious foretaste of them. This does not seem unnatural, seeing that the whole creation groaneth and travaileth at its work of evolution, and the immense withdrawals of oil which are now gushing from the bowels of the earth may be playing their part as a contributory cause, aside from any other considerations in the hotter and deeper parts of our planet.

I am not, however, concerned with the interpretation of the Book, but, in my capacity as a textual critic and student, I wish to present to others the proper foundations upon which they can build.

Textual study must always be the forerunner of any interpretation. The solution of any textual difficulties must precede any final and authoritative explanation of the text.

Many years ago I began the examination of the Greek documents available for the Apocalypse. The result follows in these volumes. Fire and wars, pestilence and the carelessness of man, have deprived us of our legitimate heritage, for many valuable documents have only perished since the Middle Ages, and the last war is responsible for the disappearance of seven of our manuscripts. Enough remains, however, for us to make an attempt at reconstruction. There are no great basic differences or difficulties. The common text may stand for all that criticism has to say as to the structure of the book as a whole. But I hope that my work may tend to settle the text as it has to be debated clause by clause.

The war interrupted the task when I had reached number 123 of the list of cursives. Five years have been lost. Owing to work with the armies my eyesight and right hand have suffered, but I have at last been able to complete the review of all the evidence in 1927.

Provenance of MSS.

I feel that I have not done justice to the provenance of the different MSS., and that a good deal might be learned from discovering the locality of the activities of our different scribes.

I can only say that any deductions from the study of the photographs, often of mere portions of a complete MS., would be difficult and untrustworthy.

Perhaps some one, with this book in hand, may succeed in finding out where the MSS. were executed, and thus throw light on some of their inter-relations, which are no doubt due to local influences and traditions.

Calabria. As regards Calabria see under No. 104.

Let it be clearly understood at the outset that my investigation of the transmission of the text of the Apocalypse has been and is being made without the slightest prejudice, or bias, or preconceived ideas.

It is the subject of a scientific enquiry, to determine, if possible, in what measure the elder authorities may represent the basic text, and where they have or may have misrepresented it.

I am using all existing documents to check each other in this respect.

Families. The first results obtained have been to segregate by families the series of Greek MSS. which really belong together as a unit.† This reduces the unwieldy number of our witnesses and establishes the particular MS. in a given tribe which is the most trustworthy.

These families overlap to some extent, but from some 230 Greek MSS. we can reduce them by families, small and large, to about thirty units by groups, and fifteen units so far standing more or less alone, which is a distinct gain in dealing with the problem.

There is a threefold object in this examination. One phase of the matter is concerned with the history of the Text pure and simple; the second concerns the proof of error or the measure of rectitude in the elder documents and the question of 'mother-readings'; and the third is the establishment of a group of Greek material, which may prove to be older than our fourth-century witnesses, from which latter documents so far no appeal has been allowed.

The argument must be sought in the discussion of readings under the various manuscripts and of their recensions by groups, as well as individually. It would be next to impossible to resume all the dissertations and to knot up the various threads and cross-threads, as I would wish, into a beautiful spider's web in the Introduction.‡

Faint-places. Apart from a few faint places in the common original, which has led to variants of the mater-lectionis sometimes bordering on non-sense, my impression is that we have the exact sense of the original, and as regards the sequences,—Charles to the contrary notwithstanding,—there is nothing much in the Manuscripts or Versions to lead us to believe that the basic document was arranged in different order. See, however, under our No. 189.

As to the beginning and ending, accommodation may have made itself felt; if so, then it was very early in the history of transmission. Regarding this, notice the testimony of 143, of Dion. h Prim. Cass. at the beginning, and of others in xxii. 6/7.

It will be impossible to assess the second volume at its proper value without considerable study of what follows, especially with regard to the importance of the individual MSS., entering into the corpus of collected readings.

Under each MS. will be found a digest of its history, of its idiosyncracies and of its family propensities,—or of its independence. To neglect a study of this will be to invalidate † See Scrivener's remarks as to the primary necessity of this before going further, in his Preface to the Collation of 20 Gospel MSS., p. xiii. Von Soden attempted this, but his f. following a number is often misleading. Such group may exclude the most reliable MS. of the grouping if it opposes, and its testimony be passed by in silence.

‡ I do not expect to disarm criticism concerning the course adopted. All I can say is that the waning of my physical strength has alone prevented me from making the attempt to co-ordinate the whole argument in these Prolegomena, which I would have preferred to see spread out in one place and woven into one piece of cloth. As it is, my patchwork quilt must be examined beyond under the several MSS. and MS.-groups.

the student's power of assessing values. Therefore it is requested that considerable attention be paid to what is said under each number.

My old friend Dr. Scrivener tried to interest the so-called learnèd world in these matters in the Gospels. He discovered and laid bare the secrets of numerous very valuable cursive documents. I have called attention to some of his extremely interesting key-documents in my "Codex B and its allies," vol. i., pp. 434/54, but in spite of the clues thus available to assist in settling many interesting and intricate points which are actually at issue and under debate in the modern field of textual study, the readings of such key-manuscripts as his c (old number 511) have been almost overlooked. I hope the "New Tischendorf" will be a living vibrating volume such as Donaldson's "New Cratylus." Key-documents.

We will never make progress unless we take up where our forefathers left off and cease to play about with symbols.

The documents to which attention should particularly be directed are those which have a history independent of Church 'use,' and which owe their freedom from Ecclesiastical standardization to their transmission apart from the documents collected as our 'New Testament.' They are found in collections of treatises on mystical subjects and are listed under many numbers, and include no less than forty of our manuscripts, among which are 35 36 38 58 81 122 140 143 148 152 170 174 176 200 222 233 240 251, all documents meriting attention.

Among these figure 35, 38, 58, 122, 140, 148, 152, 170, 240, which belong to groups, and although the other members accompany church documents, it is clear that the families were originally more or less independent of ecclesiastical revision.

I ask that my apparatus be confronted with those of Tischendorf, Von Soden, Horner, Swete or Charles. Apparatus.

In the case of Tischendorf whole verses are left without notes, where I fill a page. Take any verse at random.

In Horner's apparatus Prim. appears from time to time, and quite rarely, but this witness is of first-rate importance, and must be cited throughout. The early witness of Hippolytus, Methodius, Origen and others is also neglected.

In the case of Soden he leaves aeth out of consideration (just as he neglected pers elsewhere), and fails to connect the Versions in important places, besides giving us the usual complex so difficult to untangle.

I cannot pretend to review von Soden's work here, but many of my major documents are not dealt with at all. I will give an instance of neglect in other matters. At vi. 12 Soden has ολη in his text after ἡ σεληνη, and in his notes merely records MSS. which omit. It is not in our textus receptus; but he quite fails to indicate that +ολη occurs in three different positions in MSS., nor does he set forth that sah Victorinus and Auct. prom. omit it.

In Charles' case Gregory's numeration is adopted and runs to four figures, which would have ruined my work. He refuses to repeat Tischendorf's quotations of Iren. gr. ex Anastasio, although this sometimes supports our famous codex 143.

I think a comparison will show a fuller and better and more complete picture of all cognate matters in my apparatus.

From the openings of each verse, where I have assembled some of the Version readings, it will easily be recognized how the Versions used the Commentaries in compiling their texts (e.g. xxi. 1).

The only information we have from von Soden as to the codices which he attempted to use in his apparatus is conveyed on the separate card issued with the last volume of Text, and embracing only about seventy MSS. out of the two hundred (plus) catalogued. von Soden.

This list is absolutely unsatisfactory.

It is easy enough to identify the δ codices, but he subdivides the rest into four I classes and three K classes, further subdividing these into seven classes of I^a, two classes of I^b, two classes of I^c, one class of I^r; one class each of K^c, K^o, and K.

Now, surely, we do not need here this class subdivision, but the proper nomenclature of the MSS. under their catalogue heads, which is not given. If he names δ 2, δ 3, δ 4 we can identify as ℵ, C, A, but we cannot tell what he means by citing 1579 twice, once under class I^r and once under class K^o; nor MS. 501, cited under I^{a1} and under I^{b7}; nor 10, cited under I^{a2} and under I^{o1}.

The muddle, indeed, becomes pitiful.

I have drawn out the whole schedule and compared it with the catalogue lists, but much uncertainty remains.

For instance, his No. 31 can be either $A\nu^{31}$ or Oec^{31} (both numbers occur, and indicate two different manuscripts). The same applies to No. 501, which can be $A\nu^{501}$ or α 501; there are also $A\nu^{503}$ and α 503; as to No. 10, it can be either $A\nu^{10}$ or $A\rho^{10}$; as to No. 51, it can be $A\nu^{51}$ or α 51; the same applies to 52, 53, 500; the same to 400 (following δ 200) can be either δ 400 or α 400 or $A\nu^{400}$. The same as to No. 11, can be $A\nu^{11}$ or $A\rho^{11}$, two very different MSS. (our 68 and 95).

I shall give what indications I can in my list as I go along, but it is all very unsatisfactory, complicated and discouraging. This classification of von Soden means nothing at all, because we have MSS., one half of which belong to one recension, and the other half to another recension, of which he takes no notice, for his work was all done under pressure and pride to get the whole work out himself, in his own way and most imperfectly, neglecting advice from his collators.

Many of the most important MSS. are not handled at all, and we must begin all over again. If the documents on the card-index had been properly examined, the list could be cut down with advantage.

Another disastrous feature is that in the case of a MS. of the whole N.T., catalogued under δ as to the Gospels, the Apoc. promptly reappears under δ, although the Apoc. may be—and in one case is—a copy of the printed text!

The rest of the N.T.

Towards the close of our labours, it becomes apparent that the task we suggest to others of the collation of the existing rich material of the other books of the N.T. is not at all superhuman, and ought to have been undertaken long ago.

Take the 2000 MSS. of the Gospels. It will doubtless be found, as here, that, after 100 have been carefully collated, the rest fall into well-defined groups, with perhaps here and there an exception. Let the latter then be carefully and thoroughly collated in full, but a quicker examination of the others (if properly carried out) will soon classify them with other groups. This established, and a few more important passages tabulated (to show the traditional readings, which may vary in the same group, owing to the standpoint of and documents available to the scribe), they can be neglected as far as thorough collation goes, and the task much reduced and simplified.

The same applies to the 500 MSS. of the Acts and Cath. epistles, to the 500 MSS. of the Pauline epistles, and to the 1500 Service-books.

Surely here is a thankworthy task, much more interesting than mere cataloguing, and one that will not consume a disproportionate amount of time compared with the results to be attained.

For if we cannot obtain an absolutely pure text, we can (as I have shown) constantly remove plain and clear errors from the ancient documents, and these can only properly be detected and condemned by the cumulative evidence of the later documents, in such a manner (and in a way that cannot be gainsaid), as I exhibit the plain and clear errors of the Apocalypse in my second volume.

Systematic criticism.

The following pages are offered to the catholic-Church-at-large as an individual effort to bring to bear upon the field of sacred textual criticism a more systematic scheme of rehabilitation.

Enough is now spread upon the record to show whether the same plan, carried out in the adjacent field of Gospels, Acts and Epistles, would be worth while. I think the answer can only be an emphatic affirmative.

Not only do we thus identify and group the minor documents—thus reducing their bulk—but in the aggregate their group-testimony almost infallibly enables us, as I say, to detect and classify the errors of the more ancient MSS.

We accomplish a double purpose. For we can now praise on the one hand the perspicuity of certain scholars for what they guessed at and which is now shown to be truth. And on the other we can disprove many other of their assumptions, based on insufficient or partial evidence.

It is not necessary that a patient collator should be a great scholar, but it is imperative that our future revisers should be provided with the materia they themselves have despised to accumulate and digest.

Harmonization.

A feature of very great importance in connection with the book of the Revelation here comes into play, which has not hitherto been discussed properly in all its bearings. My labours will now facilitate this. I refer to the same problem as that which confronts us in the Synoptic Gospels, viz. the attempt to harmonize different wording or different constructions in varying parts of the narrative, which has led to the utmost confusion, simply because former zealous editors and recensors—(I refer to those of ancient not modern times)—have not been willing to concede that the author of the book chose from time to time to vary his expressions of the same phrase or words. They have denied him this right. But for this phase of the situation, my apparatus could be cut in half. But different censors wish to insist that if it is ἐπὶ τῆς γῆς in one place it cannot be ἐπὶ τὴν γῆν or ἐν τῇ γῇ in another! And so the bad work went on down the centuries. For there are endless places where repetition occurs,—perfectly natural repetition, and probably in different words, cases, order or construction by the author, which later students have been at the pains to try and torture into harmony, just as invariably happens when more modern revisers try to render foreign words by a consistent English expression,—a thing which cannot be done,—or when the printer insists upon trying to make all the copy come out consistently and standardize the author's style. It simply destroys individuality of treatment in different places.

One of the greatest evils in the text of the Apocalypse, as in the Synoptic Gospels, is this desire on the part of the old redactors to harmonize phrases and to assimilate constructions, and not allow the author the least latitude of expression.

But they do worse. If in one place we have ἀλλὰ ἔχω κατὰ σου ὀλιγα they must needs have it ὀλιγα in the next place instead of πολύ, or vice versa, and if merely ἔχω κατὰ σου they add πολύ or ὀλιγα.

There are of course more difficult places, e.g.

ii. 22, where for ἰδοῦ (ἐγω) βάλλω (vel βαλῶ) αὐτὴν εἰς κλίνην the Greek uncial A substitutes φυλακήν, but no one else. Yet sah has ἀσθένειαν alone, showing that there may have been a marginal note here, not since infiltrated into the text; while arm 4. has 'the pains of a couch' and the other armm 'a furnace' duly found in 167 as κλίβανον; while Prim. for lectum says 'alia transl = luctum.' I find now that 207*mg.* has ἀσθένιαν, 229*mg.* κλίνη ἀσθένειας, and interlined in 166 σύμβολον ἀσθένειας καὶ θανάτου.

Scribes.

But for the most part the scribes themselves are guiltless. Our numerous families afford us the opportunity of studying these matters carefully. It is not they, but overzealous revisers who have attempted uniformity. The scribes, are, ninety per cent., careful and honest.

Objects of the investigation.

The following treatise is then a contribution to the true science of textual criticism, and is offered with a fourfold object in view.

First: to show how other books of the N.T. must be treated, before we can make further progress.

Second: to encourage others to take up another book, say Acts, and work at it in detail, exactly on these lines.

Thirdly: to show up the plainest and clearest errors of the English and American Revisers, and of those who immediately preceded them, so that they must be excommunicated—(the errors)—now, and excised at the next Revision.

Fourthly: to block all thought of revision until the rest of the cursives are examined.

Those who go deep enough into them, know how fascinating are these studies. There is no glory and no money in the work, but there is a rich personal reward awaiting any, who, properly equipped with patience, accuracy, and good eyesight, and a judicial mind, enter the arena for serious investigation. Surface work is useless, and only necessitates its being done over again, for many documents are not entities, but composed piecemeal from different recensions. Worse than that, it befogs the issues, and causes quotations of "teste this" and "teste the other," or "me teste," and so forth, when the issue should be clear and uncompromising.

Pitfalls.

The pitfalls in these studies are many and varied; but by the aid of photography and liberal Library rules, anyone to-day can procure the treasures of the great libraries at very moderate cost, and consult the documents, practically at first hand. At any rate this is the case, where there are not many difficult contemporary corrections. The collations of Matthaei and Scrivener, for the cursives they have examined, are the only ones which can be relied upon for proper accuracy. We have striven to do as well or better than they. We know, in fact, from comparison with their labours on the same MSS., just what our own shortcomings are. For instance, in the case of Matthaei, who compared his MSS. of the Apoc. twice and very carefully, where we convict him of a dozen oversights, he has caught us in two or three at the most. That is satisfactory, but of course the element of human fallibility remains, and we can only hope for the nearest approach to perfect accuracy that is humanly possible. The converse is seen in the work of Birch or Reiche. Let us never return to such undignified inaccuracy as theirs.

Lower criticism.

This branch of sacred criticism, while known as the "lower branch," is perforce the only safe stepping-stone to the "higher branch" of constructive criticism and exegesis. Yet, how few of our commentators and exegetes are properly equipped for their chosen field by a thorough knowledge of the "lower" criticism!

I was struck by this recently. On turning up a reference of Wordsworth to Davidson's Introduction, vol. 3, pp. 552 and following, I came across this (on p. 557): "In the Apocalypse we find ὁ διψων ελθετο, ὁ θελων λαμβανετω υδωρ ζωης δωρεαν. So in the Gospel ἐαν τις διψα, ἐρχεσθω προς με και πινετω." I have underlined the words that struck me. Had Davidson been more careful, he would have strengthened his argument immensely. He is comparing St. John's diction in the Gospel with that of the writer of the Apocalypse to prove their similarity. But ἐλθέτο—(he means ἐλθέτω)—is only a vagary of Erasmus. The real and only reading here is ἐρχέσθω, corresponding exactly with the gospel language. We can even go a step farther, and say that the form λαμβανετω should be λαβετω, corresponding more closely to πινετω. This illustration, but one out of very many which could be adduced, will show my meaning when I emphasize the value of the "lower" criticism, which churchmen are generally in such haste to leave behind all too soon, and where we need all the help we can obtain.

Note also that there is not so much error in pure transcription as one would suppose.

There are certain verses which the scribes, one and all, seem to have left almost untouched. Such are i. 1, 3, 7, 15, 16; ii. 6, 7, 11, 12, 17, 23, 28; iii. 5; vi. 16; vii. 13; viii. 4; ix. 17; xi. 18; xii. 17; xvi. 19, 20; xvii. 14, 15; xviii. 23/23 (by most); xix. 18.

And beyond this, our large groups reveal the fact that ten out of twelve scribes are not only perfectly conscientious copyists, but go to extremes in copying the manifest errors of the common exemplar, and are too ignorant of the text to notice omissions which may occur again and again in the original, and which they do not fill out from other authorities.

Hitherto we have had no scientific adjustment of our MSS. In the case of the manuscripts of what is called profane literature there are not sufficient of them in order to apply our method properly or fully, but in the case of the New Testament MSS. these are so numerous that we can apply a method of sorting and grouping—analysis, and then synthesis, instead of mere analysis—which yields quite certain and illuminating results. It has not been done before, and, as the author has had to work quite alone, and could not handle more than a certain number of MSS., he selected the Apocalypse as offering a field within his power. In this field are some 250 Greek MSS., which have been reduced,—by systematically sorting them into definite family-groups, word by word,—to a score of genuine stems, which can now be examined at leisure as to their value for critical purposes. Grouping.

Until now the text-books have told us that a reading was supported by say ℵ 7 21 28 39 45 73 lat, but now that we can show that 7-39-45 represent one archetype, and 21-28-73 another, we have only two lines of transmission 7 etc., and 21 etc., to deal with. These particular groups, for instance, are now extended by me to include under their several heads: and, furthermore, we are able, by a detailed examination of them, to be sure that we can identify the whole of the foundation text and put our finger on all the sources of error in their transmission. This is a great gain. The same method can be made to apply to the MSS. of the Gospels and Epistles. Having reached this point, we confront them with the Versions, and learn still more of their collateral tendencies.

21-28-65-73-79-80-99-100-103-112-135-138-139-170-191-220-221,

We have in 18 and 40 two MSS. which were once Graeco-Syriac diglots; in the group 34 etc. we have what were probably Graeco-Coptic MSS., and in the above named group 7 we have a Graeco-Latin set, in which the latin has survived, to-day frequently opposed to their Greek.

And what we have to note very specially is that there has been no accommodation in this last case as between the Latin and the Greek, that is to say between say A.D. 1000 and 1400. All such accommodation as between the texts of diglots and triglots took place in the earlier stages of transmission.

Having segregated our groups, it then becomes a simple matter to trace their affinities back to Irenaeus or Tertullian or Hippolytus or Victorinus or Primasius and Cyprian, or to the Sahidic or old Syriac, and to establish them on a firm basis in the v^th^ to the II^d^ century. We thus gain a score more uncials—for these cursive groups have now indubitably become uncials, as admitted recently by Charles—and add their testimony to that of ℵCA, instead of considering them junior, simply because junior in age; for, as I say, we can prove, from analysis of the groups, exactly which member represents the most faithful transmission, and not only the most faithful but an exact representation of the ancient original.

Thus, in the Complutensian group, consult 221 for a careful standard. In group 25 the MS. 70 is the most reliable. Of the large group 21, we refer to 79 for accuracy and to 99-170 for the oldest base. Of group 44, No. 82 is the best. Of group 95-127-215,

No. 127 is a magnificent type of accurate transmission. Of group 34, the most dependable is 132, and so on.

III[d] century witnesses.

We have then assembled our cursive witnesses upon the blood-soaked ground of the third century, for, aided by Aleph, we can go behind Aleph and most of the witnesses used for control. Here we find ourselves in the period of the Decian and Diocletian persecutions, and need hardly wonder if but few written evidences of Christian origins were left by those ruthless ones.

In fact and in deed this is very apparent, for we shall not find traces of a mass of copies from which our extant copies were derived, but of one frail witness standing back of them all, for it is very noticeable that in places where this original was faint or difficult to read our principal witnesses falter and labour, and guess at the word, and in these places a variety of half-a-dozen or a dozen variants has resulted, which will be found in our record.

Dame Wisdom acts thus ever. It would be too easy if we found the original MS. of the Patmos vision; but traces are left, through man's own imperfections, sufficient for us to rest perfectly assured that we have a genuine survival of all the essential points of the primal document. In other words, the crooked course of man's own errors in transmission contribute—under the lenses of microscopic examination—to reveal all that is necessary, and to confirm us in the knowledge of what the seer really set down.

Our title-deeds.

The title-deeds to our inheritance are very precious things. We may not blindly follow imperious or impetuous guides of the day. It is our privilege to unriddle the phrases and disentangle the webs, which careless generations have left riddled and tangled. Man has throughout his career on this planet obscured his own footprints, and left his successors in doubt as to his origins and his journey adown the ages. Painfully sometimes do we grope our way back, but many of the puzzle-pieces are somewhere to be found, and gradually we are piecing together many strange-shaped bricks which were lost or missing, and which fit into the picture.

It is impossible to reconstruct a text without a thorough previous knowledge of the history, antecedents and morality of the witnesses. In the case of the Apocalypse the family groups are mostly true to type. Not so, for example, in St. Mark's Gospel. This great key to the whole position of New Testament criticism has been dealt with too long in a light-hearted manner, and by more or less empiric methods.

St. Mark's text.

No one is qualified to criticise the text of St. Mark who is unfamiliar with the following:

That $D^{gr}W\Theta\Sigma\Phi\Psi$ are compound (although unequal) witnesses to a Latin foundation. To these are to be added the cursives 2^{pe}(=473 or 565) 604(=700) 892 Paris[97] and Laura[A 104], as well as families 1 and 13, and more occasionally 435 and c^{scr}.

That ℵBL are an entity, with and without Δ.

That, of the Latins $a=n$ (and $a+n=D^{gr}$ before its last revision), $b=q$ (the latter revised), $c=ff_2$, $e=k$, $f=goth$, $i=a\ d\ r$ in combination and is steady and true to type, l=largely vulgate; and even r_2 though heavily vulgatised is really as to base the counterpart of k.†

And beyond this they must know how truly these combinations act. As a matter of fact they do not act like our MSS. of the Apoc. They are very often and very much in disagreement where they should not be. Thus, although $c=ff_2$ as to foundations, revisers have often spoiled the composite picture, and the same remark applies to the rest.

When a d i r are together we recognise that their last composite base has survived complete; when $D^{gr}a\ n$ confirm a reading against d we know that we must seek carefully among the supporting testimony for additional light; when c-ff_2 together receive support from e-k and D*d*+a n r and b-q i we know we are on the firm foundation of the true Latin base, no matter how many Greek groups read against them.

We must know further how the other Versions stand. We must carry in our minds always that the aethiopic in Mark is comparatively commonplace; that the diatessaron hardly plays any part in the discussion; that, however circumlocutory may be the persian it almost invariably reveals a deep base connected with Latin and Syriac joint or separate foundations; that syr sin fluctuates strangely, retaining here and rejecting there many important Latin readings.

And then, perhaps the most important point is that the Coptic Versions remain in the background of the Latin picture. Quite differently do we have to handle this matter in the other Gospels. The reason is this, that ℵBLΔ(Ψ) and the Coptics cling together in Mark, and you need hardly ever refer to them even to elucidate a fine point.

As to the cursives the critic must know that while Θ 473 (565) and 604 (700) hang together for 50% of the Gospel, 604 deflects much more than 473 from the Θ combination; and he must know that DΘ is not a perfect combination, but subject to all kinds of vicissitudes, yet having one base. He must also know that while 473-604-892-Paris[97]-Laura[Λ 104] have but one stem (with DΘΦ) they go widely and wildly apart where they should testify together. The same applies to that invaluable document c[scr], which, but for revision (like pers), would solve a number of knotty points. In fact c[scr] and pers and syr sin stand in exactly similar fluctuating relation to the base.

When therefore 892 or Paris[97] desert the ℵBL combination there is generally a reason for it, in that in those places (especially if with Θ) they represent an older and not a younger base.

While on the subject of the Marcan Gospel, the abrupt close of which at xvi. 8 in the major-ranking authorities has caused so much discussion, I would like to mention a cognate matter, hitherto apparently unobserved.

First page of the Syriac.

Whereas the last page of Mark very likely perished simply because it was the last page of the four-fold Gospel in the Latin order (where Mark came last), a similar thing seems to have happened to the first page of the old Syriac Apocalypse! I notice that in chapter i. 1-8 the readings of *syr*S are practically those of the *syr*Σ family MSS., and only after that do they go apart.

But to return to the text of the Apocalypse.

Overflow of the Versions.

I explained in my volume on the date of the Bohairic version that, while the older Latin had distinctly impressed itself on all documents even as old as ℵ and Clement of Alexandria, there were places where it had not overflowed on the Greek at all, where it might have been expected to (Op. cit. pp. 107/108). Certain places can be consulted in order to date matters. Amongst other places we can examine the situation at xiii. 16 which marks a point of date. The text runs:

> Και ποιει παντας τους μικρους και τους μεγαλους, και τους πλουσιους και τους πτωχους, και τους ελευθερους και τους δουλους, ινα δωση (vel δωσιν, δωσωσιν, δωσουσιν) αυτοις χαραγμα επι της χειρος . . .

Now the Vulgate and ps-Ambr. have 'habere characterem' instead of ινα δωση αυτοις χαραγμα, and Prim. 'habere notam.'

Tyc. (Beat.) says simply 'ut det eis notam,' and Tyc 2. 'ut dent (vel det) eis notam' (Tyc 1. 3. not available). Gigas says 'ut dent sibi invicem caracterem.' Fleury (h) unfortunately does not begin till xiv. 15. Tertullian, Cyprian, Cassiodorus and Aug. are silent, and Auct. prom. breaks off at xiii. 14.

Our family 95-127-215 with 159 adopt ινα λαβωσι το χαραγμα αυτου for ινα δωση or δωσιν) αυτοις χαραγμα, while 26-107 conflate, by having ινα λαβωσι το χαραγμα αυτου και

ινα δωσωσιν αυτους χαραγματα. There is no infinitive here although we find an approximation of 'habere.' Arm has 'that he may give them.' Iνα in the shape of ϫεκας appears in the sahidic followed as usual with the active verb: that they should give to them, while boh has no ινα, but εqεϣολϩου: he shall mark them (χαράξει or ἐπισημανεῖ). The arabic has ponerent, the ut coming earlier in the verse; the æthiopic has ut scriberent. *Syr*Σ is translated 'ut detur illis' as Gwynn for *syr*S ἵνα δοθῇ αὐτοῖς, while Irenaeus translator, omitting the list of great and small, etc., says: et characterem autem in fronte et in manu dextra faciet DARI.

This at last gives us an infinitive, but not the one we want in Greek, which should be active. While some Gk. MSS. read δωσιν and δωσει, only 208 reads δώσειν 'to be about to give' in the active sense.

Sabatier quotes Vict. for a paraphrase in his commentary of 'Faciet UT ACCIPIANT servi et liberi notam in frontibus aut in manibus . . .' This would give us the ινα λαβωσι.

The point, therefore, is this: that 'habere' of Prim. and vg. has not overflowed into the Greek, and therefore seems comparatively late.

Whether 159 and fam 95 are indebted to this for ινα λαβωσι is doubtful, but possible, while 26-107 (against the rest of their family 41-42-53-153-211-222) conflate in such a way as to indicate a late revision here.

If we accept the quotation from Victorinus' commentary as genuine, we get at the origin of ινα λαβωσι, and that takes us back a long way, but nothing so far explains habere of Prim. vg. ps-Ambr.

Observe the phrase at xiv. 9: και λαμβανει χαραγμα επι του μετωπου αυτου ἢ επι την χειρα αυτου. Possibly the ινα λαβωσι of some documents in xiii. 16 crept back from here.

This is what I mean by the 'synoptic' accommodation throughout the Apocalypse.

All this accumulation of variants in respect of accents, spelling, forms, change of tense, change of order, additions, omissions, conflations, deconflations and verborum permutationes† generally, is the necessary prelude and the only scientific method of approach to an assessment of the value of the respective witnesses who appear in Court at the difficult places—at the cruces, at the locos vexatissimos.

Cruces. These places in the Apocalypse are limited in number and can best be resumed as follows:

Clark, in a recent article in J.T.S. for October, 1927, quotes Peterson on Meusel upon this subject (p. 20) with a view to combat the practice of making up tables of variants, including all, whether small or large, important or unimportant. With this I am agreed, only pointing out that the credibility and reliability of witnesses depends upon their character as ascertained by their habitual behaviour in ordinary life.

In order not to repeat myself the reader is referred to what is said about all these places under the respective manuscripts, which are to be found on each side of the question. It is better for him to deal with the matter in this way and refer to the witnesses, than to try and guess the value of their testimony by simply reading over their symbols or counting heads on each side, if I exhibited the evidence in full here. First refer to volume II for the evidence, and then examine the record of the witnesses in this volume, for some can be peremptorily challenged, as in a Court of Law, and excluded from the jury. These are they who appear fortuitously, when the scribe was somnolent perhaps, or when his mind wandered, and the proof is forthcoming in the family groups, or when 30 opposes 98, 44 opposes 82, 51 opposes 90, 59 opposes 121, 67 opposes 120, 81 opposes 204, 80 opposes 138, 149 opposes 186, 171 opposes 174, 172 opposes 217, 176 opposes 206, 40 opposes 210, 14 opposes 92, 164 opposes 166 in the groups of doublet manuscripts, and where the value of the presence of one out of the two is suspicious, whereas when grouped they cannot be excluded from the jury-panel.

Herculaneum.

It has always seemed a strange thing to the writer that excavations have not been seriously resumed at Herculaneum. The mine was sampled nearly 200 years ago and found to contain the richest treasure imaginable. Yet it has remained unworked, although it is as nearly certain as it is possible to be in such matters that it contains, besides priceless works of art, a large part of our lost heritage of profane literature, and quite possibly some Christian documents antedating 79 A.D., or of the precise period which would interest us most, and render unnecessary our long drawn out combing over of the sands of Egypt for 1st, 2nd and 3rd century fragmentary papyri.

However, the matter remains in abeyance.†

What has not been done for Herculaneum, has now been done in a small collateral matter of textual criticism, and all the documents of the last book in our Bible, the Apocalypse, have been gone over in detail, and the result will be found spread on the record in volume two. We have literally done for the Apocalypse what might be done any day for another one of the submerged villas of the buried city of Herculaneum, for these N.T. documents were as truly buried in their library resting-places as are the calcined literary treasures of Herculaneum in their niches and alcoves below the ground.

Our labours have not been fruitless, and, after segregating the Greek MSS. into their respective families, we are left with twenty or thirty separate lines of transmission, all converging back to the original source or rill high among the hills, where the pure water originated. It cannot be sought by any less laborious methods.

Whatever may be the shortcomings of the present work, I have done my best to cover the field involved. And it can confidently be asserted that one thing has been definitely accomplished and set on record.

The field covered.

No longer need we wonder what other existing Greek manuscripts may have to tell us. We have often debated whether a conjunction of lat-syr-arm, or syr-copt, or lat-syr, or lat-copt in a taking reading might not turn out to have valuable Greek support and perhaps be original. We now know that when the Versions stand quite alone, and apart from any Greek document there is every likelihood that the reading is false. One single Greek witness changes the situation. There is then the possibility of a genuine survival. Its probability depends upon the character of the witness taken as a whole. A survey of each Greek MS., or group of MSS., will therefore be attempted in order to settle the question of the reliability of our Greek witnesses. It will necessarily be somewhat condensed, but a reference to the volume of collations will afford further light on this intricate subject.

This is not to belittle the testimony of the Versions, which the writer holds responsible for many an overflow back into the Greek text, sometimes of most valuable and interesting if not of original readings.

Our first business is to find out if possible what weight, if any, to give to the singular readings of our oldest authorities. In this I think we have met with some success. Singular readings.

For instance, in the famous Armageddon passage at xvi. 16, instead of και συνηγαγεν αυτους εις τον τοπον τον καλουμενον Αρμαγεδδων (or Μαγεδων), the Alexandrine MS. A reads ποταμον for τοπον alone, and there are only two Sahidic MSS. available here, which Horner now tells us read εις (τον) πολεμον (ⲉⲡⲡⲟⲗⲉⲙⲟⲥ or ⲉⲡⲡⲟⲗⲩⲙⲟⲥ). All Greek MSS. read εις τον τοπον or εις τοπον and all the other Versions.

But now the situation changes. We have at last picked up another Greek witness for ποταμον with A,—not πολεμον with sah—, yet this Greek witness is full of Sahidic leanings !

And the curious thing is that the MS. turned up unexpectedly at Athos, not being catalogued, as far as I can make out, by Gregory or Von Soden. Professor Kirsopp Lake dug it up for me, and Mr. Swain photographed it in the summer of 1925. It is my No. 206,† and is a careful XIII[th] cent. MS. by a very competent scribe, who can copy as well as anyone, and the rarer readings only obtrude occasionally, and no reader has interfered with them, no second hand has scratched them, and there they stand as plain as the day they were copied and the day when they first saw the light in the parent copy. Apoc. 206.

So now we know that it was not a sheer blunder on the part of A.

The next question is which reading has priority : ποταμον or πολεμον?

I think it is evident that ποταμον is earlier, and when the Sahidic editor came to it he thought it was a mistake and changed it to a somewhat similar word which would, in his opinion, make better sense, or possibly he blundered into πολεμον from incuria. If πολεμον were earlier it would be difficult to conceive of a change to ποταμον, for why should he assemble them to the river rather than to war, and further, our Gk. 206 with its Sahidic leanings ought then to read πολεμον and not ποταμον !

We tie A 206 and sah to a school of Alexandria at some time, and all we can say at present is that ποταμον is not a mere blunder of the scribe of A, but doubtless goes behind A, probably into the third century.

The Latin is locum. We should have to imagine lacum there for any help in that direction, and lacum does not mean a river !

In this connection observe the famous variants in the passage about sailors and ships at xviii. 17. A full discussion of this will be found in the Introduction to my volume on Oecumenius (vol. xxiii. of University of Michigan Studies 1928). Here again τοπον and ποταμον, ποντον and πλοιων, locum and lacum and mare are involved.

As to A—undoubtedly Egyptian—notice throughout its play upon matters connected with water or the great river.

At xii. 16 A alone reads το υδωρ for τον ποταμον, while Bohairic says τον ποταμον υδατος, a redundancy which A appropriates by undoing the conflation and eliminating ποταμος, while appropriating υδωρ ! The MS. A^{gr}.

† 206 is partially checked by 176, a sister MS. containing a few chapters.

Faint places.

As to indistinct places, observe in the very next verse xii. 17 that ℵ indulges in επιλοιπων for λοιπων,—alone to this very day. Almost indubitably this came from the bohairic, which has "to make war—'ⲛⲉⲙ ⲡⲥⲉⲡⲓ ⲙ̄ⲡⲥⲡⲉⲣⲙⲁ ⲛ̄ϯⲥϩⲓⲙⲓ'—with the remainder of the seed of the woman," this ⲡⲥⲉⲡⲓ, meaning λοιπων, having gotten into ℵ's head and engendered επιλοιπων. The sahidic veils it with 'the rest also': ⲙⲛ̄ ⲡⲕⲉⲥⲉⲉⲡⲉ, so that it did not come from that quarter.

Τῶν ἐπιλοιπῶν, however, is quite legitimate, and the only other explanation involves indistinctness in the copy as to the mother-lection, or a mental process. As to indistinctness in the original it is to be observed that 130 omits, and Hippolytus substitutes των αγιων. As to a mental process, please note Oecumenius' commentary here, where he writes: και πολεμον εποιει μετ' αυτων διωκων και επιβουλευων.

That the reference books were open to ℵ can be seen soon after at xiii. 5, where there is added in ℵ + 'ο θελει' after και εδοθη αυτω εξουσια and before μηνας, to which only the aethiopic is a witness. No cursives, no other Versions. (ℵ* omits εξουσια, reading και εδοθη αυτω ποιησαι ο θελει). EB al. add πολεμον.

Again, soon after, at xiii. 12 ℵ, alone to this day among all the Greeks, has the infinitive προσκυν(ε)ιν for ινα προσκυνησωσι. This is how sah boh (ⲟⲩⲱϣⲧ) read, with aeth and vg 'adorare,' but against Iren[int]. Prim. Tyc. and gig, all extant here. (*syr*S has και προσκυνησουσιν).

At xiv. 4, still in the immediate neighbourhood, ℵ has απαρχης for απαρχη with the græco-latin family of cursives 16-39 etc., equating the Latin genitive primitiae (and ⲛ̄ⲟⲩⲁⲡⲁⲣⲭⲏ sah, ⲛ̄ⲁⲡⲁⲣⲭⲏ boh), where Prim. has 'ab exordio' and Tyc. (Beat.) 'ab initio.'

As regards this attitude notice ii. 1 χρυσεων CA, iv. 4 χρυσεους ℵ, v. 8 χρυσεας ℵ, strongly reminiscent of Latin aur*e*orum, aur*e*ae, aur*e*as. No cursives insert the ε.

Also note xxi. 6 δωρεας ℵ [non in xxii. 17] as gratis Latin. But the genitive also shows in Coptic.

At xiv. 16 ℵ substitutes του θερισμου for του θερισαι with all fam 38 (the Patmos group), 113 (a latinizer), 251 (an eclectic), and sah boh arm, and the picture is almost complete within these few verses.

Add xvi. 6, a little way further on, where we find ℵ introducing οπερ after πιειν—quite alone among Greek witnesses except the noteworthy cursive 200, which adds ἄρα—(the subsequent γαρ between αξιοι and εισι is eliminated by all Greeks except 146), and where we find the Coptics adding the usual ϫⲉ, and the arabic 'prout' as translated, with *syr*Σ and aeth, and amiatinus + ut, Prim. + quoniam. The Vulgate holds 'digni enim sunt.'

Apoc. xiii. 10.

A place which has escaped the critics notice is to be observed close by the first instances adduced above, viz. at xiii. 10, where, after the double sword sentence, we read a somewhat curious epilogue of:

ὧδέ ἐστιν ἡ ὑπομονὴ καὶ ἡ πίστις τῶν ἁγίων.

Irenaeus' interpreter dwelt upon it, for he renders ὑπομονή by sustinentia instead of patientia, but gigas says sapientia (Belsheim errs with patiencia).

ἡ πιστις is, however, left unchanged by all except 159, who has ἡ τιστις, and 40-210 πιστις (—ἡ), but 38 and 97-122-214 write ἡ θλιψις.

Was this place also faint? Did gigas read 'ἡ σύνεσις (or ἡ μῆτις) καὶ ἡ πίστις'?

The arabic reads orationes for ἡ πιστις, but Tyc. (Beat.) says virtus for fides, reading: 'ἡ υπομονη (or ἡ συνεσις) και ἡ δυναμις'? (Tyc 1. 2. 3. all missing here).

Tischendorf mentions the θλιψις of 38 97, but Soden is silent about the whole thing.

Notice also that *syr*S, with 36, inverts the order (and so harl), writing: ἡ πιστις και ἡ ὑπομονη. Much Latin testimony is missing.

As a matter of fact πιστιν could have come back from xiv. 12 (q.v.) and never have been part of the real record at xiii. 10.

As to ℵ observe further with regard to Coptic: ℵ and Coptic.

ℵ* says λαβε αυτο και καταφαγε (+αυτο ℵ^{a}) ⎭ Coptic influence.

xi. 7. το θηριον τοτε αναβαινον ℵ* only. An inspection of sah shows +τοτε before το θηριον as also two MSS. of boh.

10. οἱ προφηται οἱ δυο pro οἱ δυο προφ. ℵ and sah only.

17. κυριος pro κυριε ℵ alone, eschewing the vocative. Why? Because under his eyes was the final sigma in Coptic (ⲡϫⲟⲉⲓⲥ sah, ⲡ̅ⲟ̅ⲥ̅ boh).

xii. 8. +προς αυτον post ισχυσαν ℵ quite alone, but observe +προς αυτους boh. Not sah. Sah has και ουχ ισχυσαν, while boh has και ουχ ισχυσεν προς αυτους. It will be observed that ℵ combines them.

9. 'The devil Satan' without copula ℵ 130 only, with boh. ⎫
14. 'Wings of an eagle' without του ℵ 130 only, with boh. ⎭

xiv. 13. και ηκουσα φωνης λεγουσης εκ του ουρανου instead of . . εκ του ουρ. λεγ. So ℵ and sah

xv. 4. Here we have a reflection of the ⲉⲃⲟⲗ in both Coptics, as ℵ (alone) adds ενωπιον. after δικαιωματα.

xvi. 19. —του ante οινου and —αυτου fin. No other Greeks but ℵ, and so boh.

xviii. 10 fin. ἡ πτωσις σου pro ἡ κρισις σου is read by boh^{EFG} and ἡ πτωσις αυτης by all other boh MSS. Observe above in verse 9 that ℵ substitutes this very word, reading πτωσεως for πυρωσεως there.

12. βυσσινων pro βυσσου vel βυσσινου ℵ 203-240 only (not even 178) and so boh^{ADHZ}.

19. επι της κεφαλης pro επι τας κεφαλας ℵ 59 146 only with boh (omn.) against sah.

21. +οτι ante ουτως ℵ fam 178 only, after the Coptic manner +ϫⲉ and with sah boh.

xix. 15. του οινου της οργης του θυμου (—και) ℵ 200 sah.

xxii. 10. +τουτους post λογους ℵ* alone; confounding with +ταυτης of sah boh before the της προφητειας immediately following.

20. +ειναι ante ναι prim. ℵ and 203-240 (hiat 178) arm 4. and ϫⲉ ⲥⲉⲛⲁϣⲱⲡⲓ boh [non sah].

ℵ and Latin.

As to Latin, note especially—

i. 19. δει μελλειν pro μελλει ℵ, clearly oportet fieri of latt, and not other Versions. Also xxi. 25. 'And her gates shall not be closed by day' where ℵ alone has ημερα for ημερας, with die of Prim. Tyc.

ℵ Coptic and Latin.

Composite of Coptic and Latin (which, however, gig Iren^{int} Prim. Tyc. avoid) is seen at xiii. 12, where ℵ substitutes the infinitive προσκυνιν (—ινα) with sah boh against ινα προσκυνησουσι (or . . σωσι) of all other Greeks as noted above.

As to the sympathy of ℵ with sah and boh not being so much due to a Greek base influencing the three parties to this recension as a reflex action for the most part on ℵ by the Coptic Versions, observe that ℵ does not follow in a mass of things in Coptic. As an instance take—

xi. 13, where sah and boh have εδοξαν pro εδωκαν δοξαν, but not ℵ.

Thereagainst at xvi. 13 ℵ calmly turns back into Greek the sahidic's ΑΙΝΑΥ ΕΥΝΗΥ (= ειδον + ερχομενα) by writing εδοθη for ειδον.

As to composite latt-sah see iv. 8, where ℵ writes εξοσαν (και αναπαυσιν ουχ εξοσαν) for και αναπ. ουκ εχουσιν of the Greek cohorts and et requiem non HABEBANT of the Latins.

Is this an endeavour to render the Latin, or the Sahidic: ΑΥΩ ΜΕΥΚΑΤΟΟΤΟΥ ΕΒΟΛ, —what Mallon calls the présent d'habitude, and which Horner renders 'and they are not wont to leave off'?

It would seem so.

That ℵ remained in Egypt subject to renewed comparison with the Coptic Versions, we see by the hand of the first corrector, and also of a later corrector at xix. 7, where he substitutes νυμφη for γυνη against all Greeks, but with ϢΕΛΕΕΤ of the Coptics (gig alone of Latins sponsa).

'Reworking.'

Fleury and Prim. give us very valuable hints and suggestions of the 'reworking' in which they had engaged already in those early days. We therefore look to the general consensus of Versions and Greeks in difficult passages, and we rarely lack a clue.

Armenian.

Of the Armenian, arm 4. is the most conservative; the other MSS. are quite wild most of the time.

pseudo-Ambrose.

A word remains to be said as to pseudo-Ambrose. I have used the symbol ps-Ambr. to indicate a commentary—recension, so far not used by my predecessors Sabatier, Gregory or Vogels. It is contained in a volume printed at Paris by Michael Vascosani in 1554, with a preface by Archbishop Tunstall, under the title of Expositio Beati Ambrosii Episcopi super Apocalypsin. This is the same text printed by Migne in Patr. Lat. xvii. 843 seq., supposed to be by one Berengaudos (the name is furnished acrostically in the MSS.) and not written before A.D. 774. Although the text is vulgate there is a certain admixture of some importance, and the commentator must have had ancient texts and traditional readings at his command. The proof of this will be found in the collation when compared with my Greek MSS.

Cassiodorus.

I have much enlarged the quotations from Cassiodorus, who furnishes many conservative clues where extant in places of doubt. Compare our family 97-122-214 with Cassiodorus' base.

Horner.

Horner's valuable edition of sah is a considerable acquisition, although, judging from the arabic remarks in some bohairic MSS., where many unknown readings attributed to sah are indicated, we have not yet got a fully representative sahidic version. Besides this, the picture is not complete in his notes, for he has not given us readings of Hippolytus, Dionysius or Methodius, nor those of the latins Tertullian, Victorinus, Primasius, Cyprian, Tyconius, Auct. quaest., Auct. prom., Priscillian, Ambrose, Ambrosiaster, Hilary nor Cassiodorus; nor of Beatus, Apringius, pseudo-Ambrose, nor yet of the great latin codices gigas and the fleury palimpsest h.

We are particularly rich in commentaries on the Apocalypse, having—in whole or in part—Victorinus,† Primasius, Cassiodorus, Oecumenius, Apringius, Tyconius, Beatus, pseudo-Ambrose, Andreas, and Arethas, not counting Haymo and Bede. We have brought in all these witnesses with the exception of the last four. There are so many variants in Andreas' com. MSS., of which we introduce the accompanying texts, that I have been loth to cite Andreas or Arethas positively. Tischendorf professes to report this rather fully, but only from one or two MSS., whereas we have scores. Apringius as well as ps-Ambrose appear for the first time, as also many neglected readings from Cassiodore. Commentaries.

Swete's edition is inadequate except perhaps for the class-room. His only new witness 130 is very badly and inaccurately reported. Swete.

Charles' work is much more ambitious and interesting, inasmuch as he introduced 143 to the Public, a MS. of which we think very highly as regards its independent ancestry, but insufficient indications are given as to the great break in the MS. between ch. v. end and ch. xx. beginning. For some utterly insufficient reason he abandons the old minus sign for omissions—obtaining from Wetstein to Tischendorf—and substitutes a different sign, which is a mark usually reserved for quotations. Charles.

His notes would be less formidable looking but for the fourfold numeration of the cursives and the absurdity of referring to B E F and P by numerals.

Both Horner and Charles make large use of the Armenian version, so painstakingly edited by Coneybeare, but the MSS. are all hopelessly at variance, and although I have felt bound to follow suit and reproduce their evidence, for my part, I think we should incur small loss if we consigned the whole thing (with the exception of arm 4) to the bottom of the sea. The arm MSS. are licentious and inaccurately transmitted, and the Armenian language does not lend itself to certain grammatical niceties. I suppose arm has come into fashion because we never had a critical edition of its MSS. before, but why it should be used to the exclusion of the arabic I do not see. I have therefore incorporated arab in my apparatus, which in spots is quite interesting and instructive. Nobody knows how it was compiled, but it does not derive directly from the bohairic as supposed. In fact, in places, one can see what has occurred. For instance, at xi. 18 boh alone substitutes οτι for και sec. One would expect to find it in arab, but arab (alone) omits this και secund. Οτι is not found in sah or greek or latin, and arab shows that it weighed the passage and took its own safe line. Coneybeare. Arabic.

The digest of readings and renderings in the second volume is to be understood by comparison with the text of Stephen's third edition of 1550 as reproduced by Scrivener, and each verse in heavy-faced type stands at the head of the variants. Standard of comparison.

Of late years it has become fashionable to compare with other texts,—those of Tischendorf, Westcott and Hort, for example—, but these texts are only transient, and my work was begun before they became more modern standards. The same applies to the numeration of MSS. New methods do not clarify. They impose more work on the student.

Fault may be found that both sides of the question are not always stated in full. To do this would have doubled the size of the book and made it unwieldy. In important cases reference must be made to previous and to future works. Thus, we are publishing before † In very truth it would appear that Victorin never intended to write a complete commentary, and we probably have all or nearly all of it. The same applies to Cassiodorus and Apringius, while Oecumenius is very full. As to Irenaeus, Origen, Athanasius, Cyril, Basil, Gregory, Methodius et al., their labours appear to be missing beyond recovery.

the final volume of Wordsworth and White's monumental work on the Latin. Future reference to this will probably clarify any situation as to the Latin MSS. A reference to Horner's notes in the Sahidic volume and to Vogels' edition of the Latin remains may be necessary at times. My arrangement is perforce different and arbitrary. I do not profess to give quite all the variants of the Versions, and the situation as regards the Armenian MSS. is full of difficulties and pitfalls, but all important matters have been duly taken into consideration.

Textus receptus. One word as regards the 'Received text' must be said. Whatever its imperfections may be, it will be found by anyone who takes the trouble to make a tabulation that it is nearer the text of Hippolytus than those of ℵ, C, or A, of sah or boh or *syr*S, of Gigas, Prim., Tyc. or Cypr.

We have not got a bad text.

Apoc. 47. There is a very beautiful XI[th] cent. MS. at Dresden (our No. 47), which is an almost perfect specimen of the Κοινή or standardized Ecclesiastical text. This is nearer Hippolytus than any of our other authorities. It does not mean that Hippolytus' text is impeccable by any means, but it does signify that our other great documents like ℵ 56 130 143 200, the fleury palimpsest h, *syr*S and sah, Primasius and Gigas antedate Hippolytus, and in order to straighten out the texts current previous to Hippolytus all my labour has been undertaken, so that by a course of close introspection of variants and their grouping we may look as with a telescope into the past, and no results could be obtained without microscopic attention to detail.

Now we have spread before us the whole history of transmission. We can see the exact limits of Version influence. Where it begins and where it ends.

To illustrate:

Apoc. v. 9. Take the unusual variant φυλακης for φυλης in v. 9. It makes sense. 'Who hast redeemed us from every prison and tongue and people and nation.' It is read by the complete small family 8-24-140 (who frequently go apart in minor matters). It is a sub-group of the big græco-latin family 7. Proof is here afforded of faithful copying of the original—since all three scribes agree—but no other MSS. and no Versions support, so we rule it out. Yet, there is room here for an amendment, for the other authorities get into rather a tangle about the fourfold list, which is somewhat redundant. Although passing this by, we watch 8-24-140 for light in other places, although we accord no weight to their curious and honest testimony in v. 9.

But what shall we do in this doctrinal and important verse in the matter of the omission of ἡμᾶς by A only? 'Who hast redeemed us.'

The Alexandrine MS. drops the word between two columns. Nevertheless Tischendorf, Westcott and Hort, and the Revised follow suit with this authority only. No cursives, not ℵ, B or P [hiat C], no Versions but aeth, which is unreliable in such a matter, frequently baulking at any difficulty.

The reason, of course, of contravening the rules of majority evidence here is because of the αὐτοὺς and βασιλεύουσιν or βασιλεύσουσιν of the next verse, where all practically agree to contradict the 'received text.'

Well then, here the modern critics would follow A against ℵ.

Apoc. xv. 6. And at xv. 6, another crux: 'clothed in linen' or 'clothed in stone' (λῖνον or λίθον) they follow CA and a very tiny coterie of minuscules (the families divided against themselves) in opposition to ℵ and my most important cursives and a host of other IV[th] century authorities.

But at many other places ℵ is followed against A and/or C.

Now this is hardly scientific. This is guessing.

Miscellanies. Before official acceptance of the Apocalypse into the Canon (compare Swete 'The Apocalypse,' pp. cxvi/cxvii.), especially by those in the East, it circulated freely from the earliest times among mystical writings, and we find it outside the N.T. included in Collections of Miscellanies, which embrace the writings of authors dealing with the occult, like Psellus, etc.

Herein is a great gain for us. We have therefore two streams of testimony for the text of this book, and they never coalesce, but at Athos today side by side we will find the Church standards and the independent texts (in Collections of Miscellanies) being copied and re-copied independently. Two streams.

Thus our famous early cursive 200 is bound up with Hippolytus on Daniel. Our notable 143 occurs in a collection of Ascetic sermons of John Climacus, the same of St. Ephrem, St. John Chrysostom περὶ ψευδοδιδασκάλων, the same author on the presence of Christ, Profession of faith of 18 fathers at the Council of Nice, Life of Simeon Stylites, Martyrdom of 40 martyrs at Sebaste, Life of St. Nicholas, of St. Elias, of St. Gregory the Armenian, Life of the holy Archangels, and finally the Life of St. George. Apoc. 143, 200

In our collection of cursives no less than forty are bound up with other writings.

If you wish to consult on the other hand a church standard of the XI[th] century, by all means go to our delightful and beautifully written MSS., such as Nos. 47 (referred to above) or 215. These are clean, straightforward, honest documents, full seven-eighths of the text agreeing verbatim with our textus receptus, with here and there a survival of some very ancient readings, which were not eliminated on revision, or which formed at the time the choice of the editors in doctrinal passages. And these two MSS. are quite outside the Erasmian group. Apoc. 47, 215.

Their text has nothing to do with the B revision, which was made in the VII[th] century and has so largely influenced one-half or one-third of the cursive MSS., but others, such as 47, 215, with 18, 36, fam 38, 40, 56, fam 19, etc., represent something much more ancient, and certain of their unusual readings go far back of our uncials to Tertullian, Irenaeus and the second century.

But if we want to check all this, we must consult the independent collateral line, which has descended untouched by ecclesiastical standardization owing to the inclusion of our document—from the earliest ages—in collections and groupings of miscellaneous writings, chiefly on mystical subjects.

This,—our gain—, is not shared by the other books of the N.T., and whereas we have plenty of these witnesses to which we can refer, they have been mostly neglected heretofore by our authors on N.T. criticism, who have failed to observe the value and significance of this independent transmission.

And this only falters at the same places where the ecclesiastical documents are in doubt, due to 'faint spots' in a common original, lying far back of all. Faint spots.

The same difficulties are recalled in both lines of transmission.

We gain also considerable insight into the origin and history of substitutions and synonyms, of which the following will give some idea.

Here the student may well exercise his faculties and his experience in learning to differentiate between the real Greek texts underlying the Versions and the text of some of our Greek documents which have experienced reaction on their Greek from a use or a sight of the Versions while the scribes were copying. We may see here and recognize a very old stratum of Greek text underlying the sahidic and our oldest Versions, which crops out unexpectedly in some of our junior Greek documents, down to the very order of words and to most significant changes of tense in participles. Versions.

Transpositions.

A paucity of these in a MS. indicates at once the reliability of a scribe and his correctness in copying. It is most tempting to a scribe after having skipped something, especially Changes.

in a long list, to add the words which have been overlooked and to admit them tacitly later in the verse. We catch some members of the same family in this practise without notice, but more generally they add indications by an α. β. γ. over the words or sentences to be read in a different order. A good example of this scarcity of transpositions is found in the early cursive No. 200, which has only six special transpositions as against over forty unique additions, over forty unique omissions, and over a hundred unique substitutions. This feature then of few transpositions can only mean that the tenth-century scribe was faithfully copying the elder document and that practically all the other changes were present in the parent MS. The reverse holds good, when, given plenty of transpositions, we view with grave suspicion the other changes.

Additions.

These must be judged in every case by their nature.

Omissions.

These are to be checked in the first place by the other members of the family group. They are to be considered in the light of the influence of homoioteleuton and homoioarcton. Few scribes, ancient or modern, are entirely able to shake off the malign influences mentioned. Omission of the doublet in semitic relative clauses is, however, noticeably rare, which points to honest and honourable copying by the scribes, whatever we may think of the definite work of Revisors or Modernists, who exercised their critical faculties every few hundred years.

Substitutions.

Here we reach the most important factor of all, which requires a long and special treatment if we are to make progress in scientific criticism, for here are keys with which to settle the much debated question as to what constituted the real underlying Greek text of the Versions, and what unusual Greek readings on the other hand may be considered offshoots and excrescences from the Versions themselves, as they influenced polyglot-minded copyists when copying or using diglot and perhaps triglot texts in early days.

It is very noticeable that the employment of synonyms is rare and scattering. It is a very scattered matter indeed. The list annexed is derived from many MSS., and rarely does any one MS. startle us with more than one such striking variant in the course of the twenty-two chapters. If there are more to a MS. they will certainly be found in those having a polyglot ancestry.

Perhaps I have made the annexed list too long. Let us try to analyse it in at least one place. First of all, take βιαῖα for μεγάλη in xvi. 21. This has reference to χαλαζα.. ὡς ταλαντιαῖα, and all Latins but Primasius have simply magna, clearly translating μεγάλη. But Primasius startles us with ingens. Charles reports βιαῖα for No. 126 but fails to connect it with Prim., whose readings he generally reports quite fully. Soden reports βιαῖα for the family 61-126-218-219 (without specifying them), but also fails to connect the reading with Prim. Horner is silent. Tischendorf is silent. Swete mentions Prim. in his critical note, but not in the textual notes. At this rate we shall make no progress. Now, clearly Prim. was acquainted with a Greek text having βιαῖα in it. Otherwise we must suppose that the 61 recension retranslated ingens, which yields a word so different from μεγάλη that they might well have hesitated. I do not say that the Recensor who is responsible for the 61 family would not be capable of doing this, but I do not think he did so in the present case. If Prim. had βιαῖα before him in one of his texts he naturally preferred it as a strong word. It occurs elsewhere in the N.T. only at Acts ii. 2 of the rushing mighty wind of the Spirit. In the O.T. it occurs seven times, and adverbially βιαίως twice.

The 1 family.

As to the 1 family.
Erasmus MS. 1 has now found a real full sister in 208.
Half-sisters are 152-179. Around these are grouped the families 46 and 62.
Independents are 59-121 and 159, with 67-120 seeking to harmonize their differences.

The large group 119-123-144-148-158 is also independent, and through its syriac strain going back to a very ancient substratum of the family 1 traditions.

The sub-group 29-30-98-129 is not particularly interesting, whereas 149-186 as a sub-group is a highly important document, and enters into all kinds of combinations.

The Complutensian family, headed by 10, is sufficiently numerous for us to control its text perfectly. Of these documents 49 is slightly independent, and 17 at times violently so, while 37 is not as whole-heartedly with the group as one would expect at all times. It is difficult to pick the most reliable MS. of the group. Complutensian.

The sub-group 13-23-55-150^{sup}-(226) is highly interesting; so are the modern MSS. 14-92, modern only in date, for whilst unlicensed at times, they are never far from the heart of the textual problem and are to be taken account of when they support a rare reading together, but severely catechised when only one of the two is present.

The Arethas family, headed by 4, is commonplace; but the sub-group, headed by 6, intensely interesting in its bearings on the problem and the history of the text. Arethas.

The Graeco-Latin family, headed by 7, is very interesting in its affiliations and should be closely watched. Its Greek readings are hardly ever influenced by its Latin opposite. Graeco-Latin.

The family can be sub-divided as to detailed readings as exhibited under the description of its MSS.

The sub-group 8-24-140 is more commonplace, with 140 not only independent but suddenly appearing in unexpected places in support of a rare reading. The same may be said of 9-27-75.

As to family 21 now quite large, and including 135 at Sinai. Family 21.

This is what we call the δι' αγγελου family, for it is at once recognisable by δι' ἀγγέλου αὐτοῦ for διὰ τοῦ ἀγγέλου αὐτοῦ on the first page of each MS. of this recension. Again at xii. 1 δι' is introduced by this family alone, and the woman has a crown δι' ἀστέρων instead of ἀστέρων. The text flows very smoothly, including the retention of ὡς εἶδες in i. 20, until we reach ii. 10 when ὧν suddenly flashes out in many MSS. of the group instead of ἃ. It is not done by all, however, and seems to have a Latin bearing. It occurs in the phrase 'μὴ (or μηδὲν) φοβοῦ ἃ μέλλεις πάσχειν (or παθεῖν).' Here the Latins say 'Nihil horum' or 'nihil eorum timeas quae,' using both expressions. The sahidic also favours this: 'Fear not any of the (things).' The bohairic and others unnecessarily amplify. And aeth says 'anything concerning,' which is found in Oecumenius' MS. 146 'δι' ἃ.' The uncials know nothing of this.

Another very characteristic reading soon follows at iii. 8 of + οὐ before μικράν 'For thou hast not a little power.' Again, a very characteristic one is found at iv. 8 where after ἓν καθ' ἓν follows the verb ἔχει in the present tense against the other groupings.

We continue to run with the textus receptus, as at vi. 8 ἀκολουθεῖ μετ' αὐτοῦ against the mass for ἠκολούθει αὐτῷ, but the uncials split here and are very indecisive. The same applies to βάλλει at vi. 13.

At xiv. 8 we come to a crux. The ordinary text runs, 'Fell, fell Babylon the great, (because) from the wine of the wrath of her fornication drank all (the) nations.'

This sentence was early in trouble, because sah turns it, and says: 'Fell, fell the great Babylon, and all the nations fell in the wine of the indignation of her fornication,' reversing the order of the end of the clause, and substituting the πέπτωκαν of ℵ^a (alone) or the πέπτωκε of 12 and 130 with copt and arm for πεπότικε.

Various methods of mending have been tried.

Most authorities numerically (including group 21) omit ὅτι, but only fam 21 introduce ἧς after αὐτῆς to round out the sentence. CA fam 34, 38, 56, 95 etc. substitute ἡ for ὅτι which precludes any use of ἧς afterwards, and in fact takes the place of it. B and a cohort of some forty MSS., including 40 fam 61 write ταύτης for αὐτῆς, which would allow of the presence or absence of ὅτι, which some of the group retain and some omit.

It remains for 28 alone, out of the whole 21 group, to substitute ἧς for αὐτῆς, which would justify the presence of ὅτι thus: 'for from the wine of the wrath of fornication, of which drank all the nations.'

But the various MSS. of the group are not often in disagreement, and it is not only a highly important group with an Egyptian background, but has a bearing on some of the Complutensian MSS.

Of group 21 I believe 79 stands out for accuracy of transmission, but 99-170 probably represent the oldest stratum. 28 is sometimes independent and joins the Patmos group 38-178-203-240. In these places it even replaces 38 occasionally, so the reader is not to imagine a misprint of 28 for 38.

Family 25. The first sub-group, if we can call it so, of 25-58-70-78-84-94-207 (and the second hand of 19) is a very interesting group also. Its idiosyncracies are well-marked and may be neglected grosso modo. Of the group 70 is the most accurately transmitted.

Another sub-group headed by 26 is not negligeable, and occasionally furnishes valuable information, but is a little unequal in its treatment of variants.

The last sub-group (29)-30-98-(128)-129 seems to have been standardized except here and there. These spots are well worth observation as they flit across the page.

Coptic and Family 34. The big 'Coptic' family 34-35 etc. has modifications in its make up, and often splits. Of these 124 is rather independent, but 132, splendidly copied (by a woman), is the most reliable, and generally speaking the group is of great value as a balancing factor in difficult places.

Sub-groups. The sub-groups are numerous and all of interest, although very unequal in their loyalty to other groups. 82 is the best of group 44-52-82.

The group 51-90 etc. will bear the closest watching.

The 61 group is a king-pin group, having remarkably ancient elements in the midst of clear revision.

81-204 represent a stepping-stone to the 1 family.

95-127-215 is the real group, and when opposed inter se it is always a danger signal, and their divided testimony is rarely of advantage to the uncials. When together it is otherwise. The rest of the group and 159 are semi-independent. The whole group together is important in its bearing.

97-122-214 represent some composite elements, sometimes favouring the 7 family and Cassiodorus' leanings.

As to 176-206 and 226 they enter into many rare combinations, and a careful study of their course will repay the observer.

Syriac family. We now reach what I have ventured to call part of the Syriac family, and 108 109 149-186 are interesting documents to watch as they thread their way through our maze.

Fam 114-193-241 is a great help when the three members are agreed and very steady goers as a rule. When opposed it is at once a danger-signal.

Fam 119 I have treated of at length under the proper headings of its MSS. (q.v.).

Family 40-210. As to 40-210 (supertype, as I say, of the CAB recension in a composite sense) I regret to say that they are more often opposed than I like in many passages which are difficult to assess, and where their conflicting testimony only adds to the hardship of having to make a choice between two equally unsatisfactory readings. That these MSS., however, represent a real græco-syriac examplar I have no more doubt than in the case of 18 (which to the end of our examination lacks a sister).

We come next to the Oecumenius MSS. 146-155, of which an editio princeps was issued Oecumenius.
last year. This subject cannot be dismissed in a few words, and yet I cannot enter into full detail here. Suffice it to say that the evidence is new, of great value in many places as a balancing factor, but somewhat unequal in value as to certain other matters. Its presence or absence is, however, always to be watched for most carefully and noted. Oecumenius' commentary not unfrequently differs from the text, and herein lies its great value. Both recensions are hoary with age, and as regards the commentary-text (so full that it is almost another MS.) we have a specific and splendid control in the group F 38-178-203-240 upon whose text the commentary-text is based. Of these F is a fragment unfortunately, but 178-203-240 hang together in the rarest of readings preceding ℵ, while 38 (the only member of the group known to us previously) differs a good deal and underwent some revision process ages since, and again probably near its last copying. It is probable that 240 is a copy of F.

Of single documents we have already touched on 18, 108, 109 (græco-arm-italian, the MS. 18. armenian part being arm 3. in Coneybeare) and the 95 group. Of the rest 36 is a remarkable MS. 36.
document. While largely with the textus receptus against the mass (it will often be found missing in our long and overwhelming lists against the textus receptus) it has a number of very striking and important readings with the elder authorities.

47 has already been referred to as a remarkable Church-standard. When it sides with MS. 47.
a minority it is a vital matter, and should always be mentioned in a critical apparatus.

56 is in a different case. It also, like 36, often and most unexpectedly sides with the MS. 56.
currently printed text 'ab omnibus receptum.' It has a very old base, no sister, and comes from some very old stock. For sister it only has the second hand of 108. It is a document to be reckoned with.

Of 65 we only have a fragment, which is absolutely deplorable. The full text would be MS. 65.
a wonderful check on ℵ, with which it is often together without other adherents. To be watched most carefully.

We now come to three of the most remarkable documents of the collection:

111 113 and 130

all three quite different, all three of immense potential value, all three difficult to use. See further discussion under their respective headings in the list.

143 is an incomplete document, being extant only at the beginning and end, but MS. 143.
expressly so fabricated, and agreeing in this respect with the commentary of Apringius. It is an outstanding document, bearing every intrinsic evidence of a wonderful and unecclesiastical ancestry as regards base, and I am greatly interested in it as far as its testimony is available. In combination with other important documents its voice has almost the weight of a casting vote.

164–166 really range with the 6-31-106-171-174 family from ch. i–xi. It is a com- 164-166.
bination (with 165 in between partially in agreement) made up of two recensions as regard the first and the second half of the Revelation. It occupies itself in recording a number of ancient and interesting variants.

200 is an ancient document of the xth century—unfortunately not dated—written by an MS. 200.
honest scribe. As he also wrote 201—quite a different type—we know he is honest as he copies from his two exemplars without confusion between the two.

Like 143, when 200 enters into a small combination it is noteworthy—with this difference; that 200 is reproducing a very old text, but not as reliable a one as that of 143, for 200 has many more unique readings (in the ground common to the two) and the variations, although very old, have to be brought to a more rigid and acid test of Versions and Fathers.

Cursive testimony.

Let us steadily keep in mind the following point of view. The testimony of cursive MSS. not only suggests, but in certain cases gives indubitable proof that they are related to MSS. antedating the oldest ones now known to us. Hence our work is not in vain, however complicated.

Thus, when we speak of separate recensions, say of B and group, and ℵCAP and group, it is true that there is such a division (+ subdivisions), but back of all and every one of these five MSS., there are elements of each, which, agreeing together, lead to a point far more ancient than any of them singly, and it is back to this point that certain later or cursive testimony guides us, and it cannot fail, if judiciously used, to be extremely valuable.

There remain or will remain the few places where the ancient authorities either indulge in vagaries or have singular readings all to themselves. Where these conflict and are unsupported by the so-called later testimony of the cursives (themselves, many of them, always remember, derived direct or nearly direct from other MSS. as old as our extant uncials) we can safely neglect them. Where again they are supported in their singularity by a handful of later cursives, we can easily determine the character of these supporting witnesses (in the light of the present examination of all their relations extant) and see what weight if any to accord to the different readings.

Thus this examination of the Apocalypse will render wider service and tend to throw light on the evidence connected with many passages in other books.

B recension.

We find, then, first and foremost—numerically speaking—that the leading problem is the B recension. Strange that, as in the other books, the great Vatican codex B occupies the most prominent position among the materia critica, so here another MS., also designated B (though also called Q), should seem to hold the key to the position of the fortress we are trying to penetrate! Most cursives, examined so far, undoubtedly were greatly influenced by B. In how far then are the readings of B reliable? We may reply, that, roughly speaking, B and cursive groups may be neglected if opposed by a consensus of the older uncials, Versions and Fathers. If on the other hand B is joined by ℵ, A, or C, the greater weight can only be overborne by other subsidiary evidence, and if B have the support of ℵA or CA together, we must grant the group a full hearing. The important part perhaps is the establishing of many readings on a firm basis by the consentient testimony of all five uncials ℵCABP and the mass of cursives, as opposed to the readings which have crept down to us through the original editors, Erasmus and Stephen, who relied on but a few MSS., faulty in certain particulars. Here then probability becomes a certainty. In the case of the Complutensian, which did not form the basis of the Textus Receptus, the matter is somewhat different, for, in a general way, Stunica's text conforms more closely to the mass of MS. testimony than that of the other editors.

Textus receptus.

From Tischendorf, Tregelles and Westcott and Hort on the other hand, we can take a step backwards, and restore to the Textus Receptus some of the readings removed from it, on the one hand by changes in accord solely with ℵ, or on the authority solely of A, and so on.

Idiosyncracies of the uncials.

One of the peculiar features of the examination is the survival now in one cursive MS. and now in another of certain idiosyncracies of ℵ, C, or A, as indeed also of B and P. The bearing of this on the problem is merely indicative of the fact that the MS. which exhibits these has an ancient lineage, a long descent compared to some others, and traces back more directly than some to the IVth century or earlier, quite irrespective of the general character of text presented in the mediæval MS. under review.

TEXT OF B.

The B group.

We trace the origin of the B group not further back than VIII[th] or possibly VII[th] century. Now many many cursives are identified with this family group, whereas in the main our textus receptus is not, and has at any rate avoided the bulk of this revision, which makes the task of bringing it back to a text where ℵCABPEF and most cursives, or the majority of them, agree, a comparatively simple task.

As regards the B recension, a good illustration of its entire segregation from conservative tradition is to be found at iii. 2, where, outside of the immediate B following and the Compl. group, none (except 56, 111, 113) are found to know anything of ἀποβάλλειν for ἀποθανεῖν, and not a single Version (in the clause 'Be watchful and strengthen the rest which are about to die'). But for certain semitic formulæ alone (xxi. 4 εξαλειψει απ' αυτων παν δακρυον απο των οφθαλμων αυτων and xxi. 6 τω διψωντι δωσω αυτω) one would think the B group to be a late production; but perhaps this singular recension, numerically over eighty strong, may represent an early græco-syriac independent strain, which, however, has been so grossly reworked that on frequent occasions the B group opposes all the Versions as well as all other Greek groupings, e.g. xxi. 17 — εμετρησε.

Fidelity of scribes.

A very noteworthy fact is the fidelity of nearly all scribes in copying. A single line generally suffices for me to inscribe the few vagaries of spelling of a very few untutored scribes in a host of places where one might expect much greater variety.

There are a few exceptions: e.g. at iii. 18 in the well-worn phrase about the eye-salve. Besides the variations from εγχρισον of εγχρισον επι, εγχρισαι, ινα εγχριση, etc., we have the following 'plays':

> εγχρυσον by part of the small 119 family, > εγχειρησον by two thirds of the threefold group 114-193-241, > ενχρησαι by 200,
> ινα χρησης by 113, ινα εγχρησης by 26.

Armenian.

The arm family is a positive nuisance. Apart from arm 4. they represent but few sound traditions, and give us completely reworked texts. On the other hand arm 4. is often helpful when in conjunction with other Versions or single Greek MSS.

Primasius.

That Primasius' recension is a very distinct and separate affair is seen throughout, but especially in such a place as iii. 19, where he substitutes 'Crede' for ζήλωσον. If this be read as 'Rede' (some of his MSS.) we have the shaded variation of ζήλωσον and can read 'Return to thy true form,' but still it is a considerable stretch of ζήλωσον, nor will any other Greek variation fit Crede or Rede. And this recension is the same for all practical purposes as that of Cyprian and therefore full old. I know of no such complicated text as that of Prim. in which the MSS. are so much in accord. Various readings are really very few, and we can be certain we have his real text except in a handful of passages.

Modern critics' neglect.

What puzzles me is why modern editors have neglected some of our very oldest witnesses. It is not as if Tischendorf had not reported these, for he has done so, and with care. Then why does Horner neglect Hippolytus and Primasius, Methodius and Origen, while quoting the wretched and loose armenian? Why does Charles' compiler—for Charles did not make up his own apparatus—give us new readings from his 2050 (our important 143), without mentioning the support of this MS. to be found in Tischendorf?

Take one instance:

At xxi. 3 MS. 143 leaves out εκ του ουρανου, seemingly alone. But Tisch. quotes Iren. gr. ex Anastasio, and this I find is now borne out by Apringius. Charles' apparatus also neglects Hippolytus, who is extant for several whole chapters.

The acme of folly is reached as to numeration at xxi. 4, where Tisch. quotes 40 and 41

as omitting απο των οφθαλμων αυτων. These numbers in Charles become, if you please, 141 and 2021 respectively, but as far as I know these MSS. do not omit. Birch is no doubt responsible for this. As to 40 (his Vat. 1160 'per omnia diligenter examinavi') he does not report this. As to 41 (his Alex. Vat. 68) he does. But he also reports for it Pio Vat. 50, which is 42. Thus Tisch. should have said 41 42 and Charles 2021 and 452, since our old numbers 40 41 and 42 become with Charles 141 2021 and 452 respectively! But they are wrong as to the reading! Hence they might have spared us the trouble of looking up their numbers. No cursives omit απο των οφθαλμων αυτων, notwithstanding having απ αυτων for ο θεος. They read και εξαλειψει απ αυτων παν δακρυον απο των οφθαλμων αυτων. Simply another semitic expression, which passed unnoticed amongst copyists. Scholz is the one who misquoted 40, 41 for Birch's 41, 42, and Tisch. copied him without turning up Birch. But Scholz added 'al.', thinking of course there must be others which omit, but there are none. The truth is that part of the B group introduced απ αυτων when they cancelled ο θεος, but never removed απο των οφθ. αυτων.

Spirit testimony. I have laid under tribute, for what it may be worth, one of the most reliable and successful of our investigators of psychic (or intercosmic) phenomena by dragging into my net at xxi. 4 the only example of which I have cognisance of spirit-communication from an entity who was a bit of a textual critic, or at any rate one who was acquainted with various readings. I refer to a communication of the whole of this verse from the air, obtained by Baron Goldenstubbe on the 28 Oct. 1856, in the presence of a reliable witness (Count d'Ourches). See p. 81 and plate vi. No. 34, where the writer has placed ὁ θεός in brackets. This is quite an interesting adjunct to our studies. It was not a case of automatic writing. In all these experiments the writing was done by the communicator without human hands or instruments. See Goldenstubbe, 'La réalité des Esprits,' Paris 1857. Later in the verse the τα in τα πρωτα is not clear and may be σα. It looks like the writing of a modern Greek. This is the place where the forbears of ℵ and *syr*S went so egregiously wrong, and where 143 now gives us a new variant of ταυτα.

Deductions. Most features of interest in the several MSS. are alluded to in the Introductory notes under each MS. To piece these together, for absolute and final deduction is not the purpose of these few pages. It is more to call attention to what yet remains to be unravelled. A German writer has called attention to my attitude on a previous occasion † as that of one 'standing dumb before the material he had himself created,' and of not knowing how to deduce conclusions from figures brought together at considerable cost by himself. This is foolish. We have had too many cheap and hasty deductions from insignificant or insufficient data.

Matthaei. Thus Matthaei thought himself qualified to dogmatize, often absolutely, in the Apoc. with a knowledge only of a handful of MSS. And although shrewd and capable enough, yet his vision, frequently prophetic, was not clear at all times. So also Tregelles in his monograph on the Apoc. So also Mr. Kelly. So also Bernhard Weiss.‡ So also Bousset. There will always exist a great temptation to form a text based upon one's individual researches in the field. After mature consideration we shall resist this temptation, and leave it to others to draw their own conclusions.

Tregelles.

Kelly-Weiss.

Bousset. Would not Wilhelm Bousset have done better work if he had opened up new material, rather than have given us more lucubrations on the old and partial examinations conducted by previous scholars. I refer to his 'Textkritische Studien zum Neuen Testament,' Leipzig 1894, the first part of which is occupied by an examination of the various readings of the Apoc. and their probable authority. Much there brought forward, however, is of value, but with the new and revised material I provide here he could have done much better and more lasting work. We are pretty well advanced now in our knowledge of the B and P recensions. That of B was much more thorough, and hence more questionable. On the other hand that of P more hesitating and tentative. The passages involved are so numerous, that we must refer to the collation itself for elucidation. Meanwhile both Bousset and Weiss have called attention to the problems in their various aspects, and emphasized the comparative simplicity of solution, which we believe to be true. Both these men have also done good work, without any undue bias, in calling attention to the same problems in the Pauline and Catholic Epistles, also seemingly of fairly easy solution; and Epistles. if only some accurate workers would collate some of this rich and interesting material we would really make some strides forward, leaving the oft-traversed ground of the Gospels, where the material is so rich, the problems more difficult, and the workers, as regards original collation, apparently do not exist to-day. For myself, I would have preferred to traverse the ground of the Pauline and Catholic Epistles, where the textual problems are far more interesting, exegetically, than those of the Apocalypse. I chose what I believed to be a small field, but, how big it seems after all, and what patience is required to hold oneself in check and plod along with the documents instead of elaborating a treatise of conclusions! And the pity is that one cannot break new ground, without wearisome years of labour, checking off the old and partial examinations of our predecessors as a necessary prelude to investigation of fresh material.

† Examination of Evan. 604, published in 1890, and referred to by W. Bousset in 'Textkritische Studien' 1894.

‡ Weiss puts himself right out of court by omitting ἡμᾶς in Apoc. v. 9, a purely clerical omission of A, alone of all MSS. and authorities.

Let us hope that Bousset and Weiss may have disciples, who will follow in their foot- English school. steps, and, estimating ℵCA at their true value, not as final authorities, but only as separate keys to the numerous chambers of the problem, in conjunction with the mass of other testimony available, work out these problems in the scientific spirit with which they have evinced the laudable desire to approach them. For, since Burgon's and Scrivener's day, the English school has been represented by somewhat shallow and biassed critics, counting among their accomplishments very little original research worthy of the name amongst the Greek MSS.

In the 'Traditional Text' of Burgon-Miller, vol. I., pp. 202/3, occurs the following: Burgon-Miller.

"But the point to which the reader's attention is specially invited is this:—that so "far from our being entirely dependent on codexes BℵCD, or on some of them, for certain "of the most approved corrections of the Received Text, we should have been just as fully "aware of every one of those readings if neither B nor ℵ, C nor D, had been in existence. "These readings are every one to be found in one or more of the few cursive codexes "which rank by themselves, viz., the two groups just mentioned and perhaps some others. "If they are not, they may be safely disregarded; they are readings which have received "no subsequent recognition."

In the same way, all through our examination of these many cursive MSS. of the Apocalypse, such features are omnipresent. That is to say, that each MS. in turn, as I take it up and turn it inside out, so to speak, lets fall some of the older lections found in ℵCABP, but discarded long ago as personal to the scribes of those MSS. or their forebears. A few of them of course are coincidences, e.g. itacisms of a certain kind; again omissions Coincident error. or reduplications owing to homoioteleuta may occur and reoccur without malice prepense. But there are other readings (of which the accompanying synopsis of readings is full) which date back, some to the IX, VIII, VII, VI, V or IVth century, and some beyond. At times we find errors in late cursives, antedating any of our oldest uncials, and thereby we can sometimes trace the source of error in the old MS. in question, which has been influenced by its parents, the influence branching laterally and descending to our later MSS., and revealing just how ℵ or ℵ^{a}, or A, or C came to record a partial error, or avoided it, or was induced to give an alternative, or generally to flounder in the premises. Now, if instead of congratulating ourselves when we find an ally of ℵ say among the late cursives, we sit down and reason it out, we shall see why we are not to fall down and idolise the existing uncials because they are uncials. And as a matter of fact, we do not. Here then is a contradiction to be very thoroughly weighed and pondered.

Versions. From the openings of each verse, where I have collected the Version readings, it will easily be seen how the Versions used the Commentaries then existing in compiling their texts. They do not represent a single Greek fountain-head at all, but, like ℵ, used a number of reference books.

In my list and descriptions of the MSS. I have omitted certain minor features which are chronicled in Scrivener's and Gregory's lists, and where they can be readily consulted. Other details I have striven to present. My excuse for a detailed account and consideration of each MS., and for swelling the Introduction to such an extent thereby, is to emphasize what Bishop Ellicott calls "one lesson of primary importance, often reiterated but often forgotten, ponderari debere testes, non numerari."† And as Reiche justly observes—

Reiche. "... Ita autem comparatus esse debet ejusmodi N.T. codicum κανών, ut præter alia plura, quæ critici interest de iis scire, minus gravia, de unoquoque indicetur, quatenus jam notus, examinatusque sit, a quo quibusve, quo ambitu, qua diligentia sit descriptus, collatus et in usum adhibitus; quibus præmissis afferantur, quæ forte de codice ipso, de scripti ejus tempore, patria, destinatione, de exemplari exemplaribusve, e quibus descriptus, castigatus et correctus sit, aut a librario ipso aliave manu fide digna memoriæ mandatum sit, aut ex adscriptis subscriptisve colligantur; tum vero libri habitus externus describatur, forma, literarum character, scholiorum comitatus, textus partitiones, textui præmissa, adjuncta, subscripta, omnia denique e quibus libri historia, quatenus in ejus aestimatione critica in censum venit, illustretur; deinde vero scriptionis habitus, quasi internus cognoscatur; qua peritia, diligentia ac religione scriba correctorque munere suo functi sint; post hæc, textus ipsius ad aliorum codicum textum relatio, stirps, cognatio affinitasque cum aliis, unde ejus quasi nobilitas eluceat, quantum certis indiciis fieri potest, indagetur; præ omnibus denique textus indoles critica, major minorve scilicet sinceritas et puritas e lectionum vel manifesto genuinarum vel saltem probabilium copia, comparata cum depravationum corruptelarumque numero ac gravitate, diversis codicis partibus rite distinctis, accurate definiatur; quibus omnibus rite perpensis cuique fides sua et auctoritas absoluta et relativa, ut dicunt, et in se spectata et comparatione cum aliis facta, constituatur," etc. etc.‡

I cannot stop here to consider ellipsis or plena locutio, prosopopoeia and synecdoche, hendiadys or periphrasis, metonymy or epenthesis, pleonasm or alliteration or asyndeton, symmetry, gradatio inversa or parataxis, the enallage of cases, oratio perplexa, or anaphora. All these points must be relegated to the reviews and accounts of the different MSS., as well as 'exigentia loci' and the 'usus narrandi' of the Versions.

More weighty matters must engage our attention.

Cruces. Of course the most crucial place from a doctrinal point of view is at xxii. 14, where a great cleavage is seen between:

Μακαριοι οι πλυνοντες (πλυναντες fam 7 et 143) τας στολας αυτων by ℵA fam 38 127 146-155*txtt et com. vg aeth Ath. Fulg. Haymo ps-Ambr.*, sah (οι επλυναν αυτων τας στολας) et Prim. com.: in stolis lotis (hiat txt); and the majority with: Μακαριοι οι ποιουντες τας εντολας αυτου including B (hiant CPE) rell. et gig boh syr arm arab Tert. Cypr. Tyc. Andr. and Arethas; and where the elder Greek MS. authorities are probably wrong, having been influenced by vii. 14, which they reflect.

† The Revisers and the Greek text of the N.T. by two members of the N.T. Co. 1882.

‡ Codicum MSS. N.T. Græc. in Bib. Regia Parisiensi asserv. etc. J. G. Reiche, Gottingæ, 1847. Alas, that his own Collations are so dreadfully executed. When I extracted the above from his work, I had not checked his collation of Apoc. 51, which is grotesque.

Conflation.

The important recension 56-108 conflates the two readings, but 59 boh[tres] arm a. 4. strengthen and emphasize ποιουντες by using φυλασσοντες, as Tyc. Beat. by using servant. Tert[lat.] has: qui ex praeceptis agunt, but Cypr.: qui faciunt praecepta ejus. (The arab agrees with Tert. and has: qui se exercent in mandatis ejus).

Faint places.

This place of course may have been 'faint' in the original—[but we would still have to account for the change of αυτου to αυτων]—since we notice 179 writing μακαροι for μακαριοι and Cypr.: 'Felices' for 'Beati' of the rest.

Arm 1. must needs vary with: Qui legunt legem ejus.

Another variant remains with fam 119 and Beat. Andr., which substitute εμου for αυτου (keep my commandments). In this passage, if anywhere, Tertullian holds the balance of power and contradicts ℵA and the Patmos group 38-178-203-240 (here in complete agreement), for with Tertullian are ranged all the other important cursives as 18 36 40 47 111 113 130 143 200, etc.

Cassiodorus is somewhat more ambiguous, for, extant here also, he writes:

Beatos, dicens, qui conscientias suas bonis actibus mundaverunt (ut in ligno vitae . . .).

Westcott and Hort.

Westcott and Hort's text and the Revised English Version follow ℵA against Tertullian. I submit, however, that my cursive testimony of 18 36 40 111 113 130 143 200 and the rest (incl. fam 1, fam 10, fam 21, fam 34 etc. etc.) immensely strengthens Tertullian and Cyprian against ℵA.

Tischendorf's note is full and to the point, but in his text he could not resist following ℵ. Westcott and Hort, in this exceeding weighty doctrinal place, have withheld all observations on their choice, and no note is given on this 'selected reading.'

The Fathers.

When the Fathers quote at length [as Hippolytus (c[a]. 226) two whole chapters of the Apoc. xvii. xviii, and as Anonymi Tract. ad Nov. hær, (c[a]. 255) Apoc. vi. 12/17, or Lucifer with his long quotations from the Acts], or when, as it happens, two of them quote at length the same long passage, e.g. Apoc. xii. 1/6 by Methodius and Hippolytus, the testimony is of immense value. We cannot get much further back for the Apoc. than 200 A.D., and here we ought to come close to the ipsissima verba. In the above passage, alas, there are several differences. But as Hippolytus is far more careful than Methodius (the latter is very loose when quoting by fragments) we might lean to him, but it does not help very much. They agree in two points, however, κραζει ver. 2 and εκει τρεφωσιν ver. 6, both readings of the textus receptus. This is what we mean when we say it is dangerous to tamper with the oldest readings of the t.r. Yet Griesbach and Lachmann with C read εκραζεν (although κραζει is reading of ℵAP etc.).

On the other hand Lachmann gives τρεφωσιν with t.r. A.P. Meth. Hipp., as above, Andr. etc., while Tisch. (viii), Treg. W-H.marg. read τρεφουσιν with ℵC and few, and Griesbach Tisch. read εκτρεφωσιν with B and Arethas etc. Why not here let Methodius and Hippolytus decide for us? For remember the agreement here is weighty. They also agree in ἡρπαγη of ℵ and Compl. group against t.r. ηρπασθη of ACP and most. Yet Tisch. reads against his friend ℵ here as also do W-H. and Treg. They disagree otherwise thus:

Methodius and Hippolytus.

ver. 4.	Method.	εκτεκειν	Hipp.	τικτειν [t.r. τεκειν]
5.	"	αρσενα	"	αρρενα [cum t.r.]
5.			"	— εν ραβδω σιδηρα per incuriam
5.	"	+ προς (ante τον θρονον)	"	+ εις (ante τον θρονον)
6.	"	εχει εκει τοπον	"	εχει τον τοπον εκει
6.	"	υπο	"	απο [cum t.r.].

Textus receptus.

We have had the curiosity to apply the old test to the largest fragment of Hippolytus, two full chapters, xvii. xviii. We have compared the texts of Hippolytus, of ℵ, and of A

(unfortunately C is only partially extant but stands no better by comparison) with the textus receptus and with this result:—

Hippolytus omits 16, adds 13, transposes 12, substitutes 45 times, total 86 (involving 136 words), of which unique 18 times.

ℵ omits 25, adds 19, transposes 10, substitutes 69 times, total 123 (involving 185 words), of which unique 27 times at least.

A omits 22, adds 9, transposes 8, substitutes 62 times, total 101 (involving 162 words), of which unique 18 times at least.

We get the same old result. That this famous pre-syrian or 'Neutral' text of Hort as represented by ℵ is weighed and found wanting.

As a further interesting experiment, we apply the same test to two very interesting cursive codices, viz. 47 and 56.

Apoc. 47. 47 omits 15, adds 11, transposes 13, substitutes 42 times, total 81 (involving 130 words), of which unique twice only.

Apoc. 56. 56 omits 19, adds 21, transposes 9, substitutes 50 times, total 99 (involving 150 words), of which unique 13 times (plus once with C, once with A, once with 95, once with 36 95) [our contention under No. 56 is fully borne out here. A fine old text disfigured by additions. He adds more than any of the others and transposes less].

Observe now how the blind lead the blind. ℵ (27) A (18) Hipp. (18) Ap. 56 (13) invite us no less than seventy-six times to readings upheld by no others, as against twice for Ap. 47.

This is what we mean when we speak of the test of Catholic antiquity. The judgment of the Catholic church (Greek, Roman and Anglican) is represented by an XI^th century codex Ap. 47, which eschews all these vagaries.

I am aware of course that Ap. 47 does not stand in the relation of 2:76, for A 56 Hipp. outweigh ℵ's twenty-seven, ℵ 56 Hipp. outweigh A's eighteen, ℵA 56 outweigh Hipp.'s eighteen, and ℵA Hipp. outweigh Ap. 56's thirteen, without any aid from Ap. 47.

Previous scales inadequate. But suppose we were reduced to the witness of ℵ and A alone. How should we know which of ℵ's twenty-seven or of A's eighteen are to be listened to. For that is just the predicament into which Lachmann, Tischendorf, Hort, Sanday and others have got themselves. By setting up those two witnesses as paramount, and by striving to weigh the one against the other they are perforce thrown back on their individual leaning, now towards one and now towards another. This indeed on countless occasions is the case, and as I have shown repeatedly elsewhere.

Apoc. 47. How much better, 47 having proved a reliable straightforward witness, would it be to give it its proper weight in these councils, and not to relegate it to a tertiary position of slight importance. For it represents the very careful judgment of Catholic Ecclesiastical antiquity, which had sifted the evidence long before with better materials than we possess. It came from Athos, and doubtless had the advantage, like 95 from there, of many an old II^nd to IV^th century text long prior to the founding of Athos [indeed it was probably written before Athos was founded], and, unlike 95, it gives us, not a multiplicity and mixture of extraordinary readings, picking and choosing among curious forms, but the deliberate judgment of catholic antiquity.

I do not seek to set this text up as perfect. It has flaws; it has preferences; it has a few unique readings (but very few); it has certain readings in minority evidence; but as a whole it is excellent and reliable. Of course what I mean is that its readings are supported by a superior body of collective evidence to those of many codices of older date, and therefore it is far preferable as a base and as a standard to the evident eclectic texts of ℵC or A. To be so, it may be said, 47 must be still more eclectic. Not so; its eclecticism consists in going with the majority, not in numbers, but in numbers and in weight.

[P and B would stand in about the same numerical relations as A and 56. It is too lengthy a process to go into further here].

To show the process in detail would unfortunately be too unwieldy. But let us eliminate transpositions here, which are of light importance, and also substitutions for the present, and confine ourselves to additions and omissions.

Please to note that as compared with the much-abused textus receptus:

> Hippolytus only omits fifteen, whereas A omits twenty-two, and ℵ omits twenty-four (while 56 has the same number as A, and 47 has least of all, viz. fifteen).

Yet Hippolytus antedates ℵ by full 150 years. Not a good general argument for the 'shorter' text!

Now we must go into a little more detail, and indicate the kind of omissions.

Here are those of Hippolytus: Omissions.

xvii. 1. —μοι (post λεγων)
—των (ante υδατων et ante πολλων)
4. —και tert.
5. —και init. No support except sah boh.
9. —αι with E 67-120.
11. —και sec. with 55* 95 (a Hipp. codex, vide post) and fam 119.
[και αυτος ογδοος εστι] in square brackets apud Galland. and omitted by Lagarde.
13. —ουτοι Apparently error. No support.
xviii. 1 init. —και
2. ισχυρα φωνη (—εν)
2. [και φυλακη παντος ορνεου ακαθαρτου] in square brackets apud Galland. and omitted by Lagarde.
5. —αυτης prim. With fam 61 only.
6. —υμιν
6. —αὐτῇ tertio loco
9. —αυτην
10. —εν
15. —απ αυτης So gig.

Those not specially indicated are correct omissions, amply supported. Therefore one is an error, plus perhaps six more. At least nine are correct.

Here are those of A.

xvii. 1. —μοι
ib. —των bis
10. —και prim.
13. —την sec. with B etc.
17. —και ποιησαι μιαν γνωμην with a few cursives.
xviii. 3. —του οινου Alone with 111-146.
6. —υμιν
ib. —αυτη tert.
8. —κυριος Alone with 95-127-215.
9. —αυτην
10. —εν
ib. —ηλθεν Alone with 100[non fam].
12. —και πορφυρας Quite alone.
xviii. 16 init. —και
ib. —η (ante περιβεβλημενη) Alone with 106.
17. —ο ομιλος
19. —κλαιοντες και πενθουντες with three careless cursives, 1-208, 67 and 113.
21. —ισχυρος Alone with ℵ 113.
22. —πασης τεχνης Practically alone with ℵ boh.
23. —και φως λυχνου ου μη φανη εν σοι ετι with very few.
ib. —οι prim. with four cursives, 13, 70[contra fam] 95-127-215, 233.

Here are those of ℵ.

xvii. 1. —εκ Only a very few cursives join.
ib. —μοι
ib. —των bis
10. —και prim.
15. —ἡ Alone (so latt).
16. —εν with P 210 only and latt.
18. —ἡ (ante εχουσα) and a very few curs. fam 25, 51-90, 92 95 146 246.
xviii. 2. ισχυρα φωνη (—εν)
ib. —επεσε with B and but few cursives.
6. —υμιν
ib. —αυτη tert.
9. —αυτην
ib. —και στρηνιασαντες Alone with 75[contra fam] 189.

xviii. 10. —εν
12. —και μαρμαρου with Apoc. 1-208 only.
14. —τα sec. with C and a few rather important cursives.
16 init. —και
ib. —η μεγαλη η περιβεβλημενη Alone.
17. —ο ομιλος
19. —ουαι semel
21. —ισχυρος Alone with A 113.
22 init. —και Alone with 1-208, 178-203-240.
ib. —πασης τεχνης Practically alone with A boh.
ib. —και φωνη μυλου usque ad fin. vers.

I submit that the above is illuminating as to the carelessness of ℵ and A.

It is not necessary to go on at length through the additions and so forth, but we will take some examples of substitution to show the bad style of ℵ and A compared to the textus receptus or Hippolytus.

Substitutions.

Hippolytus' important substitutions are these:

xvii. 1. μοι (pro μετ εμου) An error.
8. θαυμασουσιν Alone with 113. This place was early in doubt, for AP have θαυμασθησονται alone, yet all others have θαυμασονται of t.r.
ib. εν βιβλω supported only by fam 21.
10. ὁ δε εἱς εστιν with 56 and 96 only and Prim.
14. βασιλευοντων (pro βασιλεων) Possibly an error of scribe. No other support. But see ps-Ambr. dominantium and 176-206 in xix. 16.
17. την καρδιαν Apparently deliberate, but no support except by 130 sah boh.
xviii. 4. εκ των ουρανων No support.
† 5. εως (pro αχρι) Alone with P.
[Can there have been more translation and retranslation than we suppose? μεχρι 67-120, 80-138].
13. θυμιαμα with only some cursives and gig sah boh syrΣ Prim.
19. πιοτητος (pro τιμιοτητος)! (Om. claus. Tyc 2. Confl. arm 2: 'wealth of preciousness').
20. αγγελοι (pro αγιοι) Error? Not since reproduced except by syrΣ (A[gr] is mutilated).

Quite a curious list, but innocuous.

† Note how very early occurs this cross-Latin influence εως/αχρι, and see Methodius προς/εις, υπο/απο.

SUBSTITUTIONS OF A AND ℵ.

19. της κεφαλης Alone with 59 146-155 boh.

20. ουρανοι Alone.

21. ως λιθον (pro ως μυλον) Alone.

22. εν αυτη (pro και) with Apoc. 1 (but belongs to omission and addition).

Clearly we could better lose ℵ and A than Hippolytus. First ℵ makes a blunder and then A, and so they alternate.

Now let us call a halt and apologize for this exhibition. We have been told that we must not compare with the textus receptus, but with some other and more reliable standard,—as if we could get a more reliable standard. I notice even Lake uses Lloyd, but also Tisch. VIII. and other standards, and Gregory used Pickering because it was of vest-pocket size for his journeys to Athos! That is a pernicious method. Each of us ought to use one common standard for all our comparisons, and that standard, in use for over 350 years, is Stephen's edn. of 1550.

But let us take another standard, and let that be the oldest we can get, viz. the text of Hippolytus himself. Testing the matter by that standard, we find (omitting all cases of ν ἐφελκ.)—

ℵ	differs from it		126 to 143 times (itacism accounts for 17 places).
A	,,	,, ,,	97	,,
Textus Rec.	,,	,, ,,	85	,,
47	,,	,, ,,	84	,,
56	,,	,, ,,	100	,,

Here is a table of the detail :

	Additions	Omissions	Transpositions	Substitutions	Total	(Involving words)
ℵ	23	27	9	{84 − 17 spelling} = 67	126 to 143	173 to 190
A	12	24	5	56	97	{147 (owing to long omissions).
Text. Rec.	16	12	12	45	85	135
47	14	16	10	44	84	125
56	24	19	8	49	100	134

Pray note the same result, or worse.

We forgot to mention the additions in our lists under the comparison with text. rec. Here is a digest of some of those added to Hippolytus :

ℵ adds xvii. 4 αυτης και της γης (for της γης of Hipp., and αυτης of others. A real conflate reading. Surely a revision by ℵ. Now where is the pre-syrian or neutral reading here? ℵ 'conflated' before the 'Antioch revision' had a hearing.

ℵ xvii. 8 adds παλιν before παρεστε. Alone.

ℵ xviii. 3 + 'μετ αυτης επορνευσαν' after γης sec., but this is an error marked by the first hand.

ℵ 8 ὁ θεος ὁ κυριος ὁ. Addition and transposition.

ℵ 11 + σου (post γης). Alone with 75[contra 9-27].

ℵ 21 + ισχυρον (post λιθον). Alone. Another case of conflation to the debit of ℵ. This time a matter of editing and preference ; not supported since.

ℵ ibid. + οτι (ante ουτως). Alone with 102 (an unreliable witness against 8 sisters) and fam 178 with coptic and in their style.

Now take A. It is far freer with omissions and substitutions (bad ones) than with additions, but note the following :

xviii. 2. After omitting και φυλακη παντος ορνεου ακαθαρτου, letting και μεμισημενου stand after πνευματος ακαθαρτου, A adds : και φυλακη παντος θηριου ακαθαρτου και μεμεισημενου (spelling this two ways) with 111 200 251 gig aeth. Surely a kind of excisive conflation here too.

We hope that the drift of this will be appreciated and not mistaken.

A very interesting point in the comparison of the good cursive 47 with Hippolytus is that Hipp. when differing from 47 actually gives the textus receptus against Apoc. 47, e.g.: Apoc. 47.

xvi. 3, 4, 8 (order of seven words), 10 (twice), 13 (twice).
xviii. 3 (thrice), 4, 6 (twice), 7, 8, 9, 12 (twice), 13, 16 (thrice), 17, 18, 19 (twice), 24, or TWENTY SEVEN TIMES out of the 84.

Now deduct from Apoc. 47 the 18 unique readings of Hipp. and we have only 66 differences left [of course we must deduct these 18 from the totals of the other MSS. also; I am trying to be perfectly fair and unbiassed; indeed, I had no idea when I began how wonderfully the examination would turn out]. From these 66 instances now deduct the 27 cases where Hipp. agrees with t.r. against Apoc. 47, and we have ONLY 39 left to account for in Apoc. 47 as against ever so many more in the others.

This may be the proper place to emphasize why the text. rec. of the Apoc. is intrinsically good. Apoc. 1, on which it was founded, is an old text. See how it comes out in Hippolytus at xviii. 17, και πας ἐπι των πλοιων ὁ ὁμιλος, abandoned by all others except 62/3 and 72 of the 1 family, which omit ὁ. And note many other places like xviii. 13 θυμιαμα.

It is actually possible to reconstruct a first-class text from Hipp.—47—and text. rec., and a far better one than that of any of our five uncials. Why? Well, apart from a few idiosyncracies, which the whole body of subsequent evidence rejects, Hippolytus represents as old a text as we can get. Then 47, also apart from only a few distinguishing idiosyncracies easily identified and rejected owing to lack of other support, is throughout a straightforward, careful witness. And lastly, the textus receptus, apart from any instinctive and intrinsic excellence, happens to prove back to the very order of words used by Hippolytus' codex; in places where t.r. disagrees we let 47 + Hipp. guide us, and they nearly always lead us in the right path, namely with the consensus of general evidence.

Not so ℵ, A, C, P or B, nor yet 56. If we thought it would be studied aright we would exhibit the whole evidence, but it is rather lengthy.

We have merely repeated here for a portion of the Apocalypse what has been done in the same way for the Gospels. It is not to say that we must not consult ℵ or A. It is to say that we must not bow down and worship them, and call ℵ a neutral text, from which there is no appeal. We have many scales to weigh the oldest MSS. in, only we have not always used them properly. We are not using them properly to-day. Investigation there has been. Old Latin, Syriac, Coptic have been taken in hand, and the Benedictine Fathers are now laboriously investigating the Vulgate texts, both for the Old and New Testaments. Scales.

That will never, however, recover the ipsissima verba for us. If the texts used by Clement, Origen or Jerome were imperfect and full of various readings from the Ist to the IVth century, we can never hope by working backward to obtain a perfect text. But we can, by a laborious process of induction, eliminate plain and clear errors, and probable errors. Instead of doing that, manifest errors of B and ℵ and C and A, of the Coptic, Syriac, and Old Latin, of Erasmus and the Complutensian groups are still perpetuated as each one sees fit. Burgon tried to indicate a scientific method, and has barely had a hearing. Westcott and Hort indicated a less scientific method, because they seem to have imagined standards—which do not exist—and, marry, they have had a full hearing and a large following. Why? The reason is sadly obvious. The latter method is taking, easy, and at first sight plausible to the beginner. The former is horribly laborious, although precious in results. Inductive process.

For an appreciation of readings and how they came about, we must have a real history of the text. We have enormous material, imperfectly used. Let us get down to work and hew good foundations, rather than deduce and dogmatise on superficial examinations.

Of course, if, with Hort, we dismiss Irenæus, Hippolytus and Methodius, Justin Martyr and Marcion with the remark that their text is a 'Western' text (see pp. 113 and 145 Introdn.—Appendix) whatever that may be or may turn out to be (for the origin of the Old Latin is involved in great obscurity), the above study may be suggested in vain; but, as Burgon said, we may not argue on for ever, and what more exact proof does any one want than the above demonstration.

It is a clear and established fact that the t.r. and 47 are infinitely closer to Hippolytus' text of A.D. 225, than were either ℵ in 375, C and A in 550, P in 700, B in 800, or 56 and 95 contemporaneously with Hipp.

To disprove the resultant facts but one course lays open, and that is to reaffirm one's belief in the infallibility of certain documents, but which ones? ℵ? or C? or A? or P? or B? or 56? or 95? or any other? Documents all at variance among themselves. For we cannot allow a choice of parts of each and say 'For chapter so and so, ℵ is my standard, for chapter so and so, another.'

Hort promised in his Introduction that his deductions were but on trial (p. 33). His followers have gone further and accepted his whole tentative scheme.

The analysis of the testimony of my various groups must be sought, as I say, under the description of the different manuscripts. I had intended to merge the matter in these Prolegomena, but it would be a long process.

Westcott and Hort.

Hort said (vol. i. N.T. p. 553):

"A more precise definition of origin has in all cases to be sought, since the most important divergences of text took place in pre-Syrian times."

This can only be done by a process of induction, after the material has been collected. But the scholars, who reviewed my previous volume on the date of the Bohairic Version of the Apocalypse, refused to accept my conclusions,—refused to believe in the existence of Græco-Syriac documents in the first, second and third centuries, unless I could offer tangible proof of a fragment of papyrus or parchment bearing a few lines of such a bilingual text.

The faith that is in me, thereagainst, is based on this study of origins, but I shall resist the temptation to elaborate an argument here, and simply provide in the following discussion of groups and single MSS. in this volume,† and in the digested collations in volume II. all the material necessary to pursue the inductive method to its legitimate conclusions.

My witnesses will speak for themselves, if intelligently interrogated and cross-examined. When ℵ and A, syr sin and gigas or the Coptic Versions are put in the witness-box and properly cross-questioned, they will severally and collectively satisfy the jury of my bona-fides, and of their family history and antecedents. The following residual list, however, may give some hints, especially in the direction of A, which Westcott and Hort favour, but most eclectically, in the Apocalypse.

I have found support amongst the cursives for a vast number of hitherto unique readings amongst the elder authorities, but the Greek uncials remain still without support after all my researches from any of my 230 cursive documents in the following places, which is a far longer list than I had any idea of—examples occurring in nearly every verse, but my work would not be complete without this list:

† Between ℵ and A we get sense, but not separately. Together they read that they grieved because they could not kill, but A alone grieved in order to kill, and ℵ were loosed in order not to kill!

‡ αυτων however, is read by the whole of our fivefold family 119 plus 149-186, PRO ταυταις. Therefore ℵ had already conflated both readings. Ergo f. 119 lies behind ℵ.

Immediately after this we find the syriac and bohairic order of και τα ξυλινα και τα λιθινα with ℵ 113 and all the 119 family.

To this enormous list—(enormous, even if we eliminate all itacisms)—must be added many places where ℵAC have found an adherent or a few adherents among the junior Greek MSS.

Abandonment of A at times by the 'fashionable' text.

Without considering the latter, however, it shows in what a curious case we should find ourselves if deprived of the witness of the cursives, or if, for instance, Erasmus and Stunica had set up their text from ℵ A or C instead of from fam 1 or fam 10. (Corssen calls our fashionable text 'a text which the moderns have distilled from a few Greek uncials, which is only a reflection of a purposeful and fixed recension of the fourth century.') The things discarded by Hort, such as πρωτοτοκος, used several times by A for πρωτος, would certainly be in the text. This makes it almost ludicrous for Hort (because it is the easier reading) to eliminate ἡμᾶς from the text in v. 9 on the sole authority of A (without one word in his margin) when he abandons scores of A omissions, such as ii. 18 —εκκλησιας, iv. 11 —και εκτισθησαν, v. 10 —τω θεω ημων, vii. 1 —επι της γης, ix. 2 —ως, x. 2 —ανεωγμενον, xi. 5 —ουτω, xiii. 12 —του θανατου, xviii. 12 —και πορφυρας, xix. 16 —επι το ιματιον και, xxi. 6 —της πηγης, or: i. 10 +εγω, i. 13 ομοιωμα, ii. 6 οχεις (pro εχεις: A must be deliberate here, he could not have made a mistake for εχεις), ii. 22 φυλακην pro κλινην, iv. 1 οσα pro α, iv. 11 θεληματι (pro το θελημα), vi. 8 ὁ ἀθανατος pro ὁ θανατος, vi. 13 οι αστερες του θεου pro οι αστερες του ουρανου, viii. 12 τεταρτον pro τριτον ult., ix. 11 βασιλεα +τον αρχοντα, xi. 2 μετρησουσιν pro πατησουσι, xii. 7 οτε μιχαηλ pro ο μιχαηλ, xii. 16 το υδωρ pro τον ποταμον, xiv. 1 +το ante γεγραμμενον xvi. 9 ενωπιον pro το ονομα, xvi. 16 ποταμον (pro τοπον), xviii, 2 εκεκραξεν, xviii. 12 μαργαριταις (sed μαργαριτας CP W-H. mg), xx. 3 εμμενως αυτον pro επανω αυτου, xx. 4 πεπολεμημενων pro

† Could anything clearer unite ℵ to the Coptic? It is not an underlying Greek, but an overlying Coptic influence here. It must be remembered that the possessive and qualificative always precedes the noun in Coptic, so this was the proper place for ταυτης before της προφητειας. Glancing at this ℵ read it τουτους perhaps, and tacked it on to λογους and passed on. No other MS. adds τουτους here.

‡ This intrusive δε and reduplication again suggests a glance at the Coptic column of his MS., for ⲆⲈ might be present there, as it is in the surviving MSS. of sah (instead of ϨⲒⲚⲀ which boh has).

§ Westcott and Hort omit παντων with ℵ (which A retains), have nothing in the margin, and then proceed with των αγιων for υμων with ℵBE plur., but by their canons it should have been, it seems to me, either: Η χαρις του Κυριου Ιησου μετα παντων or " " " " " μετα υμων.

πεπελεκισμενων, xxi. 8 ψευσταις pro ψευδεσι, xxii. 5 ουχ εξουσιν χριαν pro ου χρειαν εχουσι, xxii. 8 προ ποδων pro εμπροσθεν των ποδων, xxii. 18 —επ αυτον, xxii. 21 —υμων.

Now examine the lists as regards the misdemeanours of ℵ and C besides—they are as bad, or worse—and I protest—(ita me Deus amet ut verum loquor)—that if we had to depend only on ℵACBP our text produced from that composite would be a sorry one indeed, and the task of editing it a prodigiously difficult undertaking. Misdemeanours of ℵC al.

I have no quarrel with Westcott and Hort. Anybody is at liberty to compile and print a text. Their compilation, however, has had the most astonishing vogue, in view of the very slender apparatus vouchsafed by the authors and upon which their followers have to rely: but I have a very real antagonism to the acceptance of their whole text as final, or judicious, or good in its details. In its mass, as regards the Apocalypse, it is not bad, and that simply for the reason that the uncials are in large accord with the 1 group, on which was based the printed text against the mass of cursives. But, amidst a very veritable forest of variations in this book, the second volume of Westcott and Hort's Greek New Testament has only 22 small notes on select passages. Of these most deal with minor matters. Only two of the cruces are discussed, namely, xv. 6 λιθον or λινον, xix. 13 βεβαμμενον or ρεραντισμενον etc. Westcott and Hort's text.

The key-passages tending to elucidate the justice of the application of their nomenclature as to 'Syrian,' 'pre-Syrian,' 'neutral,' 'Western' etc. are left untouched. Key-passages.

For instance the doctrinal variant at:

xii. 11. "And they overcame him through the blood of the lamb and through the word of 'their' witness or 'His' witness", and the deep variant at:

xxii. 14. "Blessed are they who keep his commandments," or "Blessed are they who lave (or 'have laved') their robes," (and the conflation of both readings) are left without a word.

The very interesting and complicated passage about the ships at xviii. 17 is not noticed at all.

At xviii. 12 in their notes they give us something definite, but I think they were under a misapprehension in their conclusions. As to xviii. 12.

They adopt the reading μαργαριτων of ℵ in their text, with the μαργαριτας of CP in their margin. They neglect μαργαριταις of A and boh pl. (ⲛⲉⲙ ⲙⲙⲁⲣⲅⲁⲣⲓⲧⲏⲥ). They say nothing of μαργαριτου of the ordinary text and of most MSS., which is supported by Hippolytus, if his text has come down to us unadulterated.

But is it not simply the 'treasure of' gold, silver, precious stone and of pearl (singular) running through the whole sentence? It may be the 'harder' reading, but not if we look at it in the right light; by abandoning it they vitiate their own canon.

*Syr*SΣ agree with ℵ, but who shall say whether the plural points were in the originals or may not have been added afterwards? I have a great respect for *syr*S, but I cannot shut my eyes to the fact that there is a residuum of hundreds of readings in that document still unvouched for by Greek, Latin or Coptic witnesses.

For the μαργαριτων of ℵ we find no cursives but the following: 35-87-132-181 [against the rest of the family 34-124-156-165-188] 59 [against 121] fam 95 111 113 159 and fam 178, all of some importance, but all rather given to critical editing. None support A or CP.

As to CP they had already transformed λιθον τιμιον into the acc. plural λιθους τιμιους (joined by one family 114) while keeping βυσσινου in the singular; while ℵ, with a majority of the 178 family (but not 178 itself) had written βυσσινων (to follow μαργαριτων) with four bohairic MSS. This Westcott and Hort do not accept.

The fact that the cursive families are divided against themselves rather invalidates their support of μαργαριτων, if they are to be considered balancing factors.

Passing to their text proper, we have only to confront some of their decisions with the situation as it rests to-day to see how far short they have fallen of a scientific standard.

And next, they invent a reading at iv. 7 by writing το προσωπον ως ανθρωπου in the genitive, instead of ανθρωπου without ως as AB and many, or ως ανθρωπος in the nominative as the t.r. and others. Here ℵ writes alone ως ομοιον ανθρωπω in the dative. The latter can be compared to gig Vict.: 'simile homini,' but no Latins or Greeks have the genitive. We have to go to sah boh, which have ως προσωπον (or . . ω) ανθρωπου before we can find any trace of it. Aeth and arab seem also to favour this. (It is always difficult to distinguish between genitive and dative in Coptic).

W-H. vary between τεσσερα, τεσσερακοντα and τεσσαρας, τεσσαρων with the MSS. A or ℵA or C as they happen to fluctuate in their spelling, but the climax is reached at ix. 8, 9, where they write ειχαν in verse 8 for ειχον with ℵA (no cursives but 113 with ηχαν), and then repeat ειχαν in verse 9 although both ℵ and A have ειχον there, and even 113 ηχον!

Why, I wonder, abandon at ix. 21 the πονηριας (pro πορνειας) of ℵA (+fam 178), when they delight to follow these MSS. in tiny little variations†; and why abandon at ix. 5 the πεση of ℵABP conjoined (+ hosts of cursives) for παιση? If the uncial spelling is to be followed elsewhere in all its vagaries why not here? *Syr*S writes πεση επ' for παιση, and cursive scribes improvise with πιασει, πληξη, κρουση, and δακη (as sah boh and Amos v. 19). That ℵABP, conjoined, hold πεση signifies (it would seem) something more than an itacism here.

At xviii. 3 πεπτωκαν, 'fell' for 'drunk,' is still only witnessed to by CA. In all my cursives I have only found 67 do this [against its sister], and no Versions support W-H. Surely it is wrong.

In the first chapter:

i. 3. they retain τους λογους της προφητειας against τον λογον της πρ. of ℵB 32 100 102 130 154 178 arm.

13. they write χρυσαν (for χρυσην) with ℵ*CA but not one cursive.

15. they print πεπυρωμενης in the text with CA (no cursives) and give πεπυρωμενοι of textus receptus in the margin, completely ignoring the senseful πεπυρωμενω of ℵ 16-69-102 f. 46 56 143 146 etc. h gig Prim. Apr. ps-Ambr. syr copt arm. (Iren. aeth turn the phrase. Iren.: Quemadmodum in camino succensus est. Aeth: Et pedes ejus tanquam aes Libani quod focillant in igne. Cypr. de fornace ignis).

The phrase is: και οι ποδες αυτου ομοιοι χαλκολιβανω, ως εν καμινω πεπυρωμενω—as in a burning furnace, or πεπυρωμενοι—blazing as in a furnace. But πεπυρωμενης? What does that mean, surely not with Cypr. de fornace ignis (Cypr. does not even say 'in fornace ignis'). This participial genitive seems unworthy of a place in any text. It is the most unbalanced of any of the terms used.

In the second chapter there is nothing much to notice.

At ver. 3 they follow C(A) alone for και ου κεκοπιακες.	No particular harm.
4 ,, ,, ℵC 4 127 ,, αφηκες.	Only the three MSS. ℵCA
5 ,, ,, ℵ only for πεπτωκες.	are not agreed.

But at ver. 9 they write πτωχειαν while ℵCA etc. have πτωχιαν, while at ver. 23 they write εραυνων with CA only (no cursives).

Ver. 8 τω εν σμυρνη = 166 122 unknown to Hort. He follows A alone, who, however, wrote τω εν σμυρνης εκκλησιας.

† For instance at xix. 11 they vary the order of καλουμενος πιστος to πιστος καλουμενος with ℵ alone (with none of my two hundred and thirty cursives), whereas they usually prefer to follow A, and never follow ℵ alone except as above and at ii. 5 for πεπτωκες.

In these two chapters in the 'Notes on select readings' attention is devoted at considerable length to matters like λύσαντι or λούσαντι in i. 5; as to the seven lamps and the seven churches in i. 20, both of them passages incapable of any satisfactory solution; and to ii. 13 about Antipas. After that there is a note on iv. 4, vii. 13, ix. 10, xi. 3, xiii. 10, 15, 16, 18, xiv. 20, xv. 6, xviii. 12 and xix. 13.

All the other weighty matters are neglected. There are a few readings in the margin, but the absence of others is very noteworthy, for so many readings of the text proper have least support upon their own theory of the preponderance of certain witnesses.

At i. 7 no notice is taken of ὄψονται (for ὄψεται) read by ℵ a good number of cursives with copt syr and Vict.

At i. 10 they show no knowledge of the addition of ἐγώ before ἐγενόμην which A exhibits, and which is confirmed by gigas (+ego iohannes), while both syriacs and sahidic have +και.

In i. 16 ἔχων is omitted by A 143 and aeth, where according to syriac methods it could well be spared.

In i. 19 the δεῖ μελλειν for μέλλει of ℵ (C) (143 200) is quite ignored, and so forth.

We pass to chapter iii.

iii. 2. —τα ante εργα. So only CA 1*mg* 57 187 Er. 1. 2. 3. Ald. Col. Very rough: ου γαρ ευρηκα σου εργα πεπληρωμενα ενωπιον του θεου μου. They go back to an error of the first printed text ex the latin. The latin is smoother with σου later, thus: opera tua plena.

17. ουδεν pro ουδενος with nothing in margin, yet only AC 12 (I add 81 114 121 146 152-179 193 204 241 [non 1-208]) against the Versions and Fathers.

iv. 1/2. Punctuation. W-H. join μετα ταυτα to verse 2. Only 40-210 do this and Hier^{Dan}.

4. —εν ante ιματιοις λευκοις with AP some curs. and *syr*S, but surely ℵ 130 143 f. 178 and 200 arm 4. are right here with a primitive εν λευκοις (—ιματιοις).

6. W-H. print τεσσερα. So A alone to this day.

8. τα τεσσερα with ℵA, still alone.

10. βαλοῦσιν with A and few.

v. 6. απεσταλμενοι pro τα απεσταλμενα txt. απεσταλμενα mg. but απεσταλμενοι is based solely on A. The only other authority we have been able to find is 146.

8. τα τεσσερα. So ℵA 38 only.

9. —ημας. So A only to this day (aeth).

14. τα τεσσερα. So A 38 57*errore* [non Col] 69.

6. [τεσσαρων]. Because A eschews it here.

17. η ημερα η μεγ. της οργης αυτων with ℵC 18 syr and some, against αυτου of A rell. Why, I wonder?

vii. 1. [τεσσαρας ter]. Because A does not do it here.

2. [τεσσαρσιν]. Because A does not do it here.

4. τεσσερακοντα τεσσαρες. So C, but A τεσσαρακοντα Δ, and ℵ τεσσερακοντα (—τεσσαρες).

11. [τεσσαρων]. Because none have ε here.

viii. 1. οταν pro οτε. To CA now add our 111 127-215 but no others.

ημωρον follows C (to which I add 41-42-53, 44-52-82, 97-214[contra 122], 146*txt* [non com.]). A has ειμωρον, but ℵ ειμωριον.

ix. 14. λεγοντα ℵ*A 25 only, almost impossible reading.

15. [τεσσαρες]. Because A does not do it here.

x. 9. απηλθα. So A and quite a few cursives, but not ℵP (hiant CE).

14. λευκοβυσσινον is placed in margin, but only 95 read thus then, and to-day only that family 95-127-215 reads thus. A has λευκον βυσσινον.

But I have no desire to prejudge the issue for anybody else, content if, like Donaldson in 'The new Cratylus,' and Pococke in his 'India in Greece,' or Morgan Kavanagh in the 'Origin of Language and Myths' I may regroup as well as enlarge the evidence, and then leave it to posterity to judge of the value of the work done. Happy enough, in the face of many difficulties, to have succeeded in assembling and digesting the material available and to have brought it to birth; for the passing of such matter through the Press is not the least part of the labour, and this has had to be done with eyes which are no longer as acute as they were.

Here is the matter in a nutshell, as exhibited by Sophocles in a paradigm (λίθοι understood):

καίτοι σμικροὶ μεγάλων χωρὶς σφαλερὸν πύργου ῥῦμα πέλονται· μετὰ γὰρ μεγάλων βαιὸς ἄριστ' ἂν καὶ μέγας ὀρθοῖθ' ὑπὸ μικροτέρων.
ἀλλ' οὐ δυνατὸν τοὺς ἀνοήτους τούτων γνώμας προδιδάσκειν.

Soph. (Ajax 158/163).

May I repeat here almost the same words as I employed in the John Rylands Bulletin —(Vol. 8. No. 2 for July 1924)—at the close of my five articles on some of the important MSS. of the Apocalypse:

And while the world, after 2000 years, is in such an agony of confusion, out of the Babel of voices can still be heard ringing in our ears, if we listen, the patient voice of John of Patmos, uplifted and manifesting to us that the great El Elyon of Melchisedech reappeared in his Apocalypse as the portentous Knower and Searcher of all hearts, King of Kings and Lord of Lords, as the Holy One, the KING OF THE AGES, who WAS and IS and IS TO BE, the Creator (iv. 11) and Container and Ordainer and Pervader, the Presider and Dictator; the unexpected Returner, the Deliverer, the WORTHY ONE, the JUST and TRUE, HE of the Unknown Name (xix. 12) "called" the WORD OF GOD, The enthroned and rainbow-encircled Diamond (of iv. 3), HE also of the golden crown and sharp sickle, the Reaper with eyes aflame, set in a visage effulgent with power, and with the voice of many waters, The Bestower of the crown of life and of the secret protective names, the Lord of Love and the Lord of Patience, THE FAITHFUL WITNESS with Righteousness the girdle of His loins, THE BEGINNING OF THE CREATION OF GOD, the First-born of the dead, the Ruler of the Kings of the Earth, the Veiler and the Unveiler, the Revealer and Withholder, the ARCHÉ and the TELOS, the FIRST and the LAST, the ALPHA and OMEGA, He who "became dead and lived again"; He is ARIEL the LION of Judah, the Scion of David, the Keeper of the Keys, The Opener of the Seals, the Conqueror, the Morning Star, The Shekinah and the Daysman, the Keeper of the Tree of Life and of the Book of Life, the Headman of the marriage feast, THE ALMIGHTY, as well as the LAMB who is the Light of the Heavenly Mansions and in whom is concentrated all power and riches and wisdom and strength and glory and honour and Eulogia and Eucharistia; and, beyond all this, His Headquarters are situated at the Source of the Water of Life (xxii. 1), and He is the "ΠΗΓΗ" of the twenty-first chapter, "the 'WELL' at the World's end," when time shall be no more, the MAKER OF ALL THINGS NEW.

And there, at the fountain head of the River of Life, is situate the Tree of Life, with its roots drinking from that crystal stream, and whose leaves, we are told, are for the healing of the Nations.

'And behold is the day,—
The table of the Lord,
Upon which I would spread my labours.
I would offer Him wine
Distilled through my soul,
Sweet of mine agonies,
Heady of my resurrection
Through them.
And bread,—wrought by my hands;
And salt,—that the viands be fit,—
The salt of my joy in the labour.
And when I have prepared the table,
I shall say unto Him:
Lord, Lord, here is thy feast,
And feasting for thy sons and daughters,
Prepared in love and gladness,—
And, depart then in peace.'

NOTICE

Please do not quote from the evidence in this Introduction without reference and verification from the full synoptical collations. The lists in this Introduction are not always perfect, and are only inserted to carry the student along with our work, some of the MSS. being collated out of order.

Where [non 51] or [non 90], [non 14] or [non 92] is found, it is to emphasize that sister MSS. are opposed. Occasionally, for greater emphasis, I have inserted [non so-and-so], but the absence of the emphatic remark is not to be taken as making for a reading where the MS. is left out. To quote [non –] all the time would have opened the way to error. The student must eliminate the numbers not found quoted, as at vi. 11 –μικρον, and –οὐ, where, although I have only quoted [non 51] (in contradistinction to 90), quite a number of others have the words, some both, like 12, 46 etc., some have only one, like 38 which has μικρον, but –οὐ.

Where I have quoted "alii?" or "al.?" for difference in verse division or other minutiæ, it is to indicate that I may have overlooked these in a few of the other MSS.

NOTE.—A large omission at iii. 19 is shared by our No. 108, a MS. of some importance. In iii. 21 the perfects νενειvηκα και κεκαθικα undoubtedly represent an early Latin overflow (unique). Thereagainst +τω ante πνευματι in iv. 2 is new.

ℵACBP. These five well-known uncials I have recollated—ℵ from Tischendorf's editions, compared with Scrivener's careful collation published in 1864 and with Lake's more recent and invaluable photographic edition; C from the standard printed edition of Tischendorf in 1843; A from the larger phototype edition issued by the British Museum; B from Tischendorf's edition printed in Appendix Nov. Test. Vaticani, Leipzig, 1869; P from Tischendorf's reprint in the Monumenta Sacra inedita.

As regards ℵ all I said in my 'Concerning the Genesis of the Bohairic Version' is fully borne out in this more minute examination, and I have nothing to withdraw, for a largely increased number of cases are adduced where ℵ was influenced by the Bohairic. I will not therefore expend time and space on a further detailed discussion of the matter. A capable jury will certainly render the proper verdict. As to ℵ.

Note also the influence upon some of ℵ's New Testament readings of the Greek of the Old Testament Septuagint Version.

In dealing with ℵ as a polyglot and an eclectic and a consulter of Versions and dictionaries and concordances and critical authorities, note:

Luke v. 32 ασεβεις ℵ* alone, against αμαρτωλους of B all other Greeks and Versions as well as *Clem*rom Barnabas Justin and Iren. extant here.

There can therefore be no "underlying Greek text" here assuredly, but only a question of pure eclecticism, not of texts but of interpretation. It is a question between δικαιους and ἁμαρτωλους. "I am not come to call the righteous but sinners to repentance." Why did not ℵ use ἀδικους?

Immediately following ℵ goes with the 'Western' readings. He was a great student. Observe shortly afterwards also vi. 17 ἰλ͞ημ + και πιραιας ℵ with W, two of Scrivener's lectionaries (1/2 each) and a b c e ff₂ l q r μ. (D d vary by omitting και ἰλ͞ημ and substituting for this and και της παραλιου Τυρου και Σιδωνος the phrase και αλλων πολεων εληλυθοτων). Again, see ℵ at vi. 44 βλαστου against βατου of most and βατων of a few.

Horace says: Quanquam ridentem dicere verum quid vetat?

E. E. After collating Apoc. 120 in our list in the Angelica library at Rome (Feb. 1912) I received from Mr. H. Jantsch, director of the German photographic expedition to the East in 1911, photographs of the MS. 051 (Gregory, pp. 1042/1046, formerly Greg. No. 1526 or "E"), and very fortunately was at once able to identify it as the sister or the mother of 67-120, one of which I had but just collated. I should not have had the photographs taken had I known that Dr. Gregory had collated the MS. at Athos in 1902 and published in 1909 in vol. III. of Textkritik, pp. 1042/1046 as above. This MS. for convenience we will now again call "E" instead of 051. It is only extant from xi. 15 onwards, but 67-120 now supply us with the rest of the text from the beginning to xi. 15. Thus our labours have at any rate supplied the missing part of E. The uncial writing is very late, well on into the cursive period, and is wholly artificial. Jerusalem is twice abbreviated ἰελ͞ημ. One real peculiarity is writing αγγελος thrice with one gamma, and ευαγελισαι once.

It is wanting xxii. 8-14 fin.; and also xvii. 1-3. Curiously enough Gregory says that the scribe has written these three verses in cursive by mistake, and he gives two variations. I cannot find a trace of the text in my photographs; nor does Gregory record in xvii. 1 the blunder of 67 72 100 κεφαλας for φιαλας, which might be found in E.

Gregory collated with the tiny diamond edition of Pickering 1828. I do not suppose that one student in fifty thousand owns this small volume. Why always complicate these studies by using different standards? He rarely records ν εφελκ. and variations in spelling.

Not a very creditable showing in eleven chapters for our leading cataloguer!

This E type is a curious one, very largely with the Erasmian family, but not very sympathetic to the B group. It is therefore quite close to the Textus Receptus except in curiosities. As said before, the nearest affiliation for type is 67-120 and 17.

In E xxii. 8/14 are missing. Here we have extant 67-120, but strangely enough the following verses 15/17 are then missing in 67, as well as verse 14.

The collation, as entered, speaks for itself.

The following are the less usual readings:

xii. 4. τικτειν with the Compl. group.
5. αρσενα (—υιον), (with αυτον in the margin. So 67. 116. 120 which Gregory failed to record).

F. As regards the other uncial fragment at Panteleemon 99.2 now called 052 also x. cent. but only 4 leaves, collated by Gregory at pp. 1046/1047 of above-named publication, we shall call it F and reproduce at vii. 16–viii. 12 the readings which he gives. Unfortunately the range is too limited to get a full view of the type of text, but it has one reading alone with 81 viii. 11 εις (pro ως), and several with 62-3, and one with 46-88-101, so it is not hard to group it with the 1 fam or the Erasmian family.

In vii. 16 —ὁ agrees with 38 59 (another of the 1 family) 73 and 80, but —παν appears new so far [up to 123]. (το is substituted for παν by 6-31-106); it is a pity the rest of this MS. is missing as it would appear to tie the 1 family together before they went slightly apart. Perhaps we may yet pick up the brother with this omission of παν. At viii. 10 ωσπερ also appears new so far.

Since writing the above we can now definitely group F-38-178-240, 178 being a Patmos MS. And the above —παν at vii. 16 is also omitted by 178, and at viii. 10 ωσπερ by 178, viii. 11 ὡς pro εἰς by 178, so that it is most unfortunate that so small a fragment of F remains. 240 is a late MS. at Panteleemon undoubtedly derived direct from F.

I have certainly exposed myself to the charge of being far too prolix in the following catalogue and description. But what I had to be at the pains to do for myself—so that I might not forget the salient points as they passed behind me but be able to recall them—I hope will be of the same use to the student.† If the student will examine the MSS. step by step, as I have done, he will not find the notes too full. If I had made them less full, he would have had far more work in order to obtain a bird's-eye view of the evidence as we go along. There is mist sometimes in the prospect, but it clears as the sun gets higher, and as the day advances the panorama, while opening out, is well defined from previous (and gradual) study of detail.

Here let me give a very earnest warning. Don't juggle with the catalogue numbers of MSS. any more. Gregory's otherwise valuable work is vitiated by an insane personal desire to alter numbers. Previous examiners and cataloguers of MSS. were careful not to do so. On the other hand, previous collators and editors have been extraordinarily lax in the standard text which they used for comparison. Do let us stick to Stephen's third edition in the future. I would have been spared some work if Birch, Alter, Matthaei and the rest had used the same text. As a rule the collator forgets to say what edition he used! Thus Reiche in 1847, a most estimable man, who wrote a really valuable treatise and collated a few MSS. (badly), doesn't tell us what copy he used. He only says on the titlepage "cum textu vulgo recepto collatio."

Scrivener's collations (Supplement to Codex Augiensis 1859) of the thirteen cursives 7, 8, 14, 28, 29, 31, 87, 93, 94, 95, 96, 97, and 98 I have reproduced with due care, being attentive to take into consideration that Scrivener then collated with Elz. 1624. My collations are all based on comparison with the text of Stephens III. (as reprinted by Scr.). I have also reproduced Scrivener's collations of 26 27 and 89 published posthumously in Adversaria Critica Sacra (Cambridge 1893). The latter are probably not quite as accurate as the first series, especially as they were arranged (that is grouped) for publication after his health and eyesight began to fail him. Yet I have not thought it necessary to go over Scrivener's ground again. Therefore I am only responsible for the rearrangement of his collations as incorporated in my second volume. The cursives.

As regards Scrivener's 89 we have adopted his notation. But see Gregory. The whole subject of the different notations is dealt with in its proper place elsewhere. We will only pause here to point out the facts connected with this codex. In Scrivener's third edn. of the Plain Introduction (as also in Miller's IVth edn.) the whole MS. is numbered Evan 603, Act. 231, Paul 266 and 271, Apoc. 89. Gregory goes out of his way to confuse matters. At No. 89 Apoc. he substitutes S. Sabae 20, (mixing this up with his own 104 below), for Scr.'s B.C. II. 4, giving the number 108 to our codex 89. And 108 is given thus: 108 (Evv. 699, Ac. 256, P. 306). At Evan 699 (Greg.) is found (Ac. 256, P. 306, Ap. 108) correctly enough, but turn back to Gregory's Apoc. 89 (Ev. 466, Ac. 189, P. 267) and then refer to p. 342 = Evan 466 (Ac. 189, P. 237, Ap. 89) sic. Turn to P. 237 = Evan 466 Greg., but Paul 267 = S. Sabae 53 Greg. Further, Gregory's 104 Apoc. which refers to S. Sabae 20 again is given 104 (Ac. 243, P. 287), but Ac. 243 refers at p. 642 to P. 287, Ap. 102, so that some care is necessary hereabouts! Our 89 is Scrivener's 89, and not Gregory's. Let this be understood.

† As we have to weigh and not count evidence, which is the proper method and with which I am thoroughly in accord, it is absolutely necessary to have a complete digest of each MS., and I hope I have brought out the really salient features of each, both for the history of the text and of its criticism—two very different things, sometimes confused.

In the third (folio) edition of Robert Stephen, 1550, there are no verse divisions; these only appeared in the small edition published in the following year, 1551. Comparing these verse-divisions with Scrivener's notation, in his reprint (editio 1887) of Stephen's third edition (all my collations and all Scrivener's later ones are made with this as a standard) I find three differences: ii. 28 begins in St. IV. (1551) at ως καγω instead of at και δωσω αυτω. xvii. 10 begins οι πεντε instead of at και βασιλεις επτα εισιν. xviii. 17 begins οτι μια ωρα instead of και πας κυβερνητης. These differences occur in Elz. 1624, with which Scr. made all his early collations. I doubt if Scr. ever possessed St. IV (he never refers to this edition as if he had a copy), and doubtless for his reprints of St. III he used the verse notation of Elz. An examination of the other books of the N.T. will probably confirm this. In our collations we have conformed ourselves strictly to the verse-divisions of St. IV., which the student is requested to note.

As regards the remaining cursive MSS. which I have not personally collated, we commence with 1, the famous Reuchlin Codex (which served as a basis for Erasmus text) long lost, but discovered and collated by Delitzsch and Tregelles [published by them in 'Handschiftliche Funde,' Heft 1 and 2, Leipzig, 1861 and 1862]. Tregelles' collation I hope is accurate, but he seems to omit some minor readings noticed by Delitzsch. Tregelles collated with Scrivener's reprint of St. (editio 1863) and I have followed him by reproducing all the various readings given.

Treg. and Delitzsch often differ, alas; that is, they severally give readings not mentioned by the other. I hope and suppose that they supplement each other completely. Dr. Delitzsch supplies many small variations not given by Treg., see iii. 8 εχει, iv. 9 δωσουσιν, v. 7 ειληφεν, vii. 7 ισσαχαρ (text), ix. 4 εχουσιν, ix. 11 αββαδων, ix. 15 αποκτηνωσιν, x. 11 βασιλευσει, xi. 1 εδωθη, xi. 2 μετρησις, εδωθη etc., and vice versa Treg. corrects or supplements Delitzsch, see ii. 20 ολιγα, iii. 7 ανειγει, ix. 19 αιξουσιαι, xiii. 2 —και etc. etc.

I have been at much pains to follow them both.

The above little list does not present a tithe of the differences between these two eminent critics, but I have noted them all in their proper places. It is painful to realize how few men are qualified to collate accurately, even when striving to do their best. Our physical limitations are too great, and I can only hope myself for the results nearest to complete accuracy which my best endeavours will allow. But Delitzsch seems to have collated this MS. at least twice, and evidently he and Tregelles made use of each others collations; yet they differ many times (notwithstanding Delitzsch' Supplements to his own labours in Heft 2) and Treg. omits a good many things (quite unintentionally I am sure) even after having Delitzsch' labours before him to check his own.

Delitzsch' studies on the subject of this Reuchlin codex in Heft 1 and his investigations of the Erasmian texts are worthy of all praise. He is hard enough on Erasmus, but he fairly "roasts" Tischendorf for his carelessness in assuming other Greek witnesses for some of Erasmus and the Reuchlin readings. This must be strictly borne in mind if using the notes to the Apoc. in Tischendorf's critical editions. Far less well did he (Delitzsch) conduct his investigations of the Complutensian text. And Tischendorf's notes in ed. VIII. are accurate enough for all general purposes.

The complete 1 family is tabulated on the following list. No. 208 is an absolute counterpart of Erasmus No. 1.

Of the large 'cursive' B type group (amounting to some 75 or 80 MSS.) 50 and 177 have elements and errors in common.

Amplifying slightly note that:

Of single groups we find 62/63 and 46-88-101 to be from one stem. Also 44-52-82. Practically in the same case are 7-16-39-45-69-102-104 and 26-41-42-53-107. Also 30-98 (with 29 partially).

13-23-55 represent one parent, not so very old (probably not before x^{th} century) though they are not quite identical to-day from critical editing since; yet they can be classed as one MS. So also 9-27-75; 34-35-68-87; 8-24; so 6-31-106; 51-90; 97-122; 95-127; 172-217; 176-206; 40-210; 114-193-241; 149-186.

Stepping-stones between the Compl. and Erasmian families are such MSS. as 36 † and possibly the 45 group. Also 12 and 81 and 114 with all their manifest vagaries.

Also the very important group 21-28-(65)-73-79-79ᵃ-80-100 (from xi. on)-103-112 etc., † Apoc. 36. See a variety of places and note such as xiv. 6 τους κατοικουντας of t.r. A and some = τους καθημενους of ℵCBP and a large number of cursives and Compl., but τους καθημενους τους κατοικουντας is read by the Erasmian group 1. 46-88-101 and 12, whereas 36 reads τους καθημενους και κατοικουντας.

Again, xvi. 14: εκπορευεσθαι of t.r. and Apoc. 1, where, however, Apoc. 1 adds ἃ above the line, becomes ἃ εκπορευεται of ℵ and most cursives, including 46 and 101; 88, however, goes out of its way (forsaking 46 and 101) to omit ἃ, whereas 36 reads εκπορευονται (−ἃ).

which is interesting, comprising an old Egyptian text, good in parts, but very independent, although containing the double element of Compl. and Erasmian texts (through the Syriac; see *syr*S).

Of this group 80 is as ancient or more so than any, correlating the base of 1. 62/3 and also giving valuable hints as to this classification. Stepping-stones between B and Compl.-Erasm. and 21 groups are 108 and 109.

Among MSS., less independent in view, yet giving a very good account of the best traditional text, may be ranked 47 and such documents as 22.

34 and 87 (with the more careless 35 and its sister 68) and such MSS. are somewhat more mixed, yet have value in determining many points. This group is an Arethas revision on an old Egyptian base, and is now enlarged to 34-35-68-87-124-132-156-181-188 with 132 the most careful example of the type.

38, while indulging in curiosities, and a very eclectic MS., not to be trusted as a whole, furnishes several interesting keys, is largely related to 62, and to both Erasmian and Complutensian groups. Its sisters turn up in Apoc. 178, 203 and 240, but 38 is the more revised and the least dependable.

23 is also a key MS. largely related to the earliest bilingual græco-latin codices.

40 is another important key MS., and, so far, independent enough, though mixed, with good indications of its critical origin, and as unsatisfactory as 90, viewed in the same light as a whole. 18 and 40 are græco-syriac MSS., independent of each other. Now 210 checks 40.

51 and 90 are near cousins, branching away from their stem, with 40 as a helpful key in parts.

41-42 represent the B revision, with a clinging tendency to the old ways; i.e. a mixed text of value, showing transition. See above for the full group 26-41-42-53-107. So are 108 and 109 with survivals of *syr*S.

53 and 41 were copied from a copy of 42, in which the readings of 42 had been incorporated.

Of purer B MSS. we may rank the Arethas MSS. 4, 20, 48, 64, 74, with 32 etc. and 245 at Elasson.

25-19-58-70-78-84-94-207 are practically identical, 70 being the most accurate of the group.

18 is very old and important.

61-95 agree in a variety of unique readings absolutely up to the middle of chapter xi. and then go apart. At x–xii. they are joined by 74, by some process unknown.

56 is a new type and extremely interesting.

108 (from xxi. 14–xxii. 21) now confirms all the 56 readings there and gives a hint of the locality where 56 comes from [see under 108 and 104].

114-193-241 claim our attention as being, after 56, as interesting documents as any. 114 is written late (dated 1330) it takes us alone to readings of ℵAC and P not found in any other cursive, yet its chief family characteristics are of the 1 family; it is a critical old text with a good many fresh readings.

Then there remain the great B group, and the pure cursive or Arethas grouping, which intermingle frequently. The members of these two groups can be promptly identified in the collation.

119–123 (close sisters), following so soon after the exceptional 114, again open our eyes to the latent possibilities of even the latest cursives in point of date. For 119-123 turn out to precede ℵ. Where ℵ conflates, 119-123 are the first to give us the reading (ix. 20) on which the conflation was based! 119-123 further emphasize the great age of the Erasmian or 1 group.

Group now comprises five MSS.: 119-123-144-148-158.

We now continue the catalogue:
"Qui docet, discit."

Apoc. 2 (Paris gr. 237). [Scr. 2. Greg. old 2, new 82? Soden O[1]]. Collated Aug. 1896. Probably ιε of Stephens, cum comment. No inscription by first hand. Second hand has ιωαννου αποκαλυψις. This second hand has added in red a great many capitals, writing over the original letters. This MS. was probably copied from an uncial MS., judging from internal evidences, and most likely from an ancient one of few letters to a line, but it would hardly be from a very early one as ει is hardly ever written ι. The present MS. is apparently of about x–xi[th] century. There are but few peculiarities, occasionally we find a beautiful modern Z for ζ, otherwise written ȝ. Alpha, however, is written very frequently ω, and on the first page (i. 1) αποστειλας is written αποστειλαις, which we should mark as a variant but for the fact that the iota is unintentional, being the tail of the alpha only. The breathings are square and there is no trace of iota adscript or subscript. ν εφελκ. is almost but not quite ubiquitous. Apoc. 2.

Apoc. 3. Latet.

GROUP 4-20-48-64-74.

Apoc. 4 (Act. 12. Paul 16) = Paris gr. 219. [Scr. 4. Greg. old 4, new 91? Sod. O[14]]. Apoc. 4. Handsome folio. The text imbedded in a running commentary (Arethas), although distinguished by quotation marks › in the margin. Inscription (in semi-uncial gold script) ἰω̃ του θεολογου και ἠγαπημενου αποκαλυψις. Iota *post*script (never subscript) is nearly invariable and all through, being moreover but rarely added incorrectly as in so many MSS. ν εφελκ. occurs hardly ever. και almost invariably written ϛ. ζωον always written without iota. αδης written generally with iota. Termination —εια rarely, but occasionally becomes —ια.

It would be invidious and unnecessary to comment on Wetstein's shortcomings in the collations of these two MSS. (2 and 4) published in his N.T. It is sufficient to state that I have thought it proper and necessary to go over the ground again.

Running commentaries like that of Apoc. 4 give us the oldest commentary on punctuation and as such are of importance; e.g. xiv. 13 the text ends at αποθνησκοντες. followed by commentary (4 lines). Then begins again Απαρτι λεγει. The text is απαρτι λεγει ναι το πνευμα, but the commentary repeats απαρτι ναι λεγει το πνευμα with text. recept.

See also ix. 12/13; xiii. 13 μεγαλα και πυρ · ινα εκ του ουρανου καταβαινηι κ.τ.λ.; xvii. 8/9 εστι · και παρεσται · ωδε κ.τ.λ.

On the other hand xix. 10 is punctuated, viz. ὅρα · μὴ συνδουλος σου εἰμι as in some others!

The affinity between Apoc. 4 and 26 is very close.

In this MS., says Martin, is an inscription "Hunc librum dono dedit Janus Lascaris græcus, vir ut integerrimus ita doctissimus, mihi Petro Merieli Constantiens (i) decima Januarii, anno ab incarn. Dni. M.D.XVIII." Below, the No. xxxxii of the library of Cardinal Nic. Ridolfi.

Martin also says that the Acts and Paul are not given in full but only partially, the vol. being a commentary, outside of the full text of the Apoc.

Now see 48 (Matthaei's l) an absolute sister (devoid of commentary), though neither 4 nor 48 were copied from each other. Matthaei could probably not identify them, as Wetstein's collation of 4 was too poor.

64, another handsome folio vol. with golden decoration, but Com̃., of Arethas, surrounding text, is of this family. See further on. Also at Paris.

See also No. 20 and No. 74, yet none were copied from each other. Full group is 4-20-48-64-74.

Apoc. 5. Valla. Vacat.

Apoc. 6. Apoc. 6 (Ac. 23. P. 28). Bodleian, Oxford. Barocc. 3. [Scr. 6. Greg. old 6, new 314. Sod. O[11]]. Collated Sept. 1898.

Written on beautifully thin vellum. As the writing is only about 5 × 4 inches, some idea can be gained of the wonderfully fine penmanship of both text and commentary, when I say that the lines of the text vary from about 5 to 13 per page (one page has 18 lines, but the average is about 8 or 9) and those of the commentary from about fifty-four to sixty. Sit down, oh reader, and try to write thus! The commentary is written in the most delicate and perfectly legible semi-uncials. The form of contraction of ευ is rather unusual (text).

There are some square breathings, others are round. ν εφελκ. occurs but seldom.

There is no iota subscript, and postscript only after ch. v. 8; it occurs only 18 times, viz. v. 9 αἰδουσιν, ix. 5 παισηι, ix. 11 ἑλληνικηι, x. 6 αὐτηι bis, xi. 13 τωι θεω, xiv. 3 αἰδουσιν, xiv. 17 τωι ουρανω, xiv. 18 κραυγηι μεγαληι τωι εχοντι, xv. 1 τωι ουρανω, xv. 3 αιδουσι, ωιδην (sec.), xv. 5 τωι ουρανω, xvi. 8 αὐτωι, xvii. 4 τηι χειρι, xvii. 9 ὡιδε, but not after this.

There are several lacunæ. The codex begins at i. 1 and the inscription is complete. There is a break between f°. 245 and 246 after i. 10 εγενομην εν πνι. F°. 246 recto resumes at i. 17 και οτε ειδον; again between f°. 269 and 270, after ἑλληνικῆι ix. 11. F°. 270 recto begins in the middle of ix. 17 ...λαι των ιππων ως κεφαλαι λεοντων; again between f°. 291 and 292 after xvii. 10 και. F°. 292 recto resumes at xviii. 8 θανατος. The codex ends on f°. 297 verso at xx. 1 και ειδον αγγελον καταβαινοντα εκ του ουνου εχον..., the remainder is missing.

The sections agree mostly with those of P, but not always, e.g. MB at xiv. 9 not xiv. 13; NϚ at xix. 1 not xviii. 8; again NΔ is at xvii. 8, whereas P at ver. 6, and Scr. at ver. 7; again NΘ is at xix. 17, whereas P at xix. 19 and Scr. xix. 20.

Not being satisfied with previous collations (Tregelles' being imbedded in foot notes is unsatisfactory) I have collated this MS. anew. For purposes of classification and grouping of MSS. it is necessary to note minutiae. (Cramer has published the MS. in composite form in his Catena). This MS. for instance is very closely allied to Apoc. 31. For proof absolute consult xviii. 14, xix. 9 etc. Now see 106 for much relationship, and 182 also in a very small hand but without com.

The full 6 group is now 6-31-106-171-174-182, and exceedingly interesting, to which add 164-166 partially. See beyond.

I collated this MS. and Apoc. 9 during the same visit to Oxford in 1898. There are a good many more variants in Apoc. 9 than in Apoc. 6.

fos. 1-56 black ink about XII-XIII. (Act. XV. to end).

fos. 57-end brown ink, handsome, XI.

The Apocalypse was probably copied from an uncial.

The scribe shows a knowledge of quite a number of various readings.

The breathings are square, and diæresis over iota. No occurrence of iota post- or subscript. ψ is written in very old square style. The MS. is probably early XI. cent., although on cursory inspection it looks younger. The paragraphs are not numbered, but it was prepared for sections as one letter (small), further in the margin indicates the breaks. πνα̅ in the singular is contracted, πνευματα always in full. The scribe was undoubtedly his own Diorthotes, and no doubt himself scratched in places, changing επεσαν to επεσον etc. In viii. 3 he seems to have scratched the end of δωσει or δωση himself, and forgotten to fill anything in.

Apoc. 9 and 27 are very closely related indeed, so specially (see numberless places even to the subscription) that they must have the same archetype. I can prove from this, in a roundabout way, that the scribe of 9 was his own Diorthotes. At x. 9 he first wrote απηλθον. It has been changed and he seems to want to make it απηλθα. This is read by Apoc. 27. Besides, the scribe of Apoc. 9 has made several small additions interlinear and in the margin with the same ink and at the same time that he wrote the original. Apoc. 9 and Apoc. 2 are sometimes together almost alone. See also at xviii. 13 where they and others omit και οινον; this is a curious omission (see the context) and noteworthy as regards groups. At xx. 5 the same group largely has an omission owing to homoioteleuton (q.v.). Note at vii. 5 and xiv. 8/9 a trace of ℵ's parent; at xix. 12 a trace of ℵa; at ix. 11 and xiv. 3 a trace of B's parent; at x. 9 a trace of A; at xiv. 2 a trace of P; at xv. 4, xvi. 13 a trace of C. At xix. 5 all the uncials join Apoc. 9 with only 14 and 27.

The late scholia at iv. 10/11 etc., are not worth notice.

Group is now: 9-27-75, a sub-group of the græco-latin agglomeration.

GROUP 10-17-37-49-77-91-96-110-150-(154)-157-160/1-187-190-192-202-212-221-223/4-227/8/9/30-(231)-232-(233)-242-243-244-250.

Compl. group. Apoc. 10 (Evan. 60). Cambridge Univ. Dd. 9. 69. [Scr. 10. Greg. 10, new 60. Sod. α 1594]. Collated 1901. Gregory says of the xv. cent., but it is earlier. Neatly written, with but few errata or errors of homoioteleuton, it is not very easy to assign its exact date. Considering its comparatively late date, the entire absence of any trace of iota sub- or post-script points to the copy of a considerably older MS., as does also the presence of many old readings of ℵCAP, whereas the complete absence of ν εφελκ., the presence of many commas and the frequent readings of B and cursive groups points the other way. The ligature φ̂ for φρ in ευφρατην and σφραγισης occurs at xvi. 12 and xxii. 10.

There are only seven unique readings (of the MSS. so far examined), viz.:

iii. 16. —και ουτε ψυχρος ουτε ζεστος So now 113 164 203 gig arm Prim. share the error.
xi. 7. αβυσου So 36 55* 72.

of which two remain still unsupported.

The closest affiliation of this MS. is so far with 96, as seen primarily by the exact agreement in their common inscription. It does not, however, agree throughout with 96, yet in places which leave no doubt (iii. 18, xii. 4, xiv. 6, xv. 6, xviii. 17, 21, xx. 12, 14) bears witness to a few of its idiosyncracies, and rarer readings (e.g. xiii. 18, xv. 4, xvi. 16) showing how the common element has been preserved, but that is all.

Apoc. 11. Apoc. 11. Hodie latet.

Former collations indicate that it goes with 6. 31 and some others, and is of Egyptian base, being partially with the 79 family as at xviii. 14 fin. but having the shorter addition with 6. 31. 47.

GROUP 1 etc. (but 12 is a somewhat eclectic member).

Apoc. 12 (Act. 40. P. 46) = Vat. Alex. 179, olim Petavii 3. [Scr. 12. Greg. 12, new 181. Sod. α 101, α 1578]. Collated in 1901 from photographs. The Apoc., f^{os}. 155-169, is said to be of about XIV cent., whereas the Acts and Epistles are said to be of the XI cent. Personally we consider the Apoc. to be considerably older than XIV cent., say of the XII cent. Much of the scribe's style antedates the XIV cent. and appearances are deceitful as he used a soft pen. This is an important copy (see Scr. Greg. etc.) and was used by Zacagni for his edition of the Prologues etc. of Euthalius. Apoc. 12.

Part of the Apoc. is divided into στιχοι and κεφαλαια, without a list of κεφαλαια preceding the book, but the contents of the κεφ. are given in the text. The first κεφ. is κεφ. B. followed by Γ. Δ (λοΓος B̄) Є ϛ, but Z (λογος Γ) and following are wanting.

The MS. opens with the inscription:

αποκαλυψις ιωαννου του θεολογου κ̧ ευαγγελιστου.

Then follow the opening phrases of Andreas' commentary, beginning with the first verse of the first chapter and continuing from ἀποκαλυψις ἐστιν ἡ των κρυπτων etc. for five lines, with several variations, but ending abruptly at παν in the middle of the phrase τοις υψηλοις και θεοπρεπεσιν υπερ παντας etc., when there follows an ornamented line, broken in the middle by the inscription αποκαλυψις ιωαννου (so that the codex has two inscriptions), and followed by the text. In the third line (end of verse one) there is a blank space of an inch and a half, followed by τω δουλω αυτου ιωαννη ος etc. Instead of the first λογος and chapter beginning at verse 4, there is no indication of κεφ. A at either verse 4 or 5, but at the end of verse 4 (θρονου αυτου) there is a small rubric followed by two blank lines (sufficient for the omitted κεφ. A) when verse 5 is begun without further ado, και απο ιησου χριστου etc.

The whole first page has a kind of palimpsest appearance as seen in my photographic copy, from which I collate, but from evidence on other leaves it seems that this is not the case, but that some portions of the skins were rough and "oily" and would not take ink well, so that the scribe has several times later on left little blank spaces rather than attempt to write on those spots.

The codex was used by Mill, Birch etc. See further on.

Breathings are frequently hard for soft and vice versa; some are of a peculiar shape, being square with a long rectangular centre or tail. Of iota post. or subscript there is absolutely no trace. Itacisms are exceedingly frequent, and in connection with various readings are dealt with later. The forms προφητιας, λαοδικιαν, ιδεν etc., coupled with the inscription αποκαλυψις ιωαννου (so far alone with C), and other peculiarities, point to an early exemplar as its immediate forerunner, notwithstanding the somewhat late origin of the MS. itself. This should encourage the friends of ℵ to look anything but askance at cursive testimony, however late in date. But from our point of view such MSS. prove too much. Here is just such an one as agrees with Burgon's description of ℵBD of the gospels, and ℵ of the Apoc. In this MS. there are a host of new readings, which fairly outdo even these old exemplars. We get a good instance of this at xiv. 11, where we see a group of MSS. tracing to a common ancestor:

εις αιωνα αιωνων αναβενει P.
εις αιωνα αιωνων αναβαινει E 1. 4. 7. 14. 19. 26 etc.
εις αιωνα αιωνος αναβαινει C. 18. 28 etc.
εις αιωνα αιωνων (—αναβαινει +αμην) 12.

No. 87 is wanting here, and ℵ agrees with the t.r., but for an itacism of ℵ*. Here we see our MS. 12 follow the group in the exceptional reading αιωνα, but of course outdo them by omitting αναβαινει altogether and adding αμην!

Some of the commas are of curious form, thus ‸ so placed that sometimes they might almost indicate various readings.

From the innocent appearance of this MS. outwardly one would hardly gather the world of base originality within. The writing is regular and neat; there are but very few corrections, and the text flows on without break over hill and dale of added glosses and of the most woeful omissions due to homoioteleuton.

Birch ("Variæ Lectiones ad Textum Apocalypseos," Copenhagen, 1800) professes to criticise Mill and Wetstein for their readings of this MS. and offers for comparison his collation with theirs. Yet he gives but few readings, and, as in much of the rest of his work, proves to have been no better than his predecessors. Why! a monograph could with propriety be devoted to this MS. and its peculiarities. We have not stumbled across its immediate parent. It must stand as one of the very peculiar MSS., yet apparently not copied direct from an uncial [see Apoc. vii. 2 αγιον (pro αλλον) which could only occur from copying the running double λ written so frequently below the line; also note occasionally ιδου (pro ειδον), which could not be copied from ιΔον, but might be miscopied from a cursive nu] although certain cases of homoioteleuton and other things tend to incline one to this view sometimes.

Contractions are mostly as usual, though υιος is contracted υισ̄ instead of the usual υσ̄, and ιλημ is once erroneously written ιηλ̄. ανθρωπων usually contracted is occasionally given in full, and κυριος κυριων is written at full length in xix. 16.

ιωαννης is contracted ιω̄ at i. 9; in other places when written out the diæresis is frequently placed over the iota.

Note i. 13 the form μασθοις for μαστοις with ℵ 7. 29; ii. 2 βασταξαι with P 1. In fact this MS. has some of the peculiarities of each of the uncials, now agreeing with ℵ or C or B or A or P alone, or with a small group: anon opposing them all in favour of the text. rec. in places too where other less eclectic MSS. oppose the t.r.

Note the so-called conflate reading at ii. 15 ομοιως ο μισω with P 17* and a few. Also others, such as xxii. 6 αγιων προφητων bis script. This is a curious instance of conflate reduplication resulting from or leading to transposition.

Græco-Syriac ancestry.

And the most noticeable thing of all—in a MS. combining so many unique features and agreeing so often with the idiosyncracies of ℵ first, then 7, then 28, then 31 etc.—is the frequent absence of transposition of words, so common in all cursive MSS., due to its Syriac ancestry the same as 1—(yet see a unique transposition iv. 4 καθημενους πρεσβυτερους, iv. 6 οπισθεν και εμπροσθεν)—though this is largely due to its brotherhood with Apoc. 1 (of which, more anon), and which was the basis of the Erasmian text. However, notwithstanding agreement with 1 alone in many places, there are a very large number of places where they diverge unexpectedly. Note among many: xi. 8 αυτων (pro ημων) again with nearly all authorities against t.r. and 1. xvii. 4 και τα ακαθαρτα της πονηριας αυτης (so 67). Here it agrees with the group A 1. 7. 17. 18. 28. 31. 87 etc. as regards αυτης, but gives us the curious originality πονηριας for πορνειας (so 130).

The fact remains that notwithstanding eclecticism this MS. is the only one so far which agrees in many places with 1 when standing alone. This occurs 48 times or more than twice in each chapter. They consist of 25 omissions, a few substitutions (note δεκαδυο xii. 1) and transpositions, no additions, and the rest a bare dozen itacisms or peculiarities of spelling [of course this does not take into consideration the many places where 1. 12 and the t.r. are all three in agreement]. It is noteworthy that by far the larger number of passages do not partake of varieties of spelling. In this respect Apoc. 12 conforms much more to Apoc. 7 and some of the uncials. Sometimes Apoc. 12 is more faithful to the uncials than its great friends 1 and 28. See xi. 9 αφιουσιν ℵ*CAP 12, αφιουσι 1. 28.

One of the rather curious things about the scribe of 12 is his comparative consistency (so noticeably absent in the other MSS.) in his curious forms of spelling. E.g. ii. 18, 24 θυατηριοις in both places, so far a novelty. See also i. 9, 10 εγεναμην both places; iv. 11, v. 12, xi. 17 δυναμειν; v. 4 ηυρεθει; xii. 8, xviii. 24, xx. 11 ηυρεθη; v. 8, ix. 14. 15, xiv. 1. 3, xix. 4 τεσσαρις; also σιμειον or σιμεια in xii. 1. 3, xiii. 13. 14, xv. 1, xvi. 14, xix. 20; πολεις xviii. 19 and 21; αλλιλουια xix. 3 and 6 etc. etc.

The great peculiarity of this codex is a combination in places of seeming irreconcilables, viz.

(a) frequent and prolonged agreement with t.r. against many variations in other MSS.,
(b) coincident with occasional unique readings,
(c) and agreement in peculiarities of spelling with the oldest exemplars.

[Now see fam 114 as another example of similar treatment of the text, close to 12 in places].

In the vii[th] chap. 5/8 the peculiarities of ℵ, of our MS., and of a few others, are perhaps more strikingly brought out in all their nakedness, at the passage of the sealing of the twelve tribes, than elsewhere :—

Apoc. 12 omits εκ φυλης ρουβην }
ℵ omits εκ φυλης γαδ }
Apoc. 87 91 201 omit εκ φυλης ασηρ
Apoc. 28 writes εκ φυλης νεφαλειμ twice, 56 omits with 21 40-210.
Apoc. 30 39 91 98 180 omit εκ φυλης μανασση
ℵ and 35-87 104 218 omit εκ φυλης συμεων
Apoc. 28 91 100 182 218 220 omit εκ φυλης λευϊ
Apoc. 128 omits εκ φυλης ζαβουλων
Apoc. 14 153-211 182 222 240 omit εκ φυλης ιωσηφ, ℵ and 28 transpose and place after βενιαμιν
Apoc. 219 omits εκ φυλης βενιαμιν.

Note a contrariety of readings in ii. 24 βαθη with t.r. and ℵ, against CAP and most cursives. Five words further on βαλλω with CAP and most cursives against t.r. and ℵ.

The scribe does not often betray himself and admit various readings, proceeding, as we have said before, evenly and smoothly with his allotted task of omitting whole verses, adding glosses, producing new scripture and forms of scripture, without break or hesitation, and apparently copying "straight" from his exemplar. Yet, notice at iii. 2 εμελλον αποθανειν. He wrote first α μελλον αποθανειν, inserting afterwards, above the line, the ε before μελλον.

Notice further, particularly (of however many other places), iii. 7 την κλειδα του δᾱδ with the t.r. 1 etc., against nearly everything else.

Please note that this important MS. contains ἡμᾶς at v. 9, and does not agree with A here, although closely with it in peculiarities in this neighbourhood, e.g. επεσαν v. 8, also particularly note vi. 13 σαλευομενη A and 12 alone. This still leaves our friend A out in the cold, alone among MSS. in omitting ημας v. 9, a mere copyist's blunder, as I have pointed out before (but cannot emphasize enough in this important passage), the word being dropped in error between the end of one column and the beginning of the next.

Before proceeding to chronicle the unique readings of Apoc. 12, I would call attention to the glosses at i. 18; iii. 14; xi. 18; xvii. 4; xviii. 7/8; xix. 16/17; xxi. 8/9; xxii. 6 (all wholly in the text and duly reproduced verbatim in our collation), and to the following minor points :

iii. 9. διδωμοι. There are no accents on this word, so it is impossible to conjecture if οι is an itacism for ι, or if the scribe had a knowledge of the variation διδῶ for δίδωμι.

vi. 4. —απο. Although there is space left here sufficient for two letters, we can be certain the scribe did not write εκ. Probably τη in error.

vi. 13. —μεγαλου with 53 152*, and σαλευομενη (pro σειομενη) with A alone.

vii. 11/12. Post θρονου sec. —επι προσωπον αυτων και usque ad fin. vers. 12 αμην. Compare Apoc. 28, the only MS. so far which has anything like it, omitting nearly all verse 12, and confirming hitherto apparent similarity of archetype of 12 and 28 in many other places.

xii. 6. εχει absque εκει seq., i.e. cum t.r. et 1, but against the uncials.

xii. 10. αδε at the end of a line for αδελφων. This αδε is written well out into the margin, the η of ημων following is written in the left hand margin of the next line, and the whole appearance of three lines here is of being squeezed. Notice in this connection —ο κατηγορος των αδελφων an omission of Apoc. 1. Evidently our MS. is closely related to the exemplar used by 1, and the scribe of 12, by inserting the words, cramped himself for room.

xiii. 14. —λεγων τοις κατοικουσιν επι της γης usque ad μαχαιρας· xiii. 15. —ινα και λαληση η εικων του θηριου και ποιηση οσοι αν μη προσκυνησωσι την εικονα του θηριου.

These two long instances of omission owing to homoioteleuton are both caused by the frequent occurrence of the word θηριου, and rather point to copying from an uncial [as does σιων (xiv. 1)], but are inexcusable as showing a servile copying and a lack of memorial acquaintance with the Scripture. They are not by any means the only occurrences, as many other careless instances of omissions from homoioteleuton are recorded. This tends to invalidate what weight might be accorded this copy in its support of the uncials. From homoioteleuton we can safely count this copy at xiii. 15 for —ινα sec., αποκτανθωσιν.

xvii. 4. Post μαργαριταις +το λιθω(?) τιμιω και μαργαριταις κεκοσμηται.

This is entirely new. The forms of κοσμεω only occur in the Apoc. at xxi. 3 and 19, and are confined to descriptive attributes of the Holy City, the new Jerusalem. The scribe has therefore taken an unwarranted liberty in inventing and introducing the clause here. 114-193-241 are the only others to add κεκοσμηται tantum.

xxii. 6. 18. 19. This is typical of the scribe. At verse 6 he indulges in a very long additional gloss, and omits verses 18 and 19 altogether!

We now approach our examination of the solecisms of this codex, and we are sure the reader will be surprised, notwithstanding all the foregoing (and remembering that in the average cursive MS. there are a mere dozen), to learn that there are no less than 205 unique readings in these short xxii chapters, not counting 201 cases of unique varieties of spelling etc.† And of these 205 cases, only 20 are additions, including 6 glosses. Omissions number 98; and here we only reckon each place where an omission occurs, no matter how long the omission, as at xvii. 9-14, where no less than six whole verses are missing, and other eight places where eight entire verses are wanting. This large number of omissions points to great carelessness and not to "a shorter text being preferable." Of substitutions we have several monstra, such as

xiv. 8. ουρανου (compendio) pro οινου
xix. 15. ρομφαια (pro ραβδω)
xxi. 10. ιηλ (compendio) pro ιλημ xxii. 2. καρπον (pro καρπους), to which add:
xxii. 15. αι πορναι and naturally αγιος twice instead of thrice iv. 8; οι ουαι xviii. 10 etc.

Alone with 1.

Here is the list of passages where Apoc. 1 and 12 stand together alone against t.r. and all others:—

A reference to vol. II. will show the additional testimony gathered since.

For the rest, I cannot do better than save my readers the trouble of much weariness of the flesh by presenting a full chapter already dissected and ready for discussion.

Let us take, e.g., chapter xvi. and analyse it to realize to the full the eclecticism of this MS.

Verse 1. With t.r. φωνης μεγαλης and against CAB and many cursives.
With t.r. εκ του ναου. B and nearly all cursives omit except 1, 17, 28 etc.
—τοις 7. Habet 12.
υπαγεται with ℵC and a few.
—και sec. with 1. 7. 17. 18. 26. 28. 96. and many.
εκχεεται with ℵC 200 alone. εκχεετε A.P. 1. etc.
With t.r. —επτα (ante φιαλας) against ℵCAB and most cursives.
—του θεου alone with 1 (hiat 208) 67 81 114 120 121 123 152 159? 179 189 193 204 241.

Verse 2. +αγγελος (post πρωτος) with fam 28 etc.
εξεχεεν read consistently throughout, much more so than ℵ and others.
With t.r. επι against εις ℵ^aCABP and nearly all cursives, except 1. 17. 28 etc.
With t.r. ελκος against ελκον ℵ.
With t.r. κακον against —κακον A

Ver. 2 (cont.) With t.r. κακον και πονηρον against πονηρον και κακον ℵ.

With t.r. εις against επι ℵCABP and nearly all cursives, except 1. 17. 28 etc.

With t.r. το χαραγμα του θηριου against του θηριου το χαραγμα fam 7. This is noteworthy in view of close approximation to 7 further on.

With t.r. τους tert., against —τους tert. 7. 28. 29 etc.

προσκυνουντας τη εικονι αυτου with CABEP. 28 and most cursives, but against 1. (την εικονα προσκυνουντας αυτου) and ℵ 17 fam 119 152-179 189 (προσκυνουντας την εικονα αυτου).

Verse 3. With t.r. αγγελος, against ℵ^a CAP 18. 95 and a few.

ως αιμα νεκρου with fam 7 and a few. ℵ has αιμα ωσι νεκρου, and 1 has αιμα νεκρου (—ως).

With t.r. and ℵBP 1. 17. 28 against —ζωσα nearly all cursives, and ζωης CA. 95-127-215 and 111 aeth.

+τα (post απεθανεν) with CAE and a few (which it has just opposed).

With t.r. and the mass εν τη θαλασση against επι της θαλασσης ℵ alone.

Verse 4. With t.r. αγγελος against —αγγελος ℵCABP and nearly all cursives except 1. 17. 28. 87 etc.

With t.r. εις bis against επι bis of 18. 31. 113 vg and —εις sec. of ℵCAP 17. 95. 96 etc.

With t.r. εγενετο against εγενοντο of A 36 56 95 100 111 127 130 146 149 200 etc. and Verss.

Verse 5. With t.r. and all the rest so far των υδατων against —των υδατων of 1 (and 233).

—κυριε with all uncials and practically all cursives so far examined, against t.r.

With t.r. and the mass ει against —ει fam 7 alone.

—και (ante ο οσιος) with ℵP 6. 17. 18. 28. 31. 94. 96 etc. against t.r. and 1, and against —και ο of CAB and most other cursives.

Verse 6. With t.r. and the mass against αιματα prim. of ℵ fam 39 and a few.

With t.r. εδωκας πιειν against ℵCA (and a few cursives reading ποιειν). [Lachmann and Tregelles, however, alone follow CA 111 200 in δεδωκας].

—γαρ with ℵCABP 1. 17. 28. 87 and indeed nearly all cursives against t.r.

Verse 7. —και ηκουσα αλλου εκ του θυσιαστηριου λεγοντος alone by this MS.

With t.r. and the mass αληθιναι against αληθειναι of CA 151 210, notwithstanding that as a rule this MS. reads αληθειναι.

κρισις with ℵCA 111 alone.

Verse 8. With t.r. αγγελος against —αγγελος CABP and many cursives, but not 1. 17. 28 etc.

εδωθη with 7 and very few.

With t.r. etc. καυματισαι and not καυματησαι of P. fam 7 etc.

With t.r. and all others εν against —εν ℵ 81-204.

With t.r. ℵACP 1. 17. 28 etc. τους ανθρωπους εν πυρι against εν πυρι τους ανθρωπους of B and the mass of cursives (—εν πυρι 18 arm 3. *syr*S).

Verse 9. With t.r. —οι ανθρωποι with ℵCAP 1. 28. against +οι ανθρωποι (ante το ονομα) of BE and the mass of cursives including 17 and 87.

+την (ante εξουσιαν) with ℵAEP 17 96 etc. against t.r. and CB 1. 28 and most other cursives so far.

Verse 10. —πεμπτος alone with 1-152-179 (hiat 208).

With t.r. αγγελος against ℵCABP and all cursives except fam 1. 10. 21. 34 and 200.

With t.r. and the mass εσκοτωμενη against εσκοτισμενη of ℵ^c B and a few.

Ver. 10 (cont.) εμασσοντο alone with 32 36 39 59 180 215 241 against εμασοντο of 7 104 113 151, εμασσωντο of t.r. B and some cursives, and εμασωντο of ℵCAP 1 itself 17 and many cursives.

With t.r. and the mass εκ against απο of ℵE and only 17. 67-120 169-216 178-203-240.

Verse 11. —εκ sec. with P 38 f. 46 69 81 101 112 f. 119 137 152 179 204.

With t.r. remainder of verse, against several variations by ℵ and others.

Verse 12. With t.r. αγγελος against —αγγελος all uncials, 1 and the mass of cursives except fam 10 fam 21 fam 34 etc.

την φιαλην αυτου with t.r. ℵCAP 1. 17. 28 etc., and a good many others against αυτου την φιαλην of B and a considerable group of cursives.

With t.r. and all others μεγαν except μεγα of 1. 200. 244*.

With t.r. τον ευφρατην and CA etc. against —τον ℵBPE and a number of cursives.

—αυτου sec. with the 1 fam and some others.

With t.r. and the mass ετοιμασθη against ετοιμασθει of 7 and 87.

ανατολης with ℵCB and the mass of cursives, but against t.r. AP. 1 etc.

Verse 13. ιδον (as elsewhere almost uniformly) with ABE 7. 14. 20 and a few against the others.

With t.r. everywhere else in the verse except —ομοια βατραχοις with 1* and 81 114 123* 121 152 179 189 193 204 208 241 (ℵ* has ειωσει βατραχους, ℵ has ειωσει βατραχοι).

fin. +εκπορευθεντα fam 21, +εκπορευομενα 18 alone [non 12, cum t.r. etc], +εκπορευοντα 81.

Verse 14. With t.r. and E 1 etc. (Hiant CP) against δαιμονιων of ℵAB and nearly all cursives.

With t.r. εκπορευεσθαι and against the variations of ℵ (ℵ* cum t.r.) AB (CP hiant) 1. 17 (ex emend) 17. 28. 87 and the great mass of cursives. Hence ℵ and this MS. almost alone support t.r.

σιμεια alone with 104 as very often elsewhere.

—της γης και with ℵAB (hiant CP) and practically all cursives including 17. 28. 87 etc. etc. Apoc. 1* reads —και της (ante οικουμενης) according to Tregelles and Delitzsch, confirmed by 152-179*-208.

With t.r. and f. 1 f. 46 f. 62 etc. πολεμον against τον πολεμον of ℵAB (hiant CP) and all other cursives.

—της ημερας εκεινης this MS. alone. This is new, as ℵ 14 read —εκεινης only, and A and 95 transpose της μεγαλης ημερας (—εκεινης), but 215 omits της ημερας εκ. της μεγαλης against its sisters 95-127.

—του ult. with 31 32 75 89 112 155 159 189 220 222 233 against ℵAB (hiant CP) 1. 17. 28. 87 and all the rest, and t.r.

παντοκρατωρος with 7 20* 28 39-69-104-151 149 154 156 180 207 and Compl. alone so far.

Verse 15. εαυτου (pro αυτου) prim. alone so far with 81 137 152 179 204. This is "ex emend. supra lin. a prim. man." περιπατει with 7. 28. 30. 98 etc.

βλεπουσιν alone with 1 (Delitzsch) 81 112 189 200 204 against t.r. and the mass, and βλεπουσι of 1 (Treg.) 17*? 28 etc., and βλεπωσιν of ℵA 50 67 113 210 Er. 1. Ald.

αισχημωσυνην alone with 200. The only variation is αισχυνην of 7 and 29 45 61 62-63 and a few.

Verse 16. εβραιστη alone so far of those recorded, but read by E and a few (εβραιστει 7).
αρμαγεδων with ℵAE 1. 7. 17. 18. 87. 95. 96 etc. against t.r., and μαγεδδων of B (hiant CP), μαγιδων of 28, μακεδδων of 14-92, and μαγεδων of the majority of cursives.
[For the rest with t.r. and not supporting ℵA or 14 in the other variations].

Verse 17. With t.r. against all and sundry variations, except —μεγαλη with A. 1 and a few.
εκ (pro απο prim.) with ℵA 1. 18. 95 and quite a number.
—του ναου with E* 1. 18. 28 and quite a few.
and γεγονεν with ℵABE (hiant CP) 2. 6. 7*. 8. 14. 19. 20. 87. 93. 98 etc. against t.r. 1 etc.
Our MS. does not here support ℵ in its vagaries, nor 28 (κεφαλην pro φιαλην), nor A 14. 95 —του ουρανου.

Verse 18. Our MS. reads—uniquely so far—(—και φωναι), αστραπαι και βρονται against t.r. 1, but twenty other members of the 1 family support 12, and the transpositions of ℵAB (hiant CP) and the mass of cursives, none of these authorities omitting και φωναι.
With t.r. σεισμος bis, against σισμος bis of ℵA. [This is noteworthy, because almost uniformly our MS. reads σισμος, σισμοι, whereas ℵ and the other uncials only do so very occasionally].
With t.r. εγενετο prim., against —εγενετο B and large group of cursives including 87, but not 1. 17. or 28.
With t.r. and the rest εγενετο sec., not εγενοντο (pro εγενετο sec.) with ℵ*.
—οι with ℵBE (hiant CP) 14. 17. 95 and some, and against t.r. A. 1. 28 and the rest.
With t.r. and the rest εγενοντο sec. not εγενετο with A fam 38 and 251.
With t.r. and the rest επι της γης, not —επι της γης with 7. 14. 45-104-151.
τηλικουτος alone with 26. 169. 200. 216.
ουτος (pro ουτω) alone with 1 (Delitzsch) 104 114 127 193 204 241 [ουτως 18. 28. 95. 97 and twenty more].

Verse 19. επεσαν with ℵ^a^ABE (hiant CP) 7. 8. 9*. 17. 27. 28. 96. 97 of those so far recorded, and quite a number of others.
There are no other variations, the vagaries of ℵ. 14. 28. 31. being neglected.

Verse 20. This verse is entirely wanting. There are, however, few variations to be found in it, Apoc. 1 omitting και ab initio with 208, 87 with 188 reading +ἡ (ante νησος), and ℵAB and a comparatively small group (including 7 and 87) reading εφυγεν, and fam 21 +και (post ορη).

Verse 21. The only variation here from t.r. is αυτου (pro αυτης) read alone by 29 and our MS. [B omits αυτης; not A or ℵ (hiant CP) and αὑτη is read by many cursives (not 1. 17. 28 or 87 which are with t.r.) and 14 reads αὑτη].
The other variations from t.r. of 14, 18, 28 are neglected by our MS., as is also ουρανους (pro ανθρωπους) given by Delitzsch as the reading of Apoc. 1 and confirmed by 208.

Fare thee well Apoc. 12. We shall disentangle the wheat from the chaff before we have finished.

Ten years later (1911) we meet a worthy compeer in the MS. 114, to which please refer.
Meanwhile we have identified other intervening members of the 1 family, as 46-88-101 59. 62/3 etc. See complete list elsewhere.

GROUP 13-23-55-150^{sup}-(226).

Apoc. 13 (Act. 42. P. 48. Evst. 923. Apl. 56) in the Lyceum of Frankfort on/Oder, Germany. [Scr. 13. Greg. 13, new 42? Sod. α 107]. Collated 1901. Apoc. 13.

This is a clearly written MS. of about XIII cent. (Greg. and Scr. say XI). It has no trace of iota post. or subscript, except in one place xxii. 3 αὐτῇ. The usual contractions are found, except πνευματων in full i. 4, πνευματα in full iii. 1; iv. 5; xvi. 13. 14, ανθρωπων in full ix. 18,

ουρανω in full xi. 15, κυριων in full xvii. 14; xix. 16, ισραηλ in full xxi. 12.

An unusual contraction occurs at ii. 13 σα͞νᾶ for σατανα; and a ligature occurs 3 times in chap. xxi and only there, viz. πόλε⌉ for πολεως in verses 14, 19 and 21, instead of ς.

Itacisms are very rare, yet a solecism of this kind occurs at xxi. 18 τοιχους for τειχους.

ν εφελκ. is rare also, yet this MS. is found alone in this respect with P 7* and 12 at iv. 11.

It stands largely with B and group (see typical places like viii. 8. 9. 10. 11 etc.). Often alone with a purely cursive group. It shows a plain and undisguised affinity for the readings of 9 and 27; yet notice at xxi. 20 χρυσοπρασινος alone with 9 and 27, and σαρδωνυξ, αμεθυσος against them.

There are a few new readings, by far the most noteworthy being the long gloss (from Andreas' commentary) incorporated into the text at xvi. 20/21. One often wonders how such things occur, as this is the only instance in this MS., and follows two verses without a single variation from the textus receptus.

A folio is missing containing xviii. 3/13, so that we count—xviii. 3 ..της γης usque ad xviii. 13 σιτον...

The page after the break begins και κτηνη. We are obliged to count in our collation —και προβατα, but the reading is probably και προβατα και κτηνη.

There is also an omission at xiv. 1/3—(γεγραμμε.) νον usque ad ηγορασμε (.νοι), which sentences were dropped between two pages, and have been supplied at the bottom of the page by a late hand. This hand gives several interesting readings.

The inscription is new so far, and does not agree (as it might) with that of either 9 or 27 (which differ from one another). The *sub*scription on the other hand agrees with those of 9 and 27 (which coincide) except that the latter have not "τελος της." At first sight I thought this might be an error, but I find on reference, Scrivener collated 27 and I collated 9, and we agree in our reported subscriptions, both of us omitting τελος της.

Of unique readings we notice, of additions:

i. 17. +οτι (ante εγω) So 23-55.
ii. 14. +του (ante βαλααμ), but now found in 23-55 and thirteen others.
iv. 6. +αυτου (post ενωπιον) viii. 13. αγγελου ως αετου, cf. Cass.: quasi aquila visa. Others αγγελου or αετου.
ix. 9. +και (ante ιππων) So 23-55 and 44-52-82.
xiv. 8. +αυτοις (ante λεγων) So 23-55* and 16-39 [non 45]-69-102-180 (+αυτω 113 syr copt aeth arm Prim.).
xvii. 9. +την (ante σοφιαν) Not 23-55, but 62-63-136-147-162/3-184 sah$^{2}/_{4}$.
xix. 2. οτι εκρινεν αληθῆ (pro οτι αληθιναι) So 23-55.

xxi. 9. την γυναικα και την νυμφην του αρνιου So 32 150[sup] [non 23-55].
10. +και (ante την αγιαν) So 23 (hiat 55) and 150[sup].

and of omissions:

xii. 7. —ο (ante μιχαηλ) So 164 166 190.
xiv. 1-3. Desunt a prima manu.
xv. 2. —αυτου prim. So 108 127 215 217.
8. —εκ (ante της δοξης) So 23-55* and 34-156-165-188[non rel. fam] 149-186.
xxii. 5. και ου χρεια (—ουκ εχουσι) with B and some.
8. ακουων (—ο) και βλεπων ταυτα So 16 and some, but not 23-55.

and of "monstra":

vii. 5. Δαν pro ϝαδ So 23 [non 55] and 9 16-39*gr*-69*gr*-180*gr* and 75 [non 9*-27] 130.
xviii. 1. αυτων (pro αυτου).

Notice also:

ii. 26. κρατων (pro τηρων) (So 55 130). The scribe writes κρατουντα errore ii. 14 and κρατουντες vii. 1, evidently being fond of the word and its variations!
iii. 7. και ουδεις κλεισει αυτην και κλειων και ουδεις ανοιξει
xvi. 1. ουρανου (pro ναου) = arm 4. copt. So only 23-55 and 233 of Greeks.
xxi. 23. η (pro ουδε) So 149 150[sup] 186 207.

For the rest, there are a few unusual transpositions, viz.:

iv. 2. εν τω ουρανω εκειτο So 55.
viii. 12. και το τριτον των αστερων και το τριτον της σεληνης Alone.
xxi. 12. δωδεκα πυλωνας So 150[sup].

Also a few occasional peculiarities of spelling:

i. 11. σαρδις (א[a]) and 201 copt.
iii. 14. λαοδικαια So 36 241.
viii. 5. ειλιφεν So 72.
13. μεσουρανησματι So 124 Er. 3. 4. 5, (μεσουρανισματι 1 113 123* 152 179* 208 Er. 1. 2).
ix. 2 fin. φρεατου Alone.
xiii. 13. ποιη So only 113 187 218. xviii. 19. ηριμωθη Alone.
xxi. 18. τοιχους Alone.

The rest (some nine instances) are almost all pure errors.

In order to show the close affinity of 9 and 27 to this MS., we will give a list of passages where all three stood together, alone at the time of writing:

ii. 13. σου τα εργα και
14. +του (ante φαγειν)
vi. 7. +και (ante ηκουσα)
vii. 2. +του (ante θεου)
4. εσφαγμενων viii. 2. εστηκεσαν
ix. 11. εν τη ελληνικη δε

xv. 6. οι αγγελοι οι επτα
xviii. 18. εκραυγαζον
19. λεγ. και πενθ. και κλαιοντες
xx. 12. practical agreement but for an ν εφελκ. of 13.
13. —ο (ante θανατος)
xxi. 20. χρυσοπρασινος

In a few cases 9 and 13 stand alone:

iii. 5. ουτω (pro ουτος) ibid. —και ενωπιον των αγγελων αυτου xvii. 6. +αγιων (ante μαρτυρων)

In a few cases 13 and 27 stand alone:

iv. 9. δωσει
11. ο κυριος και ο θεος ημων αγιος
xii. 11. μεχρι (pro αχρι).

On the other hand, there are numerous places where 13 forsakes 9 and 27. See vii. 17 οδηγει with them and others, but ποιμανει with text. rec. against them and the same group precisely. Again xix. 15 our MS. reads παταξη against παραταξη of 9 and 27. Also ἄρκτου cum t.r. against ℵACBP and most cursives, including 4. 9. 27. 31 and 87.

It is occasionally but rarely found with 87, see, however, particularly vii. 7 χιλιαδας ult., and vii. 8 χιλιαδας prim. alone with 87. The other places where they are found together with but few other authorities, may be seen in the following list of passages where our MS. has exceptional readings:—

N.B.—About chapter xii. and onwards it conforms much more to the readings of A, see specially xii. 7.

The MS. has some connection with the old Syriac version and with Coptic. See now Apoc. 23 (written with iota subscr. throughout), for interesting affinity with 13, and evidently influenced by same archetype, and 13-23-55-150^{sup} are close to 9-27-75.

Group 14-92.

Apoc. 14 (Ev. 69. Ac. 31. Paul 37). Leicester. [Scr. 14. Greg. 14, new 69. Sod. δ 505]. Collated by Scr. (f) in Codex Augiensis. An important document. See more fully referred to under Apoc. 92. Apoc. 14.

Apoc. 15. A fragment found in E of the gospels at Basle. Collated and published by me in one of the appendices to my collation of Evan. 604. [Scr. 15. Greg. 15, new 2087. Sod. α 1583]. These few scrawled verses, however (iii. 3–iv. 8), buried in Evan. E will be found to have quite some critical value. Apoc. 15.

Not until we reach No. 119 do we pick up some of 15's itacisms of η for οι, besides agreement in readings.

As 119 is a most important MS. we can now admit that 15 was based on something worth attention.

Graeco-Latin Group 7-16-39-45-69-102-104-151-180.

Apoc. 16. Apoc. 16 (Act. 45. P. 52). City of Hamburg. Gk. 1252. [Scr. 16. Greg. 16, new 336. Sod. α 500]. Belonged to Uffenbach. Used by Wetstein and Bengel. Collated by me Dec. 1901. Owing to an error on the part of the photographer, who reproduced the whole 534 pages of the MS., instead of the Apocalypse alone (pp. 51-110), as ordered, this cost me $400! Yet I may be able to use the rest to advantage, for, contrary to what the Librarian Eyssenhardt, wrote me in 1898—"Dear Sir, our MS. of the Apocalypse is utterly worthless, having been written about the year 1600 . . . .,"—I find it a most valuable copy, having many unique readings, a host of "uncial" readings, and being a sister MS. to the græco-latin No. 7, though not copied from it, and hence derived from an older parent. Its date is about 1500.

After the vi[th] chapter we find rather fewer variations, and somewhat less agreement with 7. Between chapters iii. and iv., the κεφ. t—(κεφ. ἰ)—is inserted in the text, as is the case in Apoc. 7 (see Scr. Cod. Augiensis, Introd. p. LXXVI), this being the only instance of this in each MS. Elsewhere the κεφ. are noted in the margin, occasionally with the "περι etc." in full. See under Apoc. 45.

Besides the inscription "αποκαλυψις ιωαννου του θεολογου ἣν εν πατμω τη νησω εθεασατο," we find another, slightly different, placed before the epistle of Jude, as follows:—"αποκαλυψις ιωαννου του θεολογου ἣν εν τη πατμω εθεασατο."

There is no trace of iota sub- or postscript, notwithstanding the modern date of the MS., except possibly postscript at the end of a line on p. 80 ραβδωι xii. 5.

ν εφελκ. is infrequent, but there are a goodly number of itacisms.

ιδον for ειδον is found everywhere, except in two places, vii. 1 and xxi. 22, in fact more consistently than in any other MS., but ι for ει in προφητειας etc. is very infrequent.

There are a great variety of ligatures, and the usual contractions are frequent, the only absence of these I note are at i. 4 πνευματων; iv. 5, v. 6 πνευματα; x. 8 ουρανου; vii. 14 κυριε; xvii. 14, xix. 16 κυριων; ix. 4 ανθρωπους.

The final sigma 'ς' is quite frequently found in the middle of words, pointing possibly to the copy direct of an uncial MS. Consider also i. 11 {εις μυρναν. / εις αρδεις. Also xiii. 3 εσφραγιςμενην, but this is not read by any of our known uncials. Once, xix. 10, at beginning of a word: ςυνδουλοσ.

As this MS. was copied so late, an uncial may still lie "perdu" in some library from which this MS. and No. 7 were copied, unless in our later examinations we find they were obtained from an intermediate and elder cursive. Quite as interesting as the agreement of our MS. with 7, are the places where they differ, and which are set forth in full in the complete conspexus of all the MSS. Notice e.g. vi. 12 +ολη (ante σεληνη) 7; +ολη (post σεληνη) 16. Also ix. 5 παιση cum t.r. 16, but πεση 7. Also xxi. 7 κληρονομηση 7, δωσω αυτω 16. The inscriptions are not the same, the form of that of 16 being older than that of 7.

A contemporary second hand has made a very few corrections. A late third hand has made more, see chapter vii., some with but little other authority, and one with none.

There were no less than 85 unique readings, besides 18 unique errors, and 35 cases of unique spelling or itacism, a total of 138 as per the following lists before I came to the rest of the family.

The MSS. so far examined, comprising the uncials, Nos. 1 to 21 of the cursives, plus 26 and 27 of Scr. and his examined codices beyond 87.

Notice xvii. 9 επτα ὁρκοι εισιν!

A few of the solecisms have a trace of other authority, notably of ℵ.

The full family of this græco-latin recension is now

7-16-39-45-69-102-104-151-180 and 16 must be examined in relation to the whole group, for in the course of transmission the family sub-divides thus— 7-45-104-151, Compl. Group.

COMPLUTENSIAN GROUP 10 etc., of which 17 is perhaps the least true to formal type.

Apoc. 17 (Evan. 35. Act. 14. Paul 18). Paris. Bib. Nat. Coisl. 199 (formerly 44). [Scr. 17. Greg. 17, new 35. Sod. δ 309]. Collated from the original, Sept. 1898.

This is a copy of the whole N.T., beautifully clean, with wide margins, and written by three scribes. The four gospels by one (XI), the remainder, except the Apoc., by the other (XII), and Apoc. by a third (XI–XII). In general style, the writing of all three is very similar, but ε of second scribe is quite different from that of first scribe; π of third scribe is quite different from π of first or second scribes. The writing of first and third scribes is very like that of Evan. 1. The second scribe wrote a somewhat heavier and squarer script.

Apoc. begins f° 311 (preceded on f°s 309/310 by Chrys. Hom. de Dom. resurrect.). After the first page, an unusual number of contractions begin (see x. 2–6). There are many scholia to the Apoc. F°. 318 verso and half of f°. 319 recto have been 'gone over'—(as in the great Vatican codex B of IVth cent.)—by a more recent hand, for the original writing here had suffered and was entirely effaced in some places. To be exact, the portion thus rewritten is from ch. xiii. 8 . . . απο to xiv. 8. The readings here are therefore not indisputable, except those so marked. The late copyist has 'guessed' in several places, e.g. xiii. 13. We call this hand * (confirmed now by E 67 and 120). Otherwise three earlier hands have been at work on revision (if we include the διορθωτης).

I notice no iota postscript, and only one occurrence of iota subscript, viz. at ii. 2 δύνῃ. There is hardly any occurrence of ν εφελκ., or want of it. The MS. was no doubt copied from a cursive or from a late and carefully revised uncial. But the original scribe certainly used more than one MS. He has often changed readings as soon as written, e.g. ii. 14 εδιδαξε. In these cases I quote 17 as a rule, simply. A good many places are obelised†, most, I think, by an early second hand. In these cases I give the original reading, 17* and the second 17; some are obelised by a later hand. In this case I quote 17* and 17, as if the change had actually been made. Where a substitution is obelised I only give 17, not 17*, as it is useless guessing what the obeliser read. Occasionally I have placed brackets around 17, generally to indicate that the first hand had knowledge of another reading, and sometimes seems to waver between the two. The scribe used numerals Δ, ε, for τεσσαρον τεσσαρσιν, πεμπτην etc., very freely; sometimes they agree with Apoc. 1, but Treg. and Del. very likely overlooked some; see remarks on Apoc. 1.

Our codex, 17, seeks a sister or sisters in several new readings, for at this stage of our investigation we notice many apparent solecisms, viz. i. 7; ii. 10, 14; iii. 2, 4; iv. 11; v. 13; vii. 17; viii. 2; ix. 21; x. 2 (now found in 114), 7, 9, 11; xv. 4; xvi. 12; xix. 8; xxi. 5, 14; xxii. 3, 5, 6, 17. Notice a trace of P at ii. 14 (mentioned above) q.v. See also xviii. 4 etc. Also at x. 7, besides τελεσθηναι 17* (alone), and ευηγγελισατο with 28 and 96, notice ος (pro ως) where the only support, so far, is ο (pro ως) by 28 and 96. On the whole we may say that this codex is perhaps more often with 28 and 96 in other unusual readings than with most others, although there is quite a good deal of agreement with No. 1. As regards affinity between 17 and 28 see the Inscription. Also i. 13 μαζοις; ii. 10 ὡ Apoc. 28, ὧν Apoc. 17 (pro ἃ); viii. 13 τρις; ix. 4 —του θεου, but notice following immediately ix. 4 fin. Apoc. 28 omits αυτων with ℵAP 1. Not so Apoc. 17.

Notice at xviii. 4 Apoc. 17 agrees with Apoc. 1* and P. There is a strong trace of P, as pointed out above, at ii. 14, besides other places, e.g. iii. 18 ασχημοσυνη (and note that until the end of the verse, Apoc. 17 agrees with P and text. rec. against most other uncials).

† The scribe had a considerable knowledge of various readings, but generally was quick to select what he pleased at the time he wrote, correcting as soon as he had written. On the other hand many places are obelised, apparently by him, but later, and these places I think may be considered the text of his archetype.

See a very distinct trace of the parent of Apoc. 1 (accompanied by our occasional friend 96) at x. 4 μετα ταυτα γραφεις.

At ii. 20 [πολυ (pro ολιγα) with ℵ against the πολλα of Apoc. 28], but 17 is a somewhat aberrant member of the Compl. group, whereas 28 is a definite member of the 21 group.

Notice further iii. 4 fin. in connection with iv. 8. At iii. 4 Apoc. 17 has, so far, a unique addition (q.v.) in which occurs the expression κυριος σαβαωθ following ἅγιος ἅγ: ἅγ: At iv. 8, where ἁγιος occurs nine times (three out of the nine being in full, thus: ἅγ᾽ ἅγιος ἅγ᾽ ἅγ᾽ ἅγ᾽ ἅγ᾽ ἅγιος ἅγ᾽ ἅγιος, and which may point to copying from an uncial), in the place where ὁ θεος now stands there was an erasure. Very possibly σαβαωθ (as in the interpolation at iii. 14) was there originally, for our codex's friends Apoc. 7 and 28 read (and now 16. 21. 36. 39. 45) σαβαωθ here instead of ὁ θεος.

There is a beautiful specimen of real "conflate" reading at vi. 1 "ἐσωθεν και ἐξωθεν και[B]'οπισθεν και[A]'εμπροσθεν" (sic).

Again at viii. 13 there is a very interesting specimen of conflate reading (see Apoc. 7. 28. 96), where Apoc. 17 has τρὶς (PRO μεγαλη). This is interesting as pointing to the reading of manuscripts then being copied. The interpolation undoubtedly arose from the tendency of scribes—from liturgical habit—to change the number of ουαι or αλληλουια. Hence we know ουαι was read three times here. So far, only Apoc. 1 gives any change, reading ουαι bis only.

At xiii. 2 our Apoc. reads ἄρκτου with t.r. Note this, as E is wanting here. As ℵCABP, 28 etc. read αρκου, it is worth noting that before making the τ here, the scribe hesitated, and there is a small black stroke below the brown τ. This shows, I think, that he consulted other volumes before finishing, and that the ink dried before he completed the word.

At xiv. 12 fin. post ιησου is apparently +*χαρισονται [+χριστου fam 21 boh]. This word is very faint; has been obelised by a later hand, as also του (ante ιησου). This is a new reading, and must be watched for in other MSS. (It occurs in E and 67-120, 169-216 and 251).

At xv. 2 Apoc. 17 agrees with t.r. in retaining εκ του χαραγματος αυτου. It is omitted by all uncials and many cursives. The +και, following, makes it suspicious and looks like an addition, the majority being right in omitting.

Apoc. 17 belongs to the distinct Compl. group 10-17-37-49-91-96-110 etc., but of course owing to critical editing has other elements also.

See also 46 for rather close affiliation.

See 67-120 more specially. Part of its text traces to Syriac foundation.

Apoc. 17 is the least true to type of all the Compl. group. We now see why. There is aberration to the E 67-120 type.

IMPORTANT SINGLE SYRO-GREEK DOCUMENT. (See 40-210 and family 119).

Apoc. 18. Apoc. 18 (Act. 18. Paul 22). Paris. Bib. Nat. Coisl. 202 (2). [N.B. Coisl. 202 is Paul H]. [Scr. 18. Greg. 18, new 94. Sod. Αν²⁴]. Collated from the original, Oct. 1898. Gregory says (p. 677 of his Introduction) "Sunt fasc. ιγ′—ιε′ ex alio cod." I am quite unable to understand what he refers to, and he is evidently confounding something else in this connection with our MS. It is an interesting MS. of Apoc. on vellum of XI/XII. century, found, as it is, bound up with the Acts and Pauline epistles of XIII. century on paper.

The breathings in the Apoc. are found both square and round. ν εφελκ. is very rare. Iota *sub*script occurs twice (ii. 7 τῳ...αυτῳ); iota *post*script (with a tendency to descend a little below the line) 41 times, including αἴδου and αἴδης.

A curious sign (used by two or three scribes only), for η occurs occasionally, similar to the sign for the group ει, thus in μετανοησϛσ, read μετανοησης. The sections (not numbered) occur at ch. i. 1, 4; nothing till ii. 12, iii. 1, 7, 14; iv. 1; v. 1, 6; vi. 7; vii. 1; viii. 1; ix. 1, 6, and none after this. The smaller κεφ. or long στιχοι run to ρ at vii. 17 init.; again ρ (not σ) at xvii. 1 init.; and close ϛᾱ (not σϛα) at xxii. 20 init. That is, together 291.

The MS. has comparatively few number of variants, agreeing many times with the t.r. (especially in the order of words), where one would not expect it, except for its affinity to Apoc. 1; on the other hand, it agrees with t.r. often against Apoc. 1. Outwardly the MS. looks commonplace enough, with no corrections; the only feature being the numbered paragraphs. But it has a collection of so far unique variants, and agrees a great deal with groups of uncials and with single uncials in extraordinary readings, and sometimes in extraordinary forms. A very mixed text. So far in great need of relations. It has so many elements of so many other codices that it must represent a very ancient type or types, through which these all descended along one of the lines. It is a connecting link between syr and sah in very ancient times.

Notice perhaps especially xiii. 10 εἴ τις αἰχμαλωτιεῖ, αιχμαλωτισθήσεται (pro ει τις αιχ. συναγει εις αιχ. υπαγει), which is quite new, although the place bristles with support of conventional variations from the t.r. This must be due to retranslation.

At xiii. 17 ἠ αγορασαι ἠ πωλησαι appears to be unique (but there is not much polysyndeton).

Also xviii. 12 χρυσιου, where Apoc. 18 (more consistent than Apoc. 94) reads χρυσιου and αργυριου with Hippolytus and 36 alone.

Also xviii. 19 επλουτησαμεν pro επλουτησαν. The scribe must have been a repentant man of the world! (So 179* ? arm).

Notice also xxi. 12 εγγεγραμμενα, and xxi. 21 κρυσταλος (with one λ) for υαλος.

Enallage is frequent, as at:

See also under unique readings, where hyperbaton will also be found, and metonymy (if not retranslation) is rife, and only equalled by Apoc. 40. Hypallage at xix. 10 is probably not intentional.

18 still remains without a Greek sister, but has as first cousins the older Syriac and א.

Apoc. 19 (Act. 17. Paul 21). Paris. Bib. Nat. Coisl. 205. [Scr. 19. Greg. 19, new 93. Sod. α 51]. Collated 1899/1900 from photographs supplied me by Berthaud frères, obtained through the courtesy of M. Omont. This is a MS. of the XI[th] century. Written by Anthony, a monk, A.D. 1079; see Gregory, p. 618, where, however, he gives Apoc. i. 1–5 as written by a second hand of XIV. cent., whereas the pages supplied by this second hand include Apoc. i. 1 to ii. 5 (f[os]. 226 recto to 227 verso). The inscription is of course by this later hand, but it is not necessary to differentiate by asterisks between the original scribe and the late hand, as we find out from a comparison of ii. 3 and ii. 14 that the late hand no doubt rewrote the original leaves. Such peculiar agreement between Apoc. 6. 31. and 19 could hardly exist otherwise. Apoc. 19.

Both iota subscript and postscript occur by the later hand.

i. 20 seemed unique. Now fam 25 agrees. From ii. 5 onwards the original scribe resumes. There are no στιχοι. Psi is very rectangular ✝. Breathings are both square and round. ν ἐφελκ. is very frequent,—almost constant in large sections—, pointing to a copy from an old uncial. This is interesting because the MS. follows chiefly B and cursive group, throwing additional weight to testimony of B as against ℵ etc. A good many cases of omission from homoioteleuton occur. Accents are often incorrect. There are no cases of iota sub. or postscript except αἶδης in vi. 8 and xx. 13, 14.

Unique passages so far are ii. 9 (—και prim.), vii. 1 (τινι pro παν or τι), ix. 7 (καρδιων pro ακριδων), xi. 6 (—οσακις εαν θελησωσι), xvi. 21 (καταβαινειν), xviii. 8 (—και πενθος), 24 (+των ante αγιων).

Notice xvi. 12 εφρατην with B alone, also xxi. 13. At xvi. 18 see a trace of ℵ*. At xiii. 8 xviii. 23 a trace of C. At xiii. 10 trace of A. At xviii. 19 a trace of P.

The capitals of the codex were never quite finished, see xiv. 1; xv. 2, 8; xvi. 13,17 etc.

At ii. 10 παθειν there is a leaning towards B and the cursive group. See in i. 14 και ως by the other hand. The same idea. See many other passages besides.

At vi. 12 and 14 (after a fairly consistent following of B and group) there begins a tendency to lean on A and a small group and ℵ and its group respectively.

The following rare readings have support:

At vi. 10. εκεκραξαν 19 is also found in 188 218 232.
ix. 2. αστηρ pro αηρ 19 is also found in 12 and 88[non fam].
xiii. 8. την γην pro επι της γης 19 is also found in fam 61 fam 178 gig ps-Ambr.
18. ψηλαφησατω 19 is also found in 32 (182) and 146*com.*
xvii. 3. ανηνεγκεν (pro απ...) 19 is also found in fam 61 (ανηνεγκαν 218).
xx. 13. τους εαυτων νεκρους 19 is also found in 37 241 arm a. Compl.

The scribe had apparently some knowledge of various readings, for at xv. 4 he began writing παντα (τα εθνη) but corrected it instantly to παντες.

At x. 3 μυκομενος for μυκαται is only found in 200 (μοικ.) and Prim.

The second hand of 19 we now connect absolutely with the group 25-58-70-78-84-94-207.

GROUP 4-20-48-64-74.

Apoc. 20. Apoc. 20 (Evan. 175. Act 41. P. 194). [Scr. 20. Greg. 20, new 175. Sod. δ 95]. Vat. gr. 2080, olim Bas. 119. [Scr. XII; Greg. X vel XI].

This is part of a very neat copy of the whole N.T. of about the XI[th] cent., contained on pp. 150-167, and collated by me from a photographic copy in 1900/1901, supplied by Danesi of Rome.

Breathings are sometimes square, especially towards the end of the book. Psi is very square and old. A few ν εφελκ. are corrected by a second hand. It occurs quite frequently, and constantly enough to point to an ancient exemplar as the copy used by our scribe, who is also very partial to the form ιδον. Regarding the use of ν εφελκ. see i. 19, 20 with ℵCABP and only a few cursives. Iota subscript never occurs. Iota post. is so frequent as to be almost constant. Used in ζῶιον, ηῖρεν, ωῖδε etc., but not quite uniformly. It is carried to excess at i. 15, ii. 18 χαλκωιλιβανωι.

Of almost unique readings, note xi. 13 δωδεκατον (pro δεκατον) with 32 109*gr.* [So far the only variation here is by B, which reads γ′]. The others are few and insignificant, like xx. 8 —ο (ante αριθμος) with 106 189; xxi. 18 —αυτης with 32 59 113 136 143 copt. See, however, xxi. 12 φυλλων with 120 only.

Of peculiarities, note:

- ii. 17. κενον so far alone with C and 95.
- 19. χειρονα so far alone with 4-64 and 109*gr.* (κρειττονα 32).
- iv. 10. —πεσ. ad αιωνων with 32 53 93 109 121 215 (homoioteleuton).
- viii. 7. της γης (pro των δενδρων) with B* 10 14 30 32 33 68 97.
- xii. 1. —η (ante σεληνη) with 1 and quite a few, but not the family group.
- xvii. 15. +και η γυνη (ante οὗ) with E* 4 and 31 32 48-64 67 74 106 109*gr* 120 171 174 182 aeth.
- xix. 7. αυτου (pro αυτω) with 1, the 4 group and some others.
- xx. 5. Here the whole verse is omitted by the scribe in the first place (with ℵ 2. 7. 8. 9. etc. etc.), but inserted by the first hand in the margin, with the important various reading ανθρωπων (pro νεκρων) found only in B 32 34 74 113 156 165 188 189.

The various combinations, sometimes with ℵ, or B, or P etc. etc., are here, as usual, emphasized. Sometimes it is quite in agreement with the group B 2. 4. 6. 9. etc., as at iv. 8 αγιος novies. Although frequently with B and group, it is the only MS. so far which follows the spelling of B at vii. 6 μαvαση. There is a strong affinity for 31 in many minor passages, sometimes alone, sometimes with 2 and 6; sometimes with 17 and 31; and at xxii. 8 with ℵ, 4. 17 and 31 etc. (see also xxii. 20); and occasionally is found in conjunction with 1. At xxii. 18 with AB, the 4 group and 31 etc.

Note now 48, showing up the group 4, 20, 31, 32, 48 etc., all Arethas or purest B family, also 64 and 74.

GROUP 21-28-73-79-80-(99-100)-103-112-135-138-139-(170)-(191-220-221).

Apoc. 21. Romae Vall. D. 20. [Scr. 21. Greg. 21, new 2014. Sod. $A\nu^{51}$]. Collated in 1901. Apoc. 21.

This codex (of Apoc. alone) is a late paper one of about XIV. cent., but well written, with commentary of Andreas, on 93 folios. Its chief interest lies in its very close relationship to Apoc. 28, with which (besides agreeing very fully throughout in connection with other MSS.), it stands alone no less than 81 times in the xvi chapters available for comparison. Apoc. 28 closes at xvii. 5. Apoc. 21 has the leaves containing xvii. 5 to xix. 7 misplaced, f°. 70^a should follow f°. 61^a and f°. 62^a should follow f°. 77^B, and f°. 78^B should follow f°. 69^B. Yet this does not prove that 21 and 28 were copied one from the other. From further internal evidence it appears on the contrary that they were derived from a common original.† Apoc. 21 has no less than 138 unique readings so far, besides some 26 peculiarities of spelling or errors.‡ It should be easy to identify the original from such striking peculiarities as occur at xi. 5, 8 ; xii. 11 etc. etc. It is interesting to observe that the very first various reading at xix. 8 after the break, confirms that the end of Apoc. 21 was copied from the same exemplar and not finished from another, as it is immediately found in agreement with 12, 17, 18, and with the same groups as before.

In Apoc. 21 iota subscript is found throughout, and is almost constant, including ᾁδου and its forms, κᾀγω etc., but not invariably. Iota postscript never occurs, except once, in most peculiar form, at xxi. 19 χαλκηιδων.

The usual contractions are present, except $\overline{\pi\rho o\sigma}$ for πατρος, instead of the usual $\pi\overline{\rho\sigma}$, at iii. 5 and 21. θεος and cases are found in full at vii. 3 ; xi. 16, 17, 19 ; xiv. 7, 19 ; xv. 3, 8 ; xvi. 9, 11, 21 ; xvii. 17 ; xix. 5, 9, 13 ; xxi. 3, 7, 11 ; xxii. 5, 18, 19. Also χριστου i. 9 (fin.). πνευματος xviii. 2. κυριε vii. 14. ανθρωπος and cases iv. 7 ; ix. 10 ; xi. 13. κυριων xvii. 14 ; xix. 16. ἐσταυρωθη is contracted at xi. 8.

The MS. has both κεφ. and λογ., κεφ. α = λογ. α beginning at i. 4. N.B. κεφ. νθ is at xix. 17. και and many forms are as in the early type cast for printing in the XVI[th] century, but psi is very rectangular, and sigma very frequently written c. This is interesting in such a late MS., where all known contractions ancient and modern are used, and every conceivable form of beta, nu, etc. For all its innocent appearance and form, however, it has very many ancient and interesting forms and readings. We can trace the influence of all the old uncials, as shown further on. Note, concerning ℵ, iv. 3 ; v. 13 ; xi. 14 ; xii. 5 ; xiii. 10 ; xv. 7 ; xvi. 19 ; xvii. 1 ; xix. 9, 20 ; xxii. 8, 20. Also, concerning C, iii. 5 ; xiii. 15 ; xiv. 11 etc. Concerning A, iv. 3 ; vi. 16 ; xi. 18 ; xiii. 5 ; xxi. 4, 7 ; xxii. 16, 21 etc. Concerning P, ii. 18, 24 ; vi. 16 ; xix. 7, 9, 10 ; xxi. 4, 16, 21 etc. Concerning B*, viii. 3 ; xv. 7 ; xxi. 21. ℵCAP alone with 21 at xiv. 1.

Scrivener states that 28 used the greek numerals throughout the codex. This is not borne out by his collation. Apoc. 21 in the same way only used them occasionally.

See below for list of unique readings.

Family is now 21-28-73-79-80-99-100-103-112-135-138-139-170-191-(220)-221.

The following were unique when 21 was collated. The MS. 73 is evidently its counterpart. I have indicated what support is given by fam. 21 as a whole and when only some members support 21. This will give a fair idea of the whole situation.

† See a much more elaborate reading of 28 at vii. 14 ; viii. 12. The climax is reached at vii. 6, where 21 omits εκ φυλης νεφθαλειμ ιβ χιλ. and 28 writes it twice !

‡ Of these, 70 and 17 respectively occur in the first xvi chapters, and do not include iii. 20 q.v.

18. επιθηση επ αυτα επιθηση So 73-79-139.
επ αυτω ο θεος So the family.
19. εφελη Alone.

This 21 recension is old and important, linking up the uncials with *syr*S and sah.

We find the family alone with ℵ and *syr*S at xx. 8. +παντα (post πλανησαι),

We do not propose to analyse further at this place.

This large 21 group is Syriac in the main, probably of polyglot ancestry, including Coptic or Egyptian influence.

Apoc. 22 (Ac. 166. P. 204). Romae Vall. B. 86. [Scr. 22. Greg. 22, new 632. Sod. α 1473]. Collated in 1902. Apoc. 22.

This is a clean and very interesting little ms. (with commentary) closely conforming to the textus receptus, while recording all the best readings of the uncial and cursive combined groups, though showing a frequent but not constant affinity for B and his cursive group in some places. It contains comparatively few unique readings, but these are of a character which rather indicate that the ms. belongs to a new archetype so far unknown to us, and we shall watch with interest for its relatives. Somewhat related to 251, but connection is obscure.

This ms. as a whole (Act 166. Paul 204) is by different hands, see Gregory, xii–xiv. cent. I have collated from photographs of the Apoc., and have not seen the whole ms. Gregory indicates in somewhat restrained terms (vol. iii. p. 636) xii–xiii. cent. for the Apoc. I should place it in the xi[th]. But whatever the date of the ms. itself in the Apoc., it is an early cursive copy of an important archetype. It is one of the few which gives ἰω̃' several times in the text compendio for ιωαννης (i. 1, 4, 9; xxii. 8). While there is seen survival of a good trace of ℵ at:

i. 13. μασθοις
ii. 20. πολυ (pro ολιγα)
vi. 11. ερεθη
13. επι (pro εις) ℵ 47 56 113 130 200 al. pc.
xv. 3. βασιλευ (—ο)* ℵ* 18 40 56 f. 119 130 al. pc.
xvi. 19. +του (ante δουναι) ά διορθωτ ℵ f. 21. 47 Prim.? syr?
xvii. 17. αυτου (pro αυτων prim.)* ℵ*. No others.
xxi. 4. —ο (ante θανατος) ℵ 18. f. 38 47 143 200 al. pc.
5. πιστοι και αληθινοι εισι (A) (ℵ) 18. f. 38 111 143 146 200 al. pc.

the fact remains, that with at least three hands correcting the ms., it is as near the standard text of the x[th]–xiv[th] centuries as we could wish to find, while being derived from a strong, ancient and independent parent. If we trace the places where our ms. agrees with minority groups (i. 11, 16; ii. 18, 22, 23, 24; iii. 17; iv. 3, 4, 6; v. 6, 11, 13, 14; vi. 11, 14; vii. 1; viii. 12; ix. 11, 20; x. 6; xii. 3, 11; xiii. 12; xiv. 8, 14; xv. 3, 4; xvii. 3; xvii. 2, 5; xix. 2, 3, 18; xxii. 1, 2) we find no particular consistency, and no familiar sister groupings, as we find in many other mss., and all the indications point to this ms. as a good independent mediæval witness to the true traditional text, derived from a new prototype. In the above list, and with ℵ in the previous list, we find the ms. several times with 12 and a small group. Besides this we find it alone with 12 143 f. 178 (latt) at iii. 3 ποια ωρα, and probably at ii. 13, where a space of about 20 letters, now 'in rasura' probably contained +ο πιστος ο μαρτυς ο πιστος with 12. The scribe of 22 was his own διορθωτης, but in some cases it is impossible to distinguish whether he himself corrected his text or not. Where it is certain, I have frequently indicated 'ά διορθωτ.' The three hands *, , and  were all more or less contemporaneous.† The second hand (when not the διορθωτης) was probably the hand which supplied the commentary. As proof of this note the following: At xix. 1–6, foot of page, there is a lacuna, supplied by the 'commentary hand.' At xix. 3 he omits αυτης with 1-12-152-179-208 47 111 f. 114 f. 119 and but few others. At x. 6 the second hand omits των αιωνων with only 1-12-152-179-208, 47 81 102 204 in support. Again, at xix. 6 the commentary hand omits ως prim. with 1. 12. a few others and *gig Prim. syr*S. At any rate both first and second hands

*οτι καθως (with certain cursives), *οτι καθιω B 14-92 boh arm 2,
οτι καθημαι ℵCAPE and many cursives, had access to the immediate parent MS. At xxii. 2 we notice agreement with Apoc. 1 and but few others (—τον ante καρπον).

There is no occurrence of iota postscript, and but two cases of iota subscript, at i. 13 υἱῷ and iii. 18 περιβαλῃ.

πνευματα	is written	in full	at				iii. 1; xvi. 13, 14.

Elsewhere the abbreviations are unusually consistent. There are practically no cases of ν εφελκ.

We now come to the few unique readings, which we refer to at length, in order to help us trace the genealogy of the MS. later, if possible.

See 47 now in this group, including much of 22, showing 22 also had access to the parent MSS. Quite a few of 22's unique readings are supported by 47 (as noted above).

vii. 1 πνευση 22 marked by me with a query has the support of ℵ 40 47 130 etc., and doubtless was the reading of this third hand.

Adhesion to different groupings of the 1 family, bears testimony probably to the fundamental readings of this family before group 1-152-179-208, group 46, group 62 etc. went apart.

Fundamentals belonging to ℵ and latins and syriacs also seem to merit attention.

Group 13-23-55-159^{sup}-(226).

Apoc. 23 (Ev. 367. Ac. 146. P. 182). Laur. conv. Soppr. 53, at Florence. [Scr. 23. Greg. 23, new 367. Sod. δ 400]. Collated 1904. Apoc. 23.

This number is substituted by Gregory for Scholz's 23 (=Ev. 38) which does not contain the Apoc. This MS. is Scrivener's 86, but we prefer Gregory's No., as 23 would otherwise be empty, and there is confusion around 86 which number we leave open.

This is a tall fine copy at Florence, about 10 × 7 inches, forming part of the whole N.T. (Ev. 367. Ac. 146. P. 182. Apoc. 23), 33 lines to a page, reminding one somewhat of Evan. 33 in general appearance. Itacisms are very rare (notice, however, παρδαλι with ℵA and 7 in Ap. xiii. 2) and ν εφελκ. is hardly ever met with; a case of homoioteleuton once xvii. 6. It appears to be a fair specimen of a regular xivth century MS., written by an educated churchman in a good large hand (which does not prevent a bad slip on his part of Ἀντεῖπεν for Ἀντείπας) and is dated 1331 according to Gregory, and written on paper. I have collated from photographs, and therefore cannot verify this. He says "Insunt nonnulla liturgica," but this is incorrect, as between some of the earlier chapters of the Apoc., and elsewhere, as at iii. 6/7 occur scholia, written continuously in the text, but distinguished by the word σχδʹ at the beginning of each addition. Iota subscript. is found throughout, some few omitted, and but a few added wrongly. The usual contractions are present, though πνευματα, πνευματων are sometimes found in full. This MS. belongs to a well defined but small family as a whole, and has a considerable leaning to B and its cursive group (see xx. 4 for a close alliance); yet it exhibits many eclectic readings, and quite a number of solecisms. There is further a good trace of ℵ from time to time. Notice:

ii. 17. εκ (pro απο) with ℵ 36 55* 56 59 91 124 143 169-216.

xviii. 6. —και sec. ℵ and 23 alone with $boh^{4}/_{12}$.
xxi. 4. —ο (ante θανατος) ℵ 18. 22 47 and a few.

There is a trace of C at xi. 6 (αν).

There is a trace of P at iv. 8.

There is a trace of A at v. 4, vii. 14, and occasionally.

At xvi. 17 and xviii. 11 the double recension here present has led to stupid conflations: απο του ουρανου του ναου with which 55 agrees. See another at xii. 18 επι το χειλος της θαλασσης επι την αμμον.

Among the rarer readings, note:

xxi. 20. χρυσοπρασινος with 9 13 (16) 27 39 (hiat 55) 102 113 150sup 180 *Tyc*1/2.

It is easily seen from the above that the chief friends of our MS. are Apoc. 13 and 55, the former a late MS. containing the whole N.T., and they are evidently both derived from much the same archetype. Also the græco-latin family 7.

Of places agreeing in toto with t.r. compare vii. 12. It is curious that the order in this verse is left unchanged by all MSS. It must be more than a coincidence, and goes some distance to prove that scribes changed very little of their own accord and only when they had some MS. authority.

The new readings follow. A few are quite interesting:

Between viii. 6/7 at λογ. η̄, are two lines of κεφαλαια in the text:

"περι των ζ αγγελων ὧν του πρωτου σαλπισαντος· χαλαζα
"και πυρ και αιμα επι της γης φερεται."

There are besides some scholia at top and foot of some pages by first hand, and a few marginal scholia by a later hand, as at v. 8 etc. None of any textual importance. The textual addition xvi. 20/21 by 13-23-55 was evidently considered part of the text by all these scribes.

13-23-55 are one family type close to 9-27-75.

The extraordinarily eclectic 226 (extant only up to ix. 15), which is at Athos, shares many of 23's unique readings unsupported even by 55.

Trilingual sympathy.

P.S.—See under 104 the way its Latin relationship comes out with the large Græco-latin group 7-16-39-45-69-102-104 etc. Its original text has *tri*lingual sympathies of a pronounced type. For Syriac see xv. 4 +συ ει 23. 55. 59 and Syr. only. For Coptic see ix. 5 δάκη.

GROUP 8-24-140.

Apoc. 24 (Act. 160. Paul 193). Romæ Vat. gr. 2062 olim Basil. 101. [Scr. 24, Greg. 24, new 627. Sod. α 53]. Apoc. 24.

Gregory says sæc. X (al. XI), but I should place the Apoc. not earlier than XI, and probably XII.

There are a couple of leaves missing, containing iii. 20–iv. 10.

Iota post- or subscript never occurs. The breathings are both square and round, the MS. belonging to the real transition stage in this respect. The usual contractions obtain, yet we find πνευματων, πνευματα, κυριε, πνευματι in full (i. 4 ; v. 6 ; vii. 14 ; xxi. 10), and frequently θεος, θεω.

It is a close sister to Apoc. 8, but was not copied from it, and most probably derived direct from an uncial. There is internal evidence for this in the way the words are joined, and ν εφελκ. is almost constant. Sometimes it seems very tiresome to record all these, yet it is not without importance. I will cite an interesting instance. See at xv. 4 our MS. reads αγιος (pro οσιος) and παντες (pro παντα τα εθνη) both with B and his cursive group, yet in the same verse, ἥξουσιν, with the superfluous ν, with ℵCAP and a few cursives. It seems therefore clear that such MSS. as Apoc. 24 were derived from uncial sources, together with other followers of B, although the comparatively late B has influenced them so largely.

Again, it is quite clear that B (and the group following him) tried to improve the text so that it should run more smoothly. A most curious case occurs at xvi. 7, where the difficult expression "καὶ ἤκουσα τοῦ θυσιαστηρίου λέγοντος," without ἀγγέλου or φωνῆς, occurs. B supplies ἐκ, which, through Apoc. 1, has found its way into the textus receptus, [R.V. correctly omits]; but in this instance B is forsaken by practically all his followers. The more difficult (and doubtless the correct) text, obtaining and prevailing in the copies, which elsewhere were immensely and sometimes almost uniformly influenced by the glosses of B. It is most important to note and weigh this in determining the (sometimes small) weight we are to allow B, although supported by a host of cursives. The ἄλλου ἐκ seems to have come in through Erasmus, as so far there is no Greek authority for it.

The stops, as in X., XI. and XII. cent. MSS., are rather incorrect. The comma is freely used, and the semicolon, note of interrogation, frequently used for the comma. Observe 146 at work in a similar way. The true semicolon of interrogation, however, dates from the XI[th] century, and is found in my MSS. 36 84 92 129 146 and 169. In 90 it does not signify an interrogation. Punctuation. Semicolon of interrogation.

This is a very different MS. from the last one (23) and has but few peculiarities, except those derived with Apoc. 8 from its direct archetype.

There are only three real solecisms, two of these towards the end of the book, viz.:

xviii. 10.	—η πολις η μεγαλη βαβυλων	both genuine family readings
xix. 19.	εν τω ιππω (pro επι του ιππου)	confirmed by 140,

the other at iii. 7 ο ανοιγων και ου κλεισει αυτην . ει μη ο ανοιγων . και ουδεις ανοιξει, besides a few peculiarities of spelling, etc., the most important of which is at xxii. 15 κοινες (pro κυνες) = 140. The others are such as: iii. 14 κτησεως, iii. 18 ινα εγχρηση, x. 5 —ὁ, xiv. 11 τω θηριω, xiv. 16 την νεφελη, xviii. 24 εσφαγμενον, xix. 13 περιβεβλημμενος, xxi. 6 τω (pro το sec.), the remainder (a few) pure errors (ix. 13, 15 ; xi. 2 ; xvi. 19 etc.).

We must next consider the relationship of this MS. to Apoc. 8. We have already said that it was not copied from 8. Nor was 8 copied from 24, see ii. 27/28 Apoc. 24* —μου και δωσω αυτω τον αστερα τον, which is contained in Apoc. 8. Yet they are very close sisters, and while 8, (according to Scrivener's collation), sometimes departs somewhat radically from 24 for a few verses at a time, they have so many joint peculiarities, that it is beyond any peradventure that the same direct parent is responsible for these readings. As to 140 it is far more independent. There follows a list of the places where 8 and 24 are together against the rest:

8 and 24.

Inscription: Ιωαννου αποκαλυψις (with 2. 20. 93. 95).

i. 11. φιλαδελφους [non 140].
14. —λευκον [non 140].
ibid. +και (ante ως χιων) [non 140].

N.B.—A new hand begins in 140 at i. 20 and therefore evidently began to copy from quite a different MS.

ii. 10. εξητε So 140.
27. +α (ante ως prim.) So 140.
v. 9. φυλακης (pro φυλης) N.B. So 140.
x. 1. εκ (pro επι) So 140.
2. της θαλασσης in conjunction with [την γην] So 140 and a few.
xi. 11. —ζωης εκ του N.B. So 140.
18. +του (ante κριθηναι) N.B. So 140.
xiii. 1. επι της κεφαλης So 140.
8. ῶ (pro ὧν) So 140.
xvii. 1. πορνειας N.B. So 140.
xviii. 1. γυνη (pro γη) N.B. So 140. (with 16*).
xix. 14. των ουρανων (pro εν τω ουρανω) So 140. (So now 114; and cf. 36 61 *gig Iren. syr*S).
xx. 8. γωδ (pro γωγ) et μαγωδ N.B. (So 140), besides of course a considerable number of places, where a few other codices add their support. A notable place where they diverge radically is at xix. 1 λεγοντων 24 etc., λεγουσαν 8 teste Mill, but this must be wrong; 8 not joining in the common variation immediately following of του θεου (pro κυριω τω θεω). We may say then, that, generally speaking, except for these few vagaries with 8, Apoc. 24 conforms very fully to the text. rec. for an early cursive. There are some marginal observations and liturgical notes by several late hands, difficult to read, and of no importance. There are here and there, but not consistently, other long marginal scholia by an early and very neat hand, also of no particular importance; yet in his commentary at ii. 20 he shows knowledge of the reading λεγουσα, and at v. 8 of κιθαρας, and at v. 10 of βασιλευσομεν. In fact it gives a good idea of how these commentary readings came into the textus receptus. For the rest, ℵ's influence is not very apparent, ℵ and 24 being practically never in accord alone, and seldom in the small groups, but frequently at times in the larger groups. A's single influence is exhibited occasionally, that of B and cursive group much more often, and our MS. not infrequently follows AB and a large cursive group against the other uncials. At xvii. 4, however, it follows B. This is an interesting test-passage, where the variation from t.r. of και τα ακαθαρτα της πορνειας read by both AB, falls into two well-defined groups, A and followers continuing with αυτης, while B and company read της γης, in numbers the groups being about equal.

The influence of ℵ, except in combination, is chiefly a survival of ancient forms of spelling. Very occasionally a peculiarity of 12, 16, 28, 87 finds the adherence of 24. Perhaps the archetype of 24 is responsible for the various reading at xiv. 16, our MS. reading there την νεφελη.

From the agreement in the simple inscription of 2, 20, 93 and 95 we would expect to find these MSS. more in accord with our MS. than others, yet this is hardly the case.

Anyway we have here two MSS., 8 and 24, so close together, that it will be easy to add to the group, if others turn up in the course of this investigation, which seems far from unlikely. So far only 140 has appeared, which is, however, more bold and independent.

Apoc. 25 (Evan. 149. Ac. 77. P. 88) = Vat. Pal. gr. 171. [Scr. 25. Greg. 25, new 149. Sod. δ 503]. Collated in 1904 from photographs. Apoc. 25.

A late MS. of the whole N.T. (Greg. xv. Birch XIV.) of about 1400 probably, of which some use was made by Birch and Scholz, but their collations are too imperfect even to refer to. This is clearly a sister MS. of Apoc. 94 (= Evan. 201, Ac. 91, P. 104), dated 1357, and collated by Scrivener; it came from Florence, and may have been copied at about the same time from the same original. This original, though with a large leaning to B and group, preserved some curious readings (see below), but owing to the great number of purely "cursive" readings in our MS., must have been far removed from the archetype which engendered them.

The MS. under review has hardly been retouched at all. None of 94's vagaries are changed. There is absolutely no trace of iota post. or sub-script, (not even with αδης and ζωον), which is unusual in so late a MS., where the absence of ν εφελκ. is rather evidence against its having been directly copied from an uncial. The comma is freely used, and occasionally looks like the use of iota postscript, but there is no real trace of it. The usual contractions are present, ȹ for φρ being the only one in the least unusual. We notice, in full,

iv. 5, xvi. 14 πνευματα, xviii. 2 πνευματος, xxii. 6 πνευματων,
xvi. 18 ανθρωποι, xvi. 21 ανθρωπους,
vii. 14 κυριε, xvii. 14 κυριος κυριων,
x. 6, xi. 12 ουρανον, x. 8 ουρανου, xii. 3, xiii. 6, xv. 1 ουρανω.

The inscription of the MS., coinciding with that of 94 gives us an indication of what we may expect from collation. Already in the first chapter it falls in with 94 at once, which is one of the other members of this group: 25-58-70-78-84-94-(207); the second hand of 19 is also seen to be of this family. Although the MS. is innocent and late looking, we begin to connect with curious readings already in the second chapter, ii. 5 ὅθεν (pro ποθεν) with fam 62 and this fam 25, but here is a complete list.

Apoc. 25 alone.

i. 8. +και (ante ο παντοκρατωρ) family and 178-240.

iii. 1. —του θεου the family alone.

2. —πεπληρωμενα the family alone.

iv. 1. σε (pro σοι) the fam. and f. 46, 164.

7. το πρωτον το ζωον the family.

v. 3. κατω (pro ουδε υποκατω της γης) the family.

ix. 16. των ιππων (pro του ιππικου) the family and 113 sah aeth.

xi. 4. οἱ (pro αἱ sec.) the family.

14 init. +και the family.

xii. 14. πεσηται the family, and 69 [contra fam].

xiii. 6. κατοικουντας the fam. and 121 136 147 184.

xiv. 1. τεσσαρακοντεσσαρες the fam., and 188 [contra fam].

9. αλλος αγγελος τριτος ηκολουθησεν (—και) the family.

13. φωνην the fam. and some others.

23. —ησαν the family and boh aeth.
xix. 3. —ο the family only.
xix. 13. +πορφυρουν (post ιματιον) the fam. plus fam. 61.
xx. 3. τελεσθωσι the family plus 40 47 111 f. 119 176 206.
4. εδοθη κριμα the fam. . . πεπελεκημενων . . the fam. plus 130 149 167 176-206 . . προσεκυνουν the family . . τας χειρας the fam. plus *syr*S.
8. —τα prim. the family.
14. —ὁ prim. the family.
xxi. 10. —απο του θεου the family plus 92 and boh[D] ps-Ambr. Cass.
11. τιμιω the fam. and 141 *latt syr*S.
13. και απο δυσμων . . και απο βορρα . . και απο νοτου the family and 40 91.
xxii. 16. η ριζα δᾱδ και το γενος the family and 219.

Note further agreement of fam. 25 in xii. 7 κατα with t.r. against all the rest μετα, and at x. 2 της θαλασσης but την γην.

An analysis of the above shows affiliation with fam 61 and 40-210, occasionally with f. 62, and with some Latins; more occasionally with Syriac.

The scribe is evidently most faithful, and does not indulge in any license apart from family traditions except as below, and for all these small changes (except two) 25 is found later to have the countenance of 78. Evidently 25 and 78 derive from the same exemplar.

iii. 8. δυνατα (pro δυναται) errore.
vi. 3. οτι (pro οτε) with 78 and Compl.
ix. 4. χοντον (pro χορτον) with 78 and 202.
5. —αυτων ως βασανισμος (ex homoiot.) with 78.
xvi. 21. αὐτὴ sic (pro αυτης) with 78 and 51. (αὐτη 58 and others).
xviii. 6. —τα (ante εργα)
21. ισχυρον (pro ισχυρος) So 78 and 40-210 69 130? 146-155 152.
xx. 8. γων (pro γωγ) So 78 and 39[contra fam].
xxi. 14. δωδεκα θεμελιους So 78.
20. βυρηλλος So 78. Not 58.
22. αυτω (pro αυτη) So 78. Not 58.
xxii. 6. απεστειλλε So 78. Not 58.

Here again we find a trace of 40-210, and of 69 once and 39 once, on each occasion against the rest of this Græco-latin family.

Of other combinations of interest, notice the following:

i. 11. —και (post εφεσον)
20. +ταυτα εισιν (post χρυσας)
ii. 5. ὅθεν (pro πόθεν)
vii. 1. +και (ante κρατουντας) viii. 7. ο χορτος ο χλωρος
ix. 15. ετοιμασμενοι xiii. 7. +εξουσια (post εδοθη αυτω prim.) xviii. 12. αργυριου
13. θυμιαματων
xx. 14. —ουτος εστιν ο δευτερος θανατος
xxi. 5. —οτι
6. —της ζωης
12. του (pro των υιων).

To sum up, this 25 is a very interesting MS. of so late a date. It will never do to neglect MSS. because of late date. Here we have a very curious example of a text very largely conforming to the textus receptus, and while having comparatively few variations, yet has some singular readings alone with its group, which are numerous, curious, and almost unaccountable. It is partly of the B type. Yet it often sides with A almost alone, and at xviii. 21 takes us behind ℵ itself, and almost explains this reading.

See under the other MSS. of the group for a further appreciation of its text.

Apoc. 30. Apoc. 30 (Ac. 69. P. 74). Wolfenbüttel. Guelph. 16. 7 Aug. [Scr. 30. Greg. 30, new 429. Sod. α 398 and α 1471].

This MS. I have only collated after No. 106. Knittel had collated it in 1773, and Matthaei reproduced the readings given by him. I could not, however, rest satisfied with these. At length, in July 1908, I have been able to pay a visit to Wolfenbüttel and recollate the MS. As such things go, Knittel's collation is found to be distinctly good, but he has omitted and neglected a fair number of important readings, some of them almost or quite unique. This MS. has considerable importance for the history of the text. It is one of our very oldest paper MSS., and must date about 1300. The paper is of very long fibre, and where the glaze has been scratched off, it renders the paper brittle and the original writing sometimes impossible to recover. I have been helped in this, however, by the sister MS. 98, for they are practically one, 30-98. Another MS. 29 comes close to it, but not nearly as close as 98. Several of 98's unique readings are now borne witness to by 30. (Now see my MS. 129 as well).

The first thing to rivet our attention is the very unusual reading—unique among Greek MSS. with 98—of θαλασσαν for ἀβυσσου in xx. 3. This is the reading of the Crawford Syriac, although at xi. 7 Apoc. 30 does not read thus. This reading was duly recorded by Knittel (it is since found in 113 and 218). The question is therefore what further affinity has Apoc. 30 with the oldest Syriac. The answer must be: in a mass of small things, hitherto hidden, for the MS. has been severely revised on the B type and the cursive group of the Arethas recension, and the old stem, though underlying all, is obscured. The interesting part is, however, that I believe only one MS. stood between Apoc. 30 and its older græco-syriac parent. In other words, the scribe who gave us the text of 30, was copying a MS. itself revised for the first time, and not so drastically but that we can from place to place pick up the threads and establish the basis from which it sprung. For, conform as he would to B and Arethas, he cannot completely cover his tracks. Thus we have κερους alone with ℵC, and a number of other minutiæ which we will take up immediately.

By circumstantial and circumlocutory evidence we arrive at the same conclusion for this MS. as for others, that it was not derived from any one version, but that its various sympathies trace back to a trilingual in the earliest ages of the text (see xvii. 11, xix. 3 init., xx. 3, xxii. 2 etc.).

It has no particular importance as a critical document, but it has every importance as concerns the true history of the text. So do not let us neglect paper documents in future [see in this connection the paper MS. at Paris, No. 123 of the important fam. 119].

We are perhaps fortunate in not having gone over Apoc. 30 in its proper place, for although Scrivener had collated the sisters 29 and 98 (for these collations I am not responsible) and their evidence was available, yet we now have over seventy intervening MSS. to help us, which we could not then have used.

Note the inscription and that of 102, and Latin sympathy connected with this Syriac base.

I mark the changes, other than those by the first hand, as , although certainly two revisers were at work, one living within 100 years of the scribe, and the other of XVI[th] century. But the matter has too little importance to differentiate between them. The paper is re-inforced by parchment slips on the inside. From f°. 202 to the end, the XVI[th] cent. hand has restored a few words or letters of the text at the beginning and end of lines, but they are no doubt the original readings. Knittel misread one (xxii. 21), and missed two that were covered by the parchment. Thus at xx. 14 the ἡ before λιμνη is covered by the parchment. The elder second hand often changes smooth breathings to rough, especially with αυτος, yet xviii. 7 he leaves αὑτην (for ἑαυτην). There is no iota post. or sub. by the scribe, but the second hand has added a good many iotas subscript. The MS. has been so thoroughly revised on B, that we read αββααδδων with B, while 29 reads αββαδων and 98 αββαιαδων. So also xii. 5 αρενα with B 104, though elsewhere αρρενα. And at xviii. 13 we find —και οινον even, with the B tribe.

The first recognition of the Syriac tendency is found at i. 20 —τας prim. with 18. 29-98. 40-210 51. 61. 90. 93. 95. 100 and a few others. The second hand supplies it. At the outset Knittel does not differentiate between 1st and 2nd hand alterations, but later on he does.

At vi. 12 we notice —ειδον with almost exactly the same group.

We find the MS. with 98 as follows:

i. 17. —ο ante εσχατος with 98 (and also 143 152*).
iii. 5. εκ του βιβλου (om. Knittel) with 98 and 102 113 120 and 200.
ix. 7. . . . ϕ* a letter illeg. before this symbol = ωσπερ? of 98 (pro ως sec.).
Possibly original had ὡς. (In x. 7. 10 we find the same ϕ apparently for ὡς).
ix. 11. εχων (pro εχει) 98 and 40-210 222 and h (om. Knittel).
14. ανεμους (pro αγγελους) So 98. So clearly was it in the copy before the scribe of 30 that he began to write αγ and changed to αν.
15. ανεμοι (pro αγγελοι) So 98.
x. 2. το δε ευωνυμον So 98 and 119-144.
xi. 9. —και τα πτωματα αυτων usque ad fin. vers. So 98.
xii. 3. δωδεκα (pro δεκα) So 98, 204 (and 81*).
10. αυτον (pro αυτων)* So 98, 102, 124 and 140.
15. ποταμοφορήση τὸν ποιηση sic (om. Knit., but so 98).
xiii. 3. εσφραγμενην*? So 98 (and 81).
12. ω (pro οὗ)*? So 98.
xiv. 9. ὅτι (pro εἰ τις) So 98 (cf. copt).
14. +ὁ (ante εχων) Om. Knittel (but so 98).
xv. 8. εγενηθη (pro εγεμισθη) 98 = εγενετος vid.
xvi. 15. [ασχημοσυνην] So 98. But 29 = αισχυνην.
xvii. 11. —εστι *tert. 98 *and syr*S boh.
12. ουπω rescript  98 omits.
xviii. 20. εκρινε (—ο θεος) So 98.
xix. 3 init. —και So 98 *and syr*S.
(Ap. 30 has και (covered up by the parchment-strengthening on inner side) but plainly visible. I do not think by original scribe. Knittel says minus και, but he did not lift up the parchment).
xx. 3. θαλασσαν (pro αβυσσον) 98 113 218 *and syr*S.
6. και μετα ταυτα (pro μετ' αυτου) So 98.
xxii. 2. +και (ante κατα) So 98 *and syr*S.
12. θυμός (pro μισθος) So 98.
18. επιθη επ αυτω, επιθησαι (Malè Knittel επιθησει) So 98 only.

At xi. 18, 98 reads εθνων for νεκρων with f. 38. f. 61. 74 124* 146 200. Not so 30, but the scribe avoided the mistake, for there are signs that he first wrote εθ, then suppressed theta for kappa, and added ν at the beginning.

xvi. 10. [εσκοτωμενη] Contra 39. 72. 98. 102. etc.
xviii. 4. [συγκοινωνησητε] Contra 98 etc.
xx. 11. [ὁ ουρανος] Contra 21. 39. 73. 98. 113. 143, all —ὁ.

xxi. 13. και απο νοτου...και απο βορρα...και απο δυσμων So 98 and 113 122 214 arab.
23. φαινωσι* So 210; Contra 98 φαινοι.
xxii. 6. —δειξαι τοις δουλοις αυτου* only supplied by 4th hand in margin, while 98 transfers the clause to the end of the verse.

Alone with 29 and with 29-98.

ii. 2. —και τον κοπον σου 29-98.
vii. 13. ὅτι (pro οὗτοι) 29-98. (Om. Knittel).
ibid. ποτεν (pro ποθεν) At first was probably ποτε with 29.
xii. 15. —υδωρ 29-98.
xviii. 19. +τον (ante χουν) 29-98.
xx. 14. οὗτος ο δευτερος εστιν (—θανατος) 29 (98 differs).
xxi. 22. ειχον (pro ειδον) (ειχεν 29-98), plus a few other places at iv. 6; vii. 4; xii. 12; xiii. 2 fin.; xviii. 5, 22; xix. 18; xx. 6 init.

Observe also the following and the support:

The above is recorded not from a spirit of hypercriticism, but chiefly because the MS. is not in very good condition, and may become worse. The remarks are offered merely as a matter of record.

My warm thanks are due to Herr Oberbibliothekar Milschaek and to his able assistant for much courtesy and goodwill.

The Apoc. is at the end of the vol., f^os^. 186-204, in a different and smaller hand from the rest of the book (1-51 Acta, 52-159 Paul, 159-182 minor epistles ending with Jude, 182/5 Misc. ending with some iambics, referred to by Knittel, in a semi-uncial writing).

There is no subscription to the Apoc.

The inscription is unusual and runs:

αποκαλυψις του αγιου ενδοξοτατου αποστολου και ευαγγελιστου παρθενου ηγαπημενου επιστηθιου ιωαννου του θεολογου, which is restored by Matthaei by inserting χριστου φιλου και μαθητου between ηγαπημενου and επιστηθιου, to read:

> αποκαλυψις του αγιου > ενδοξοτατου αποστολου > και ευαγγελιστου παρθενου > ηγαπημενου (χριστου φιλου > και μαθητου) επιστηθιου > ιωαννου του θεολογου

but this addition does not seem imperative.

Compare the late MS. Pantel. 110 at Athos (my 236).

And see my MS. 129 (now in the Morgan library) for another member of the group 29-30-98.

Apoc. 31. Apoc. 31. [xv]. Reproduced from Scrivener's collation in supplement to Codex Augiensis (letter c in Apoc.). [Scr. 31. Greg. 31, new 2016. Sod. α 1579].

Sister of 6 and 106 and 182 and 171-174.

Much sympathy also with 32; also with 74 in connection with and without 4. 6. 20. 32. 34. 40. 48. 64.

31 is an eclectic Arethas type on a very old base.

Note xiii. 13 εποιει alone with E* Hippolytus and bohairic.

The old base is confirmed by all family 114, reading with 6-31 at:

> xi. 19 —και φωναι
> and ix. 20 —τα (ante αργυρα) and 31 alone with fam 114 at xviii. 10 αυτων pro αυτης.

At xiii. 6 εν αρχαις pro εν τω ουρανω is found in 31. See for further remarks under 106 171-174 and 182 as to this quite interesting family.

SEMI-INDEPENDENT MS.

Apoc. 32 = Dresden. Reg A. 124 of the xv. cent., as Gregory says. [Scr. 32. Greg. 32, new 2017. Sod. α 1582]. Collated by Matthæi (t.). Collated afresh by me from photographs in 1904. (Scrivener twice numbers this, 32 and 111). Apoc. 32.

Scrivener's third edition gives :—

Apoc. 32 = Dresd. A. 95 or Matthæi's r.
Apoc. 50² } Apoc. 90 } = Dresd. A. 95 or Matthæi's r.
Apoc. 111 = Dresd. A. 124 or Matthæi's t.

Gregory numbers as follows :—

Apoc. 32 = Dresd. A. 124 or Matthæi's t.
Apoc. 90 = Dresd. A. 95 or Matthæi's r.
Apoc. 111 = Scrivener-Miller 149.

Scrivener-Miller fourth edition gives :—

Apoc. 32 = Dresd. A. 124 or Matthæi t, agreeing with Gregory.
Apoc. 50² = Matthæi r.
Apoc. 90 = Dresd. A. 95 or Matthæi r.
Apoc. 111 = Greg. 105 = Athens nat. 43.
But Scr.-Miller 105 = Greg. 104 = S. Sabæ 20.
But Greg. S. Sabæ 20 = Greg. 104 and 89 ! !
and Scr. 89 = Greg. 108
and Scr. 108 = Greg. 129.
And Greg. 105 or Athens 43 turns out to be Athens 94 (now our 111).

Is it not pitiful to multiply difficulties thus? I do not believe a S. Saba 20 MS. exists.

Although a late MS., Apoc. 32 is a very important one, as can be readily seen in the opening chapter, where we find the reading τον λογον (i. 3) so far alone with ℵB. (Add now 100 102 130 154 178 238 240).

Beginning at the detail, we find iota subscript almost constant, but not with ᾁδης, ζωον, καγω etc. Iota post. only occurs once at iii. 18 περιβάλῃι.

The letter gamma is very peculiar, extending far above the line, unlike capital gamma and more like small delta. Breathings and stops are consistent and fairly correct. We may notice οὖς for οὒς always.

The usual contractions are present everywhere except :

ἱερουσαλὴμ in full once at xxi. 2 (feature of Arethas codices).
οὐρανω in full at v. 3 +ανω (evidently to emphasize that this addition belongs there).
κυριος κυριων both in full xvii. 14.
κυριος contracted, κυριων in full except ων compendio.

The only noteworthy thing in this connection is that πνευμα and its cases are contracted in the same way whether plural or singular is intended, and it is not easy to know which the scribe intended (vide iv. 5, v. 6 etc.).

We find ναλινη not νελινη, but φυαλην for φιαλην almost constant.

There are many abbreviations in the middle of the line. επεσον is nearly always written επεσ), but is not to be confounded with επεσαν, which is either written in full or contracted differently, though of very rare occurrence.

The MS. is not very easy to read, and tiring to the eyes, but I have spared no pains to make the collation accurate. I may cite as an instance of the care necessary that we have here a new form of spelling such words as περιβεβλημμενη, εικοσσι, πεττωμενω, with a double consonant, which may be overlooked very easily. [The form περιβεβλημμενος occurs at xix. 13 in Apoc. 24].

ν εφελκ. is not very frequent, but hiatus occurs several times for want of it, even in places where no uncial support is forthcoming.

While singularly modern in some respects with its consistent ειδον, unusually small number of transpositions, lack of ν εφελκ., etc., it takes us roughly back to early spelling in σιρικον with all five uncials, and only very few cursives; also to the λεγοντες, xviii. 8, of ℵ* alone (with 159 164-166), going further than ℵ by reading βλεποντες for the subsequent λεγοντες.

In the ixth chapter there are a few corrections by a modern hand, which we have neglected.

There is a large element of C (CAP, CAB etc.), which is wanting in many cursives, yet it is distinctly of the closest B family, and looks like a key manuscript to help determine the origin of the B group. For, while, from certain peculiarities, showing it to be very close to B (e.g. i. 15; iii. 3, 15; iv. 8; viii. 7; xi. 13; xv. 8; xviii. 13; xx. 5, 12), we find it characteristically and systematically akin to CAB and CAP and a moderate number of cursives, occasionally reinforced by ℵ. This shows to my mind that the text of B's parents once approximated more closely to C and A, and subsequently drifted into rather an independent line. Therefore, although we cannot altogether neglect B and company in their separate testimony, such testimony is as nothing, compared to that where the support of C and A and P is forthcoming. A few of the rarer readings of ℵA are noteworthy, viz. iv. 11 ησαν pro εισι; x. 6 —και την θαλ. και τα εν αυτη (not, however, by its near relation 109).

Perhaps the cursive MS. most akin to this one is Apoc. 20, (q.v.), and it is noteworthy that from the forms ιδον etc. occurring in Apoc. 20 that that MS. had a near ancestor of considerable age. There is just a trace of ιδον in Apoc. 32 at vii. 1.

32 is a super-type of the Arethas group.

Our MS. 32 has plenty of pure cursive readings,—(note the omission of και τα χαλκα in ix. 20, so common among the cursives, but countenanced by no uncial, not even by B, and the origin of which is hard to trace)—, yet, at the very outset, as we have pointed out, ch. i. 3, it has the rare reading τον λογον. See how close ℵ and B* come in iv. 11 again. The semi-loose character of the MS. is perhaps best indicated by the reading at ix. 12 ετι δυο ουαι ουαι (supported so far only by Apoc. 14) instead of the true text ετι δυο ουαι; see also at xix. 10 ορα μη + ποιησης with few, and again exactly the same addition at xxii. 9 with a slightly different group.

It is with B and a good few cursives at iv. 8, reading αγιος nine times, which is clearly extra-scriptural and fancifully medi-æval. Yet it has in many directions a good, but mixed, text (although very eclectic), sometimes in the same verse reading with three or four different groups.

There are quite a number of solecisms (see full list below), chief of which is the—so far—unique κρειττονα (pro πλειονα) a pr. manu ex emend. in ii. 19.

The MS.'s affinity for some of the readings of ℵ is quite peculiar (see i. 3; iv. 2, 4, 9, 11; v. 5, 8; vi. 8; xi. 4; xvii. 11; xviii. 18; xxii. 8, 11), but noteworthy is vi. 2 fin. + και ενικησε, which is new (now found in 109*gr et arm*), whereas ℵ is the only other authority for ενικησεν (pro ινα νικηση). Both readings may be fanciful and extra-canonical.

Note a few of the small cursive groups, at iii. 4 with 6, 20, 31; v. 6 with 7, 21, 31; x. 8 with 4, 6, 20, 31 etc. Peculiarities like εδωθη have the countenance of 7, 12, 16, and sometimes others are found in Apoc. 1 (vi. 10 κρινης) etc.

In many places on the other hand, we support the printed text, e.g. xiv. 1 αρνιον with only P etc., and we are the only MS. authority so far for the a (instead of all the MSS.' αλφα) at xxii. 13.

Here are the new readings, including peculiarities of spelling :—

We now classify 4, 20, 31, 32 (supertype), 48, 64, 74 as pure Arethas texts, though only 4, 64 and 74 have the commentary. This text is not only largely identical with the original B recension, but incorporates the pure "cursive" readings like ix. 20 —και τα χαλκα, which is now shown to be an omission perpetuated by Arethas and not belonging to any other lost line of transmission except the "B" cursive MSS. Arethas lived about 930.

The group 6-31-106-(164-166)-171-174-(182) is also a supertype group of Arethas family.

The κρειττονα of Apoc. 32 at ii. 19, though only a variation of the χειρονα of Arethas, indicates exactly the opposite. The commentary in Apoc. 64 says "τα ἔσχατα πλείονα τῶν πρώτων εἰπὼν. ἐν ἔφηνεν. ὅτι προϊοντες τὴν ἐπὶ τὸ βέλτιον ἐπίδοσιν. διὰ τῆς ἐργασιάς τῶν θείων ἐντολῶν. ἀτρύτωι πόνωι ποιοῦνται."

And for very close sympathy for 32 add 109, the tricolumnar græco-armenian-italian MS. at Paris (about XI/XII).

The older element in 32 is now borne out by 143. Notice also the infiltration of 113 and Coptic into the combinations.

See No. 194.

Apoc. 33 (Evan. 218. Ac. 65. P. 57) = Vind. Cæs. gr. theol. 23. [Scr. 33. Greg. 33, new 218. Sod. δ 300].

Edited by Alter. His tomes, so unwieldy in arrangement, and with such horrible paper, may well be neglected. As regards accuracy we need say nothing, but that his work is useless for purposes of exact comparison. We collate anew therefore from photographs, supplied to me by Danesi of Rome, who made a special trip to Vienna for me for this and other MSS.

Gregory places this MS. in the XIIIth cent. It certainly is not older and seems rather later. It is bi-columnar, written in a very small hand, which either changes or has been gone over again after xvii. 15 (f°. 623 recto col. 1). It is very neat till we come to the mutilations, several columns having bodily disappeared. It is wanting as follows:

From	xiii. 5.	ἐξουσια πο...	to	xiv. 8.	...της πορνειας
,,	xv. 7.	ζωντος...	,,	xvii. 2.	...επορνευσαν
,,	xvii. 10.	ή...(κρισις)	,,	xix. 15.	...σιδηρα
,,	xx. 7.	λυθησεται...	,,	xxii. 21 fin, and lacks subscription.

Iota post- and subscript are absent throughout.

ν εφελκ. is very frequent, as is the diæresis over iota, both ancient signs, as well. Punctuation is not very good; sometimes e.g. there is a comma between εἶς and ἐκ τῶν.

The forms ιδον ιδες are consistently employed, and with the absence of iota post- or subscr. looks rather like direct copy from an uncial, especially as 33 is bi-columnar in short lines; it is to be remembered, however, that the uncials vary between ιδον and ειδον; yet there are many pure "cursive" readings to be found here. The MS. goes as far as οξιαν (ii. 12) with CAP alone, which is unusual, as may be seen from no other cursive accompaniment (except 104 113 174). On the other hand we have εἴρϊς for ἶρις (iv. 3) [ιερεις ℵA f. 21 200 226 aeth arm], sometimes φιλαδελφια, sometimes φιλαδελφεια, but followed there (i. 11) by λαοδικια.

The usual contractions are present, with these 16 exceptions: i. 4 πνευματων, iii. 1, v. 6 πνευματα, iii. 13 πνευμα, xi. 8 πνευματικως, xvii. 3 πνευματι, xviii. 2 πνευματος, iv. 2, xi. 19, xv. 1 ουρανω, xviii. 4 ουρανου, vii. 14 κυριε, xix. 16 κυριων, iv. 7 ανθρωπου, viii. 11 ανθρωπων, ix. 6 ανθρωποι all in full.

There is again a strong trace of B (i. 14, iii. 17 etc), cropping out in each MS. we examine, although in different places. The archetype of B must have been freely copied, and of much ecclesiastical reputation. Though of the B family, however, 33 has a large element of ℵ, so that we have frequent ℵB combinations. Among the cursives it sides with a certain small group again and again, but of these the græco-latin family 7 is perhaps most conspicuous, see vi. 9 εσφραγισμενων etc. On the whole it belongs to the "moderate" group, neglecting many unnecessary vagaries of others, preserving many undoubtedly correct readings of CAB, AB etc. Yet its fresh contributions of solecisms are quite curious.

See now relationship with 194 a MS. still at Jerusalem, which is also imperfect (but in different sections) and which seems to have suffered an equal measure of mutilation.

Apoc. 34.

Apoc. 34 (Ac. 66. P. 67). Vind. Cæs. gr. theol. 302. Apoc. cum comment. [Scr. 34. Greg. 34, new 424. Sod. O[12]]. Collated from photos. 1905.

Examined and collated by Treschow, Alter, Birch. Griesbach, followed by Scrivener, attributes the lacunæ of Apoc. 33 to this MS. in error; as pointed out by Gregory, it is complete,—with a new form of inscription (differing from that of its sister MS. Apoc. 87), and without subscription. Gregory claims a close date for it, viz. 1064-1068, thus:—"Constantius inter reges," (referring to a table in the MS.), "ultimum locum habet, uterque sine regni annis, unde concludo librum inter annos 1064/8 exaratum esse." This date seems full early. Yet psi is very square. On the other hand, iota post. almost throughout (and never misplaced) points the other way. (It is given in αΐδης, but never with ζωον). In Apoc. 87 Scrivener says iota post- or subscript is not present. If this MS. be before 1070 many others classed later should be moved back a century or more. 132 has iota post. often, 181 only a few times. ειδον is read throughout, not ιδον etc.

ν εφελκ. but rarely occurs; 34 is very free from bad omissions from homoioteleuton, and is carefully written. There are no corrections. Indeed, in only one or two places is there a trace of a correction by the original hand. It is well to emphasize this, for the interest of its readings will be obvious before we have finished. The MS. runs smoothly without unnecessary changes, except for a close affinity at once apparent with Apoc. 87 (=Act 178. P. 242, at Cheltenham, England), collated by Scrivener and published in App. to Codex Augiensis (m). Contractions are carefully made throughout, and only in the following cases are the words cited written out in full, in several cases the reason being obvious:—

xii. 10. ουρανω, xviii. 4 ουρανου
xvi. 21. ανθρωποι, xvii. 14. κυριος κυριων, xix. 16 κυριων, xviii. 2. πνευματος (ἀκαθαρτου).

In the opening chapters the MS. does not particularly favour the B group, but rather an ℵ group; e.g. ii. 10 it has πασχειν of t.r. against παθειν of B and group, ii. 25 ἀν ἥξω of t.r. and ℵCAP against ανοιξω of B and small group, iii. 2 εμελλον αποθανειν with ℵCAP 12. 87 (t.r. μελλει αποθανειν) against B and group ημελλες or εμελλες αποβαλλειν. Yet we cannot shake off B's influence, (or rather the influence of B's parents), see iii. 4, 11, iv. 5/7, and iv. 8 αγιος novies, which later on makes itself still more felt (e.g. xvii. 16). In this connection, we may say that the only evidence of quiet editing at all apparent is in a few places of this sort (iv. 8), such as the repetition of ουαι three times, where all the evidence points to the original form of ουαι twice (e.g. xviii. 16), and even here our MS. has the countenance of Apoc. 87, and these two undoubtedly had a common origin, so the editing must very likely be traced farther back.

Value of cursive testimony.

This is another kind of key MS., showing where certain archetypes of ℵ and B came together before their descendants drifted apart, as at iii. 20 +και (ante εισελευσομαι); or again this may be said of AB in many places, as at iv. 2 επι τον θρονον, xxii. 2 εκειθεν.., —ενα. This MS. and 87 (as well as others) join this testimony, thereby showing that their origin antedates ℵCABP. That this must be the case can easily be shown from any chapter taken at random, where the evidence is followed first of one combination and then immediately of another in such a way as to show that the foundations of the MS. under review were laid before the extant uncials were written. This is the most important thing to be borne in mind in estimating the value of the testimony rendered by the later and cursive MSS. We claim that in the cursives is found a survival of many readings more ancient than those of our uncials, that the origin of some of the rarer uncial readings can be gathered from cursive testimony, and at the risk of being tedious, let us run through an entire chapter. Let us take the v[th] (any would do). The distribution of uncial weight is seemingly very confusing, but it illustrates the point abundantly.

We begin, v. 2 +αλλον with the whole family 34-35-68-87-132-156-164-165-181-188 and also 143 200 *syr*S Orig.

then we read αξιος εστιν with B and group.

[Note that CE are wanting all through].

Now there are no variations in between these places, except as between the other MSS., 34 reading with textus receptus. Did one ever jump about so in evidence? Talk of genealogies and groups! Here is the beginning of the problem, not the end.

But let us proceed to classify the rarer readings for our future guidance.

New Readings.

i. 7. —των (ante νεφελων) with all the family except 188.

10. φωνης (ex emend.) οπισω μου μεγαλης (ex emend.) The family divides 34-156-165-188 with 149 191 220 so reading, the other members have this order but in the accusative.

iv. 4. θρονους The family (with a slight variation by 35 87 which go with ℵA).

viii. 5. εγενετο So 68-156-165-181 [non 35-124-132-188*vid.*].

ix. 2. ωσπερ So all the family except 35*vid.*

11. εχουσι βασιλεα επ αυτων αγγελον The family.

xii. 6 fin. χιλιας $\acute{c}\xi$ 34 and 165 (with 113). The rest of family vary.

xiii. 13. ινα και πυρ ποιηση εκ του $\overline{ουνου}$ καταβηναι εις κ.τ.λ. Most of the family.

xiv. 6. αγγελον αλλον All the family except 188 (68 87 wanting) and no others.

xviii. 2. Post ακαθαρτου sec. +και φυλακη παντος θηριου ακαθαρτου So the family, but 35-132-181 add και μεμισημενου.

14. ου μη ευρησουσιν αυτα 34-156-165-188 (the other members vary the order).

xxi. 24. των εθνων (pro αυτων) All the family with boh and *syr*Σ. (*Om. syr*S).

xxii. 6. +των πνευματων (ante των αγιων) All the family plus only 169-216 172-217 and *syr*S.

11 init. +και (ante ο αδικων) All the family and syr aeth Prim.

Other family readings may be seen at: i. 5 (three times), 13 (twice), 20; ii. 1, 9, 17; iii. 1, 7; iv. 3, 8, 9; v. 2, 9, 13 (twice), 14; vi. 4, 9, 16, 17; viii. 7, 8, 12 (twice); ix. 13, 14; x. 10; xi. 19; xii. 16; xiii. 10, 12, 13 (twice), 17 (twice); xiv. 19; xv. 2, 3; xvii. 4; xviii. 7, 10 (twice), 13, 16, 19, 23; xix. 17.

Other small groups of interest are found at:

ii. 1. +κυριος (post λεγει)

13. —ος

iii. 18. —παρ εμου

vii. 1. πνεύσηι

Notice how Ap. 34 frequently preserves the order of t.r. against some of its allies, though changing the reading involved, e.g. xxi. 24 etc.

34, though sister to 35 and the rest of the family, is not as near as the remainder of the group to each other.

Now see some connection between 48 and this MS. together with 4 20 31 32 etc. This means it is an Arethas MS. based on an old text.

The group is now 34-35-68-87-132-156-181-188 and the text very old, as far as we can make out (writing now after collating up to 106) and it derives from a bilingual coptic-syriac base or a trilingual græco-coptic-syriac with some latin readings. Of these, 132 and 181 are the most accurate and truest to type.

Apoc. 35. Apoc. 35. = Vind. Cæs. gr. theol. 307. [Scr. 35. Greg. 35, new 2018. Sod. Αν[46]].

With commentary. Gregory calls it [XIV]. It is somewhat earlier. Divided into στιχοι. The MS. is trying to the eyes; full of ligatures, some for the same abbreviation differing, so that incessant care is necessary in collating, even with a fine light. It is carelessly, though neatly written; no ἀντιβαλλων or diorthotes was employed, and it abounds in errors due to homoioteleuton, both of subtraction and addition. New readings are mostly errors, except towards the last. About the end of ch. xxi, the scribe was very cramped and seems almost deliberately to have left out clauses. Possibly the original from which he copied was in the same case, and responsible, as he had room enough himself. 87 is wanting here. Scrivener has called attention to the likeness to 87. At first I thought it was an error for 34. But 34. 35. and 87 are sister MSS. Alter has already shown the similarity of 34 and 35; we emphasize it by reciting all the minutiæ. But this MS. 35 is nearer to 87 than to 34. Delitzsch compares it to Apoc. 121, which we have not yet reached (but 121 is outside the immediate family). Alter justly enough emphasizes many Coptic readings in this little group, but our MS. 35 proves the relation by reading alone in xxi. 19 καρχηδων for χαλκηδων, the well-known Coptic rendering, but this is also found in the Syriac Crawford.

Collated by me in 1905 from photographs.

Has absolutely no iota sub- or postscript, except once at xvii. 17 τῷ θηριω, and once (not elsewhere with this word) xx. 13 αΐδης.

ν εφελκ. is of frequent occurrence, more so than in 34.

ειδον always. This, and other evidence shows direct copy from a late uncial, which, the parent of 34. 35. 87, had, in its turn, an interesting semi-independent source. Yet at xvii. 8/9 all agree, so there was probably some punctuation in the parent MS.

Apoc. 35 is a great contrast to its sister MS. 34 just described as regards abbreviations. Whereas ligatures are very common in 35, words like πνευμα, ανθρωπος are written in full (at any rate from i. to v. and xii. to xxii.). See list below. There seems to be a break in the continuity of this arrangement from v. 6 to xii. 5. Even ιησου χριστου is found in full ch. i. 2, whereas ιωαννης is contracted to ιω̄ at i. 1 and i. 9. And on the other hand δαυὶδ is found in full, which is most unusual, except at xxii. 16. Ιερουσαλημ is found once in full, otherwise abbreviated.

The list follows:

i. 2.	ιησου χριστου	vii. 14.	κυριε (rightly enough)
4.	πνευματων	xii. 5.	υιον
10.	πνευματι	17.	ιησου (very unusual)
13.	υιον	xiv. 1.	πατρος
ibid.	ανθρωπου	xvi. 9.	ανθρωποι (once)
ii. 17.	πνευμα	14.	πνευματα
iii. 1.	πνευματα	18.	ανθρωποι
12.	ιερουσαλημ (but not elsewhere)	xvii. 14.	κσ̄ κυρῖ
13.	πνευμα	xviii. 2.	πνευματος
iv. 2.	ουρανω	xix. 16.	κυριος κυριων
5.	πνευματα	xxi. 7.	υιος
8.	κυριος	12.	υιων
v. 6.	πνευματα	xxii. 20.	κυριε

If anything else were wanted to differentiate this group of 34. 35. 87 from other cursives, the presence of και τα χαλκα in ix. 20, with all the uncials and cursives 1. 10. 12. 17. 37 etc., would be sufficient. The great majority of cursives omit the clause, for no good reason.

At xviii. 22 there is a fine trace of ℵ's influence, viz. σαλπιγγων (for σαλπιστων) with ℵ and 87-132-181 alone of the family plus 90 111 130 f. 178 200 (σαλπιγκτων Hippolytus). Doubtless the other members of the family changed this original.

εγγεγραμμενων at xxii. 19 is something new (but found in 68-132-181 of the fam.), yet has its counterpart in the MSS. 1 and 31, which each read alone, the one at xx. 15 εγεγραμμενος (teste Delitzsch) and the other at xxi. 27 εγγεγραμμενοι (with 47 and 143).

But we will give our usual lists now.

Alone or almost alone with 87 of the family MSS.

It is clear then that 35-87-132-181 is one recension of the family and 34-156-165-188 another, with 124 more eclectic.

The whole family now appears with these characteristic readings in combination, i.e. 34-35-68-87-124-132-156-165-181-188 :—

For the rest we may refer to the complete collation, pausing to point to ii. 15, where though ομοιως stands for ο μισω, the scribe shows knowledge of the reading "ομοιως ο μισω" as he writes thus: ο μοι ωc, large, to fill up as much space as the double reading.

I have been careful to specify "non 34," or "non 35" where it might be thought I had overlooked a reading. Scrivener's collation of 87 seems to be good and accurate, but of course I could not be so certain in such cases appertaining to 87. For instance, at v. 10 Apoc. 35 reads βασιλευουσιν, contra 34, 87. So also ix. 2 —και ηνοιξε το φρεαρ της αβυσσου with ℵB etc., contra 34, 87. Also ix. 5 βασανισθωσιν, non 34, 87. And i. 11 μυρναν with A etc., contra 34, 87. And vi. 11 αποκτεννεσθαι ℵC etc., but not 34 or 87.

Perhaps as striking a place as any is xix. 13 ερραντισμενον with (P 32) 87 95 against t.r. and 34 and nearly all others.

Contrast as usual the sudden jumping from one group to another. E.g. ii. 24 βαθεα with CAB etc.; same verse βαλλω with CAP etc. Also xxi. 19/21. Verse 19 καρχηδων; verse 20, no variations, although P has many; verse 21 ινα (pro ανα) with 68-132-181 of the family; +και (ante εκαστος) with P 68-132-181 and 56-108 200 *syr*S aeth latt.; and νελος with a few cursives! A similar case is not observable, however, at vi. 8, where the uncials are merely at variance amongst themselves, thus ηκολουθει CP, αυτω (pro μετ' αυτου) ℵ, and αυτω (pro αυτοις) B, being all accompanied by about the same group of cursives, including this one.

Now 68 joins the group 34-35-68-87 which proves to be an Arethas revision on an old Egyptian base, but not a true one and not very close to B. Also add 132 and 156, and 181 with 188 to the group. For the trilingual element Syriac, Egyptian, Latin see under Apoc. 104.

132 is carefully executed by a female scribe, i.e. a Queen, who had retired to a convent, and is a splendid check on the others. Also 181.

INDEPENDENT CRITICAL CODEX.

Apoc. 36 = Vind. Cæs. Suppl. gr. 93. [Scr. 36. Greg. 36, new 2019. Sod. $A\nu^{30}$]. Collated from photos in 1905. Apoc. 36.

Gregory says XIII (al. XIV). Desunt xix. 21–xxii. 21. Otherwise complete. Text interspersed in full commentary, occupying 56 leaves. Scrivener says it resembles ℵ 7, but this is premature. Collated by Alter, with fair accuracy, but in a form quite undesirable.

The codex is XIV^th century work of rather rough description, undoubtedly copied from an ancient uncial exemplar. Complete absence of iota sub- or postscript is of course inconclusive proof. So is the form φιλαδελφιαν or λαοδικιαν. Many itacisms prove nothing, but ιδον is constant, and sigma is too frequently written c to lead to any other conclusion, or for the scribe to have been copying anything but an uncial, and finally the practice of running the commentary into the end of the same line as the text begins, dates back to very early times. So we find, f°. 6 verso, e.g.:

> κεινης ηδον η εις ταυτ᾽ τοῦ φεελφαγωρ τελεσθεν δε κατεκοιλίσ > > μετανοησαν ει δε μη ερχομαι coι ταχυ ṡ ※ θησαν :~
> > πολεμησω μετ᾽ αυτῆ εν τη ρομφαια του στοματος μου :~

Sometimes the commentary, as in older codices, runs up to the line above, if there is space there to finish, rather than below. In fact it may be copied direct from an ancient bilingual.

Note close connection with Syriac Crawford. Probably 36 used the syriac-greek bilingual and was accustomed to Syriac forms and points.

ειμι and its parts are nearly always fully contracted, thus ⁒ for εστιν, ∻ for ειναι etc. ϛ for κατα, ἐ̂κτανθηναι for αποκτανθηναι, η ωρα = ὥρα (xiv. 7). In fact the MS. abounds in ligatures of all sorts. The other usual contractions are present, except that σωτηρια is found in full, vii. 10; ουρανον x. 5, x. 6; πνευματικως xi. 8; πνευμα xi. 11; κυριων xvii. 14; and, as sometimes occurs, $\overline{\pi\nu\alpha}$ thus twice for πνευματα at iv. 5 and v. 6, though correct $\overline{\pi\nu\alpha\tau\alpha}$ at iii. 1. We notice ισραηλ in full in the commentary.

The scribe makes many grammatical errors, and itacisms are fairly consistent where they occur, but often missing when expected, showing here more of carelessness than lack of learning. But we notice no carelessness in incorporating portions of the commentary in the text. We find the semicolon of interrogation most distinct at vi. 17 and xvii. 7. Also the apostrophe, e.g. xii. 4 ἱν᾽ (pro ινα ante οταν). [See 114 elsewhere].

We have entered thus fully into the subject, as the MS. before us is quite out of the ordinary and requires most serious study. In parts it is closely allied to 1 and 12, and therefore preserves for us a considerable portion of our familiar textus receptus, including the order of words, (inherited in a great measure from codex 1). On the other hand this MS. takes us away from the text of B. We find ourselves back among the first cousins of ℵ and A, of 111 143 146 *syr*S and gig. It would seem as if B had arisen sometime between 600 and 700 A.D. From chapter v. onwards, for a time, however, B comes in sometimes, generally with ℵ. Some of ℵ's idiosyncracies find the support of 36, but it will be simpler to present the evidence in tabular form. Notice $\overline{\iota\eta\lambda\mu}$ of iii. 12 with ℵC alone.

The following list of readings peculiar to this MS. is of the highest importance, but must be weighed with infinite care. Note vii. 2, xi. 8, xiii. 17, and xvi. 7; we may trace the origin of αλλον εκ yet. ε̣ξαγοραζει at xviii. 11 is interesting.

There is a good deal of retranslation here, undoubtedly due to its relationship with the Crawford Syriac and the Latin, which is deep.

xii. 10. αυτους (pro αυτων).

Even when revising, the διορθωτης, (who was probably the scribe himself) tends to the readings of ℵ, and at xii. 14 shows knowledge of the reading αυτου (pro αετου), although his abominable love of itacisms makes him write apparently υετου.

It is clear that the affinity of this MS. for ℵ 1, 7, and 12 is pronounced, yet it is supported throughout by all the major cursives (to be dealt with later) in various places.

Now compare it with Crawford Syriac for its true base.

As to xviii. 22. The great sympathy of 36 for ℵA leads me to call attention to the well-known omission by these two uncial manuscripts (and by them alone) at xviii. 22 of the words πασης τεχνης, which follow και πας τεχνιτης. Now, notwithstanding close adherence elsewhere by 36 to ℵA, this cursive, like the rest, knows nothing of the omission. In fact it seals its verdict for the words by adding επινοια after πασης τεχνης.

Next follows a third member of the Complutensian group. Hitherto we have recorded 10 and 17.

The group, including 37, is destined to augment to these large proportions:

10-17-37-49-77-91-96-110-150-(154)-157-160-161-187-190-192-202-212-221-223-224-227-228-229-230-(231)-232-(233)-242-243-244-250.

The Complutensian family is always readily to be identified by the omission of ουτως before ορμηματι at xviii. 21. Yet 17 and 49 discovered the error as also 243 and 250 and they alone of the family MSS. have the word, nor does the Complutensian edition itself omit.

COMPLUTENSIAN GROUP 10 etc.

Apoc. 37 (Ac. 72. P. 79) = Rom. Vat. gr. 366. [Scr. 37. Greg. 37, new 432. Sod. α 501]. Apoc. 37.
Collated from photographs in 1905.

Gregory compares it to Apoc. 28, and says "Birch contulit." Now, once for all, we repeat, that, for purposes of exact comparison, neither Birch's nor Alter's collations are worth much. Alter printed in full the text of one MS., and compared the others with that MS., and not all with a common printed standard, as should be done. Birch (Prol. p. xxxv. in Var. Lect. ad text. Apoc. Copenhagen, 1800) says he began by using Stephen's 3rd edition of 1550, (which I use), but, that, having lost his copy by fire, and not being able to procure another, he had to fall back upon Baskerville's edition of 1764, which was based on Mill's edition. But, as a matter of fact, Birch's collations, both in the Gospels and Apocalypse leave much to be desired, no matter what the standard for comparison. A facsimile of this MS. is to be found in Birch's Collations of Apoc. (Copenhagen 1800) at the end of the volume.

This is a very different MS. from the last, and proves to be a member of the Complutensian group. It is in a rough XIII/XIV. century hand, with 24 lines to a page, and looks later at first sight. But psi is square, and there is absolutely no trace of iota sub- or postscript, not even with ʽΑδης. On the other hand, final sigma, ς, is often found in the middle of a word, and the scribe manifests an exemplary antipathy to ν εφελκ. There are but few itacisms. We notice iii. 8 μακραν for μικραν; v. 6 αρνειον for αρνιον. I have not so far seen a MS. so consistently avoiding mistakes and the ν εφελκ, yet showing no trace of iota sub- or postscript.

Usual contractions, except υιος and cases in full six times, χριστου in full at xi. 15 and xii. 10; πνευματα at xvi. 13 and 14; κυριων (properly) at both xvii. 14 and xix. 16. Notice the reading at i. 2/3.

Observe cum t.r. i. 5, iii. 18 κολλουριον, vi. 1 οτε, viii. 12 και η ημερα etc., ix. 20 και τα χαλκα, xiii. 2 αρκτου, xviii. 1, xix. 7, xxi. 6 το ᾱ (sic) και το ω̄ (but xxii. 13 αλφα in full).

The new readings are:

- i. 7. αὐτῷ (pro αυτον prim.)
- ii. 23. νεκρους (pro νεφρους)
- v. 6. αρνειον (itacism)
- vi. 15. ορνεων pro ορεων, yet this does not make nonsense.
- 17. δυνατα (errore)
- vii. 7. δωδεκα (pro ιβ prim.). So only 103 (one out of a different large family).
- 11. εαυτων (pro αυτων) We notice αὐτῶν in 181 and 221.
- ix. 5. σκορπιων*? So also 146*txt arab boh* and Prim. (and των σκορπιων sah$^1/_3$).
- x. 5. επι της γης και επι της θαλασσης So also 56 and 72.
- xii. 12. κατεβληθη (pro κατεβη) Nor does this make nonsense.

xiii. 18. +του ονοματος (post αριθμον) = 104 167 200 220 244 arm 1. sah (only 244 is of the Compl. family).

xv. 1. μεγαν So 64 (against its family).

xviii. 3. πεποπκε and perhaps 244*, but 244 is more accurately copied throughout than 37.

xxi. 9. μετ' αυτου (pro μετ' εμου)* (errore)

20. υακινθινος So 244 and the Compl. edition.

Not a long list by any means, nearly all of which represent an aberration from type.

It stands nearly alone with Compl. MSS. at

iii. 18. εγχρισον επι (so copt).

xx. 12. και βιβλια ανεωχθησαν και αλλο βιβλιον ανεωχθη

14. ουτος εστιν ο θανατος ο δευτερος as *gig syr*S.

also at: xii. 4. τικτειν

xiv. 12. +του (ante ιησου)

xviii. 21. —ουτως

xx. 11. ο ουρανος και η γη (tol Aug. Prim.).

but at x. 4. ὅσα (pro οτε) it sides with ℵ and the 73 group gig and Prim.

and at xiv. 8. +ῆς (post αυτης) is with the same 21 group.

xi. 5. αποκτειναι (pro αδικησαι sec.) with the same 21 group.

At xiv. 6. ευαγγελισασθαι is with (ℵ) and a group composed of elements of the Compl. group, the 21 group, 34 group plus a few others.

and at 9. +το (ante χαραγμα) the same mixed grouping is observed.

Alone with the 21 group at:

vi. 13. αποβαλλει
ix. 15. +μερος (post τριτον)
xi. 4. +επι (ante της γης)
8. +εασει (post αυτων)

For the rest, the MS. will certainly repay careful examination. It falls into a certain well-defined group, as seen above, without allowing itself any "nonsense" or many of the vagaries of these, its relations. The noteworthy point in conjunction with this, is that it is in the main clearly opposed to the B group. But rarely does it side with them, e.g. περιβαλλη ix. 16; —δυο ix. 16; +ονοματα γεγραμμενα και xix. 12; επι (pro εφ') xix. 14; απο ανατολων xxi. 13; —και το τειχος αυτης xxi. 15 fin.; κρυσταλον xxii. 1.

The development of what happened to be our textus receptus is becoming clearer as we proceed, and such a MS. as this (with Apoc. 10, resembling the Complutensian text) is entitled to some respect, as it is executed with care, though at a late date, and without corrections. The continuity of what constitutes our printed text, in the main, is clearly traced back from the invention of printing through the middle ages to a point which will be manifest as we continue.

Some time after writing the above, I noticed that the inscription of this MS. tallied (alone so far) exactly with that in the Complutensian Polyglot. On examining the readings more carefully I find a very close agreement with the Polyglot, yet if Stunica used this MS., he carefully removed all the "plain and clear errors" in our first list above, except xxi. 20 υακινθινος (37 and Compl. alone). Also the new order, alone in 37, of επι της γης και επι της θαλασσης at x. 5 is not followed by Compl. I find this clause heavily underscored in my printed copy of Scrivener's Stephen, which I use for comparison, evidently to attract my attention to the MS. which modifies it; yet, now I have come upon Ap. 37 which changes the order, I cannot so far remember why I underlined it, nor find another edition which followed 37. Only 56 and 72 seem to agree with 37 here.

Almost conclusive proof is afforded at vi. 1 that this MS. 37 was NOT used by Stunica for the press; for the MS. reads οτε with t.r. against B and the mass of cursives, whereas Compl. has οτι.

A careful examination of minor combinations will disclose the fact that wherever Apoc. 10 is present the Complutensian agrees, and whenever Apoc. 10 is absent, the Complutensian disagrees; hence 10 is nearer the Complutensian than 37, and yet its inscription differs, whereas that of 37 agrees. Apoc. 10 is a MS. now at Cambridge (=Mill's "Moore 1"), probably not used in 1513 by Stunica, yet it may be that a sister will reveal itself to us later and fall in with this group, which will turn out to be Stunica's exemplar. With this, we leave the subject for the present, only noticing in conclusion that neither 10 nor 37 (or for that matter any in the sympathetic group) have any subscription, while the Complutensian has τελος της αποκαλυψεως.

What I have written above about this MS. 37 and the textus receptus, however, holds good, and shows that, at any rate, Stunica and Ximenes did draw material from a fairly good source, however obscure so far the problem may be of the exact documents used. [See Scrivener Plain Introduction on this subject]. See also Delitzsch in his sketchy but bombastic pamphlet "Fortgesetzte Studien zur Entstehungsgeschichte der Complutensian Polyglotte" ("zur Feier des Reformations festes und zum Rectorwechsel ladet der Rector der Universität D. Ferdinand Zirkel durch den designirten Decan der Theologischen Facultät D. Franz Delitzsch ein"), Leipzig 1886, pp. 35/39, which I had forgotten till recently. Here he gives the date of this MS. as "XV. cent. at the earliest," which, as shown above, is incorrect, and also states, in support of the contention that Ximenes and Stunica used this document from Rome (though Scrivener points out that there is no record of N.T. MSS. being sent them from Rome, but only O.T. MSS.) that it is closer to the Compl. than any other document in Europe*. This is again not so, as the Cambridge Apoc. 10 is nearer to it, and until we have examined the MSS. in Spain and others, we cannot decide definitely about this problem. But it was ever thus. And these partial examinations are a positive nuisance. Not a nuisance from the point of view of examination, but from the deductions always so positively drawn. No important body of collations has issued from German sources, outside of Tischendorf's labours, but there is a fondness to criticise and deduce on insufficient grounds and partial examinations, which is deplorable.

Thus, Delitzsch writes more fully of Havn. I. (Ev. 234, Ac. 37, Paul 72), which he had in his possession for three months, and which he considers was certainly the copy which influenced the Complutensian in Acts and Epistles, yet he admits that he did not collate it fully. These are his words: "Es sind das nur Beispiele aus den von mir collationirten THEILEN der Handschrift." When shall we have thorough examination before hasty deduction?

Delitzsch to the contrary notwithstanding, we have not yet got to the root of the matter, and the point to observe is that the relationship of 10 and 37 does not sufficiently cover all the variations of Compl. from the text of Steph. III. Here is a list of Compl.

* His words (p. 38) are:

"Es gibt unter allen bekannten Handschriften der Apokalypse keine, welche gleichen Anspruch machen könnte als Quelle der Complutensis zu gelten, wie Vat. 366," quite forgetting, apparently, the few, but important words he had written in 1871 about Apoc. 10. See "Studien zur Entstehungsgeschichte der Polyglottenbibel des Cardinals Ximenes, zur Feier des Reformations festes und des Uebergangs des Rectorats auf D. Carl Reinhold August Wunderlich ladet hiermit ein Der Rector der Universität D. Friedrich Zarncke durch den designirten Decan der Theologischen Facultät D. Franz Delitzsch." Leipzig 1871, pp. 33/34.

readings still remaining without known MS. support, after considering the agreement of not only Apoc. 10 and 37 but all MSS. readings.

Readings of Complutensian edition.

i. 17. οτι (pro οτε)

xiv. 4. +γαρ (post οπου) (cf. 108).
xv. 2. πυρι μεμιγμενην (=h Prim.: igni permixtum).
6. +και ante καθαρον So 108 quite outside the group.
ibid. περιεσζωσμενοι sic
xvi. 4. εζεχεε sic
xxi. 10. —την (ante αγιαν) (Possibly 211 outside the group).
xxii. 8. δειγνυντος
10 fin. εστι (pro εστιν) So 160-161 (and a few outside the group).

At first sight one might think that carelessness of printer and bad proof-reading or latinisms were responsible for all this. But, although, in one case, as Matthaei has pointed out, (Apoc. page 251) v. 7 fin. +βιβλιον may be from latin sources, yet others are distinctly not. No MS. at the end of our labours yields the above errors.

We would like to bear witness, in conclusion, to Scrivener's accuracy in the collation of the Complutensian text, and once more to remind scholars what a storehouse of racy textual commentary is provided by Matthaei in his notes. Whatever feeling his occasional malicious sallies may produce in our minds, we cannot deny his great grasp of the subject, and his light latin diction is in marked contrast to the heavy and dour latinisms of most modern professors of latin, with their "nec nons" and interminable german-latin periods.

Next follows a most important document. Besides being important, it is exceedingly misleading, for it is not true to type. For a long time we thought of it as a special and peculiar recension, but when we reached Patmos we found our 178 (still reposing there) was of the family and did not bear out all the idiosyncracies of 38. Then at Salonika and next at Athos we picked up 203 and 240 respectively, also sister MSS.

We now have the group 38-178-203-240, related to the uncial fragment F. I have to refer to this sometimes as 'fam 38' when all agree, and sometimes as fam 178, when 178-203-240 agree, but when 38 is aberrant; and this is frequently the case.

This most important group has a most ancient lineage, and it is a pity that 38 has been a second time revised to spoil the picture sometimes.

The base of all is really old syriac. It has been tampered with a great deal, but it seems to derive from a MS. or MSS. having græco-syriac-latin affinities of a very early date. This is confirmed by its sympathy with *syr*S and fam 119.

With ℵ the family is very close.

Apoc. 38. = Rom. Vat. gr. 579, f^os^. 22-46. chart. [Scr. 38. Greg. 38, new 2020. Sod. α 1573]. Collated from photographs in 1906. Apoc. 38.

Examined and collated by Birch and by Alford for Tregelles, who used it freely in his Gr. Test. He even quotes ii. 10 πασχειν Alford, παθειν Birch. This does not reflect credit on Alford's collation.

Scrivener says the Apoc. occurs "in the midst of foreign matter."

Birch says "foliis constat 371, quibus continentur sequentia a diversis librariis exarata.

"Fol. 1-28 "[? 1-21 H.C.H.]." Epistolæ nounullæ Chrysostomi.

"Fol. 22. κεφ. της αποκ....

"Fol. 23. αποκαλυψις του αγιου ιωαννου του θεολογου—

"finitur fol. 46 pag. b.

"Reliqua libri folia complectuntur diversorum P.P. scripta, nempe Chrysostomi, Gregorii, Ephræmi Syri, Maximi et aliorum."

I reproduce Birch's account, as Gregory only says "Insunt alia multa." He also says "textu bonæ notæ." Scrivener says it resembles AC. Birch calls attention to the scribe's knowledge of various readings, as evidenced by the marginal readings, a prima manu, but after all, they are only three in number at vi. 5, x. 8, and xv. 6. At i. 20 an error is corrected by striking through the word, thus: αι επτα ~~λυχνιαι~~ εκκλησιαι εισιν. This might have been done to advantage at vii. 4: εκατον εκατον και τεσσαρακοντα και τεσσαρες!

This is quite a different MS. from the last, going back to many more archaisms of ℵCA, yet φιλαδελφειαν and such forms are the rule, even φαρμακειων in ix. 21. It is difficult to date this MS. Others give XIII. and XV. century. I incline to about 1350 to 1400.

There is a peculiar abbreviation for και, copied in the types of the XVI. century. The omegas are long and open and quite peculiar to the scribe. Accents are very sloping. No iota post. or subscript. Practically no ν εφελκ. Very few itacisms. Ιωαννης always in full. Usual contractions, except πνευματων i. 4.

πνευματα xvi. 13.
,, xvi. 14.
υιων vii. 4.
υιον xii. 5.
κυριε vii. 14.
κυριων xvii. 14.
,, xix. 16.

At i. 8 and 11 we find cum t.r. "το ᾱ (instead of αλφα) και το ω̄."

The MS. was probably copied from a cursive or late uncial, but there is nothing clearly to indicate its immediate derivation, except the absence of usual capitals. Δ and C are but seldom used.

The absence of the article [e.g. —ο (ante ηλιος)] is more frequent than in other MSS., and is almost deliberate. In this connection it agrees with 97, as in a number of other peculiarities.

The occurrence at iv. 8 of ἁγιος sexies puts this MS. in a class by itself [but so also 40-210 122 and 222, but not the sister, Apoc. 178].

It is curious that Tregelles and Gregory and others should think well of it because it agrees with all kinds of curiosities of various kinds of MSS. [It has, however, a very old base]. First it will agree with ℵCAP and no cursives, next with B and usual group, next having an unique omission, next with one cursive, then with another, then with a small group of three, and all within one or two verses. Let us take a chapter and follow this out.

Take chapter ii.:

ii. 1. εφεσιων with 1-208 the f. 62 and 170 [non 178-203-240].
ibid. —επτα sec. with 16-69-102-180, 97 100 121 122 214 *syr*S [non f. 178].
2. βασταξαι with P. 1 etc. and f. 178.
ibid. επειρασας with (ℵA) CBP and nearly all cursives and f. 178.
ibid. τους λεγοντας αυτους αποστολους ειναι New. Others all εαυτους (except 12 f. 119 which omit the word).
3. —και tert. with ℵCABP and practically all.
ibid. +και (ante κεκοπιακας) with 16 f. 62 f. 119 208 251 } ibid. —και ου κεκμηκας with 1-208 16 and the same } whereas 178-203-240 and Vict. omit entirely κεκοπιακας και ου κεκμηκας.
5. μνημονευσον New reading. Now confirmed by f. 178 and 81-204 and 130.
ibid. πεπτωκας with CAB etc. [non f. 178].
ibid. ταχυ with B etc. and f. 178.
7. εν τω παραδεισω του θεου μου (—μεσω του) (ℵCA) B and most and f. 178.
8. της εν σμυρνη εκκλησιας with (ℵ)CBP and most cursives and f. 178.
ibid. —ο (ante εσχατος) with 31 59 78 96 152*-179 241 against f. 178.
9. αλλα πλουσιος ει with ℵCABP and practically all and f. 178.
ibid. +εκ (ante των λεγοντων) with CAB and a good many and f. 178.
10. μη (pro μηδεν) with CAB 24 49 95 f. 119 140 143 251 and f. 178 boh aeth.
ibid. παθειν with B etc. but not f. 178.
ibid. ο διαβολος βαλλειν εξ υμων New reading, with 59 f. 61 (f. 95) f. 178 and (200).
ibid. ημερας (pro ημερων) with B etc. [non f. 178].
ibid. μεχρι (pro αχρι) with 22 113 159 226 and f. 178.
11 fin. β̄ (pro δευτερου) New reading. No others use β̄ for the genitive case here.
13. —τα εργα σου και with ℵCAP 130 143 146 200 and f. 178 *gig vg harl aeth copt syr*S.
ibid. —και (post πιστιν μου) with ℵBP and most but not f. 178.
ibid. —εν (ante αις) with B and many but not f. 178.
ibid. —οπου κατοικει ο σατανας New reading. So 113 *syr*S [non f. 178].
14. +του (ante βαλααμ) with 13 23 36 55 56 59 102 113 121 127 132 140 169 215 216 but not f. 178.
ibid. εδιδαξε with B and group but not f. 178.
ibid. τον (pro εν τω) with ℵ[a] and nearly all and f. 178 (Elz.).
15. —ο μισω New reading, with 104-151 109*arm. boh sah aeth Vict.*? [not f. 178].

ii. 16. +ουν (post μετανοησον) with CAB etc. but not f. 178.
ibid. —σοι with 14-92 121 145 226 228 but not f. 178.
17. —φαγειν απο with CAB etc. and f. 178.
ibid. —δωσω αυτω sec. with א alone [non f. 178].
ibid. οιδεν (pro εγνω) with אCABP and practically all including f. 178.
18. εν θυατειρων εκκλ. New reading, but 203 agrees [non 178-240]. 67 and 200 also have εν θυατηρων.
ibid. —αυτου prim. with A 36 f. 119 and f. 178 and *gig syr*S.
19. και πιστιν και διακονιαν (—την bis) New reading=f. 178. (Mixture, however, of C and א[a]).
ibid. [και την υπομονην with t.r.] Contra —την A (B) 36.
ibid. —και (ante τα εσχατα) with אCABP and nearly all including f. 178.
20. —ολιγα with CABP and many, and also f. 178 [א *gig syr*S=πολυ; f. 21=πολλα; 59=ολιγα πολυ].
ibid. ποθεις (pro εας)! New reading but so 178, 203*txt & com.*-240*txt & com.* and these only. Obs. Tertullian's teneret.
ibid. [την λεγουσαν εαυτην προφητιν cum t.r.] ibid. και διδασκει και πλανα τους εμους δουλους } with אC(A)BP and practically all ibid. φαγειν ειδωλοθυτα } including fam 178.
21. και ειμεν θελει μετανοησαι εκ της πορνειας αυτης (pro εκ της πορ. αυτης και ου μετενοησεν) New reading.
22. εἰδ' οὐ (pro ιδου) New, with 203-240 only [non 178].
ibid. —εγω with אCABP and many cursives including f. 178.
ibid. βάλω with א[a]BP and a number, with 240 [non 178-203].
ibid. [μετανοησωσιν cum t.r.] Contra אA.
fin. αυτης (pro αυτων) with אCBP etc. and fam. 178.
23. [ερευνων cum t.r.] Contra CA W-H: εραυνων.
fin. αυτου (pro υμων) New reading, with 113 143 193 200 233 and 203 [non 178-240]. [—υμων א].
24. τοις (pro και prim.) with אCABP and most cursives and f. 178.
ibid. —και (ante οιτινες) with אCABP and practically all the rest.
ibid. βαθεα with CAB and many cursives and f. 178.
ibid. βαλλω with CAP etc. and f. 178.
25. —οὗ New reading, with 59-121 69[contra fam] 143* 203-240, but not 178 which has οταν for οὗ ἄν.
26 init. —και with the whole græco-latin fam 7-16-45 (hiat 39)-69-102-104-151-180 and all f. 178-203-240 but no other Greeks. Add, however, boh[B] arm 1 Tyc 1.
ibid. —ο (ante τηρων) New reading, with 159* 172* f. 178 and sah. (Also 146: κρατων pro ὁ τηρων).
27. [συντριβεται with t.r. and אCA, also f. 178]. Contra BP and nearly all cursives: συντριβησεται. (συντριβησονται 56 113 *vg latt sah syr*Σ).

This is, however, a most interesting MS., representing as it does an ancient Recension. Not only does it reproduce some solecisms of א, but actually confirms as an independent witness some of the doubtful readings of א's first hand. Fluctuating, as it does, between all the old uncial readings of אCAP with numerous purely cursive readings intermingled, it shows a very large element of pure B group-readings, and seems to us to derive from an early Recension, sub-edited several times since. At times it gives us occasional readings of 1 and 12 or 14, sometimes of 16 or of f. 21, but its real relatives are 97, 200 and 251, the first-named being Scrivener's j of Apoc., which is a MS. of the whole N.T. (B.M. addit!. 17469.= Evan 584, Act 228, P. 269, Apoc. 97) as described in App. to Cod. Augiensis, Introd. p. LXXIV, where he says "there is a tendency to omit the article" which is quite a feature of 38. Notice that 97 has iota subscript throughout, and perhaps passed through more copyings than 38. The peculiarities of 38 and 97 are so apart from the other MSS. that the rest of this group will easily fall into place. As we proceed, the problem really becomes simplified, but how Gregory (Prolegomena. N.T. gr. Tischendorf. ed. viii. p. 678) can dismiss such a MS. as Apoc. 38 with the short remark "Textu bonæ notæ," I cannot understand. Why "bonæ notæ," when it is such a mixture and not true to type? What matter how many readings of ℵ C or A or 200 reappear? They are for the most part peculiarities of these MSS., long since discarded, and the text of 38 is simply a pot pourri of all recensions (not a modern one though, but an old one faithfully copied), with 129 peculiarities added, as per list below.

NEW.

i. 10. φωνην μεγαλην οπισω μου So 210 233 but not f. 178.
11. φωνουσης (pro λεγουσης) So 178-203-240.
ibid. —ο (ante εσχατος) So a few more but not f. 178.
14. ωσει (pro ως) So a few more and f. 178.

ii. 2. τους λεγοντας αυτους αποστολους ειναι

11. επανω (pro επ') So also fam 178 only.

[Note.—Under No. 178 will be found a number of other passages where that MS. is alone with ℵ. These had been revised out of 38].

Note agreement with ℵ 38 and 97 alone:

xiv. 19. επι της γης (pro εις την γην) to which f. 178 now agrees.

Frequent agreement is also found with the MS. 200, our earliest cursive and derived from an old uncial.

Now compare it with fam 97 alone.

A feature in this connection, however, is that we often miss 97, where we expect to find it with 38, and find instead Scrivener's 87 or 98. At first sight it looks like a slip on Scrivener's part, but repeated examination convinces me that, for the most part, it is not due to any inaccuracy on Scrivener's part, but to the vagaries of all these MSS. (Note 97 is now checked and strengthened by its sister MSS. 122 and 214).

It would be too long to examine the other combinations in detail.

For the rest, there are a few pure "cursive" readings, showing the later influence of recopying, as at iii. 7; iv. 3, 6; v. 13; ix. 10; x. 2, 8, 9; xi. 19; xiii. 10; xiv. 8; xv. 2, 3; xvi. 18, 21; xvii. 10; xviii. 2, 13, 23; xix. 17; xx. 3, 5; xxi. 16, 18; xxii. 1, 3, 8.

It is necessary for the student now to look further and complete the detailed examination under 178, 203 and 240. And it will be useful also to look into 97 111 130 under their headings, before a full grasp can be had of our important group: F-38-178-203-240. Nor will 146 be denied.

If I mistake not, this is the MS. which the Vatican authorities could not find for some time, but after assuring them repeatedly that it existed, it was found, and photographed for me by Danesi, as usual.

It is wanting i. 1–iii. 17 (Birch says i. 1–iii. 8, but this is carelessness). It begins at iii. 17 (πε) πλουτηκα... It is not so illegible, but that I can read most of it, except the last few lines of the first col. There is a large lacuna later on vi. 17–xiii. 12. Birch says vi. 18–xiii. 11, again in error. Last word on f°. 2 verso is ημερα (ver. 17), first word on f°. 3 recto is ποιει xiii. 12.

Birch therefore commits three errors in describing the parts wanting [see Postscript to this description].

No subscription. End of Apoc. followed by life of S. Paul, by Pauline epistles (Paul. 85) contrary to usual order.

There are about 60 lines to a column, and about 32 letters to a line. It is written in a neat XI/XII. cent. hand—[it is well to beware of small neat hands; they often indicate a critical editor and not a plain copying scribe]—but very carelessly. It abounds in itacisms, though omissions from homoioteleuton are only occasional. Gregory says "sæc. XIV. (al. XIII.)". Birch "thinks" it is of XIII. cent., and Gregory is too late. The Pauline epistles should be collated. They would doubtless yield highly "interesting" readings.

The MS. was no doubt copied from an uncial. Constantly a line ends with the first consonant of a word, the rest of which is carried to the next line, and combinations of ερχομεταχυ, with ligatures, for ερχομε (ερχομαι) ταχυ are frequent. The scribe even goes so far, at the end of a line, as to add the ε of εγενετο to ουκ, thus: "...ουκε γενετο..."

αυτος and its cases are hopelessly confused, and the accusative, genitive and dative of other words freely interchanged. But this is due to Latin influence in the Scriptorium. This MS. is part of the græco-latin family 7-16-39-45-69-102-104-151-180, although the Greek and Latin texts are different and have not been brought into accord by any of the scribes.

Error is carried to the limit of foolishness at xiii. 18 ο αριθμος αυτων (for αυτου), and this is agreed to by 16-39-69-102 as to the number of the Beast. See also v. 5, vi. 1 etc. etc. Sometimes, three or four lines are quite free from itacisms (and curiously enough, often in those few passages where the textus receptus and all MSS. are wonderfully in accord, letter for letter), but it is only as a prelude to a fresh outbreak. At xiv. 12 we are thus left in doubt whether ηπομενη is intended for ὑπομενη or ἡ ὑπομενη. Birch neglects these and fails thereby to establish the relationship between A. 7. 12. 16. 32. 36. and our MS., not even recording ελεον for ελαιον (= 7. 12.) at vi. 6.

ν εφελκ. is constant. Accents and breathings very unequally inserted, often omitted altogether, and carried to the limit of "monstra" at xiii. 16 χαρᾶγματα sic. There is no occurrence of iota post- or subscript. ιδον at first occurs consistently. Later on ειδον is written and held till the end. ζ and ξ are often of identical form. και generally in full, but when contracted (see f°. 3 recto, line 32) usually ις, the tail of ς carried backwards. This form was in later times made forwards, and finally occurs in the printed text of the sixteenth and seventeenth centuries.

Usual contractions are of course present. In fact the following are the only places where such words are in full: xiii. 13, xv. 5, xxi. 10 ουρανου.

At xxi. 1 ουρανος thus: ὀ· (at end of line) ρανος
xix. 16 κυριων
xvi. 9 ανθροποι sic
xxi. 17. ανθροπου sic
xxii. 6 πνευματων.

The sections (never finished) appear to be unusual.

This MS. is a close sister to Apoc. 16 (=Act. 45. P. 52), concerning which it will be remembered that the librarian wrote me it was an absolutely useless and very late MS. Again we see how stupid it is to judge a MS. by its age alone. If the librarian had possessed this XII. cent. græco-latin bi-columnar MS. he would have thought he had a treasure, and probably edited it with a great flourish of trumpets, yet it is copied from the same MS. as his 16.

There is a beautiful "conflate" reading at xix. 14 ἐνφἵπποις sic (pro εν ιπποις or εφ ιπποις)!

Three or four times our scribe has trouble with the word κρισις or κρισεις, cutting off the final sigma, once (xix. 2) before αυτου!

Here is a list of their absolute agreement without any other supporting codices, so far:—

Agreement between 16 and 39 alone (now supported by other members of the family as below).

iv. 8. —και ο ων So also 69-102*-180.
11. την δυναμιν και την δοξαν και την τημην So 69-102-180 (only 39 has τημην).
v. 6. —του θρονου usque ad εν μεσω So 69-102-180 and *syr*Σ.
7. +της χειρος (ante της δεξιας) So 69-102-180.
11. και των πρεσβυτερων και των ζωον So 69-102-180 (ζωον 39-180, ζωων 16-69-102).
13. —ὁ So 69-102-180 and 108 226.
ibid. τον καθημενον 39 (των καθημενων 16).
14. —τα So 69-102-180 and 80* [non 138] 88-101 [contra 46] and 114-241 [non 193].
vi. 11. αυτου (pro αυτων prim.) So also 180.
xiii. 14. και εζησεν (εζησαν only 39) απο της πληγης της μαχαιρας (pro της μαχαιρας και εζησε) So 69-102-180.
16. επι της δεξιας της χειρος αυτων So 69-102-180.
18. αυτων (pro αυτου) So 69-102-180 (om. Prim.).
xiv. 6. φϊλων (pro φυλην) 39, but φυλων 16-69-180.
8. +εν φωνη μεγαλη (post λεγων) So 69-102-180*mg.* and f. 46.
9. τη εικονη So 45 (so far left out of above combination, while τη εικονι is read by 16-102-104 (and 55 127) and τη οικονη by 69*.
10. —εν πυρι και θειω So 69*-102*-180*gr.*
11. —αναβαινει εις αιωνας αιωνων So 102*-180 (but 69 has it with αναβηθησεται).
13. ·απαρτι λεγει (—ναι) So 69-102-180.
14. ομοιως So 69-180 and 154.
xv. 2. —και εκ του χαρ. usque ad ονοματος αυτου So 69-102-180 and 81 182 h Prim., but not the Latin counterpart of the Græco-latin group.
3. —ο θεος ο So 69-102-180 and 187.
5. +του θεου (ante της σκηνης) So 69-102-180 (against their Latin).
xvi. 2. προσκυνουντες τη εικονι αυτου So 69-102-180. (τη εικονη 69-180).
11. εκ τα ελκη 16-39-180, and εκ τα ελκει 7-45-69-151.
xvii. 12. +ου (post ωραν) So 102*-180. [non lat.].
17. —ποιησαι την γνωμην αυτου και So 180. See 69-102-104 in the collations.

xviii. 3. +ἡ (ante μετ' αυτης) So 39-180, +οἱ 16-69-102 and boh arm.

ibid. πορνευσαντες (pro επορνευσαν). And so 69-102-180.

4. συγκοινωνησεται 16-39-180, . . . σειτε 69. The others also vary slightly.

5. αι αμαρτιαι . αμαρτιαι αχρι του ουνου So also 180.

6. αυτην (pro αυτῇ prim.) So 69-180.

ibid. αὐτῆς (pro ποτηριω) So 180.

7. βασιλεισα So 151-180.

9. επ αυτων (pro επ αυτη) So 102*-180.

11. —και πενθουσιν So 69-102-104-180 *syr*Σ and some others.

14. απολοντο (pro απηλθεν) So 180 (and 113 154), απωλοντο 7-45-102-104-151 with ℵ and others.

21. ουτος [i.e. οτι (cum ℵ) ουτος ορμηματι] So 69-180, but οτι ορμηματι ουτος 16, and οτι ουτως ορμηματι 102 with ℵ fam 178 and copt.† (16).

22. φωνην (pro φωνη prim.) So 69-180.

23. ακουσθη (pro φανη)! So 180. (Hiat 69 deinde).

xix. 2. εξεδηκησεν So 39-104-180 (. . δηκησε 16, . . δικησεν rell. fam).

10. του αγγελου (pro των ποδων αυτου) So 102-180 and 12.

[i.e. —των ποδων cum 12. 16-39-102-180 (and 18).
του αγγελου (pro αυτου) cum f. 16. 95 etc.
But combined reading alone with 16-39-102-180].

15. +αυτου (post οργης) So 180.

16. μυρον So 104-180.

19. οικουμενης (pro γης) So 102 (οικουμενοις 180).

xx. 1. +αλλον (post αγγελον) So 102-180.

ibid. κλϊδαν So 180 (κλειδαν 16).

9. απο του ουρανου απο του θεου So 102-180.

12. —τους νεκρους So 16-39-104. [non 7-151-180; hiant 45-69].

xxi. 4. εξαλειφη So also 102-180.

8. —εν So also 102-180 (εστιν pro εν τη 143 Hipp.).

There are very few places where we expect to find the testimony of 16 and miss it, which is an unusual circumstance. There are not many really unique readings apart from itacisms (see list further on), and we therefore have an old text here of rather a peculiar type.

Division of this family.

In the light of the above we can now roughly divide the græco-latin family into 16-39-69-102-180
and 7-45-104-151.

Next comes the sister of 16, viz. Apoc. 7 to join the testimony.

Alone with 7 and 16.

iv. 1. και λεγουσης (pro λεγουσα) add the rest of the fam.: 39-45-69-102-104-151-180.

5. εξεπορευοντο " " " " " " " " " "

v. 8. μεστας (pro γεμουσας) " " " except 104 = μετα.

11. —πολλων " " " and arab.

vi. 1. —και sec. " " " and sah boh Vict. Prim. Tyc 3.

xiv. 11. αυτου (pro αυτων) " " " and a few others.

17. —του sec. " " " and 92 128 174 218.

18. ηγμασαν " " " (and ηχμασαν A).

xv. 6. ληνον " 39-45-180 and 113 114*com.*, 241*com.*

xvi. 2. του θηριου το χαραγμα add the rest of the family and 153-211 222 233.
xviii. 2. +δαιμονιου (post πνευματος) add the rest of the family.
22. Transferunt και πας τεχνητης (sic 39 151) παστης τεχνοις (sic 39) ου μη ευρεθη εν σοι ετι in loc ad fin. vers. add the rest of the family.
xix. 4. οι πρεσβυτεροι επεσαν add the rest of the fam. and 153-211 233.
15. παντοκρατωρος add 45-104-151 and 149-186 207.
xx. 5. +οτι (ante αὐτη) add the rest of the fam.
10. —και (post θηριον) " " " and 121 159?

Sometimes alone with 7, but not nearly so often as with 16.

Alone with 7.

vi. 13. σειωμενη So also 180.
xviii. 19. ειρημωθη So also 45-104-151-180.
xx. 3. ετι (pro ετη) So also 45-104 and 218.
xxi. 6. διψοντι So also 151-180 and 65 98 113 210.

Very occasionally 12 is dragged into the combination (besides xix. 10 supra), and this is important to notice, owing to the very peculiar and independent character of the MS. 12.

vi. 6. ελεον (pro ελαιον) with 7-12-39-45-69 [non 102-104-151] 180 and Oxyr[1230] 145 152* 159 204.
xv. 4. δικαιοματα with 12 39-69-180 and 72 113 120.
xviii. 19. τιμωτητος with 7. 12. 16-39-151-180 and a few more.
xix. 12. ειμι with 12 and 39-104-180 plus a few more.

More often we find it with larger groups.

There is a little key to this partial affinity for 12 to be found at xiv. 20, where 12 omits και επατηθη η ληνος εξω της πολεως, and 39-69-102 (alone of MSS. so far) transfer the clause to a place after ιππων (39-102 with the substitution of εξωθεν).

As to ℵ observe:

xiii. 18. ους pro τον νουν ℵ and 16-39-69-102-180*gr.* and 159 [non 7-45-104-151].
xiv. 4. απαρχης ℵ 16-39-69-102-180 and 114 174 241.
xv. 2. —εκ sec. ℵ 7-16-39-45-69-102-104-151-180 and 38 98 200.
xvi. 6. αιματα prim. ℵ 16-39-69-102-180 and 36.
19. —το (ante ποτηριον) ℵ 39[non fam] and f. 95 130 146*com.* 154 159 164 212 215.
xviii. 3. πεπτωκασιν ℵB 7* 39-45-(102)-104-(151)-180 etc. [malè Birch].
7. καθημε ℵ 39-180 and 36 113.
11. επ αυτην ℵCP 16-39-69-102-180 and 17* 18 32 124 130 132 179 181* 188 233 [non 7-45-104-151].
18. πολϊ ℵC 16-39-180 and 114 (πολη 69).
xix. 8. λαμπρον καθαρον (—και) ℵAP 7-39-45-102-151-180 and 91 f. 95 111 159 178-203-240 aeth boh gig.
9. —του γαμου ℵ*P 1-208 16-39-102-180 and some others.
15. παταξει ℵ 7-16-39-45-151-180 and a few more.

Observe that 39 goes with C 9 27 44 52 82 154-212 by error in omitting at xvi. 13 —εκ του στοματος του δρακοντος και. 16 and others [not fam.] omit instead και εκ του στομ. του θηριου.

We have left the new readings to the last in this case, partly because the real ones are few, and it was better at once to illustrate the sisterhood of the family MSS., and partly because they are so mixed up with itacisms, they will figure better here.

New readings of 39 of some importance, but not shared by any of the family (except where indicated), and therefore errors :

vi. 12. —και ο ηλιος εγενετο μελας Alone.
xiii. 15. —ινα και λαλησῃ η εικων του θηριου in textu. / Addit. in marg. ινα και λαλησει εικον του θηριου*. } So 69-180 and many others.
xiv. 7. —λεγοντα cum ℵ, at +λεγων (post μεγαλῃ) So the family.
ibid. +και (ante υδατων) Alone.
9. αυτης (pro αυτοις) Alone.
20. Transfert και επατηθη η ληνος εξωθεν (sic) της πολεως in loc. post ιππων So 69-102 (69 εξω). [12 113 180* omit].
xv. 8. αὐτου (pro του θεου) / ibid. —και εκ της δυναμεως αυτου } vel —του θεου και εκ της δυναμεως Alone.
ibid. τελεσθωσι (—αι) Alone. τελεσθωσι αἱ 180. —αἱ 159 171.
xvii. 3. —με Alone.
18. +των επι (ante της γης) So 69-102-180 and 149.
xviii. 19. εβαλο ν (—χουν) So 180. [εβαλον, —χουν 16-102*].
xix. 19. —και sec. Alone.
xx. 8. μαγων (pro μαγωγ) Alone with 146?-155-179? 218.
xxi. 24. και περιπατησουσιν αυτης (—τα εθνη των σωζομενων εν τω φωτι) Alone.
xxii. 12 fin. —εσται with 56-108 113 150^{sup} *sah boh syr*S gig, but not the rest of fam 39.

Thus not only the family characteristics and failings have been shown, but the sisterhood between the group MSS. is emphasized by the above very small list of unique readings of 39 (mostly from homoioteleuton), and their common parentage is indicated beyond peradventure, as their agreement (unlike that of many other half-sisters) runs through all the other passages, often against a great group. From this point of view the group is very useful when set against, say ℵA and a host of cursives, or B and the same, or ℵAB, or ℵP and the same.

Many other unique itacisms of 39 occur, but need not detain us.

At vi. 7. σφραγιδαν is found as also in 180 (and 226).
xx. 1. κλιδαν also in 180.
ibid. χειραν also in 72 84.

POSTSCRIPT.—After passing the other sisters 45, 69, 102 and 104, and upon reaching Apoc. 114 Greg. = Apoc. 115 Scr. (Evan 866) Sod. α 1375, at Rome, Vat. 1882—both of which, Gospels and Apoc., are fragments—I was at once struck by the peculiar part of this large fragment of the middle of the Apoc., græco-lat., in double cols., and noticing that it covered vi. 17 to xiii. 12 (and not as Gregory says vi. 17 to xiii. 2), I remembered the large lacuna in Apoc. 39 of exactly this portion of the book. Upon bringing them together, they correspond exactly.

Apoc. 39 (= Vat. 1136) ends (f°. 2 verso) ηλθεν η ημερα vi. 17.
" (= Vat. 1882) begins (f°. 93 recto) η μεγαλη της οργης αυτου vi. 17 continued.
" (= Vat. 1882) ends (f°. 96 verso) του θηριου πασαν xiii. 12.
" (= Vat. 1136) begins (f°. 3 recto) ποιει ενωπιον αυτου xiii. 12 continued.

So we can cancel Apoc. 114 Greg. = Apoc. 115 Scr., and I have incorporated instead the readings under 39 (where, of course, they belong).

I need not stop to comment on them particularly. The family, it will be remembered, is 7-16-39-45-69-102-104-151-180. Of these three (39 69 and 180) are still actually Græco-latin codices with the Latin opposite as in D of the Gospels.

The new readings of apparent importance are these:

ix. 21. —εκ των φονων αυτων ουτε [not approved by any of the family]

x. 2. —τον δε ενωνυμον επι την γην shared by 136-147-184, but they are both omissions from homoioteleuton.

The rest are chiefly itacisms or grammatical errors, really useless to reproduce, as they are a recurrence of the same things in the other portion, and such peculiarities as ε. ζ̄ for επτα.

Note perhaps among these:

vii. 3. αχρῖσουν φραγΐσωμεν sic

vii. 5. εκ φυλης ρουβῆμ ιβ χιλιαδες εκ φυλης ρουβΐμ ιβ χιλιαδες, the clause repeated with double reading of Reuben's name, not so in the other sister-MSS., but in:

vii. 6. εκ φυλης μανασση ιβ χιλιαδες (Greek, not Latin) is omitted with 69* 180*, 91. 98 boh.

viii. 1. ημιαριον thus: ωσημΐαρΐον, [non fam].

xi. 3. προφητευουσιν So only 120 [against 67].

xi. 4 fin. ἑστῶταίς So 180 however compendiis, and 140.

xiii. 2. αυτον (pro αυτω).

For the rest, we find:

vii. 1. τη sic (pro παν) with 89* 210.

2. +του (ante θεου) with 16-69-102-180 and a few.

3. μηδε (pro μητε) bis with ℵ 16-102-180 and 81-204 f. 114 121 130.

4. των αριθμων with 7-45-104 and 28 50* 67 109 119-144 120 152 207 Compl.

5. δὰν (pro γαδ) Gr. [Lat. planè Gad] with 16-69*gr.*-180*gr.* and 9 13 23 75 130.

14. —και tert. (ante ελευκαναν) with 69-180 only and sah.

viii. 2. του θρονου (pro του θεου) with 69-102-180 and 130.

11. ἀψίνθειον with 16-180.

ix. 2. καπνοῦ (pro καπνος sec.) with 69-102-180 and 218.

4. την σφραγιδαν with ℵ 2.

9. —ιππων with 16-69-102-180 and a few.

18. —εκ tert. with C 69 and 61 146.

x. 5. χειραν with 72 98* 156 [non rel. fam 39].

6. +αμην (post αιωνων) with 16-69-180 and 36 sah (+αμην post αιωνας 102).

9. απηλθα with A 16-69-180 and a few.

xii. 11. μεχρι (pro αχρι) with 16-69-102-180 and a few.

18. [εσταθην] Contra: 69 102 εσταθη, but εσταθην seems established for the family.

xiii. 5. βλασφημίαι with 102-180 and 127-215.

ibid. +και (ante δυο) with A 16-69-180 and 95 127 130 166 [non rel. fam 39].

11. αλλον with 69-180 and a few.

ibid. +τω (ante αρνιω) with 7-16-45-69-102-104-151-180, a regular family reading, plus 200 only (and arm a. 3. 4).

ibid. ελαλη with B 16-69-104-151-180 and a few.

See beyond as to the rest of this family.

Independent Syro-Greek Document. (See 18 and fam 119).

Apoc. 40. Apoc. 40 (=Evan. 141. Ac. 75. P. 86). Rome Vat. gr. 1160. [Scr. 40. Greg. 40, new 141. Sod. δ 408].

Gregory says "sæc. XIII vel XIV", which is much more correct than Birch's "XI." Examined previously by Birch and Scholz. Birch collated the Apoc. and published it with his other collations in 1800. I collated in 1906 from photographs.

There is no inscription, although there is a large space at head of the Apoc.

The MS. is written in a large clear hand, and with some care as regards ν εφελκ., but this does not prevent numerous serious omissions from homoioteleuton, and although it may be unlikely, it would almost seem as if it had been copied from an uncial, from the not infrequent occurrence of ϛνην, ϛνον for καινην and καινον, ϛομενον for καιομενον, διϛωματα for δικαιωματα, yet this is not proof sufficient that such was the case. There is no trace of iota sub- or postscript. The usual contractions are present, except at i. 18, xxi. 7 υιος in full; iv. 4 υιων; iii. 1, xvi. 13, xvi. 14 πνευματα; xvii. 14, xix. 16 κυριων.

There is a tendency also in this MS. to omit the article, a kind of latinism, and a great tendency to transposition, sometimes alone, sometimes with the B group. It is to be noted, in this connection, that wherever B combinations change the order of words, there is no hiatus for want of the final ν, showing late origin of changes and careful revision.

The scribe of 40 was his own διορθωτης, and changes a few letters here and there by knife erasure. We have not noticed these as a rule where it is evident the changes were made promptly by the first hand to correct slips. His ligatures for the terminations ..ον, ..ος, ..ως are almost exactly similar, but as a rule there is small ground for confusion among the readings (except at xxii. 2 αποδιδους εκαστον or εκαστος).

This is a very different MS. from the last, and although of an innocent looking type, we find in it many more solecisms than in 39, our attention being abruptly called to the matter at the outset by several new readings in the first chapter (four out of the six not being noticed by Birch). The MS., conforming in the early part largely to CAB and group, or to the B group, with occasional ℵB combinations, has also a large number of pure "cursive" readings. These look more and more like tracing to a lost uncial family (see xiii. 10–14), given the occasional and sudden new readings which this MS. 40 gives us. The MS. is carefully written, has some corrections, and shows some knowledge of variants, and we can hardly ascribe to carelessness the lapses from the textus receptus or from well-known groups which it indulges in quite frequently.

After chapter iv. we begin the well-known muddle or heterogeneity of readings; see v. 1–6 (detailed further on).

We now annex the "new" readings of the MS., which speak for themselves, and will repay some attention. Most of these are now confirmed by 210, a sister MS. of the same age (dated 1287), which we only found late in the examination.

(Apoc. 210 now proves to be a full sister of 40).

New Readings.

Alone with 29: xx. 12. και βιβλια ηνοιξαν και αλλο βιβλιον ηνοιχθη So 130.

The foregoing is not particularly helpful, and seemingly eclectic. We must go on to the small groups to get a better family resemblance.

The mixture above indicated shows a semi-revision on B and Arethas with very old basic text as a fundamental.

We need go no further at present. Full reference will be found in the general collation to the many pure "cursive" readings, where this MS. joins the others, and which further helps to fix the type.

A study of the Crawford Syriac, however, shows that to have been the base of this MS., long antedating ℵ. It connects thus with 18; with 21-28 etc.; with fam 34-35 etc.; with 36 and 38; with 90; with 95 and 56, and with 97. The old text has been much tampered with, but it will always remain among the interesting cursives. Like 18, 36, and 38 it cried aloud for parentage. It is found in the old Syriac, probably coming down from Græco-latin-syriac sources. In 210 we find the only sister MS. of 40.

Apoc. 41.

Apoc. 41 = Alex.-Vat. 68. [Scr. 41. Greg. 41, new 2021. Sod. α 1572]. Collated by Birch, and placed by him as a XIV^th cent. copy, but Gregory points out that it is an (end of the) XV. cent. work, and by the hand of Georgius Hermonymus of Sparta, Greek professor at Paris, and teacher of Budæus and Reuchlin, who came there in 1472. (Textkritik des N.T., Leipzig 1900). Hermonymus copied several existing MSS. in the XV/XVI. cent., notably Evan^a 17, 30, 70, 287, 288, 880; Act. 116 (=Paul 136. Ap. 53), etc., as shown by Henri Omont (Paris 1885)†. This does not prevent Gregory in Proleg. to Tisch. ed^o. VIII., and elsewhere, from wrongly designating Apoc. 41 as Romæ. Vatic. Reg. gr. 68 instead of Alex.

The inscription is repeated like that of a modern book as heading for each double page: αποκαλυψις ιωαννου | του αποστολου κ̧ ευαγγελιστου.

Some people may say "what is the use of Hoskier collating this worthless XV^th or XVI^th cent. MS., admittedly copied by a Greek professor long after the invention of printing, about the year 1485, or perhaps later; of what possible use bothering with it? Why, to look at it alone demonstrates its lateness and critical worthlessness."

But this reasoning is quite out of date! We will show you that 41 is of very considerable value. In the first place it is more than half-sister to Apoc. 26, and thus eliminates one of the cursives from the long list. In the second place it is full-sister to Apoc. 42 (the next on our list), and thus, for three MSS. we can count one so far, and doubtless the 26-41-42 group will enlarge as we proceed. [Add now 53-107-153-211 and 222, the latter happening to be our oldest dated cursive (A.D. 1015)].

Reduction of number of witnesses.

Mistake not the object of this examination. It is to reduce, not to multiply witnesses. But when they are reduced to a working minimum it must be admitted that they have critical and independent force. Further by establishing the sisterhood of 26 and 42 with 41 and the rest, we can get at a good approximation of the actual errors of transcription in these MSS., an unknown factor so far in these studies, and one which will amply repay investigation.

Now, Apoc. 26, part of the whole N.T. =(Scr. Evan. 492, Act. 193, P. 277) or (Greg. Evan. 506, Act. 199, P. 256, Ap. 26), [a difference of numeration, "triste lumen" and "nec posthac extinguendum", I greatly fear, as related of another distinguished scholar's errors of judgement] at Oxford, Wake 12, was brought from Constantinople as late as 1731 (see Scr. Introduction, 1^st ed^n. 1861), so that its sisterhood to Hermonymus' copy, Apoc. 41, is more interesting, as he had no chance to copy from 26 (which was then in the East), and therefore such sympathetic readings as they have derive from a common ancestor.

The inscription does not agree, but that was often a matter of scribal taste. 26 also is written in two columns of 36 lines each. 41 is written in single col. with only 14 lines to a page. Scrivener collated 26, and it was published after his death in Adversaria Critica Sacra, Cambridge 1893. At page lxxxvii it is described. "There is no case of iota adscript, but eleven cases of iota subscript. Homoioteleuta occur at xviii. 23, xxi. 13, omission from same at xvi. 13. Commas are found when quite useless" (So 41). Scrivener says Wetstein made 87 errors in collating 26. This isn't a very large number. I am sorry to have to say how many Birch made in collating 41 and 42. Scrivener's collation, published posthumously, is for all practical purposes sufficient, and fully confirms the common ancestry of 26. 41. 42, although the proof-reading of the collation had been passed upon a little carelessly, and Scrivener's possible omissions of a few minutiæ might still further strengthen the resemblance.

† This Georgius Hermonymus, who was a scholar far inferior to his pupils Budæus and Reuchlin, was well-known to Erasmus, who describes him as a surly old blockhead, who was neither willing nor able to teach Greek (Jortin's Life of Erasmus, vol. i., p. 23). In a footnote Erasmus is quoted as follows: "Lutetiæ tantum unus Georgius Hermonymus, græce babutiebat, sed talis, ut neque potuisset docere, si voluisset; neque voluisset, si potuisset, etc."

Now Apoc. 42 (=Act. 80. P. 91). Romæ Vat. Pii. II. gr. 50. sæc. XII., has been in Italy a long while, having belonged to Pope Pius II., and was transferred later to the Vatican. It was collated by Birch "twice over," and referred to by Duchesne (De cod. MSS. gr. Pii. II. in Bib. Alex.-Vat., Paris 1870).

Birch unconsciously reveals the close sistership of 41 and 42, but in parts Birch omits over 50% of their various readings, and, as a whole, without counting scribal slips, which he does not wish to record, he omits about 33%, and constantly records readings falsely. Hence it is not a new collation which we give, but, practically, we exhibit a new MS. Where 41 and 42 often agree, sometimes Birch records one and sometimes the other, showing the feebleness of his separate collations, without re-comparison with each other. We have had in this instance to make a record of the case, and find that Birch omits altogether or reports incorrectly in 221 places; out of these he records Apoc. 42 sixty-three times alone where he ought to record agreement with Apoc. 41. He claims to have collated Apoc. 42 twice over; hence this greater accuracy, or we should say lesser inaccuracy, but this does not absolve him from omitting many readings of Apoc. 42, concerning which more will be said later.

Now Apoc. 41 was copied from a cursive, as is seen from xix. 9, where the reading is βεβλημενοι for κεκλημενοι, but from what cursive we do not know yet, as neither 26 nor 42 has this reading. Possibly some of the solecisms of 41 are due to this, unknown, influence. xviii. 3 πρηνους (pro στρηνους), xviii. 7 επρηνιασε, xviii. 9 πρηνιασαντες are in the same category, not having the countenance of either 42 or 26.

[From subsequent examination of Apoc. 53 we find all these are pure errors of 41. For 41 and 53 were copied by the same man from the same MS. (i.e. from a copy of 42 which had incorporated the readings of 42), and 53 does not repeat many blunders of 41, though making plenty of others itself, especially errors of omission due to homoioteleuta].

N.B.—107 also belongs to the family and 153 with 211 222, all a branch of the B family.

Apoc. 42. Apoc. 42 (Ac. 80. P. 91) = Rom. Vat. Pii. II. gr. 50. [Scr. 42. Greg. 42, new 452. Sod. α 206].

We must now treat more particularly of this MS., although its readings are so bound up with those of the previous one (41) that they cannot well be dealt with separately.

Apoc. 42 is described by Gregory as "sæc. XII., col. 1., ll. 21, 22," with a good many marginal corrections. As a matter of fact, there are not very many of these, which occur principally towards the beginning of the book. It belonged to the library of Pius II[d] 1458/1464, which was transferred from S. Silvestri de urbe in the days of Clement XI 1700/1721 to the Vatican.

The date assigned by Gregory (XII.) is correct. The inscription is exactly the same as that of 41, but no two MSS. could look more dissimilar than these, yet they are absolute sisters, consistent from start to finish in their continuous accord. Nevertheless, from chapter i. it is at once apparent that 41 was not copied from 42, and it could not be vice versa owing to the different age of the documents. Further, 26, the half-sister, was not copied from either 41 or 42, nor they from it. They were none of them copied from each other, and all derive from an independent MS. or MSS. of this same class. By independent I do not mean inter-dependent, for that of course they are, but I mean that some MS., independent of them in so far as being removed from them perhaps by centuries, yet remains to be found. Apart from the interdependence of 26. 41. 42, and especially of 41 and 42, they agree rather closely with t.r., although they have a large B element, but it is an ancient form of the B recension, agreeing occasionally with a small A group (ii. 13 etc.), and often following the conjunction of ℵB, sometimes alone or nearly alone with our old friend ℵ, vide iv. 8 αγιος octies (ℵ. 29. 41). [From Scrivener's silence I gather that 26 is not with us here, nor are the new sisters 53-107-153-211-222]; xi. 4 οι (pro αι prim.) ℵ* 26 41. However 41 is slightly closer to ℵ than 42 (e.g. ix. 15, xi. 14, xiv. 15, xxii. 6 etc.). Sometimes with ℵA etc. it clings to the form επεσαν. It is with C. 41. 97 at viii. 1 ημιωρον (but not 26-107). The following group is also noteworthy: xi. 12 αναβατε ℵCAP 9 26 33 41 with 42. And xix. 5 τω θεω (pro τον θεον) ℵCABP and only 9 12 14 27 36 41 and 42. Further: xix. 11 ηνεωγμενον ℵAP and 41 42 alone.

The small group at vii. 9 is noteworthy —και (ante γλωσσων), which is intentional, and the reading of 2, 4, 14, 19, 26, 33, 41, 89. A few times it strikes a chord with fam 34-35, and is with them plus 36, 40, 41 at xii. 16 ηνοιξε and —η γη sec., although 41 is slightly more friendly to this family (35), e.g. xviii. 23 μεγιστανοι, and ix. 2 —εκ του φρεατος ως καπνος 35 plus 1 9 27 etc. We have the Compl. reading ix. 5 πληξη with 10 26 37 41 etc. There are various interesting test passages which the student may well examine, e.g. xiii. 2 ἄρκτου 41, ἄρκου 26 and 42, but thus 42: αρκο͂υ, i.e. αρκου*, αρκτου. xix. 2 αιτινες (pro οτι init.) 26 41 42, xviii. 8 ο κρινας (pro ο κρινων) with 26 etc. against κρινας (—ὁ) of 41. The companionship of 4 is exceptional, e.g. xx. 4 επανω (pro επ') with 4, 26 and 41; xxi. 22 —κυριος, whereas —κυριος ὁ 4, 26, 41; xxi. 5 ιδου ιδου with 4, 26 and 41.

Birch omits to record 137 readings of Apoc. 42, although he says he collated it twice; he quotes it wrongly 15 times, and partially 15 times more. He is therefore reporting wrongly no less than 167 times, and yet his collation is not badly done, as such things go. So difficult is it to be accurate, especially in grouping readings.

In this MS. the form first used was ιδον ιδες throughout, but as it has been invariably corrected by διορθωτης, or later hand, I have not noticed it in the collation. ν εφελκ. is very frequent, but has also been carefully removed throughout by a knife nearly contemporary with the scribe. This shows uncial parentage, and but for a few occasions of iota postscript looks rather like a copy from an old MS. Iota post. occurs on twenty-one occasions (as against eleven recorded by Scrivener for 26, and thirty by me for 41 of iota subscript) as follows:

i. 1. τωι δουλωι
5. τωι αιματι
ii. 1. τωι αγγελωι (but not in the many following places where these words recur)
iii. 21. εν τωι θρονω
iv. 2. εν τωι ουνω
v. 3. εν τωι ουνωι
13. τω αρνιωι
vii. 10. τω θρονωι ibid. τω αρνιωι
11. τωι θω̄
15. αυτωι
ibid. τωι θρονωι
viii. 1. τωι ουνω [Nothing between viii. 1 and xi. 19].
xi. 19. εν τωι ναω
xiv. 16. ἡ γηι (malè). This influence is felt in 53 where our professor writes ἡ γῆ.
xv. 1. εν τωι ουνωι [Nothing between xv. 1 and xix. 21].
xix. 21. τηι ρομφαια
xx. 11. ἡ γηι (malè)
14. αιδης (tantum)
xxi. 27. τωι βιβλιωι
xxii. 18. τωι ακουοντι.

That is, although sometimes with ω, only thrice with η (twice wrongfully) and only once with α (in αιδης).

I have spent some time over this, but not quite uselessly, for I have established the origin of the large misplaced commas in 26 (alluded to by Scrivener) and occurring also in the xv. cent. MS. 41. I find from 42 that they were caused by the presence of iotas postscript in the copy or copies from which 26 and 41 were made. Thus, at xx. 11 Apoc. 42 reads ἡ γηι, wrongly of course, and is followed by Apoc. 41, thus: ἡ γη, although 41 was not copied directly from 42. However, 42 itself has a big comma between γην and οσακις (xi. 6).

In the same way, iota post. after λιθω has been confused with the first vowel of ιασπιδι, resulting in the ασπιδι of Apoc. 41 at xxi. 11.

Thus again Apoc. 42 has ιΰ for δωδεκα frequently, the scribe's betas being nearly all of this form. Apoc. 41 copying from a similar MS. has written throughout ιη, which perforce I must report in collation, making all the δωδεκα to read 18!

Smooth breathings in Apoc. 42 are all square, though frequently the rough breathings are also. Where the margins of the leaves have been cut down in rebinding, some of the occasional marginal readings have been mutilated, but these are not many.

Contractions are frequent, yet not uniform, and we find ιερουσαλημ xxi. 2, and taking this in conjunction with κυριος no less than six times, iv. 11, xi. 8, xix. 6, xxii. 5. 6. 21, κυριε twice, vii. 14, xv. 3, κυριος κυριων twice, xvii. 14, xix. 16, we see the influence at work which caused the scribe of 41 to write out these words in full as a rule, independently of his personal inclinations.

There is very little "error in transmission" as regards the three codices 26, 41, 42. Peculiarities, all but a very few, trace to a common ancestor.

The corrector of 42 has been quite officious and particular. Disapproving of the usual group σπ, στ etc., he has frequently scratched the beginning of the compound and inserted sigma, thus c, often unnecessarily, sometimes with more reason, e.g. εις πασαν for ει σπασαν (v. 6). This corrector quite early dealt with the MS. In a few places where 41 has an error (x. 2 etc.), there is a correction by the officious second hand in 42, yet 42* never read with 41 here, but in the intervening or original MSS. there may have been something which contributed to the errors. This officious corrector in 42 evidently approved of contractions, for he seems to have erased θεου at iii. 12 in 42, the only place where the word θεος or its cases was not contracted, and has $\overline{\Theta_{\text{in ras.}}\upsilon}$.

Apoc. 41 and 42 even present a very general agreement in the matter of accents, thus: xv. 6 λινὸν, xviii. 13 μῦρον, xix. 11 κρινεῖ, xxi. 21 μαργαρῖται.

Apoc. 43. = Rom. Barb. iv. 56 (olim Barb. 23). [Scr. 43. Greg. 43, new 2022. Sod. Aν[401]]. Apoc. 43.

This is part of the Apoc. contained on six (Gregory says five) leaves, Nos. 224-229, out of 233 leaves of miscellaneous matter, comprising portions of the Septuagint.† The MS. is written in 2 cols. of 58 or 59 lines of fine writing. Greg. says XIV. cent., but it is probably XIII. My photographs show that the Apoc. extends to xx. 6 fin., bottom of col. 2, f°. 229 recto, with nearly a column of commentary following on p. 229 verso, the second col. on this page being left blank. It is absolutely inexcusable of Birch to say that it ends at xviii. 20, as xviii. 20 ends on f°. 227 verso, column one, middle of page. Then follows commentary, and xviii. 21 continues (11 lines from the bottom) on same column, runs on to the bottom of the column, and continues on next column towards the end of verse 23, continuing with verse 24, without a break for three lines, before the commentary comes in again at the end of chapter xviii. This is the more inexcusable as verses 22/23 comprise important omissions in many MSS. from homoioteleuton, and we want all the testimony available at this place.

There are no startling readings in the MS. ειδον is found consistently; there are occasional bad itacisms, but they are not general. ν εφελκ., however, is almost constant. Eliminating this feature, Birch has omitted to notice 64 readings in the portion he collated, and reports wrongly five times in addition. The usual contractions are present, except κυριων at xvii. 14, πνευματα at xvi. 14 (as against πν̄ά sic pro πνευματα xvi. 17), and θεου once at xix. 13.

Smooth breathings occur often for rough.

Iota postscript occurs fairly often, and we record the places below, simply for future reference to help identify a relation of this MS.

All told it is probable that if the whole MS. were available it would fall into group 67-120 or 164-166.

We have examined again the bi-columnar 33, but it is not written by the same scribe, and notwithstanding the above sympathy between 33 and 43, they have various opposing readings elsewhere in these six chapters where they are available for comparison. In connection with the last passage cited above in company with all the uncials and only a handful of cursives including 36, we find quite a few places where 43 and 36 agree alone in itacisms.

Group 44-52-82.

Apoc. 44 (Ev. 180. Ac. 82. P. 92)=Rom. Propag. L. VI. 19 formerly No. 250 (Greg. says 251 in error) or Borg. 2, quoted by Birch as "Borg. 4" from a (most partial and absolutely inadequate) collation of Engelbreth. [Scr. 44. Greg. 44, new 180. Sod. α 300]. Apoc. 44.

Now see 52 a very near relation, in fact copied from the same MS.; also 82.

This 44 is an interesting MS. of the whole N.T. Because of an inscription and date, interpreted as equivalent to A.D. 1274, the codex has been said to have been written (as to the Acts, Ep. and Apoc.) by this hand "Johannes ὁ θεοτοκίτης" and at this date, but, from my photos of the Apoc. this hand had nothing to do with the Apoc. and probably not with the rest of the MS. However, the MS. is not of much older date. It came from Cyprus. Gregory says the rest of the MS. is XIV[th] cent., but Scrivener XI[th], and Birch agrees that the Gospels are older than the rest. The codex belonged to the Velitran Museum of "Præsul. Steph. Borgia, Collegii Urbani de Propaganda Fide a secretis," and is cited by Birch in Acts and Apoc. as "Borg. 4," but its former No. was Borg. 2, and is known now as above Prop. L. VI. 19. Birch (Acts, p. xv) quotes from Engelbreth the subscription "ετελειωθη ο παρων πραξαποστολος μηνι νοεμβριῳ του ετους ψ. τ. ψ. π. β. ιωαννης ο θεοτοκιτης εγραψεν."

As a matter of fact this is carelessly written by a younger hand, who did not write the Apoc., and is as follows: "ετελιόθη, ὁ παρὸν πραξαπόστολ μηνὴ νοέβριωι εἰ· τοῦ ἔτουσ ςτ ψ π̂β :— ἰω̄' ὁ θετοκίτησ χ

If ςτ = ς then 6782 is correct=1274 A.D. But it has no importance.

The inscription savours of an older hand and is in the simplest form ἰωάννου ἀποκάλυψις :~ not quoted by Birch. This is the form used in the MSS. 52, 82, 93, 95, 126, 129, 130. Our MS. agrees frequently with the family of 2. We may say, at the outset, that we exhibit a fresh MS. in Apoc. 44, for Engelbreth did not collate at all. He only examined a few select passages apparently, as Birch only quotes "Borg. 4" at i. 8 (one out of three variations), iv. 3 (where it is wrongly given for σαρδειω, whereas it reads σαρδιω), and at iv. 11, v. 9, 10 bis, vi. 8, viii. 7, ix. 6 (partially), ix. 7, x. 1, xi. 15, xvii. 17, xx. 14, xxii. 8, 17, 18, 19, 20.

The MS. is carefully written, but when the scribe does blunder, he does not hesitate to make a bad one. The MS. was not revised. See xvi. 7, which is all the more important.

No trace of iota sub- or postscript, except a suspicion of iota post. at xiv. 3 αιδουσιν [αιδης is found twice in 82], but α is usually made with such a long turned up stroke as in some others: α, that this has no significance. Once again at xx. 15 εν τω βιβλιωι at the end of a line, thus βιβλί, but the stroke may not be for iota. Nowhere else is there any trace.

On the other hand there are no ν εφελκ. to speak of, but αλλα is written in full before a vowel.

ειδον always occurs, and φιλαδελφεια etc., but οξια at i. 16 (with CA). The MS. was no doubt made from an old copy, however, as at xv. 1 ιδου occurs for ειδον, a new reading (with 52-82), others only reading ιδον (ℵCAB and a few cursives), and it is evidently a miscopy for ιδον.

Contractions are very thorough, even ιωαννης is written ιω̄ at xxii. 8, but not in the first chapter. υιος and its cases are the only words, generally contracted, which we find here sometimes in full (υιον i. 13, xii. 5, xiv. 14 and υιων ii. 14, vii. 4, xxi. 12; υιος ii. 18, xxi. 7), besides κυριε vii. 14, κυριων xvii. 14, and κυριος κυριων xix. 16.

As regards the text of this MS. there is also very little nonsense. True, there are some new readings, many of them plain errors, as no διορθωτης was employed, which makes the history of the MS. all the more interesting. It is a good type of a direct mediæval and careful copy of an older MS., with all the ιδους revised to ειδους etc. as stated before. We get a glimpse of the real type at xvi. 13 where the omission, ex homoiotel., of εκ του στοματος του δρακοντος και is countenanced by C 9-27 39[non fam] 154-212 with the sister MSS. 52-82, and we can see elsewhere quite a good deal of C influence. Like other MSS. it has shared in the B revision, but it shows plenty of ℵB readings, also AB readings, those alternative readings of very ancient and somewhat later revision, combining in results, and sometimes the ℵBP readings, which are keys to the weight to be accorded to the ℵB version, for where P joins them, there is an added influence at work. BP combinations are also found sometimes, but are of little weight, though helping to group and arrange MSS. The important passages to investigate are these combinations of ℵBP, showing old revision revived and continued. Also those of CBP. B's plain revision was too thorough; see xxi. 15 —και το τειχος αυτης. B here is only followed by a few cursives. Our MS. follows B rather slavishly in spots, see xiii. 8, xiv. 3, 8, xxii. 1. It also omits και οινον with the B group at xviii. 13.

In the early chapters, besides a considerable B element, it has a certain affinity for some A readings, and especially for the CAB combination. It is noteworthy in omitting ειναι (ii. 2) with ℵCAP, being the first of our cursives to join this elder group.

For the most part, however, it runs on smoothly along family lines, but, occasionally (v. 2-6, xiv. 3, xvi. 12-14 etc., referred to in detail below) it presents very mixed readings, like many other MSS.

It shows us its ancient lineage in a forcible manner at xi. 13, reading εν φοβω with ℵ and 14-92 201 *syr*S (with 52-82) alone, and again at xx. 2 ὁ (pro ος) with ℵ 143 178-203-240 only, but not 52-82. A certain number of "cursive" readings informs us of that other unknown influence also at work; I mean the readings unrepresented by any uncial MSS. known to us, and supported only by other cursive MSS.

Those particularly noticeable are ii. 3, xvi. 18, xix. 20† and the close of the book, where the original scribe may have stopped at ναι, the αμην following, being, as far as I can judge from the photographs, by another hand. Below this, is a line of border design closing the work without subscription, and on the next page the subscription and date by quite a different hand, which has been referred to previously. [82 also closes abruptly at xxii. 20 ναι prim.].

† We now see from 52 and 82 that the first was an error of 44, but that the readings in xvi. 18 γεγονασιν and xix. 20 πλανωντας really were found in the archetype.

To the above unique readings we may add three more, at xviii. 13. μύσον for *μυρον non 52 (= μύρ́\ fin. lin.) non 82 = μῦρον.

xxii. 9. In place of μη, which has been effaced, is written apparently, πιστεὺς, but by a second hand. non 52-82, and at

xxii. 11. a most curious exegetical gloss occurs above the line, thus:

ο $\overset{\text{μη}}{\text{αδικῶν}}$ αδικησατω ετι · και ο ρυπαρος$^{\text{μη}}$ ρυπαρευθητω ετι non 52-82, but whether the additions of μη are by the original scribe I cannot say for certain, though it is quite likely.

In collating from photographs, no difficulties arise except in cases like this, where we are debarred from distinguishing the different colour of the inks used by various hands.

Note at:

xiv. 4. —παρθενοι γαρ εισιν with 52-82 only.
18. —σου (post πεμψον) with 40-210 and 52-82. } *syr*S.
ibid. +σου (post δρεπανον sec.) with ℵ 12 29 and 52-82. }

Alone with ℵCAP 81-204 146 200 210[non 40].

ii. 2. λεγοντας εαυτους αποστολους (—ειναι) So also 52-82.

We may also notice the double readings of the first hand:—

xi. 1. $\overset{\text{αι}}{\text{εγειρε}}$ sic (non 52-82)
6. υετος βρεχει$^{\text{η}}$ sic (non 52-82), which he has written thus, without erasure, as alternatives.

Similarly:

xviii. 14. ὁ πωἵρα, which is not clear as to meaning; non 52-82.

Again:

xi. 15. λεγουσαι txt. λεγοντες marg., without erasure [λεγοντες 52*txt.* 82*txt.*].

A study of this MS. will show much difference in general character and temperament from those hitherto under review. It is the more important to notice this witness, as, so far, we have been quite unacquainted with the body of its readings, Birch having only given a handful. It is eclectic and yet not eclectic, it is mixed and again not mixed, it is independent, and again very dependent and interdependent. The inscription is in the oldest form, yet it is well acquainted with exceptional readings (has some itself), and although much influenced by B, as well as by the so-called pure cursive readings, takes us back to ℵ and has some quite important uncial combinations.

GROUP 7-16-39-45-69-102-104-151-180.

Apoc. 45 (Ac. 89. P. 99) = Laur. iv. 32, at Florence. (mut. xx. 4/xxi. 20, not noticed by others). [Scr. 45. Greg. 45, new 459. Sod. α 104]. Apoc. 45.

According to Scrivener and Gregory, the MS. was written by John Tzutzuna, priest and monk, and Cales his mother, in the reign of Alexius Comnenus, Nicolas being patriarch of Constantinople, in 1093. It contains also the treatise of Dorotheus (Bishop of Tyre in Julian's reign) on the 12 Apostles and on the 70 disciples, found also in other codices, e.g. Act. 10, 17, 179; Paul 266; Erasmus N.T., and partly in Stephen's of 1550.

I have photographs of the Apoc. only, from the last page of which I gather that there is other foreign matter, as, immediately following the end of Apoc. (no subscription, but a florcate horizontal border) is the beginning of a N.T. lexicon. There are some leaves missing towards the end, producing the large lacuna xx. 4 επ αυτους...xxi. 20 ...ο ιᾱ υακινθος.

Birch collated the first three chapters, and enters into a long disquisition (pp. xvi–xviii.) to show that this MS. is not identical with Wetstein's 23, but the matter has but slight importance. Birch properly calls attention to the similarity of the readings of this codex to those of Apoc. 7, though (p. xviii Prol.) he slightly misquotes Apoc. 45 at i. 5, and on p. 2 of the Collations. He is, as usual, painfully careless, noticing but 30% of the various readings [not even some of the new ones (ii. 11)], but does not often quote wrong where he cites at all.

Until now the rest of the MS. has been hidden from us. It develops, however, that it is a pure sister to Apoc. 7 (dated 1087) throughout. This MS., Harleian 5537, Mill's "Covell. 2" and Wetstein's 7, was well recollated by Scrivener. It is "a small 4° of 286 vellum leaves" (containing Act. 21, Paul 31, besides Apoc. 7), having 23 lines on each page, in a very neat and clear hand. On fol. 100^B, between the Cath. and Pauline epistles, after other matter, (which seems to fix the country of the MS. to the shores of the Aegean sea), we read ετελειωθη δε ὁ ἁγιος αποστολος μετα και της αποκαλυψεως μή μαιω ηγουν τη Ν̄ [i.e. Pentecost] · ινδ. ῑ · ετ. ςφϞε [=1087] · βασιλευοντος αλεξιου του κομ....και νικολαου πατριαρχου.

So that the MS. 7 is practically of the same date as Apoc. 45. I hardly think that either one was copied directly from the other, but rather that they are faithful copies from an uncial prototype made at about the same time by unlearnèd but fairly careful scribes. As we have not enlarged on Apoc. 7 before in these notes (it having been carefully collated by Scrivener), it will be convenient to take the matter up now, and it will readily be seen how extremely close are these two, Apoc. 7 and 45, throughout.

Now add 151-180 to 7-45, while the rest of the family 16-39-69-102-180 belong together.

Apoc. 45 is evidently written on very inferior vellum, much of the ink is rubbed off, and the photographer has not been able in places to get a perfect photograph owing to creases in the vellum. Nevertheless, with the help of 7, I have been able to read practically everything, and even the variation iii. 18 ασχημοσυνη for αισχυνη, almost illegible and passed over entirely by Birch, though he collated from the MS. itself.

It develops further that both 16 and 39 are half-sisters and very close to 7-45†, though some influence intervened between them and the original of 7 and 45, which causes the 16 group at times to take on something of a different type.

As regards 45 we first note that the long inscription agrees word for word with that of 7 (16 differs). Next, the MS. does not seem as old as 1093, and assuming this date to be correct, our dates for most MSS. are generally placed conservatively late.

The usual contractions are found throughout, except πνευματα in full once; θεου in full vii. 15; and κυριος κυριων sic xvii. 14, xix. 16.

† See v. 8 μεσταs (pro γεμουσαs) the whole family alone.

It was probably copied from an uncial from the way the words are joined.

Iota sub. and post. are entirely absent (as in Ap. 7), except possibly at

i. 15. χαλκῶλιβανῳ
vi. 8. αυτῳ
xvii. 17. θηριῳ

but in no case is the stroke directly under the letter.

The MS. varies between φιλαδελφεια and —ια, but has always ειδον (whereas 7 writes ιδον throughout), except xii. 12. ιδως for ειδως xvii. 18. ιδες.

Note also that at xvii. 6 ιδων of t.r. is the reading of 45, whereas 7* obstinately reverses its usual course and writes ειδων with ℵ.

In the earlier chapters the regular family likeness of 7-16 +P is found, bearing away from the B group, which is not at all in line. Later, about the vi[th] chapter, we find B coming in as a more important force.

P really revises more than fam 7, e.g. ii. 15 P reading the conflate ομοιως ο μισω, against ομοιως (pro ο μισω) of ℵCAB fam 7 and nearly all others.

At ii. 27 most of fam 7 go with ℵCA and t.r. συντριβεται against the συντριβησεται of BP and all other cursives.

Between chapters iii. and iv. we find in the text (but only here) π̔ τῆς ὁραθείς θύρ ἐν οὐνω with 7 and 16, showing undoubted copy from same parent (39 leaves a blank line). This gives us a fair idea of the license used by the different scribes; i.e. license, if they did not use more than one exemplar to copy from. We know in the case of 16 (which accounts for its differing more from 7 and 45 than they do from each other) that several MSS. were used as a basis (see vii. 3 etc.).

The scribe of 45 was ignorant, but careful, apparently reproducing itacisms and ν εφελκ. where found in his copy, but not adding to them. I do not understand, however, the consistent ειδον of 45 against the equally consistent ιδον of 7.

At xiv. 1 εκατονσαρακοντα τεσσαρις of both 7 and 45 shows perhaps the most slavish copy from the original.

The scribe of 45 was of an imaginative disposition, giving us the novelty at viii. 12 and xxi. 23 of the moon in her last quarter for σεληνης in the text (cf. Magical Papyri of IV[th] century at Paris and London for this). Not 7 nor the others (nor 45 elsewhere). Only 170 171 174 support in viii. 12, and 170 in xxi. 23. The same might be said of γλυκαζων (for γλυκυ) x. 10, except that the scribe of 7 also writes thus and also 104-151 completing the sub-family here.

Now let us take the idiosyncracies of 45:

i. 12. ἥτι (pro ητις)
ii. 11. —λεγει So 218.
20. ἀφῆς (pro εας) (αφης 164, αφῆς 200 210 251, αφις C). αφιης al.

Rather different are:

xiii. 17. η πωλησαι η αγορασαι (pro αγορ. η πωλησαι) (Only 18 has the double ἤ : ἤ αγορασαι ἤ πωλησαι).
xvi. 13. —τρια So 62-136-147-162/3-184 and 113, but not the family.
xvii. 11. —και quart. So 81-204 f. 114.
16. αἳ (pro ἃ)
xviii. 11. αὐτὸν (pro αὐτῶν)
18. κλαιοντες ex emend. (pro ορωντες) ibid. μεγαλει
21. ἧς (pro εἷς)
22. ακουσθει bis [ακουσθει sec. 7].
xx. 3. λυθειναι αυτον
xxi. 21. —οἱ So 204.
xxii. 2. το φυλλον (pro τα φυλλα) and το φυλον 104.

It seems hardly necessary to give the few places where 7 differs from 45. They will be found in the general synoptical collation, and consist chiefly of itacisms.

We give now the complete (and unique) agreement of 7 and 45.

In fine and in brief then, we have here a mixed MS., partaking of old forms of spelling, as well as of careless itacism, with some readings showing influence of a certain recension (of probable Latin-African origin) on the original exemplar, and we can deal with it to greater advantage now we have so large a group. But it is not a very satisfactory text, though Mill thought so well of 7. It is too mixed. We may note quite a few "Complutensian" readings, borne witness to here, although unsupported by 10 or 37 or the other family MSS. to follow.

I fear I have done but scant justice to the larger subject involved, but while this "old" text bears witness to not a few passages where the textus receptus is nearly alone, I do not feel confidence in this group.

GROUP 46-88-101-137. Subdivision of the great 1 family.

Apoc. 46 (Ev. 209. Ac. 95. P. 108) = S. Marc. Venice No. 10 (old catalogue). [Scr. 46. Greg. 46, new 209. Sod. α 1581]. Small long 8° in shape, containing the whole N.T. of about XII. century, but the Apoc. later (XIV–XV.). The MS. once belonged to Bessarion, who had it with him at the Council of Florence in 1439. Birch had a high opinion of it, rating it next to the great Vatican B. He gives a small number of readings from the Apoc. furnished by Engelbreth apparently, which give no idea of the MS.† Apoc. 46.

There is a question as to Apoc. 46, 88 and 101 (101 Scr. = 109 Greg.) being copied from each other, which is raised by Scrivener under Evan. 205 (Ac. 93, P. 106, Ap. 88), Evan. 206 (Ac. 94, P. 107, Ap. 101), and Evan. 209 (Ac. 95, P. 108, Ap. 46), which will be easy of solution. The Apoc. 88 of Evan. 205, written for Cardinal Bessarion, is, however, as beautifully written as 46 (which is said to have served as a model) is rough. It is in a latish Western hand, somewhat difficult to read correctly in places, e.g. the ligatures for ου, ων, and ω above the line, being very similar; πολεως, αδελφος are often written in elaborate short hand, and the ligature for εστι and εστιν is unusual for a MS. apparently so late.

There is no inscription at the head of the Apoc., although the first A of Αποκαλυψις of the text is missing, the space, no doubt, being reserved for a large or ornate capital.

Ιωαννης is always contracted except where it is given by mistake at xiv. 4 for ιησου, and written υπο ιωαννου in full.

Iota sub. or postscript never occurs. ειδον is consistently found, but φιλαδελφια is given in the early form. ν εφελκ. is conspicuously absent. Usual contractions. Although a rough looking western MS. it is quite carefully written by a scholar. After a while, however, he gets tired enough to omit some clauses by homoioteleuton, e.g. at xi. 5, omission by no others. The other changes made are very deliberate. There are a few scratchings, sometimes of a whole line, but not as it seems to correct a reading, but rather to correct a mere error of copying. Intrinsically the MS. seems to bear evidence of being a somewhat faithful copy of the scribe's original, whatever it was; but there are many novelties not easy to account for, which will be recorded presently. There are a good many changes in the order of words, the limit of decency in this transposition being reached at xvii. 16. This looks like the result of careless transcription, where the writer began wrong and preferred not to erase (as in other more faithful copies) and ran on with the foregoing word, as it did not seem to him to affect the sense.

I noted the following at the time of collation:

"The manuscript's untrustworthiness is at once shown by two new readings, i. 14 "ωσπερ for ως or ωσει (all the fam. 46-88-101-137), and i. 16 —οξεια (all the fam. and "143 149); and by the diverse families followed in the same verse, viz.:

"i. 13 { —επτα with CAP. 1. 12. 21-28. 38 etc. μασθοις „ ℵ. 7. 12. 22. 29. 45. 97 etc.

"In chapter ii. there are six new readings. Of these Birch and Engelbreth omit "three, and misquote two, merely giving correctly the omission of the whole verse 21.‡

"In the early chapters it is sometimes with B and sometimes against it (e.g. iii. 18 "in the same verse). It is the only one found with t.r. and AP at iii. 16."

‡ And so on throughout. Just as bad or worse at ch. viii. etc. Their collation is perfectly scandalous and pitiful. I have only marked, as a rule, "malè Birch" where he actually blunders in giving a reading. For the rest, the student must trust my collation and ignore Birch altogether.

I rise from my complete examination with different feelings, and I record this merely to show how untrustworthy is partial examination. We read in Scrivener "Hort collated the first five chapters" (of some MS.) "and sent his results to ——. It is similar in text to B." Such deductions are as stupid for our purpose as indeterminate. As a matter of fact the recension of the first five chapters of the Apocalypse itself frequently differs from that used for the remainder of the Book in many MSS.

Now this MS. abandons B and group at ch. vi., where others generally begin to follow. It is another of those MSS. with a misleading exterior. Although late, it contains a very important text. The opening chapters are a little disappointing, it is true, the text being of a mixed character, but it falls into line soon after with a regular group, abandoning nearly all sympathy for B and company except in combination with the great uncials. It should be noticed where 46 agrees with B, for it is thoroughly eclectic in its treatment of this problem. It looks almost as if, ignoring the B type and its later following, it only records the earlier changes which influenced B itself; hence it represents a type of the purer B text, before it was meddled with.

While allied to Apoc. 1, it is more important than this MS., adopting practically all the readings attested by the five uncials, whether 1 agrees or not, and, as previously pointed out, in 1. 10. 12. 17. 21. 36. 37. 38 we have a series, now joined—or rather led—by 46, where what is best in what is known as the textus receptus finds a place, plus the full countenance of the five uncials or a majority of them. Birch already saw a resemblance to CA from the pitifully imperfect collation of Engelbreth, who does not give one reading in four (nay, often not one in ten) of our MS., but it is much more than this.

We find again, as so often, a few of the unique readings, so far lodged to the debit of ℵ, to be read in this MS. 46. This only shows the stem of 46 to be very old, for many of these ℵ or A readings of exceptional character were merely the result of uncial copying during the first four centuries, and due to scribal infirmity. The trouble is, however, as in the case of Apoc. 12, though not so emphasized, that our MS. indulges in new specialties, which might cause us to mistrust it as a whole. This need not necessarily be the case, or we should have to apply this rule to all the uncials, held in such great esteem.

I think 46 perhaps comes nearer C than almost any other MS.

Apoc. 46 is really nearer the textus receptus than Apoc. 1 itself, and we have no doubt now of the true ending of Apoc. 1, which is wanting from xxii. 16 δᾶδ to the end. If Erasmus used Apoc. 1 as a model, then surely Aldus and Stephen must have had access to Apoc. 46 or a sister-MS.

Note, absolutely alone with the St. 1550 edn. πολλα at v. 4, no uncial or cursive MS. reading thus, all others πολυ (πολυν B 92) and πολλοι by 1. See also at viii. 5 το . . . αυτο.

The problem, as will be seen, is becoming simpler; and henceforward we shall be able to deal with this large mass as it deserves. But to do this, look at the plodding required! Engelbreth's labours are nearly thrown away, and are of no real value in the premises. We must have exact and thorough collation and tabulation of many MSS. before we can proceed. The history of the printed text is opening up, and, before we close, we shall shed light on many dark places, which should have been done very long ago.

In contrast to the enormous agreement with Apoc. 1, observe, on the other hand, the readings peculiar to this MS. (now all agreed to by 137 except where marked):

Now, notwithstanding all the above, it must be understood that the MS. is not a vicious MS. In these novelties there are only a couple of pure errors, and no "monstra" (unless we except vii. 12 +αγιος ter, viii. 7 υδατι (pro αιματι) and xiv. 4 υπο ιωαννου which is due to lack of care, or thoughtlessness); and the other serious variations are not very numerous.

The foregoing will repay careful study. It gives a fair photograph or picture of many important characteristics of the MSS. which centre round 46. The only ones very closely related will be seen by the additional numbers I have added from subsequently collated documents. For the rest, we must refer the reader to the larger groups in the collation itself to do justice to the subject.

Now see 88 and 101, which are pure duplicate and triplicate of this MS.

Under 88 will be found the few and insignificant places where they disagree.

One thing stands out clearly. The scribes or he who employed them (Bessarion?) in the early xv. cent. (?) to copy 88 and 101 were absolutely slavish to their original. There are no marginal or other changes, and even in a doctrinal passage like xii. 11 αὐτοῦ (pro αὐτῶν prim.) 46-88-101-137 alone, with 22 47 87 100 *gig h syr*S, cause the passage to run as smoothly as elsewhere. Notice the change of sense here:

> "καὶ αὐτοὶ ἐνίκησαν αὐτὸν διὰ τὸ αἷμα τοῦ ἀρνίου, καὶ διὰ τὸν λόγον τῆς μαρτυρίας αὐτῶν (vel αὐτοῦ), καὶ οὐκ ἠγάπησαν τὴν ψυχὴν (τὰς ψυχὰς 23 f. 34 113 124 130 Prim. Beat.) αὐτῶν ἄχρι θανάτου."

Now add to the 1-46 family 59-121 and especially 62 (plus its copy 63) and allies, and also 67-120 81-204 f. 95 f. 97 152-179 f. 178 etc., and trace them all to the old Syriac Crawford source, with Latin sources of perhaps the same age.

And finally add our 137, a full sister in every respect, but a commentary MS., whereas 46-88-101 are absolutely without commentary of any kind. The four MSS. seem to have been executed independently from some common source.

INDEPENDENT CHURCH STANDARD.

Apoc. 47 (Evan. 241. Act. 104. P. 120) = Dresd. A. 172. [Scr. 47. Greg. 47, new 241. Sod. δ 507]. Apoc. 47.

This is a lovely MS. [XI.] of the whole N.T. Bought by one Alexius in Constantinople in 1453. Later presented by Pachomius to one of the monasteries on Athos in 1616, and brought back by one Arsenius to Moscow a century and a half later. Matthaei used it, stole it, and sold it to Dresden in 1788. This is Matthaei's k. The handwriting is beautiful.

Speaking of it for the Gospels (Matthew volume, 1st edn., p. xxxiii) he says: "Pulcre et diligenter scriptus. Habet tamen interdum lectiones vel ex interpretibus vel ex græcismo." Under Acts he says nothing. Under Cath. Ep. he says: "Cod. membranaceus sec. XI. pulcerrime et accuratissime scriptus." In the other vols. nothing, and in the Apoc. volume he compares it thus with his r, l and p [viz. (Apoc. 50^2 Scholz =) Apoc. 90 Scr. Tisch. Greg. (Dresd. A. 95), Apoc. 48, and Apoc. 50 respectively]. "Optimi sunt r, l et p ex diversis, sed optimis exemplaribus ducti... Medius inter utrumque genus est k. Quando ergo hi quinque [this includes codex o = Apoc. 49] inter se consentiunt, de integritate textus vix ullo in loco dubitare licet. Eadem est ratio cum ad auctoritatem r, l et p accedit k; sed k et o contra r, l, p, non sunt audiendi."... This last remark is not borne out by the facts.

The scribe of 47 was his own antiballōn or diorthotēs, and has added his few corrections (generally additions of a few words here and there) in the same fine handwriting, only smaller than the body of the text. The closing page of the Apoc. is arranged so that the writing of these last verses, from ειμι η ριζα και το γενος δᾱδ to the αμην of xxii. 21, is in the form of a cross, and yet is so ingeniously arranged that the page also takes the form of capital T, evidently signifying τελος as well.

There is no iota postscript, and iota subscript only occurs at v. 9 ᾄδουσιν ᾠδὴν, and once again to the addition ἐμπορευσῃ. This iota shows that the commentary known to the scribe was younger than the text.

ειδον occurs throughout, as also λαοδικειαν, φιλαδελφειαν etc., though at iii. 7 the scribe began to write φιλαδελφι, and evidently revised his copy to conform to XIth century usage, writing ειa.

No cases of ν εφελκ. Punctuation careful and generally correct. Accents correct and careful, sometimes corrected by the scribe himself in revision; but notice ii. 24 βάλω.

The MS. was probably copied from a very early cursive, and evidently that cursive was copied very carefully from an older uncial. I consider this a very important MS., and much under-estimated by Matthaei. The family group is interesting. I was able to dismiss Apoc. 22 in a very few pages of description. The same applies to this MS., its partial sister; the reason being largely the same, viz. the care with which they were executed. We will notice frequent agreement between 47 and 22, showing, as anticipated under 22, that this latter MS. was revised by 22 and 22 on the closer sister to 47, an archetype of the Xth century or earlier, very highly thought of at that time. See remarks on Apoc. 22, written long before I had seen this MS.

The usual contractions are present throughout, except υιος and cases, which are consistently written in full, as in the best MSS. πνευματα is found only twice in full, xvi. 13, 14; and $\overline{κσ}$ κυριων at xvii. 14, xix. 16, with κυριε once at vii. 14.

Like Apoc. 22, it is a good clean MS., agreeing often with the textus receptus (especially in the order of words), but nearly always to be found with the uncial groups when you expect it to agree, and not, like many, choosing a middle path for itself. Although well acquainted with the commentary of Andreas, it does not often fall into errors transcribed from the commentary. Thus, 22 also, which itself is surrounded by the commentary.

We get a good view of this manuscript's forerunners' view of the B recension.

While this revision shows a transition stage between the A and B readings in certain places, without undue servility to B throughout, it exhibits much of the text. rec., especially in the order of words and clauses, showing the high antiquity of the t.r., before B came into play. And this must be borne in mind.

Note also agreement with t.r. in such places as xviii. 22/23, where omissions from homoioteleuton in so many MSS. have led to corruption. For this reason we wish to emphasize again the value of 22 and 47 as pure witnesses, and we do this the more, as Matthaei's collation of 47 has been before us for 140 years, yet until we analyze and search out the bearing of each MS. on the problem, we lose sight of the value of the readings as such.

Observe, however, xii. 11 αὐτοῦ (pro αὐτῶν), where we abandon the t.r., has an important doctrinal bearing. 47 is supported by 22*f.* 46 87 100 *h gig syr*S.

We note επεσεν επεσε also passim, another proof of the antiquity of our archetype, so carefully preserved, and have no nonsense like αγιος six, eight or nine times repeated, instead of threefold (true reading, confirmed by Tertullian).

On the other hand, the following list of singular readings has not helped to identify any other relatives, but emphasizes that 47 is in a class by itself, having been imperfectly revised to Church standards by the original redactor.

Unique readings (not expunged by the old revisor) again, as so often, are largely due either to retranslation or the influence of an old diglot or triglot. See also the company kept when not alone of 56 f. 119, f. 178, latin and syr.

The moderate relationship of the archetype of Apoc. 1 is here emphasized perhaps more than the others.

Before closing, we must say that for all ordinary practical purposes Matthaei's accuracy is sufficient. We find but 19 omissions, and 9 citations misrepresented in this MS. This is indeed a refreshing exhibit compared to others' labours in this field. The task of bringing together in the notes of a published volume like his these collected readings from sundry MSS. adds to the danger of inaccuracies and errors. This is the first time he has been seriously followed over his ground, and the result would have led me to be content with extracting the various readings from his notes for Apoc. 48, 49, 50 and 90, but that his standard of comparison was quite different (ed. Oxford 1703, J. Gregorius, f°.) and I should have had to collate that afresh with Scrivener's reprint of Stephen, so we will continue our labours, while thanking Matthaei for the check his work affords on our own. I am relieved to find that he only convicted me of one omission in this MS.

NOTE.—Pray do not let me be misunderstood as to what I have said above concerning this MS. and the textus receptus. I do not refer to the "plain and clear errors" which we all know exist in it. I do mean, that, by the Providence of God, our received text has come down fairly pure, and such MSS. as 47 merely testify that its age is high and that much unnecessary change crept into the text of the MSS. from the VIIIth century down through B etc., which may be safely neglected, numbers to the contrary notwithstanding.

P.S. to 47.—A very careful review of Gwynn's Crawford Syriac carries 47's occasional minority readings back to a very early age, long antedating our uncials. One can nearly always identify the critical readings here. They are not very many and are very interesting. The MS. should be used as a key. It represents about as early a Greek text as existed with knowledge of certain rare doctrinal variants approved by Coptic, Syriac and Latin early sources.

Group 4-20-48-64-74.

Apoc. 48.

Apoc. 48 (Ev. 242. Ac. 105. P. 121) = Moscow syn. 380 of the old Matthaei catalogue, newer No. 407, or Vladimir's No. 25 = Matthaei's l. [Scr. 48. Greg. 48, new 242. Sod. δ 206].

About xii., written with care in a neat small hand and prepared for the smaller lections, which were never added. There are no corrections by first or later hands. The scribe, though an expert penman, held himself in excellent control, reserving fancy flourishes and the more elaborate ligatures for the top line of a page, where there was plenty of room.

Matthaei says there is no inscription, but, that in the picture prefixed to the book, is to be read "ο αγιος ιωαννης ο θεολογος." My photographs do not include this picture.

There are no ν εφελκ., but the usual contractions (except πνευματων i. 4, πνευμα xiv. 13, πνευματα xvi. 13, 14; ανθρωπων xxi. 3, ανθρωπου xxi. 17; κσ κυριων xvii. 14, xix. 16), and ειδον is practically constant. Iota post., which we rather expected, is not found, nor iota sub. except at ii. 2 δύνῃ, iii. 18 περιβάλλῃ, xvi. 3 θαλάσσῃ, xviii. 13 ῥᾳδων (new thus), ἠνεῴχθη xx. 12. Nowhere with ᾅδης or other words.

Matthaei has collated this ms. with great care (having only nine errors), but he had too high an opinion of it. I have quoted his words under Apoc. 47 "optimi sunt r, l, et p" etc.; and its relative unimportance is not brought out in his small group of five, k, l, o, p, r (i.e. 47, 48, 49, 50, 90). It has, however, the merit of being very carefully executed, having very few singularities (only eleven), and this enables us the more readily to class it at once as full sister to Apoc. 4—(though neither is copied from the other)—a ms. at Paris, which I dismissed with a few lines.

Full family now 4-20-48-64-74.

This fact is instantly developed at i. 4, where the ms. reads του of t.r. with only 4 and 21 (plus possibly 16*, 19*, 22*) and holds this sympathy for 4 (a ms. with Arethas commentary) throughout.

Apoc. 4 and 48 steer a careful course, omitting many of the peculiar lections derived from Aretas or Arethas, but are too slavish to B to class anywhere but with this recension. See e.g. iii. 16 ἐμμέσαι with B*.

In the first six chapters they are with B or CAB etc., but principally with AB (without C), or with B alone; occasionally with ℵB. At iv. 8 we find αγιος novies (occupying a whole long line) with B etc. Later, we find varying combinations, but still a distinct leaning to B and group. In ch. xi. xii. C comes in, e.g. xi. 18 διαφθειραντας, and xii. 12 ἐκραζεν. This mixture is best illustrated at x. 7 ετελεσθη with ℵCAP etc. (contra B etc.), and same verse immediately following, τους δουλους αὐτου τους προφητας B etc. (contra ℵCAP etc.). We have already mentioned 21 as companying with 4 and 48 at i. 4 του, but this relation is rather distant. We find it again, however, in quite characteristic places, e.g. xi. 15 +ιησου χριστου (post ημων) and —και του χριστου αυτου with the addition of και (ante του κυριου preceding) with the 4 family and the rest of the 21 group.

Pure "cursive" readings abound, e.g. ch. xiii. 9–14, out of eleven variations the ms. follows the pure cursive group seven times, B and group three times, ℵAB etc. once.

Beyond this chapter we find a great deal of "mixture" together with the B readings.

For some unaccountable reason 4 and 48 abandon B in three changes at xvii. 8, while immediately after at xvii. 10 the scribe of 48 has ἔστῐν, showing an absolute mastery of the B recension, B (and 17 210) reading εστην. [18 has ἔστη, E has ἔστη. Cf. arm a. and arab]. 48 is also well aware of the B changes, see xvii. 16 etc.

Before giving our usual lists of solecisms, agreement alone with 4 etc., we must mention one point which might lead to misunderstanding. As said before, the ms. was prepared for the smaller divisions or κεφ. (in contradistinction to the 24 λογοι), and someone has added the capital letters at i. 4, 8, and 12, but from here on, they are omitted, thus causing lectiones variæ, which have no existence in fact, e.g. i. 15 —ἡ ante φωνη prim., and with which we forbear to burden our collation, adding the list here, for good reasons. (N.B.—We are unable to re-compare the MS. 4 with these lessons).

The scribe left no sign in the margin of these omissions. They occur always at the beginning of a line. Matthaei notices them properly only when they require it. Thus we have some cases of ιδον evidently unintentional, the ε to be supplied later. They are :

Counting the three marked at the beginning, there would be in all 81 κεφ. in this MS.

As regards B, the MS. is with it alone of the uncials together with lesser or greater cursive support, no less than 185 times out of total variations from t.r. of 835.

With AB etc. 23 times
With ℵB etc. 23 „
With CB etc. once
With BP etc. 16 times, not counting other threefold and fourfold B combinations against one remaining uncial, where, very possibly B's company is right.

It is, on the other hand, three times with ℵCAP against B, and with ℵAP (where C is wanting) seven times, and with ℵAC (where P is wanting at the end) — times.

I have entered into this matter as largely, because a sharp line is sometimes ruled by this MS. with 4, 20, 31, 32, 34 etc. against B. Note the division of forces at xviii. 13. Instead of omitting και οινον with B and group (q.v.) we have the reading και ελαιον και οινον with 4. 6. 14. 20. 31. 32. 34. etc.

Of unique readings there are but few, as follows:

i. 4. ιωαννη This is doubtless the reading, though probably intended for ιωαννης.
iii. 9. μου (pro σου) So 56.
ix. 17. +ως κεφαλαι των ιππων (post ιππων) [Habet postea ως κεφ. λεοντων].†
xii. 14. πέηται (pro πετηται) xvii. 4. μαργαρίτας So 216 218 *syr*S.
xviii. 2. εκραζεν So 176-206, 189.
13. κηναμωμον (me teste); κυναμωμον legit Matthaei, sed vult librarius κηναμωμον.
ibid. ῥᾴδων sic
xix. 8. και γαρ (pro το γαρ) So arm 2.
xxi. 24. —της γης
xxii. 2. αρνιου (pro ποταμου)

In none of the above do the other MSS. of the family join.
From the above few errors it will be seen how carefully the MS. was executed.

Now, as regards simple agreement with the family:—

vii. 8. εκ φυλης ιωσηφ...εκ φυλης ζαβουλων 4-48-64 and 140.
viii. 5. —και σεισμος 4-48-64-74.
7. χλωρος χορτος 4-48-64.
xi. 15. +και (ante του κυριου) 4-48-64 and *syr*S.
xii. 1. στεφανοι (pro στεφανος) 4-48-64.
xviii. 10. —ἡ prim. 4-48-64 and 155* [non 146].
xix. 10. υἱου (pro ιησου sec.) 4-48-64.

xxii. 2. πολεως (pro πλατειας) 4-48-64 and 81-204.

This shows indubitably, taken alone (and much more in connection with the closest agreement throughout), that, however the MSS. 4 48 and 64 differ in appearance and form, they are absolute sisters.

Observe further:

vi. 17 fin. σωθηναι 4-48-64-74 and 40-210 219.
viii. 9. +τας (ante ψυχας) 4-48-64 and 13-23-55 67-120 102-104 210 226.

† Apoc. 4 has no sign of this, but —και (ante εκ των στοματων) following, without 48. There was evidently something in the original from which both were copied, which bothered them here.

xiv. 5. ουτοι εισιν οι ακολουθουντες τω αρνιω (pro ενωπιον του θρονου του θεου) 4-48-64-74 and fam 34.

21. —κυριου ημων ιησου 4-20-48-64-74, 31 32 106 182.

The grouping is fairly consistent and readily recognizable.

Apoc. 48, after all, merits some attention, as being the first cursive to exhibit λίθον in the text at xv. 6. In this it does not agree with the rest of the fam 4-20-64-74. As to xv. 6.

Now, as regards 31 and 32 our MS. is not close enough to side with them and B* at iv. 11 +ο κυριος και θεος (—ὁ) ημων ὁ ἁγιος (pro κυριε), but in many places it is close, and though really of a very different character (see remarks on 32), the base in some places is clearly identical. As also that of fam 26.

Apoc. 20 is an early cursive of B (but not pure B) type, and its connection with the rest of family 4 etc. is interesting.

Of special agreement with textus receptus, not mentioned above, we may cite:

viii. 9 διεφθαρη, ix. 5 παιση, ix. 19 αδικουσι, xii. 18 εσταθην, xviii. 16 βυσσινον, xix. 12 absque ονοματα γεγραμμενα, xx. 4 Habet τα (ante χιλια), xx. 9 εκυκλωσαν, xxi. 20 βηρυλλος, xxi. 27 ποιουν, xxii. 5 φωτιζει, xxii. 8 και εγω, xxii. 8 εβλεψα, δεικνυοντος.

Now consult beyond the Arethas MS. Apoc. 64 with full commentary. Evidently the B type, prevailing probably just before Arethas, was made the basis of his text, and the "cursive" group of variations dates from 930 (Arethas floruit) and for which Arethas is largely or wholly responsible.

We have many more MSS. with Andreas' Com. than with that of Arethas, but enough of Arethas' remain to classify those other non-commentary cursives which were derived from his recension.

Now see 74 which with 64 can be added to this group, although less close than 4-64. Yet of the whole group only 48 reads λιθον in xv. 6. Apoc. 74 not only gives λινὸν, but specifically λῖν in the commentary. Besides, very occasionally this 4-48-64 group joins the Crawford Syriac, so occasionally however as to show that the best of its text has been completely edited out of it and λιθον is an insertion.

COMPLUTENSIAN GROUP 10 etc. but 49 has some independence.

Apoc. 49. Apoc. 49 = Moscow. Syn. 67 of Matthaei (Newer No. 66, or 155 of Vladimir). [Scr. 49. Greg. 49, new 2023. Sod. $A\nu^{56}$].

This is Matthaei's o, with commentary of Andreas, though, from the punctuation on p. a. 5 of his Preface, one would suppose it might be of Arethas.

Both 49 and 90 come, apparently, from the same source, viz. from Athos, but are not particularly related, and local provenance cannot help us as much as a close study of contents.

We know before we begin the examination of this MS. that it ranges more or less with the Complutensian group, but it is interesting because it is the only one of them so far which has a commentary.

Apoc. 48. 49. and 50 were photographed for me by the kindness of the then librarian (1906) Mr. Popoff. He has paged this codex 49, and makes the Apoc. range from folio 406-464. Gregory says "306/364, 58 out of 365 leaves, containing also f°. 1/305 sixteen Homilies of Gregory Nazianzen." Dr. Gregory claims xv^th century for the date. It looks considerably older, and is hardly as late.

Usual contractions occur, but no ν εφελκ. ειδον and forms of —εια are prevalent. No iota postscript is found, nor iota subscript until we reach δύνῃ ch. ii. 2, a very common place for the insertion; and not again, till iii. 18 περιβάλῃ, thus, both in text and commentary, though no other words are granted it. [This is curious as to iota, taken in conjunction with other MSS., notably the last one examined, viz. 48, which has iota sub. in precisely the same places (and only in these places), whereas the second reading there is περιβάλλῃ]. A few more occurrences of iota sub. are found, viz. v. 9 ᾠδὴν txt. non com̄., vi. 8 ᾅδης, x. 5 ἦρε, xiv. 3 ᾄδουσι et ᾠδὴν bis, xviii. 6 αὐτῇ ult., xx. 13, 14 ᾅδης, and nowhere else, although occasionally in the commentary.

The MS. is very carefully executed, and accompanied by full divisions of both λογοι and κεφ. These, together with the commentary itself, notification of text & com. (κειμ. and ἑρμ.), and some marginal extra remarks and scholia, are all the work of the original scribe and rubricator. This we see from iii. 7, where an alternative reading finds a place in the text, the authority given being "ἐν ἄλλῃ βιβλω." Thus, after writing: ο ανοιγων και ουδεις κλειει· και κλειων, και ουδεις ανοιξει:, the scribe adds [in the same red ink and hand (I judge from the photos) as the κεφ. are written] ῥ και ουτως εν αλλη βιβλω: then, in the usual black hand of the text: "ο ανοιγων, και ουδεις κλεισει αυτην ει μη ο ανοιγων και ουδεις ανοιξει·" followed by the usual com̄. or ἑρμην. Matthaei has a long note on this. The above shows the exposition of a very carefully edited text, as we shall see further. At ix. 16 we have text ιππου, but margin γρ. και ουτως: ἱππικοῦ by the rubricator. At xi. 1 the margin knows the reading λεγουσα of fam 21 for λεγων. Matthaei reads λεγουσα, but it is apparently λεγουσαι. A few other such places are recorded in the collation.

We quoted Matthaei under Apoc. 47 and 48 as regards his codices, but we must quote at somewhat greater length now:—

"Nos in hoc libello quinque omnino codices græcos, eosque omnes bis examinavimus. Hi omnes, si curam et doctrinam scribarum spectes, inter se sunt similes. Omnes enim a viris græce doctis et cautis scripti sunt. Igitur paucos errores orthographicos, quos omnes hic notavi, pauoasque omissiones reperias. Si vero integritatem textus spectes, triplicis sunt generis. Optimi sunt r, l, et p. (=90, 48, and 50) ex diversis sed optimis exemplaribus ducti. Coruptissimus, sed tamen multo melior multis, ab al'is tractatis, o (=this MS. 49). Medius inter utrumque genus est k (=47). Quando ergo hi quinque inter se consentiunt, de integritate textus vix ullo in loco dubitare licet. Eadem est ratio, cum ad auctoritatem r, l, p, accedit k. Sed k et o contra r, l, p non sunt audiendi." [This does not follow at all]. "Corruptiones autem, quas multas habet Apocalypsis, pleræque ex scholiis Andreæ, nonnullæ ex Arethæ promanarunt. Id facillime animadvertere potui, quod utriusque commentarium, Andreæ quidem, in codice o Arethæ, (sic) in editione Oecumenii, a principio ad finem diligentissime, Latine loquor, non oratorie, legi ac relegi. Andreas officio interpretis fungebatur. Quæ ergo in Apocalypsi obscura, dura, linguæ græcæ contraria reperiebat, ea in scholiis vocabulis magis perspicuis, probabilioribus ac græcis explicabat. Si ergo post eum scribæ ea, quæ intellectum faciliorem habebant, ex scholiis transtulerunt in textum, nulla jam est culpa Andreæ, sed scribarum. Sed scribæ tamen alii audaciores, alii modestiores fuerunt. Ergo inter eos quoque codices, qui Andreæ commentarium, adjectum habent, magna est dissimilitudo..." etc.

It develops early that 49 is anything but a pure Complutensian text.

As regards an inscription there is none at the head of the book, and my photographs show none, but Matthaei says "Commentarius autem inscribitur: ἀνδρέου τοῦ ἁγιωτάτου ἀρχιεπισκόπου καισαρείας καππαδοκίας ἑρμηνεία εἰς τὴν ἀποκάλυψιν τοῦ ἁγίου ἀποστόλου καὶ εὐαγγελιστοῦ ἰωάννου τοῦ θεολόγου." Now the latter is the inscription in Apoc. 37, and Complutensian Polyglott, which makes the variations of 49 from the pure Compl. text, as represented by 10-37-91-96 etc., all the more interesting.

The MS. runs along pretty well with the Compl. group, generally including the B combinations where they include the Compl. MSS. The variations will be specified later. Looking back to my account of Apoc. 37 I find I there stated that it had no affinity for B. This I should modify, and state it differently. Whereas the Compl. group does not particularly favour B and company in a general sense, and has a good and careful text, yet at times all the MSS. in the group go with a large B group, and sometimes with a smaller P group. These revisions are quite interesting and will bear closer examination, seeming to be the only blot on an attempt to adhere to "the old ways," and the only divergence from a conservative, intelligent, and careful edition by the Church.

Best representative of Andreas' commentary.

We have been at considerable pains to indicate where Andreas' commentary supports any variations in the text or vice versa. We have even gone further in this direction than Matthaei, whose forceful remarks on this subject really compelled us to it, or our collations might not have been perfectly harmonious. Matthaei has really surpassed himself in his examination of this MS., and we cannot convict him of any serious omission or error. Our re-examination has not been without fruit, however, as it shows the scribe to have been exceedingly careful, and the MS. can be used as a faithful witness to Andreas' text and commentary. It has but few peculiarities. A very sparing use of iota subscript has been already indicated. οὐρανος and its cases are more often written in full than contracted. This is an unusual feature. πνευμα and cases are also frequently written in full. μητηρ is also found in full. ἀν and μη are sometimes written ἀν̓ and μὴ. See ii. 11 οὐ μὴ sic (monuit Matthaei). See 35* al.

The B combinations + Compl. group are found at:

i. 9, 12; ii. 10; iv. 1, 5, 11; v. 6; vi. 4, 11; vii. 14; viii. 8, 9; ix. 7, 10, 11, 16; x. 7, 8, 11; xi. 12, 13, 14, 19; xii. 12; xiii. 3, 5, 12, 15, 16; xiv. 4; xv. 4; xvi. 9; xvii. 16, 17; xix. 1, 3, 8, 12, 15; xx. 1, 2; xxi. 13; xxii. 6, 8, 12, 18.

For the rest we refer to the collation. κριμα is written both κρῖμα and κρίμα. · ὁρα · μη · is twice punctuated thus. Between υαλος and υελος it varies.

† In the com̄. is found also this order, "του ουρανου και της γης"; Andreas goes on with many quotations, viz. "και γην και αερα και ουρανον"; again, quoting Esaias, "ο ουρανος καινος και η γη καινη"; and later again, "ουρανος καινος και η γη καινη."

‡ Andreas com̄. does not repeat the different σαρκας, but has the significant expression και ἡ τῶν ἀρχικῶν ἐπὶ γῆς ὀνομάτων. Hence covering the χιλιαρχων of the text. rec.

It has given me pleasure and afforded me much instruction to study this MS., and I feel that the picture offerred in the foregoing lists is wholly inadequate to convey the same impressions to the reader. I can only ask further attention to the completed picture as embodied in the general collation.

After αμην xxii. 21 there follow two pages of commentary, ending in the well-known form of a cross and τ, for τελος, combined.

There is no subscription, but a long dissertation by a later hand, of a widely different character, of no importance ("nihil ad rem"), beginning "παρουσια θεια και ιερα βιβλος εγεγονε παρ' εμου του ελαχιστου εν ιερομοναχοις συμεων του μαλεσηνου...and ending with a reference to the 310 inspired (θεοφορων) fathers of Nice (των εν νικαια) and to 'our holy father Athanasius.'

I have differentiated sometimes between a first and second hand's corrections. Matthaei has considered all the corrections to be made by the original hand, or at any rate by the rubricator. In some cases this is very doubtful. Where  is indicated, the correction is of less value, and the hand is a small and uncertain one.

One thing we have not emphasized sufficiently. The patchwork quilt is getting more and more to show where the pieces come from. Thus, having found that Apoc. 1 and 46 are most closely related, we find here, besides a large element of 1 going with the whole or part of the Compl. group, quite a number of passages where 49 gets the support of 46 without 1, showing a ramification, which carries the text back to the earlier ages.

In closing, notice xxi. 24 και περιπατησουσι τα εθνη δια του φωτος αυτης (—των σωζομενων) takes the place of the t.r. with all other MSS., but των σωζομενων finds a place in the Commentary, and entered the text from Andreas.

Note also ii. 14 εδιδαξε τον βαλακ txt., but com̄. observes "ος εδιδασκεν εν τω βαλααμ τον βαλακ" with P 18.

Under iii. 3 we have noted —και ηκουσας και τηρει [49]. It happens from a mixture in the Commentary.

At iv. 8 αγιος novies is written: αγιος ter in full, then ter contracted, then ter in full.

At v. 8 noticeable that 49 has κιθαρας of t.r. with Compl. group, and commentary αἱ κιθαραι, whereas ℵABP and many read κιθαραν.

At xvi. 5 thus punctuated: δικαιος εἶ ὁ ὢν . και ὁ ἦν ὁ ὅσιος·

At xvi. 13 —ακαθαρτα in text, which is new; and in com̄. "ἐξ ὧν φησὶν ἐοικότα βατραχοις εκπορευεσθαι πνευματα, δια τὸ ἰῶδες αυτων και ἀκαθαρτον" κ.τ.λ.

At xxi. 8 και is wanting before εβδελυγμενοις, and και αμαρτωλοις και is added by the second hand above the line. In the com̄. we find "τον μη τον θανατον των αμαρτωλων" κ.τ.λ.

At xxi. 12 the com̄. has πυλωνες δωδεκα..αγγελων δωδεκα..φυλων absque δωδεκα, whereas the text has ιβ for δωδεκα prim. (non tert.) with 4. 42. 44 and δεκαδυο for δωδεκα sec. with some cursives, but contrary to the Compl. group.

50 IS IN THE B GROUPING. Consult 177.

Apoc. 50.

Apoc. 50. Moscow syn. 206 (Matthaei). 205 otherwise and Vladimir 391. This is Matthaei's p. [Scr. 50. Greg. 50, new 2024. Sod. α 1584]. It comes from Athos, but is a very different looking MS. from Matthaei's other codices. After 49, which required incessant care, this is an easy MS., written in a large hand, with but an occasional marginal note, mostly by a late hand, called by me , the others probably by the diorthotes, who has given a few alternative readings in the text. It contains also Lives of the Saints. The MS. is intended to be written with care, and as such is interesting. Before collating it, I thought it was XIII[th] cent. Scrivener says XII. Gregory is far off at XV! But, after collation, I am inclined to put it back to the XI[th] cent. Eta is nearly always H; και is practically never abbreviated except at the beginning of a clause, and that rarely. ν εφελκ. is absolutely constant (twice only missing, at vii. 10 and xvii. 12), having the superfluous ν tacked on to substantives, as in the uncials, and even to adjectives. A hiatus occurs for want of it once, apparently almost by accident, at xiv. 3 ἄδουσι (—ως) ᾠδην. Itacisms, though infrequent, have not been corrected by the contemporary antiballon, and altogether it bears quite an ancient intrinsic appearance. Being absolutely of the B family, it represents therefore an early form of this text, as can be seen from various internal features. It has a peculiarity, (as in our Apoc. 39), of sometimes writing ε͞ζ for επτα, being a stupid combination, and misleading, as ε is the symbol for πεντε. The scribe does this at the end of a line, apparently beginning ε of επτα and then closing the word with the sign for the numeral, so as not to carry down to the next line. This is evidently a sign of age and of the transition period from uncial to cursive. For he cannot always do this, and he shows the uncial origin of his copy at the following places:

See f°. 55[A], middle of the page, εἰς μύρναν (showing how the σ of σμυρναν has been lost) also f°. 64[B], ll. 10/11 κύρι έμου (for κυριε μου).
also f°. 73[A], ll. 17/18 σημεῖ
α (unusual separation for this scribe).

Note also the sign of και in the middle of a word δι϶οσυνη at xix. 11. And ἄχρισδ͂υ at vii. 3.

Further, xvi. 14 ποιοῦν τὰ σημεῖα for ποιοῦντα σημεῖα shows this. Add xviii. 16 κοκκινονεχρυσωμενη sic without breathing and minus και where the ϗ of κεχρυσωμενη is also absorbed.

This is also a key MS. to some of the pure cursive groupings, e.g. at ii. 8 the loss of ὁς following εσχατος, attested only by the cursive group 2. 4. 9. 13. 19. 20. 23. 25. 26. 27. 29. 32. 33. 40. 41. 42. 44. 48. 89. 90. 93. 94. 95. 97. 98 etc. It is shown, by this MS.' testimony, copied from uncial sources, to be old. It holds this group together well. See also at i. 13 with B, and i. 9 with some additional cursives. See also iv. 9 δωσιν (with ν εφελκ.), alone of a large cursive group.

Personality of the B redactor.

I was right in my conjecture that most "cursive" readings are due to a lost uncial and not to the vagaries of cursive scribes [see xviii. 23. Loss of οτι prim. by reason of ετι preceding]. This MS. has them all. They therefore belong to the B type, and can as a rule be neglected; for this very interesting MS. takes us back to the living personality of the compiler of the B revision, as can be seen from a careful study of the readings. Although a "B" MS. we begin the first few chapters, as usual, with a good deal of CAB combination and the other sympathetic cursives, but later, while retaining the B influence, we have a large measure of mixture. The origin of the ℵB combinations become clearer. For the B reviser simply revived these ℵ readings, in themselves revisions.† The poorer features of C and A are also revived.

The inscription is simple:—αποκαλυψις του αγιου ιωαννου—, and new, so far, in this form, apparently standing between the earlier ιωαννου αποκαλυψις or αποκαλυψις ιωαννου and the later αποκαλυψις του αγιου ιωαννου του θεολογου, or του αποστολου και ευαγγελιστου, or του αποστολου του θεολογου.

Prior to the inscription (not afterwards, as Matthaei says) occurs a fragment from Andreas, beginning τριμερη and ending λογισμων, 14 lines not including the heading Ανδρεου etc.

The Apoc. extends from f°. 54 to 88, with one leaf misplaced. F°. 84 A ends at xx. 6 εσονται, continues 85 B, runs on to 86 A, thence back to 84 B, then to 85 A, and thence to 86 B, and straightforward again.

ιωαννης in the text (as in inscription) always in full. The usual contractions are used, including υιος and cases. Once πνευματα is found in full (iv. 5). ουρανος and cases usually contracted, but ουρανω thrice in full (xi. 19, xii. 8, xix. 14), ουρανου four times (xiii. 13, xvi. 17, xx. 1, 9), ουρανον once (xix. 11). α is turned up so that it is exactly the same as αι, but meant for α as a rule. See f°. 62 A, ll. 4, 5. α of δοξα is exactly similar to αι of αιωνων. At v. 12 δοξαν is curiously abbreviated Δ^ο^ (end of a line). There are no other peculiarities of abbreviation, except perhaps xvi. 12 υδω̃ for υδωρ (as in Apoc. 52 etc.).

No iota sub- or postscript anywhere throughout. The punctuation is poor, but our scribe does not fall into the error of writing ὁρα· μη κ.τ.λ. ειδον occurs everywhere. φιλαδελφια and φιλαδελφεια both occur. Even λαοδικεια iii. 14 is hesitating. We find πτωχιαν at ii. 9 (which has survived only in ℵCA and a few). Matthaei does not record the cases of ν εφελκ. or itacisms, and in recording εν θυατειρη ii. 18 he adds iota sub., which is not present. Again at iii. 7, recording φιλαδελφια he adds iota sub., which is wrong.

Here is the list of unique readings—of no special value.

† The idiosyncracies of ℵ are all pervading. See some instances in the "lists" to follow. Were we to follow ℵ and this group we must omit the major part of xx. 5. We now see how many MSS. followed this error of homoioteleuton, and see also how the Church has guarded the sacred deposit by multiplying MS. copies, which it is a disgrace to neglect.

The forms πτωχιαν, χλορος, γονιας, ευχαριστεια, ωμωσεν, ενδωμησις may be noticed.

Breathings are irregular, and we have hardly noticed them. ἡξω and ἡξω occur in the same verse (iii. 3). Some words, mostly proper names, like ρουβὴμ, have none; so also ραίδων (xviii. 13). We notice αἰγυπτος (xi. 8).

For the rest, observe:

iv. 8. αγιος novies, thus ἅγιοc · ἅγιοc · ἅγιοc · ἅΓιοc · ἅγιοc · ἅγιcc · ἅΓιοc ἅγιοc · ἅΓιοc.

Now there is method here, the second series of the ternary combination having capital gamma in the first αγιος, the third series the same, and ending with capital gamma, to signify the close. Other scribes have not written as intelligently. This scribe evidently gloated over the (textually wrong) ninefold combination.

However wearisome to chronicle all the cases of ν εφελκ., it really pays. Note at vi. 16 λεγουσιν and ορεσιν with only ℵCA 7*. 92. There are no variations in this verse (except επι τω θρονω with the ℵB group). Hence 50 bears here certainly the note of antiquity, but not of continuity. The same applies to xi. 3 δυσιν with ℵA alone, and μαρτυσιν with ℵA 2. 14-92.

A good example of its "cursive" consorts (without uncial support) occurs at vii. 14 επλατυναν. So 2. 9. 13* (22*). 23. 24. 25. 27. 29. 33. 41. 42. 44. 93. 94. 95. 97. 98 etc. Note the group. μὴ is thus sometimes written (e.g. ix. 5, 6), but I do not recall an instance of ἂν.

Punctuation as before said is irregular. We notice οἵ, κάθηνται (xi. 16); at ix. 10 και εν ταις ουραις αυτων is joined to ἐξουσιαν εχουσιν του αδικησαι; at ii. 23 ειμι · ο ερευνων κ.τ.λ.; at xiv. 2 he writes thus: και η φωνη ἣν, ηκουσα ως κιθ. κ.τ.λ.; at xiv. 13 we have απαρτι λεγει · ναι το πνᾶ with 14 32 41 42 90 etc.; at xv. 6 +οἵ, ἦσαν sic; at xviii. 6 ως και αὐτη · και κατα τα εργα αυτης.

The scribe could not help getting mixed up at xiii. 8, where A reads ουαι for ων ου, C and 19 give us ου for ων, 8 and 24 read ω for ων, and ℵ* omits the ου following; so 50 reads ὃν alone, for a change!

Note that at xviii. 3 (in the midst of confusion) it deserts B for its cursive friends which have πεπωκασι, but adds ν, reading πεπωκασιν.

Finally read κοκκινονεχρυσωμενη sic. The secret is out as to how και was dropped here (with 1. 12. 32 etc.); the και was not only lost, but the first κ of κεχρυσωμενη absorbed by the final N of κοκκινον, kappa and nu being confused in the copying of an uncial, or for that matter of a cursive exemplar.

And at xviii. 23 we lose οτι (with the usual friendly cursive group) by reason of the ετι preceding. Another argument for a copy from an uncial.

The impression gains ground at every step that we have before us quite an important copy. Whenever the uncials are found in a real muddle there 50 also wavers. See even at xxi. 6 where A loses της πηγης and our 50 has γῆς (for πηγης)*. The other places of similar character are very numerous.

Before leaving the subject, consult: xxi. 3 λαος, that curious place, where practically all cursives follow P in the harder reading (against ℵAB, hiat C), our MS. is in line with λαοσ, but the final sigma is "ex emend." à primâ manu. This is quite important, showing that in our scribe's time, say 1075 to 1125 A.D., evidence was overwhelming for λαος, so that he deserted his friends the family of ℵAB, after first consulting them and the other evidence at his disposal, much more valuable no doubt than what we have now. As to λαος xxi. 3.

We have not quoted "Malè Matthaei" or "om. Matthaei" at every place, but only where we thought it important enough to record.

It would almost seem as if Matthaei had collated this MS. in his early days at Moscow. The work is not quite so thorough as later. But while he neglects many minutiæ, there are no very serious errors except at xix. 6 +ημων (post θεος), which he fails to record.

In his Epilogue (pp. 338/342), after a fierce diatribe against his critics, he repeats that his MSS. r, l, p (i.e. 90, 48, 50) are the best in his judgment, with x, t (i.e. 30, 32) next, and k (i.e. 47) in a third class, with o (i.e. 49) last. With this we cannot agree at all, as before explained.

But we leave Matthaei with regret. His labours have been a valuable check on our own. We establish one thing to a certainty, however, from this re-examination of Matthaei's codices, and that is that the MSS. on Athos, even in the same monastery, are widely different, and the problem receives no help from "provenance," East or West. We must go behind the uncials for solution. Hence these minute examinations of later documents.

Apoc. 51. Apoc. 51 (Ev. 18. Ac. 113. P. 132) = Paris nat. gr. 47 (formerly 2241). [Scr. 51. Greg. 51, new 18. Sod. δ 411]. Bought in 1687. To-day bound in calf with the arms of Charles X. Collated by Reiche, published in 1847.

Scholz (Biblisch-Kritische Reise, Leipzig 1823, p. 3) and Reiche (Codicum MSS. N.T. græc. in Bib. Reg. Parisiensi, Gottingæ 1847, p. 21, note) both give a copy of the subscription (which is freely quoted from by both Scrivener and Gregory), but, as is usual in such cases, Scholz' and Reiche's copies do not agree! The Abbé Martin does not give it. The Apoc., f^{os}. 328/342, is followed by a hundred folios of psalms and hymns, and the subscription comes at the end of these. Our photographs of Apoc. therefore do not give it. But the differences referred to are only differences of spelling. In brief then, the MS. was written in 6872 (i.e. A.D. 1364) at Constantinople in the monastery of των μαγγανων (Scholz),† τῶν μανκανων (Reiche), τῶν μαγκάνων (Gregory), and given by Nicephorus Cannabetes ("παρ' ἐμοῦ νικηφόρου τοῦ καννάβη"), or as Scholz styles him "Nicephorus der Sohn des Kannabe," to another monastery, that "του ζωοδοτου χριστου εν τω του μυζιθρᾶ (Scholz; μυζῖθρα Reiche, Misitra Scrivener) της λακεδαιμονος καστρω"; the inscription continuing "περιεχουσα το ιερον ευαγγελιον και τον πραξαποστολον και το ψαλτηριον μετα της αυτου προθεωριας και της του θεολογου αποκαλυψεως." [I leave out accents as Scholz does not give them].

It is a nice clean MS. in a very fair hand, but Reiche had altogether too exaggerated an idea of its importance. Hear him (p. 25): "In Apocalypsi denique plurimis hucusque collatis Codd. probatior est, et vix optimis inferior. Ubicunque enim sive discedit a textu vulgari, sive cum eo concinit, fere semper tuetur lectiones aut firmas probabilesque aut saltem ob sensum, quem fundunt, testiumve nobilium consensum, insignes. Ut chartæ parcamus, solum modo lectionum a vulgaribus diversarum firmarum et indubitanter recipiendarum, exemplis e prioribus capitibus, passim delectis, quæ diximus, comprobemus." Here follow a dozen readings, but, notwithstanding all his fine advice (on pp. 43/44) to the collator of Greek MSS., as to the care necessary in such studies, he starts out with a bad blunder in his second quotation [which stands uncorrected in his collation (p. 65)], giving ἀπο ὁ ὤν as the reading of the MS. (i.e. —του), whereas the MS. reads plainly and clearly "ἀπὸ θῦ · ὁ ὢν." The fourth reading is ἀγαπῶντι, which is correct, though on p. 65, in the collation proper, we read ἀναπῶντι, which is an error, and does not inspire us at the outset with any sort of confidence in Reiche's work. The ninth reading also, ii. 3, is quite wrong, both here and in the collation proper. It is not only sad, but stupid that such blunders abound in the work of the past (barring only Tischendorf, Scrivener and Matthaei), rendering re-examination absolutely necessary. But hear Reiche out. We are still at p. 25: "Etiam singularibus lectionibus, quæ critici adtentionem merentur, in hac N.T. parte Codex abundat. Concinit sæpissime cum Codicibus, qui apud criticos plurimum valent, ut ABC 9. 14. 29. 30." (!) "Ejus igitur suffragiis in libri corruptissimo textu constituendo pondus et auctoritas non exigua competit."

We would also gladly "spare paper" and proceed with our task, but after beginning our work and comparing results with Reiche, we find it hard to believe that we are working on the same MS. In fact, but for his quoting correctly some of the unique or very rare readings, we would consider it impossible! A complete list would surely be unnecessary; but in the first seven chapters, we not only find him guilty of 38 omissions, but of 40 misrepresentations, and really of the most ridiculous and wicked character. In order that no one may consult his publication again for a moment, we will indicate some of the grossest: At ii. 13 he says

"Rec. και ante εν ταις h." (i.e. habet) which is not so. ii. 14 τον βαλαν, whereas it is plainly τον βαλακ. ii. 25, 26 he says "rec. cons.", ignoring the reading, ver. 25 ἀνοίξω for ἂν ἥξω. ii. 27 he says "rec. συντριβεται h." i.e. habet, whereas the codex reads συντριβησεται. At iii. 12 he says καταβαινει εκ) καταβαινουσα απο, whereas text. rec. is ἡ καταβαινουσα εκ, and codex ἡ καταβαινει απο. At iii. 17 he says ἐλεεινος,) ὁ ελεεινος, whereas the reverse is the case, the codex having no article (agreeing only with a few MSS. and t.r.). Letters, accents, breathings are constantly misplaced and misused, and he gives iota subscript to readings of the MS., whereas it has none. Again at iii. 18 he says ἔχρισον) ἵνα ἐχρίσῃ. This should be ινα εγχριση. And iv. 7 he gives ὡς ἄνθρωπος) ἀνθρώπου. This should be ανθρωπου. Again vi. 11 for πληρωσονται he gives the codex as πληρωθωσι, whereas it reads πληρωσωσι. And the codex is perfectly plain and clear throughout. Again iv. 8 (misquoted iv. 6), we find ἑαυτὸ) ἐν αὐτῶν. This is absolutely wrong. He means εν καθ εν αυτων for εν καθ εαυτο, whereas the codex reads εν καθ εν without αυτων, although many MSS. have the addition. The codex generally reads κυκλωθεν, but at iv. 8 happens to agree with t.r. and gives κυκλοθεν. Straightway Reiche quotes it deliberately for κυκλωθεν. He gives correctly the reading ουκ ησαν at iv. 11 (with B 14. 38. 92*), and at vi. 17 η μεγαλη της οργης αυτου ημερα (alone with 90 and now 172-217), or we should not recognize the MS. at all from his handling of it, for he omits altogether another reading where it stood absolutely alone with 90 (now add 113 f. 114 130 141 145 159) viz. ii. 23 καρδιας και νεφρους. To proceed. At v. 1 he says "Rec. ἔσωθεν καὶ ὄπισθεν h" i.e. habet. On the contrary the MS. reads εξωθεν for οπισθεν. He goes further at v. 5 saying "rec. ἀνοῖξαι serv." i.e. servat, whereas the MS. has ὁ ἀνοίξας for ανοιξαι alone with 90 (and 172-217-246). Still further does he go at v. 6 where he says οἵ εἰσι τὰ ἑπτὰ τοῦ θεοῦ πνεύματα) οἵ (non ἅ) εἰσι τὰ ἑπτὰ πν. τοῦ θ., actually emphasizing a gross error, for the codex has ἅ (non οἵ). One would think he could not err more grossly. But following we find he goes a step worse yet, at v. 8 saying "Rec. κιθαρας serv. sicuti etiam αἵ προσευχαὶ." Now the codex has κιθαραν and —αι before προσευχαι. But he can do worse still, it appears. At vi. 4 he says ἐπ' αὐτῷ) ἐπ' αὐτὸν, whereas this is the only place where the codex does not read επ' αυτον for επ αυτω of the t.r. Elsewhere it reads επ αυτον, but here (with only 1 18 36 f. 62 f. 67 90 98 152-179 172 al. pc.) it reads επ αυτω with t.r. Sometimes he reverses t.r. and codex, as at vi. 5 τὴν σφραγῖδα τὴν τρίτην) τὴν τρίτην σφραγῖδα. And, remember, we have never yet learned with what edition he collated! At vi. 10 he has ἀληθινὸς) ὁ ἀλ. But the t.r. has "ὁ ἀληθινος," and the codex lacks the article. Still we flounder worse than ever, for at vi. 11 he says "και ante οἱ μέλλοντες non agnoscit," but the scribe not only does know of it, but has it plainly in his text.

Surely we can cease here. Of all the unwelcome tasks this is the worst, though we have but shown a small part of Reiche's shortcomings. It is pitiful, pitiful. We can all forgive a man for failing to record some readings which have escaped his eyesight, but deliberately to misrepresent and misquote throughout is not permissible. Reiche's dust cannot rise up and apologize, but we can learn a lesson not to mar these studies with such wicked pitfalls. God knows enough exist naturally.

Having completed our examination of Reiche's collation since the above was written we can now certify to 220 mistakes, of which 101 are deliberate errors of commission and 119 of omission. I am not going to give the whole list, for it is not worth the paper, and I doubt if anybody would believe that anyone in the world could be guilty of such an exhibition of utterly reckless comparison. No schoolboy could possibly have made half the mistakes. Birch's errors fade before Reiche's, for Birch OMITTED often 30 to 50% of the variations, but he did not often misquote, as Reiche does in every line.

To proceed. There is no trace of iota post. or sub. throughout the codex. No cases of ν εφελκ. ειδον occurs throughout and the terminations -εια are constant. The usual contractions are found, very consistently, except πνευματων i. 4; πνευματα iii. 1, xvi. 13; and exceptionally ἱερουσαλὴμ at xxi. 10. $\overline{κς}$ κυριων occurs properly both at xvii. 14 and xix. 16. υιος and cases are generally in full. Iota and upsilon frequently have the diæresis, which further connects the MS. with 90. μὴ̈ is once or twice so written, but not αν; and ναῒ once at xvi. 7. τρια is twice curiously written ϸι^α and ϸία at xvi. 13 and 19.

Sections are marked by large capitals in the margin. But capital vowels have breathings and accents, and sometimes look like part of the text of the line above.

There are practically no corrections. Folio 333 is twice numbered.

The MS. was apparently copied from a cursive; notice ἀβλητων for αὐλητων xviii. 22. There are only about five unique readings, including this one, the blunders of 90 being corrected in all but fifteen places, where the two MSS. are together alone. The reading εις (for ως) at xii. 15, with 45 and 90 takes us back to the uncial prototype.

We start out with an inscription which agrees with that of 17. 23. 25. 27. 28. 31. 33. 38. 90. 94. This does not teach us much. At i. 20 we find —τας prim. in agreement with only 18. 29. 40. 90. 93. 95. 98 (exactly the same group is found at vi. 12 —ειδον), which small group includes only one of the numbers above, i.e. No. 90, and to that MS. our attention is very quickly attracted again at ii. 19, where we have the unusual order και την πιστιν και την αγαπην και την διακονιαν with only 90 and 95. Our attention had just before (ii. 17 fin.) been attracted to 95, as our MS. reads λαμβανον for λαμβανων with it, but this is a very small matter, and we soon find that 90 is the real relation we are looking for. And its relationship, though very close, will bear careful scrutiny. It is not a sister, but only a first cousin. Be it remembered that Apoc. 90 is a bi-columnar codex from the Iberian monastery on Athos, also very carefully written, but full of iota subscript. This is the MS. Matthaei had a very high opinion of. Of Apoc. 51 Reiche, as has been seen, also thought very highly. We disagreed with Matthaei, and now we shall disagree with Reiche. Not that, as a whole, the text is not fair, but we shall show that what caused us suspicion in the examination of 90 now amounts to proof that the forefather of these two MSS. took far too many liberties, and that, in the endeavour to smooth down the text, 51 and 90, which should agree exactly, diverge sufficiently to show us the exact state of the case, and instead of being sisters, reveal only a cousinship. We now see why Apoc. 40, though close to 90, had no single agreement with that MS. There was a lateral descent of both 40 and 51 from the parent of the three MSS. We shall illustrate our meaning by the following tables—[142 now proves to be a much more careful exponent of the type, and is free from most of the errors below]:

From this it is quite clear 51 represents more careful scribal work, but also possibly some more revision on the original exemplar.

Beyond this, we would fail in our duty, if we did not point out some of the further characteristics of these two MSS., i.e. where they are together with one or more MSS., or stand apart with small support. It would be a little inconvenient to show this in tabular form.

i. 2 fin. +και ατινα εισι και α χρη γενεσθαι μετα ταυτα 90 with 10-37-96 etc.; but 51 has no addition here.

As early as i. 11 Apoc. 90 shows a certain relationship for 95, both reading λαλουσης (not 51), whereas Apoc. 51 goes much more regularly with 90 than with 95.

i. 20. —τας prim.
vi. 12. —ειδον } Read by exactly same group 18. 29. 40. 93. 95. 98, and 51 with 90 etc.

ii. 1. +κυριος (post λεγει) 90 with f. 34. 98 etc., not 51.

19. The relationship of 51, 90, 95 now definitely comes in, where they all three read: και την πιστιν και την αγαπην και την διακονιαν.

Curious how this change of order has survived in these three MSS. alone, for 95 is not particularly close around here; e.g. ii. 27 κεραμεικα cursives, with 51-90, but not 95; iii. 2 στηριξον cum t.r. 51-90: contra CAP many cursives and 95.

From the above it will readily be seen how and where 51 and 90 come together and drift apart. Much more so than from the lists of readings peculiar to these MSS., which would be inadequate without this additional picture. Various interesting sidelights will present themselves to the student.

Certain passages covering 51-90 and other lines throw a light on lateral descent.

After some hesitation I have decided not to quote "Malè Reiche" or "om. Reiche" in the collations, and the student is entreated to neglect his collation altogether.

Yet he is so definite sometimes that we feel constrained to remark here that, for instance, at:

iii. 12, v. 4, xi. 19, xiv. 8 he is utterly wrong.

And when at viii. 9 he tells you to read διεφθαρησαν it is a complete mistake. Διεφθαρη of textus receptus is read by both 51 and 90 and 246.

Again at xvii. 17 τελεσθωσιν οι λογοι του θεου is the reading of 51 (confirmed by 90 with only the mistake ὁ λογοι*) whereas Reiche invites you to read τελεσθησονται with ℵAP and the Compl. group. The same thing occurs at xii. 7.

Again at xix. 18 for +τας (ante σαρκας quint.) he has a fearful "conflate" blunder. The same at xxi. 8, where codex has plainly +και αμαρτωλοις, and he tells you it has not.

And again at xxii. 20 he gives two gratuitous variations from text. rec., which exist only in his imagination!

His record for the preceding verse 19 is equally bad, completely mixing up αφελη and αφελοι·

Finally, you will find I quote xiv. 8 +δευτερος (post αγγελος) the rarer place for the addition, and Reiche +δευτερος (post αλλος) with most. I assure you he is wrong!

He cites xv. 4 a new order τα σου δικαιωματα which is not only wrong, but still unique among actual codices and a creation only of his brain in cloudland. Verb. sap.

It is now found that 125 and 142 (in Spain) are fairly close adherents to this 51-90 type, but 142 is an older document in years and uses ν εφελκ. consistently throughout.

Add 172-217 to the group and also 246 at Moscow, a dated XI[th] cent. MS.

Here we break practically new ground, and I shall try and be less elaborate in the introductory matter. Hitherto in those MSS. more or less known so far, it was absolutely necessary to be sufficiently thorough and even verbose to clear up any possible misunderstandings. The following MSS. 52/85 and 102 onwards are practically unknown. We may possibly except a very few, such as 79 and 80, but even these are not really known to us properly. Mr. Simcox looked over some which follow, at Rome, but I believe published nothing during his lifetime, and his results could only have been partial, as he played the part of Scholz, and only skimmed the MSS.—really almost a useless proceeding. New ground broken.

(His partial collations of six MSS. were published after his death in the Journal of Philology, vol. XXII. No. 44, Cambridge 1894).

GROUP 44-52-82.

Apoc. 52.

Apoc. 52 = (Act. 51. P. 133). Paris, Nat. gr. 56. [Scr. 52. Greg. 52, new 337. Sod. α 205]. Belonged to Mazarin. Bound in calf with the arms of Louis Philippe.

Is a rough-looking MS., but carefully written in a very large hand. It has the simple inscription ιωαννου αποκαλυψις and is mut. at the end, by the loss of a leaf, closing at λεγουσιν xxi. 17. I should date it about XII/XIII. Gregory and Scr. say XII. There is no nonsense about the MS., and it was probably copied from a respectable and early uncial.

αγιος novies is thus written: αγιος αγιος αγιος αγιος αγιος αγιος αγιος αγιος αγιοσ. [In 44 thus: ἅγϊοσ first, then 8 times ἁγϊοσ]. The top of ξ as a rule begins low down level with the top of the vowels, though a second form occurs also quite different and indistinguishable from the ordinary zeta. Beta has the early form B. Psi is very square, with an occasional rounder letter. Iota subscript is absent, and iota postscript occurs but once, at περιβαλῃι, at the same place, iii. 18, as in many other MSS.; thus περιβαλῃι at the end of a line. Breathings are frequently square, both rough and smooth. The MS. is paragraphed into κεφ. (apparently about 115; there are 111 to xxi. 17) by capitals in the margin.

The only real novelty I notice is the style of writing ων at the end of a word, thus ῶ with the long-tailed nu instead of ῶν or ⋊, though the latter occurs as well. ὕδωρ is also found thus ὕδῶ several times. Also εφ͂τισθη for ἐφωτισθη. μεγωγ apparently occurs for μαγωγ, thus μςωγ.† μη̈ is sometimes thus written as in several other MSS. (and the sister to this, 82).

We have but little to say about this MS., for it develops early that it is derived directly from the same parent as 44. This "vous saute aux yeux" throughout, and what we have said under Apoc. 44 applies with full force to this MS. For the scribe of 52 was a more careful copyist than that of 44. At first we might be in doubt whether they actually copied the same MS.—(they certainly did not copy from each other)—but we are now convinced that they did, after careful re-examination, and notwithstanding the differences recorded by 44 and not by 52. Note at iii. 20 εισελευσο by 44, whereas 52 has εισελευσομαι, but thus: εισελευσο μαι, showing copy probably at the end of a line, and the μαι following escaped the scribe of 44. As regards the lacuna in 52, from x. 4 to xi. 1 occurring between two pages, we cannot account for it. There is no trace of it in 44 (nor in 82), and we can only notice, in passing, that the verses would exactly occupy one page of 44, so that if he (i.e. 44) set his pagination to agree with that of his exemplar, it would account for the scribe of 52 missing a whole page, or a whole column. There remains one difficulty, and a very interesting one.

Conflations or mergers à la Lewis Carroll.

At xi. 13 Apoc. 44 has εδοξαν for εδωκαν δοξαν, but Apoc. 52 has not, nor 82. Now this is what is known as a kind of conflate reading, and it throws some light on them. They are not necessarily always the blending of two different readings in two different MSS., but as we see here, an involuntary mental process of one scribe from one MS. (for this reading is nearly unique. Found only in 106 sah boh). It is very simple when analysed under this chance searchlight which we obtain here, and comes under the category of Lewis Carroll's frumious for fuming, furious, or Rilchiam for Richard, William, as immortalized in his Preface to the "Hunting of the Snark." I think I can offer further proof of this trend of mental attitude on the part of the scribe of 44, by recalling the other most curious of his vagaries at ii. 3, where he reads alone και ουκ εποιησας for και ουκ εκοπιασας, but not 52 nor 82.

Eliminating then the few itacisms and other blunders of the scribe of 44, we have in 44-52-82 but one MS. presented to us, say probably of the IX[th] century, which may very well represent the type of text which was current in Cyprus for some centuries (as 44 is said to have come from Cyprus). We say of the IX[th] century, for it is evident to me that 52 was copying an uncial, and an ornate one, and therefore late. And the scribe of 52 is extraordinarily careful, for we find no new readings special to him.

The only thing I may add is that Apoc. 44 belongs to a copy of the whole N.T., and Apoc. 52 is part of a copy lacking the Gospels. When the Gospels of 44 are collated, it will then be easy to identify the Gospels belonging to 52, especially as the handwriting of 52 is hardly to be confounded with another one.

It remains to add that the Apoc. in this MS. 52 occupies folios 333/375, and that, as in 44, the contractions for ουρανος and cases, ανθρωπος etc. are constant. πνευματα occurs but once in full (xvi. 14); κσ κυριων correctly at xvii. 14, and κυριοσ κυρι at xix. 16.

There is no ν εφελκ., lacking also in 44. υιος and cases are nearly always in full. ειδον and terminations -εια are omnipresent, 52 not even reading οξια with 44 at i. 16, and having σαρδειω at iv. 3 against σαρδιω of 44. ιωαννης is in full both at beginning and end of the book. The lacuna (referred to before) in the middle of the book, occurs between 350 verso (which ends at x. 3 fin. φωνας) and 351 recto (which begins at του θεου of xi. 1). The variations in these verses, as in those after xxii. 17 (52 being mut. at the end after this) of Apoc. 44 (with 82) must be our guide in determining the readings of our codex 52. Dr. Gregory notices this lacuna x. 4–xi. 1 in his textbook (under Acts 51), and I don't understand where he got this, as Scholz, who professed to have collated it, does not mention this, nor does Scrivener, nor does Martin. [Martin by mistake says mut. from xxi. 17 to end, but this is an error for xxii. 17].

To the lists under Apoc. 44 I have now added where 52 agrees and disagrees, and forbear to swell the Introduction further by repetition here; the reader is referred back to Apoc. 44 for the information.

Before closing, however, we might call attention to iv. 3 —ην 44 and 52 82 with ℵABP 7 13 19 23 26 36 41 42 45 92 etc. *syr*S. All others omit και ο καθημενος ην (Hiat C). Now this small handful of cursives, eclectic though they be, probably preserve the true reading with the four uncials. Not only therefore do such curious MSS. as B 7 etc. have their uses in offering testimony at such a place, but it was worth while collating Apoc. 52 carefully if only to obtain this piece of evidence from it; because, other things being equal, its testimony has this added force, that it is a MS. copied most faithfully and most carefully from an interesting archetype, and witnesses against the larger omission, which no doubt originated in several old MSS. (owing to the καθημενος immediately preceding), and which omission has come down to us laterally through all the other cursives, including the Complutensian and Commentary groups. This is essentially a case "ponderari debere testes, non numerari."

The characteristics of this small combination 44-52-82 are seen forcibly at:

iv. 3.	+σμαραγδω (post ιασπιδι) with f. 26 (+B 13-23-55 which have +και σμαραγδω).
viii. 1.	ημιωρον (which is wrong) with C 41-42-53 [non 26-107-153] 97-214 [non 122] 146*txt.*

xiv. 18.	φωνη (pro κραυγη) with ℵAB and only 31 f. 38 f. 61 f. 95 146 187 latt *syr*S.
xvi. 13.	—εκ του στοματος του δρακοντος και with C 9-27 39[non fam] 154-212.
xviii. 8.	καυθησεται with f. 26 111 f. 114.

The larger groups must speak for themselves and will be readily identified in the general collations.

What strikes me most, and what I cannot get over, is that 52 has absolutely no new reading peculiar to itself. This is the first time I have come across a MS. so faithfully copied. There are just a few places where 52 disagrees with 44, but they are very few; notably δυναται 52 and 82 at ix. 20. Contra ℵCAP 44 etc.; μωυσεος 52 at xv. 3 with some; contra 44 etc. μωυσεως; αὐτου planè 52 at xvi. 15 fin., whereas 44 has αυτων, but ex emend.; πεπωκασι 52 with 4 8 9 20 etc., at xviii. 3, while 44 has πεπτωκασι; xviii. 17. 52 = πλεων, 44 has πλεον.

Perhaps I ought to chronicle here the readings where 44 and 52 remain quite alone. It will be better for reference than the list under 44, where the additional vagaries of 44 find a place.

44 and 52 alone together.

The small groups we think will be found satisfactorily under 44.

Before closing what we feel is too brief an account of this MS. we will add yet a few words on some of the keys offered us here.

We gave our opinion of Apoc. 51 and 90 as rather unreliable documents, but they may appeal to some differently, as they did to Matthaei. Now we obtain rather a curious sidelight on this question by a passage where these MSS. are concerned with our 44 group. We refer to xix. 5, where ἡμων is omitted by both 51 and 90 and by 44. Yet the much more careful scribes of 52 and 82 do not omit, and we know they copied faithfully. This therefore strengthens our view that all readings of 51 and 90 can have no particular weight except in combination with the mass.

This is mentioned here, as it is rarely that we get such an instructive object lesson in what an archetype really had, and what the subsequent scribes read into it, as we get from the picture of 44 copying loosely and 52-82 so carefully. You can see the stranger readings of the parent copy preserved in 52-82, while 44 adds a series of its own imagining.

We can go a little further. The more this 44-52-82 combination is studied, and especially 52, the more interesting does this text seem. Because, notwithstanding the very large "B" element to be found in it (and perhaps we have not so far emphasized this feature enough), the number of total variations from the textus receptus in 44-52-82 is small compared to those of other MSS. having more or less the same B features. We are thereby drawn to two conclusions. First, that this 44-52-82 text has not been tampered with much. Secondly, that the parent of B was much purer than B itself, and when we talk of the "B recension" we must bear in mind that perhaps B itself is a poor exponent of it.

At best then 44-52-82 represent the older form of the B recension only. This, however, gives us the key to what is the purer B recension, under which the student can now group his "B" cursives with more discrimination.

Of agreement with t.r. of 44-52-82 we may note, perhaps, specially i. 13 μαστοις, ii. 10 βαλεῖν [ii. 24 βάλω], vi. 8 ὁ θανατος with the many, vii. 1 πνεῃ, viii. 9 διεφθαρη, ix. 5 παισῃ (82 writes παισῃ), xi. 4 εστωσαι, xii. 8 ισχυσαν, xvi. 21 αυτης σφοδρα, xviii. 2 δαιμονων with the many, xviii. 11 επ αυτη, xviii. 23 φαρμακεια, xx. 4 τω θηριω, την εικονα, and τα χιλια ετη, xx. 9 εκυκλωσαν, xxii. 8 δεικνυοντος, and 52-82 (without 44) cum t.r. vii. 8 βενιαμιν, ix. 20 δυναται.

Note this combination has also ἄρκου xii. 2, contra t.r.

We find ὅρα · μὴ · once, evidently the result of gold extra-ornamentation in the old codex, from which it and others are derived.

What I have written about B is confirmed by the examination of 82.

GROUP 26-41-42-53-107-(153-211-222).

Apoc. 53. Apoc. 53 (Ac. 116. P. 136) = Paris, nat. gr. 59. [Scr. 53. Greg. 53, new 467. Sod. α 502]. xv[th] cent., written by Georgius Hermonymus, who wrote Apoc. 41 (q.v.). This cod. 53, though in exactly the same handwriting, is executed in a larger "format," small folio size, as against thick octavo size of 41.

Apoc. 53 was formerly No. 1 of Letellier, Archbishop of Rheims (according to Martin; Tellier 1, Gregory; Teller 1, Scrivener). The Apoc. occupies f[os]. 295/331. The first quire is apparently misbound. Read from 295 (upside down), the beginning of Apoc., to 302 recto, with κεφ. Prol. etc. intervening. The inscr., f°. 295 αποκαλυψις ιωαννου του αποστολου και εvαrr, is repeated on f°. 302 recto with ευαγγελιστου in full. There are headings afterwards (as in cod. 41) of αποκαλυψις ιωαννου on the left page and του αποστολου και ευαγγελιστου on the right hand page.

We naturally surmise that 41 and 53 are going to agree. Behold in chapter i. they do nothing of the sort. But that is only misleading, for Hermonymus was careless in copying 41 at the outset, and 42 checks off his errors as we have seen. Now turn back to our description of 41 and 42, and you will find 41 was not copied directly from 42. In the same way, we find here 53 was not copied either from 42 or 41, but Hermonymus must have used the same original he used before, and which we still may find. Anyhow, we can class 26-41-42-53 as one MS. for all intents and purposes. He has made many errors; leaving out some he made in 41, adding other new ones; correcting some of these in the margin, but not all; showing, however, conclusively that he used the same exemplar which he used before in copying 41, and that it was not 42, which is only a very close relative copied by an earlier hand, probably from the same original which Hermonymus used, or quite likely, that there intervenes a MS. copied from 42 (and incorporating the readings of 42), which was the copy in Hermonymus' hands.

We will not therefore waste more time over the matter. Iota sub. is only employed very partially and not in the same places as 41, but rather more freely, which might indicate later execution. Contractions are also rather few and far between.

The big commas referred to before are also to be found occasionally here, e.g. ii. 23 εκκλησιαι, οτι εγω ειμι,.

Besides Hermonymus' immediate corrections, a diorthotes has been at work, probably H. himself, who made some further corrections at the time the headings to the pages were added. And later a third hand (we call him 53) has made further corrections, chiefly additions by reason of Hermonymus' omissions ex homoioteleuton. After the careful way our last MS. 52 was executed, it is discouraging to wade through a "Greek professor's" blunders of the end of the xv[th] century, sad prelude to all the blundering work done afterwards by those who followed in his footsteps. We must do him the justice to observe that in neither of his copies does he omit the και ο καθημενος ex homoiot. iv. 2/3, but preserves the reading of ℵABP and the minority cursives.

Nor does he again repeat the blunder of 41. 42 (with ℵ 29) of αγιος octies at iv. 8, but writes plainly αγιος novies.

But there are plenty of apt illustrations of Dean Burgon's contention against the "shorter" text of some of the earliest uncials surviving. Thus, we find at iv. 10 nearly a whole verse omitted because of homoioteleuton (viz. the word αιωνων) by our friend Hermonymus here. He did not do it in 41, nor does 42 show any omission. But 20 32 93 109 121 and 215, which are not related, do omit the same passage, simply by fortuitous carelessness here. Therefore because B in the Gospels, or ℵ in the Apoc. omits a clause and has the (fortuitous) support of a few cursives, that is no reason per se to count this support as of any value, unless the codices are very carefully executed throughout. And who shall tell us this but the patient and exact collator? For this reason then is our labour undertaken, to beg of all men to weigh the evidence Codex by Codex, Father by Father, Version by Version, and in difficult places to estimate carefully the comparative value of the testimony, viewed from the standpoint of the accurate scribe, the accurate Father, the accurate translator, or the converse.

After writing this I came across the curious and apposite example of fortuitous agreement with ℵ alone on the part of 53 at vii. 16 —ετι prim.! So only 103-112 [against their fam.] and 124 [against f. 34].

Rather an interesting light is thrown on Hermonymus' relations to the missing codex he copied, for at v. 11 we find 41 plainly running the text και ην ο αριθμος αυτων μυριαδες μυριαδων, while 42 omits μυριαδες (supplying it in the margin), and 53 omits μυριαδων (supplying it in the margin).

Unconsciously 53 shows he is copying a MS. of respectable age, for occasionally he copies the diæresis, occasionally uses Η for eta in the middle of a word, and never uses iota with ζωος or ᾁδης.

We have already spoken of ιδον etc. being corrected throughout in 42 to ειδον etc.; yet Hermonymus shows a trace of this in 53, having ιδε at i. 2 (yet not in 41), although not elsewhere; retaining φιλαδελφια in both 41 and 53.

He has even πεσεται at vi. 16 in 53, though 42 and his 41 have plainly as can be πεσετε. Now πεσεται is only found in the old codices ℵCB and 1 (teste Delitzsch) with 36 and a few.

Some stray cases of ν εφελκ., and occasionally a hiatus for lack of it, can be traced to the influence of 42.

Our professor also fell into the trap set by 42 (at xiv. 16), which has ἡ γῆι, and writes ἡ γῆ, though he avoids a repetition of it later. He is careless, too, in joining verses, but this was probably due to rapid and too faithful copying of his exemplar. Thus he has no stop after ὁρα μη in xix. 10, which so horrified the third hand of the codex that he adds a special marginal cross here. The same occurs at xxii. 9, but third hand has no remark. This third hand is proved to be later than 1516, for at xvi. 7 he shows knowledge of αλλου εκ, disallowed by all MSS., but forming part of our printed text. The same applies to xxii. 3 καταναθεμα, and at xviii. 5 to εκολληθησαν.

Note at ix. 16 Hermonymus first wrote ἵππ at the end of a line. Afterwards ἵππ·/· and in the margin ·/· ἱππικοῦ , i.e. ιππου first choice, ιππικου second choice. Now this throws some light on the absence of δυο by B and most cursives. Not only was it owing to ΟΥΔΥΟ (ΙΠΠΟΥΔΥΟΜΥΡΙΑΔΕC) in uncials, but the scribe here (a Greek professor) actually left out ου of ἵππου at first; so easy is it to miscopy cursives, let alone uncials.

Hermonymus' errors of omission in this MS. are too plentiful to mention here, and have no importance except as shedding a sidelight on the same errors of his brethren of an earlier period, where we get corroboration of plain errors as opposed to various readings. But Hermonymus surpasses them all (except fam. 114) by omitting at xviii. 12 και παν σκευος ελεφαντινον ex hom.; and at xviii. 19 he writes ελαβον for εβαλον, misread by no other scribe!

He also omits μεγαλου at vi. 13 with Apoc. 12 152 only. I have often wondered why no scribe omitted this. It comes natural to omit it here. But Hermonymus can only find a friend in the ultra-careless 12 and 152! The same thing occurs at xxi. 27, an omission with only 12 and 2 among all codices.

He also follows his copy faithfully at viii. 1 reading ἡμιωρον, where he might have improved his opportunity and given us the correct ἡμιωριον, Westcott and Hort "to the contrary notwithstanding."

He falls into the stupid mistake of writing ιη̅ for ιβ̅ but once in this MS. (xxii. 2), as in 41, but he misreads the nu at at xxi. 20 giving us κήρυλλος for βηρυλλος! And at xxii. 20, to crown his efforts, he gives the new reading και (pro ναι prim.). So only 138[contra fam].

On reconsideration of the whole subject, and given Hermonymus' careless execution, coupled with his Greek knowledge, it is quite possible he did copy direct from 42 after all.

We notice at xxii. 14 and 20 the words ινα and ναι (pr.) are very very faint. It is here that 41 reads και for ινα and 53 τουτω! And 41 ετι for ναι prim., and 53 και! Also at xxi. 6 he writes γέγονατὸ ᾶ, joining γεγονα and το, exactly like 42.

Hermonymus could not avoid that old old error of eye at vi. 2, where he writes εξελθεν (non 41, 42) by reason of the ν of νικων following. 42, by the way, has εξηλθεν ικων thus.

Several times we have a curious agreement with t.r. against 41. 42, viz.:

xviii. 9. κλαυσονται instead of κλαυσουσι
xxi. 7. παντα instead of ταυτα to which add γραψω iii. 12, ἀν xiv. 4, κοκκινον absque το xvii. 3. Habet την ante εξουσιαν xvii. 13. Abest και ante ἡ ἀρχη xxi. 6.

Here are the fresh "readings" introduced to our notice by 53. They are of no manner of importance, for, as far as can be judged, they are errors, pure and simple. But what of xiii. 18?

Apoc. 55.

In Apoc. 55 (Ac. 118. P. 138) Paris nat. gr. 101. [Scr. 55. Greg. 55, new 468. Sod. O^{30}], we approach what must prove a very interesting MS., for we notice at once the rare conflate reading of P 12 13 17* 23 81*-204 f. 114 120 152-179 169-216 at ii. 15 ὁμοιως ὁ μισω. Unfortunately this MS. presents a case where photographs are not entirely satisfactory to work from, numerous corrections being present, which are difficult to classify properly, except when dealing with the original in a good light. But we shall do our best.

The MS. is mutilated Apoc. xix. 18–xxii. 17, not Acts xix. 18–xxii. 17 as Gregory says (p. 274, Textkritik, p. 631, Prol. Tisch. VIII.), which misstatement also finds a place in Scrivener's Introduction, edition III, and in Miller's Scrivener edition IV. This lacuna occurs between the folios 198 and 199 as at present numbered.

The MS. is on paper, and the Apoc. occupies f^os^. 180/199.

Inscr. αποκαλυψις του αγιου ιω' του θεολογου.
Subscr. τελος της αποκαλυψεως του αγιου ἀπ̄ ϗ ἐῡα' ἰω̄' (new).

There are some scholia in the margins by a different but nearly contemporary hand. He has also added some corrections in the text. We call this hand . Another somewhat later hand has also been at work on the text (). His notes are very neatly written. Yet another hand made a few corrections at the beginning. We call him * or ⁑⁑ . These correctors are hard to differentiate in places. They must all have flourished, however, within 100 years and probably in the same locality where the MS. was executed, as we find their corrections agree with the general family-type of this MS. The scribe himself corrects, but not very frequently; a diorthotes rather more often; the "second" hand who wrote the scholia; a "third" hand (plainly towards the last and probably many of the earlier interlineations), in a clear educated hand; and finally a "fourth" in a careless hand, looking later than it is. We date the MS. itself about 1250, and other correctors from 1250 to 1350 or 1375. We call attention to this, because the last or fourth hand has only a few corrections, chiefly in the first chapter, where he brings the MS. into conformity with 92 alone, αὐτου pro του θεου (i. 2), which would have no importance, but that the MS. itself (written over 100 years before) has a perceptible 14-92 element. Some of the corrections, which I cannot attribute definitely to any one of the above correctors specifically, have the countenance of the sister MS. 23, proving further that they were made nearly contemporaneously with the execution of the MS. or within the limits I have set above. Apoc. 23 is rather later than this MS. Such MSS. as 55, with revisers at work on them, are not only useful as showing contemporary views of the text, but they check off the readings of sister MSS. We find, e.g. vii. 1 πνεη with t.r. against the handful, including 23. Now we know that the contemporary revisers knew of the MS. 23 readings not incorporated in the MS. 55 by the original scribe. Hence this being left untouched by all four revisers, lends weight to πνεη against πνευση. There are a good many cases of this kind such as ἄρκου xiii. 2, untouched by any corrector; but of the relations with 23 more anon.

By apparently yet another hand, we have in the margin opposite xiv. 1

: τειτᾶν :
: περσαῖος :
: λατεῖνος :
: ἐυανθάς :
: βενέδικτος :

and opposite ῥάιδων (xviii. 13) in margin "ἡ τοι ἁρματων".

The MS. then is of the XIII^th^ cent. [To show how hard it is to date a MS. we find in vi. 15/16, within the space of two verses, two psis utterly different in form, the one ⊬ and the other ψ]. It is carefully written, with exceedingly few slips due to homoioteleuton. It is on paper, which has been worm-holed, but the readings are unaffected, except perhaps at xvii. 1, where δειξω completes a line; a sigma is visible beyond, but nothing else. Only 4 28 38 59 167 206* 210 read δειξωσι here, and σοι would extend too much into the margin to have been written by the original scribe.

No case of iota post. or subscript occurs, except at ii. 2 δύνῃ, where η is "ex emend.," but whether by original scribe or not I cannot say for certain. In this respect the MS. differs from 23, which has many cases of iota subscript.

ειδον . φιλαδελφεια . πτωχειαν . κεραμεικα are all consistently employed.

ν εφελκ. does not occur, but αλλα is frequently used before a vowel. The usual contractions are carefully given except for υἱος and cases. μητηρ, however, is in full at xvii. 5, and κυριε is in full at vii. 14, and κσ̄ κυρίων at xvii. 14 and xix. 16. πνευματικως, too, is found at xi. 8, and (rightfully enough, to differentiate thus 'evil' or 'unclean' spirits from holy ones) πνευματα at xvi. 13, 14; and πνευματος xviii. 2. We call attention to this because it is intentional. See how carefully the scribe writes the ninefold ἁγιος at iv. 8:

ἅγιος . ἅγιος . ἅγιος . ἅγιοσ . ἅγιοσ . ἅγιοσ . ἅΓιος . ἅΓιος . ἅΓιος

Small capital gamma and α in the first trilogy. Running gamma, α and σ in the second. Tall capital gamma, α and c in the third.

In a general way the text is of the B family largely, but omitting the B peculiarity of επι τω θρονω, reads nearly consistently επι τον θρονον. It also follows P, as we have already seen, to some extent.

It agrees at once with 13 and 23 as its nearest relatives. So closely in fact with 23 in certain peculiarities that they can be classed as one MS. and deriving from one locality, e.g. δάκῃ (pro παίσῃ) at ix. 5. Yet they have not by any means everything in common. For instance, they disagree at:

i. 19. γενεσθαι 55 etc.; non 23.
ix. 6. ζητουσιν 55 etc.; non 23.
14. τω ευφρατη 55; non 23.

xvi. 12. εξεχεεν αυτου την φιαλην 55 etc.; non 23.
xviii. 18. εκραυγαζον 55 et 9-13-27; non 23.
19. λεγοντες και πενθουντες και κλαιοντες 55 et 9-13-27; non 23.
xvii. 6. +αγιων (ante μαρτυρων) 55 et 9-13 fam 16; non 23.

The last deserves mention, because rather a curious history attends it. In 23, 21, 27 the clause και εκ του αιματος των is omitted altogether. This brings ἁγιων in close conjunction to μαρτυρων. For this reason, and in some way, 55 (with 9-13. 16-39-69-180) while retaining the second "εκ του αιματος των" ADD ἁγιων before μαρτυρων. 27 is evidently related to both 23 and 55, but in a rather more circuitous manner than these are to each other.

Now for the few fresh readings, which distinctly point to an Egyptian background, confirming the impression of δακη above and other things below.

For the rest, the connection with the Complutensian group, though not emphatic, is found through 17, the key being given at once at i. 2 +και ατινα εισι · και ατινα χρη γενεσθαι μετα ταυτα in a group (f. 21 23 38 f. 46 49 80 81 159 169 251 etc.) not including 17. But the truth is that the Complutensian group's series of special readings is in the nature of a small revision, the body of the text of those MSS. being good.

GROUP 56-108.

Apoc. 56.

Apoc. 56 (Act. 119. P. 139) = Paris nat. gr. 102A. [Scr. 56. Greg. 56, new 469. Sod. α 306] not used by Soden. His No. α 306. Uncollated, but for Scholz' examination, which does not count for anything. Martin (p. 115) says Apoc. is written by the first hand but in a different character of cursive. He dates the MS. X–XIII. We call the Apoc., palæographically speaking, not earlier than XIII. Collated Nov. 1906, from photographs.

Apoc. on fos. 209–229. Has a very small iota subscript irregularly but frequently. Towards the end, a comma sometimes approaches iota postscript. At the top of many a page the scribe gives rein to elaborate flourishes.

και ὁ is frequently curiously abbreviated and blended into one sign with the breathing over the upward curved tongue; ὡς ὁ sometimes written *ὡσ*ʿ, δυο generally δυ.

ειδον, λαοδικεια, πτωχεια occur, but φιλαδελφια, κεραμικα, φαρμακια, etc. The usual contractions, but υιος generally in full.

κυριε in full vii. 14.	πνευμα in full xiii. 15.	πνευματα xvi. 13, 14.
κ̄ς κυριων xvii. 14, xix. 16.	πνευματος ,, ,, xviii. 2.

ν εφελκ. is absent, as are all gross errors.

This is a new type of cursive, having many special readings (some right in the first few verses of chapter i), and being the first and only cursive so far to agree with ℵCAP at ii. 5 in omitting ταχει. (So also now the important cursives 130 143 146 200).

It therefore merits our serious attention. Whence is it derived? What is its relation to other MSS.?

For if we accord it important weight where it supports the uncials in a particular reading, ought we not to grant it almost equal weight where it supports the t.r. against them? That is the question. Its "personal" record shall decide the point. Well, its personal record is curious. It is very carefully written, with very few omissions from homoioteleuta, and is evidently a faithful copy. Yet it abounds in new readings. In other cases taking us back to ℵ*, and frequently alone with all or some of the five elder uncials, it yet has a good deal of the P readings, and a few of B. It is therefore old and not old. In other words, the exemplar and locality whence it was derived had an old text, modified partly by the P influence (which is thus shown to be very old), coupled with a revision of its own, which included some of the character of the B revision, but I think preceded it. In other words, B derived from it, and not it from B. The most curious and interesting fact is the number of textus receptus readings with very minor support, which, while proving they are very old, does not of course give them full authority, as this type has been "edited" at some ancient time. Vide ελθω instead of ἀν ἥξω, and in place of ἀνοιξω at ii. 25. The following lists will show all this clearly I hope. We certainly have here an independent type, which cannot fail to help us later, and which will very likely show its "provenance" before we are done with it. From our examination of Acts and Epistles we think it was copied in Calabria.

The point to be borne in mind is that the scribe is faithful and rather ingenuous. Therefore the strange readings, including transpositions (which are few), belong to his copy rather than to himself, and are older than his time. The rest of this MS., please to bear in mind, is attributed to the xth century, and Martin thinks this Apoc. was written by the same hand, but in a different style to differentiate canonical books from the deutero-canonical ones. But this is doubtful, although possible in view of a certain Egyptian influence observable as we proceed. The text runs along quite smoothly. There have been no correctors at work. Where we mark  it merely signifies the places on some pages, where an ignorant person, having gone over the writing which was rather faint, has made some blunders.

Thus we have a picture of a MS. possibly derived from another quite as early and probably earlier than ℵ, and if this be the case, then, instead of representing parts of the P and B revision, it furnishes the basis for both, and not alone for B, as said above.

Well, we come back to our question, and the answer is this. That, but for the numerous fresh readings apparent, we would accord this MS. great weight in balancing the uncials, but given the number of solecisms, we must apply our MS. readings cum grano salis.

This need not prevent us from weighing very carefully such passages as xi. 17 Habet 56 και ο ερχομενος contra ℵ^a(C)ABP and all the rest. We might argue that here is a clause preserved by 56 and others, while lost by the uncials. But we would rather regard it as an addition from another passage. This again sets the date of our recension later than suggested just previously. But this is a hard matter to decide when we remember that Dionysius in the third century has several various readings in the very first chapter, which have almost perished, and are only found in a manuscript or two.

Scholz, who professed to have examined this MS., assigns it to the "Constantinopolitan" family in a grandiose way! This is almost as sweeping as some of Hort's dicta. It would involve Hort's already contradictory theories of family grouping into still more hopeless confusion.

Versions ought to help us with the problem connected with this MS., but I hardly see it yet. It agrees often with Lat. Copt. Arm. and Syr, but generally with two or three of them together. The inversion of order, instead of furnishing a key, only complicates matters. Thus at xi. 19 instead of —και σεισμος with B and many, we have the words transferred to the end, after και χαλαζα μεγαλη. This is a novelty. It would almost seem as if the scribe of the original had thought of omitting them, and then added them, after weighing the evidence available to him. This would again tend to bring this version towards the VII^th century.

Nor can we attribute much to carelessness, for our MS. is quite a stickler for certain minutiæ, e.g. it always wants φωνης etc. in the genitive after ηκουσα. See it carried to extremes in xiv. 2 where, not content with writing "και ηκουσα φωνης εκ του ουρανου ως φωνης υδατων πολλων και ως φωνης βροντης μεγαλης" (giving us φωνης ter pro φωνην, once properly, twice improperly), he adds "και ἡ φωνὴ ἣσ ηκουσα ως κιθαρωδων"! [See our MS. also in Acts and Epistles as to this; in the Græco-Syriac fam 119 we now find the same insistance for the genitive].

56 also has πετωμενον religiously all the way through.

56 also has the peculiarity (once alone with P. viii. 5) of writing εβαλλεν passim for εβαλεν, (but abstains at xiv. 19 following εξεβαλεν, by εβαλεν sec. loco). There is, however, no "nonsense" of transmission such as κεφαλην for νεφελην, and the MS. represents a fair and truthful witness of the scribe's copy, evidently not an uncial, and therefore others of this family may turn up [see second hand of 108].

Our MS. does not correspond with the strict Complutensian group, yet we have the curious combination once, at xv. 6 of εκ του ουρανου (pro εκ του ναου) with fam 10. Compl. (non 17. 37) followed by +οι ησαν (ante ενδεδυμενοι) with the B group.

We shall find quite a large ℵ element, and a real close relationship. This is the more important in such a MS., because it helps us where ℵ makes a blunder and we do not follow it, though many others do, e.g. xx. 5 —οἱ δε λοιποι usque ad ετη ℵ and many cursives. We not only have the clause, but do not modify the οἱ δε λοιποι like B and many cursives and Compl. Also the rare combination ℵC comes in for notice. We do not support it except at xv. 3, though we do support the combination ℵCA and ℵCP in grammatical peculiarities.

As before said, we find it difficult to connect our scribe—or his predecessor rather—with any definite Version or Country. The more exceptional readings nearly all are supported by several Versions, thus taking us back to early times and mixed readings, before the text was more or less settled by Church usage.

The superficial student may say "how about the reading ελθω in ii. 25?" Is not this the Latin "veniam"? Well, that does look suspicious, followed as it is (ii. 27) by συντριβησονται (Vulg. "confringentur"). But a complete examination does not lend weight to this view. There are other latinisms, e.g.:

ii. 5. —ταχει also, however, copt aeth Hier. Isid. etc.
iii. 3. προς (pro επι sec.) Lat. = "ad" (bis).
iv. 3. +ἦν (post ιρις) Vulg. = erat.
v. 10. βασιλειαν (pro βασιλεις) Distinctly Latin. Vulg. = Regnum; but also copt Cypr. Prim. Fulg.
vi. 13. επι (pro εις) = Latin super.
viii. 11. ἀψϊνθϊον = Latin Absinthium.
ix. 20. δυνανται = Latin possunt.
xi. 17. Habet και ο ερχομενος cum t.r. et Vulg. Also Copt.
xv. 3. των αιωνων = certainly Vulgate Rex sæculorum. This with syr arm also; yet notice βασιλεῦ of our codex in the vocative.
xvi. 14. ἁπασης της οἰκουμενης (pro οἰκουμ. ὁλης) = Latin order "totius terræ," but a novel Greek reading.
xvii. 18. —ἡ (ante μεγαλη) can be classed as a Latinism, but the scribe is not given to omissions of the article.
xxii. 16. και πρωινος with the Latins.

But just as many others are distinctly *un*latin; notice first the consistent use of the genitive φωνης after ηκουσα as opposed to latin vocem; further:

ii. 14. +του (ante βαλααμ) certainly not Latin.
iii. 4. —ολιγα against the Latin and all others.
19. +και (ante ελεγχω) Distinctly a Greek and not Latin idiom.
iv. 11. +του (ante λαβειν) Also not by any means a Latinism.
ix. 11. αββααδνων No Latin here.
nor, ibid. απολυων with one λ.
x. 5. επι της γης και επι τη (errore pro της) θαλασσης alone with 37 72; not a Latin order, and perhaps a key passage.
6. —και την θαλασσαν και τα εν αυτη Arm Prim. some Latin, but not Vulg.
xii. 12. +ως (ante ειδως) Distinctly *un*latin.
xiii. 7. κατα (pro μετα) Against the Latin "cum".
xiv. 12. των τηρουντων Not Latin.
14. —καθημενος Latin = sedentem = καθημενον with most.
xvi. 4. εγενοντο Prim. gig h. But vg = factus est.
5. +και ο ἁγιος (post ὁσιος) Certainly not Latin tautology.
11. εκ του πονου Also opposed to the Latin.
xvii. 3. +τω (ante πνευματι) Distinctly not Latin.
10. ὁ δε εἱς . . ὁ δε αλλος Also distinctly a Græcism.
xviii. 7. +καθως (ante βασιλισσα) Certainly not Latin.

Then we have ἄρκτου xiii. 2 cum t.r. (where the Latin does not come into play at all), supported, I believe, by no Versions, and witnessed against by all the uncials and nearly all cursives. So the plot thickens.

The MS. runs very smoothly. You look for removal of "plain and clear errors," and you find them removed. You look for the incorporation of 'monstra' and curious readings and you do not find them. You are impressed by this ancient support of many readings of textus receptus, which have been banished. And you are just thinking what a good witness you have (whether Alexandrine or not) when suddenly from time to time, without any warning, and as suavely as possible, you are introduced to novelties of the most pronounced kind! For instance, xxii. 2 our man takes the trouble to inform us that each leaf of the healing-tree was efficacious by adding εκαστον after "και τα φυλλα του ξυλου," confirmed by 108. I do not know if there is any Patristic authority for this. (See copt).

Again, xxi. 19 he changes παντι to παντες. A very natural change to agree with θεμελιοι, confirmed by 108. "All the gates" were of precious stone; but no other scribe saw fit to change!

The end of the MS. is in very bad condition, but is legible except in two or three places.

We are in presence of a very important witness, and the matter is too complicated to follow out here. It has an important bearing on the PB versions, showing how they were gradually evolved. It confirms the late origin of many of the translations. But we have yet to find why the B type became so popular.

[It is evident that the Acts and Pauline epistles call for collation. Reiche's work is useless].

Let us tabulate for future use our Apoc. readings.

We are in presence, remember, of a MS. edited between 400 and 750 A.D. It matters not whether it was rewritten in 1250. It has been faithfully transmitted, and the alterations are apparent.

† It now appears that this almost illegible reading is doubtless conflated in 56 as in 108 (see 108).

Now it is easy to see certain characteristics of the important manuscripts and Versions come to the fore. In nearly every case readings have been preserved in these by pure transmission, while abandoned by the larger number of the witnesses. This is not the place to discuss the merits or demerits of each particular reading. Most of them speak for themselves. What we are concerned in is a history of the text, and this MS. 56 throws a good deal of light on some points, as the student should readily gather. We collect here quite some information on the starting point of the branches of family 1 and how they came together.

We see a sharp line drawn between 56 and the ordinary cursive at vi. 8, where B has a very large following for αυτω instead of αυτοις. But it was to Death and Hades that power was given—"to them"—as witnessed by ℵCAP 1. 12. 17. 21. 28. 47. 49. 56 etc., all these having an unimpeachable old basic text.

What shall we say of the omission at vii. 6 of the tribe of Nepthaleim, and the addition vii. 8 of the tribe of Dan? This is a new arrangement for a MS. ℵ and a few are the only ones that meddle with Gad in vii. 5, but Nepthaleim so far has been left alone. See Wordsworth ad loc., who goes into the subject at some length and quotes Irenæus as specifically noticing the absence of Dan in the list, in his time. Why Dan's full brother should be excluded in his favour here is a mystery.

The only sign of editing by the actual scribe is found at xvii. 4, where he gives us in the text και τα ακαθαρτα της πορνειας της γης, the reading of B and large cursive group, but adds in the margin "ἡ αὐτῆς" the reading of A and a good number of cursives, and where ℵ has "conflated" both readings and has them in the text. Conflation of ℵ.

The most important B reading in the MS. is the omission of και οινον at xviii. 13 with so many cursives.

Before closing we must hark back once more to the 'provenance' of this MS. There are unmistakable Egyptian earmarks, but they run alongside an education superior to Coptic scholarship.

At xii. 12 +ως ante ειδως is purely Egyptian. See Horner and Kenyon on Coptic forms. But we miss pure Coptic forms like ελισαβελ for ιεζαβελ, χαρχηδων for χαλκηδων and so forth. The impression grows that this MS. is of a family, or is the stem of a family, written by a very superior churchman and scholar, acquainted in his time with Greek, Latin, and Coptic, but not particularly influenced by Egyptian forms, though probably living in Alexandria, or in upper Egypt, and transmitting a Greek text, with the changes that seemed good to him.

N.B.—Until Mr. Horner's Bohairic version of the Apoc. is published, we cannot examine, as we would, all the passages which might help us here. (This has since been done, and confirms what is written above). Goussen and Ciasca have failed to throw any light on our problem in this MS., as far as we can ascertain.

Just one observation more. The reader may remember that under Apoc. 47 we commended that MS. for a straightforward witness, and said that Matthaei had underestimated it. Now, in entering our collation of 56 and adding it to the main body, we are struck again as we proceed when we notice certain sympathies between these two MSS. It comes up here and there only, but proves our opinion of 47 as a good witness. For example, we see both MSS. avoiding certain mistakes which are more or less stereotyped in other MSS. We see both occasionally faltering or making the same (probable) error. We see both unite in a reading which is passed over by others; and we see both reproduce, without fuss, an old text. Of course, we eliminate from consideration the many new readings of 56. But, apart from these readings, 56 does not wilfully misrepresent. On the contrary, it is an important witness, uniting much of A (and even of C) with ℵ, where we certainly have a pure transmission of a IVth–Vth century text, whatever we may decide about its genuineness and merits.

You may remember that 47 and 56 are only once together alone, at xxi. 10. But this is noteworthy.

We do not apologise for the length of this notice of a single MS. It would be interesting to pursue the matter much further than we have space for here. For we have reached the limits of the text-books (writing in 1906) and await Bohairic and Sahidic publications of MSS. of the Apoc. before we can deal more fully with the Egyptian side here. Suffice it to say that had we brought such a text back from the Nitrian desert (or elsewhere) in a fifth century codex, the world would have rung with its notoriety. Yet the text is all here, though in more modern garb.

As regards this MS., we cannot do better than refer to the words of Rendel Harris [Study of Codex Bezæ, Cambridge, 1891 (we make free to say by far the most important of Dr. Harris' contributions to Textual Criticism)], where, on p. 114, he says :—

Latinisation. "The process of Latinisation is not a late one, consequent on the rapprochement in a "bilingual codex, of two texts, an old western Greek and an old western Latin respectively; "for this bilingual tradition goes back to the earliest times. It can be traced in Irenæus, in "the ancestry of ℵCL, and in the parentage of the Egyptian versions." (The italics are ours).

We find now that the whole MS. was executed at one time in some monastery by one or two contemporaneous scribes (XII–XIII.). Martin has just missed the matter. The facts are that one scribe with a clear round hand was chosen to write the text of Act. Paul and Cath. epistles. The prologues were written in contemporaneously by other scribes in smaller hands between the text, and one of these scribes wrote the Apocalypse.

Compare the MS. with Hippolytus and Apoc. 95 to identify branches of the very old base. Also fam 119. Also 111 130 143 200.

Jan. 1911. It is some years since the above was written. We have now made the interesting discovery that the second hand of 108, who supplied a lacuna at the end of that MS. from xxi. 14 to the end, was copying 56 or its parent. This is absolutely indubitable. The first scribe left off at εχων for εχον foot of page 180 verso. Our friend 108 resumes (181 recto) beginning εχει (with 56 *syr*S only) and holds with 56 absolutely to the end.

The curious thing is that we cannot so far recognize in the first hand of 108 any definite family known to us. Geographically all these scribes, however, can be localised from their 'forms', 56 and 108* being partial to εβαλλεν, although 108* has less to do with the text of 56. The græco-latin family show affinity for 108*. Occasionally f. 21 and 14-92 come into 108*. The actual writing of 108 is most like to that of 104 of the græco-latin family 7.

This brings Egyptian and Latin close to Calabrian homes perhaps. (See under 104).

The last page of 56 is in very bad condition. I could not read xxii. 14 in the photographs, and appealed to Mr. Omont. He confirmed οι πλυνουντες τας στολας αυτων with ℵA 38 only for the usual οι ποιουντες τας εντολας αυτου, but 108 now throws interesting light on this.

For 108 conflates and reads :

μακαριοι οι ποιουντες τας εντολας αυτου και πλυνοντες τας στολας αυτων.

Upon reference to 56 it is almost certain that this also is the true reading of 56, a calculation of the space available allowing of this amplification.

The other apparent conflate in this neighbourhood :—

xxii. 8. και εβλεψα και ειδον of 56 is now confirmed by 108, and it may be that later witnesses separated this reading considering it to be tautological (see the varying evidence in my collations) whereas it may not be conflate at all, but original.

COPY OF COLINAEUS EDITION.

Apoc. 57 (Ev. 296. Ac. 124. P. 149) = Paris nat. gr. 123/124. Formerly Colb. 6584 and Reg. 3427. 4. [Scr. 57. Greg. 57, new 296. Sod. δ 600]. Apoc. 57.

This is the MS. written by "the angel" (Angelus Vergecius) in the XVI[th] century, and I have found it necessary to collate the five editions of Erasmus and the Aldine—a project long put off—before I could make up my mind whether to exclude 57 from the list as a servile copy of Erasmus, or not. And just as it looked as if we could date this MS. about 1522, the date of Erasmus II[d] edition, it became apparent from other readings that Vergecius had not made a servile copy of any one of them. For he has readings used by Colinæus in 1534, e.g. i. 19, ii. 21, 27. It is curious how the wrong επι μεσω based on the επι of Apoc. 1, in ch. ii. 1, ran through all five Erasmian editions, notwithstanding other less important corrections. Apoc. 57 has it, and even Colinæus himself, though there is no MS. authority for it.

This seems the proper place to speak of the MSS. used by Stephen for his 1550 edition and quoted in his margin. It is really not worth while to go into the question of what MSS. are intended by ιε and ις, as his readings are too partial, and do not embrace passages unusual enough to identify properly any of the Paris codices. His own text differs from Erasmus and from the Complutensian but little, and the whole matter of his "various readings" is of slight importance.† The Elzevir editions vary quite a good deal from Stephen. See my list in Appendix to Evan. 604. From this, we find Stephen follows Erasmus as a rule, to the exclusion of such a clause as v. 11 και ην ο αριθμος αυτων μυριαδες μυριαδων, although Compl. and its codices have it. We are far enough advanced with our Paris codices to see that neither Stephen nor Stephen's son really collated any of them, or they would have furnished the learnèd world with some interesting material, which it was left for Tischendorf to bring forward from other MSS., although many of these readings existed in the Paris MSS. Robert Stephen's MSS.

Now as regards 57, we are struck at once by the curious fact, unaccountable indeed, that Vergecius only gives to the Apoc. twenty chapters. This mistake occurs thus: at iii. 1 no new chapter is given, but it begins αι instead of Και, showing that when prepared, chapter iii was intended to be placed here. He skips a whole chapter thus, and marks iv. as iii. This continues to xv (which is marked xiv). Then he skips another by mistake, 291 verso top, also αι for Και, being xvi but not marked xv. or xvi., so that xvii (f°. 293 recto) is marked xv., and so on, xvi. for xviii., xvii. for xix., xviii. for xx., xix. for xxi., and xx. for xxii.

We now find beyond a doubt that Vergecius copied Colinæus or Colinæus set up from Vergecius. All the variations (barring the merest slips) from Erasmus, are found to agree with Colinæus. The fact that Colinæus held to many of the Erasmian readings had bothered us thus far.

I suppose I ought to eliminate No. 57 from the list altogether. But in order to close the matter here, and to have a statement of the case for others to judge by (if they do not take my word for it), I have included the collations of Ap. 57 and Colinæus in the general collation, to which I refer for all points bearing on this, which constitutes part of the history of the printed text.

The examination of such minutiæ is not fruitless however.

Take the case at vi. 8 —εν (ante λιμω) by 57, supported by ℵ 98 164-166. How can we prove that this is a pure error on the part of ℵ and 98 164-166? Thus: neither Apoc. 1, nor Erasmus, nor Colinæus have it. Therefore Vergecius (Apoc. 57), who copied Colinæus, merely omitted it from careless transcription. The self-same error was committed by ℵ over a thousand years before, and by 98 164-166 some centuries before. We are often called on to Errors of ℵ controlled.

† There is, however, still a reading of Stephen's ις which lacks confirmation from any MS. I have examined so far, viz. των ονοματων at xv. 2. Possibly this is an error of Stephen.

follow manifest errors of ℵ. C. A. B. or P, but it is not always that we can prove that they are mere lapses of the pen or eye. We see this in several other places. Proof positive occurs at xii. 14, where Verg. omits τοπον (non Col.), and ℵ (alone) omits τον before τοπον. Simple errors, but it is interesting, for both ℵ and Vergecius wrote beautiful hands and could be accurate when they wished to take the trouble. Curious idiosyncracies separated by 1200 years!

So 57 becomes Colinæus.

But whence did Colinæus draw? No one knows. We can surmise however. From nowhere! That is from no MSS. direct. Else his text would not have remained stuffed with the errors of Erasmus, plus more of his own. Take v. 6. He did not like τα απεσταλμένα (although it has MS. authority; P 1. 21. 28. 46-88-101. 56 etc), so he, (followed by Vergecius), writes τα ἀπογελλομενα, whereas Complutensian has αποστελλομενα with B and most cursives. But ℵ (hiat C) has απεσταλμενα without the article and A has απεσταλμενοι. Even 12 only varies with τα αποσταλμενα. Surely Colinæus was not much better than Erasmus.

Some twenty new readings of 57 with or without Colinæus will hardly help us to connect them with MSS. which they could have consulted, except where they conspire in errors or slips.

Aldus' use of our 46.

Postscript.—We print in the second volume our exact collation of the five Erasmian editions and Aldus 1518. Upon examination, a curious thing obtrudes itself, viz. that Aldus did consult another MS., and that MS. the Venice codex Apoc. 46. Yet, such was his veneration for Erasmus that he only borrows from 46 the merest trifles, while occasionally correcting some of Erasmus' glaring misprints. If you consult, among other places, xvii. 10, you will find Aldus gives (against Erasmus) και οι πεντε επεσαν, for which there is no MS. authority but 46 (plus its copies 88, 101), yet 46 adds μεν after οι as well as και before it. This is therefore a coincidence you may say. Not so, for in the same chapter, xvii. 17, we find τελεσθησονται by Aldus (against τελεσθῇ Er. 1, τελεσθη Er. 2. 3. 4. 5. St.) yet not the τελεσθησονται οι λογοι του θεου of 46 and ℵAP 1. 10. 12 etc., but τελεσθησονται τα ρηματα του θεου of the textus receptus. Again you may say, coincidence, for Aldus was merely improving the phrase. To be brief, we will reply that a reference to other places shows that Aldus probably did look over Apoc. 46, but borrowed as little as he could from it, as he found it in close agreement with Apoc. 1. How then could Vergecius also use 46? He did not, but probably was slightly influenced by Aldus, and the other occasions where they agree are fortuitous.

As to 141 see under that number. Although close to the printed text, the above collation of 57 rules out any direct connection between 57 and 141.

Group 25-58-70-78-84-94-207.

Apoc. 58 of the Apocalypse alone. Paris nat. gr. 19, formerly Colbert 3581. Reg. 2854. 5. on paper. [Scr. 58. Greg. 58, new 2025. Sod. α 1592]. Gregory says he collated i. 1–xi. 13 in 1884, but I do not think he published it. When we say of the Apoc. alone, f°. 91-126, we should add that it contains also Job 1-50, and Justin Martyr (51-90). Martin says it is written by an "helléniste Européen." This is possibly true, but he is not by any means so careless as our last friend of that ilk.† The error ιωαννου for ιωαννη at the start (i. 1 fin.) is not indicative of his general accuracy, which is very fair indeed. [N.B.—What appears to be αἰ for ἅ, i. 1, is in reality ἅ*]. Apoc. 58.

The usual contractions occur. Only κυριε is in full, vii. 14. κσ κυριων xvii. 14, xix. 16, πνευματα xvi. 13, 14. But we notice for the first time ἰο̃υ for ἰησοῦ at xxii. 20. We only call attention to it to show that the scribe was not careless but deliberate here, and that the addition of χε following (with ℵ[a] and a few) was deliberate and not unintentional.

Iota subscript is indicated plentifully by a very small dot.

μη is very frequently written μὴ.

The diæresis over both ι and υ is plentiful.

This MS. at once falls into line with the rest of the family 25-58-70-78-84-94-207 (see under 25) and also with the second hand of 19.

It is closer to 25 than to 94 as a rule, see i. 20 +ταυτα εισιν with 25 and 19 alone, while 94 has ταυτα εστιν (teste Scriv.), but the whole family is a unit together for the "monstrum" κτισεως (for πιστεως) at iii. 14 (+153 166 211 222 arab). But is it a monstrum? Here ℵ* wrote εκκλησιας. Again something faint in the original. 28 f. 62 join them sometimes in exceptional readings, e.g. ii. 5 ὅθεν (pro ποθεν) and is often in the larger groups with them. Another faint place at iii. 14.

This MS. is a good exponent of many of the larger cursive groups of the lost line. It has a real old stem, see iii. 9 etc., and introduces but few unnecessary changes. The larger family resemblance can be seen readily in the medium and large cursive groupings.

Our MS. is by no means unimportant, though we can deal with it in a few words. In fact, this enhances its value. The group 25 merely identifies its exceptional readings, which have come down unimpaired in all seven. 25 is a little more carefully copied than 58, but 58 does not go out of its way very often. Of 94 Scrivener had a very good opinion. This, no doubt, because, like 47 and some others, there is no attempt at any subtle changes or great critical editing, or comparison with other standards, and the text flows smoothly. Its critical value is chiefly found in its agreement with AB, ℵB, ℵAB, BP, ℵBP, ABP etc., in contradistinction to the later run of purely B MSS. This cursive group thus affords a good measure of support to B when B has also the countenance of some of the other uncials. As regards provenance, its readings with the large cursive groups are the most interesting, indicating, as we have said, further witness to a lost uncial line, which we pick up thus, and which alone is worth all the labour of this investigation. But this merely represents the Arethas readings as I now find. See under 70 and add 78-84-94-207. 70 is also very accurately copied, and this group gives us a good B type, with some Arethas readings.

The whole group is based on a pure Syriac original base, as old as the Crawford MS. text.

† It is not by any means certain that the scribe was Western. His rough breathing, combined with accent, in one stroke, e.g. over ἅδου ἵνα etc., is rather more of the East than the West. He also prolongs the up-stroke of upsilon for an accent. He is absolutely *un*latin in adding rather than subtracting articles, though he does both. He is just careless enough, however, to make the new mistake ii. 23 (from τεκνα just preceding) of writing ἀποτεκνῶ for ἀποκτενῶ!

Here is the pure agreement of the whole family (from which but rarely any members are missing), striking enough, as must be admitted:

From the above it will be seen, first, how faithfully the family hangs together, and secondly, in what spots it has very imposing support. The other places where the family remains alone doubtless trace to a very old source, as all the MSS. agree. A feature is the intrusion of the interesting 61 family which will follow.

Here is where the family is joined by but a few others:

i. 11.	—και (post εφεσον)	xviii. 12.	ἀργὕριόυ

The most noteworthy are the four changes in xix. 2 without any other authority. But they are practically all pure errors.

Twice in the MS. there are catchwords at foot of f°. 100 verso vii. 1 επι της γης, and again xix. 14, f°. 120 verso λευκ̈ καθαρον. We should date it about 1450, but for the very numerous diæreses and a few other things. Perhaps it may be as early as 1400.

At xviii. 2 in marg. is written βαβυλων ἤτοι ῥώμη by a hand of XVI. or XVII. century who inserted the modern chapter numbers. He also probably added the "αμην . τελος" at the end.

There are but few places where the family disagrees with 58. Notably:

iii. 17. +ὁ (ante πτωχος) with 40 127 181-188 only, non fam.
v. 10. βασιλευσουσιν with ℵP etc., but contra rel. fam βασιλευουσιν.

21. —ημων with ℵABE 70-84-94-207 etc. Non 25.
ibid. —αμην* with A 21 56 etc. Non fam.

Some of the places where agreement with t.r. is exceptional or important, have already been referred to, viz. ἔχει without ἐκει xii. 6, ἀρκτου xiii. 2 against its sisters.

We may mention also:

vi. 8. και ειδον is present (lacking elsewhere).
viii. 1. ἡμιωριον
9. διεφθαρη
xi. 8. οπου και
xii. 14. οπου τρεφεται

xvi. 17. απο του ναου του ουρανου xvii. 8. υπαγειν
xviii. 2. δαιμονων
11. επ αυτη
xix. 7. αγαλλιωμεθα
xx. 4. τα χιλια ετη
xxi. 6. γεγονε
xxii. 8. δεικνυοντος

A good test of whether a MS. is full of self-importance or of carelessness always occurs at xviii. 21/22. Our MS. 58 reads word for word with t.r.

Family 59-121.

IMPORTANT SUB-TYPE OF THE GREAT 1 FAMILY. (See also No. 121 and 159).

Apoc. 59 = Paris. nat. Suppl. gr. 99. [Scr. 59. Greg. 59, new 2026. Sod. $A\nu^{501}$]. Apoc. 59.
Gregory says XV or XVI. with com. of Andreas; formerly belonged to de Noailles.

Martin says "Ce MS. est en très belle cursive, mais il a été copié en Europe," and places the date very wide XVI-XII.

Scholz merely says it belongs to the Constantinopolitan family (a very wide assertion, as we have seen elsewhere), and his "cursim contuli" amounts to nothing as usual, for this is a very interesting MS. of the (probably middle) xv[th] century, abounding in new readings, and also in variations from other Andreas MSS. (e.g. 49). And if the last MS. dealt with, viz. 58 and family, agreed with 19, this MS. 59, curiously enough, agrees sometimes with 19* and only a handful. The commentary as well as the text shows many differences from 49. But it will bear the very closest inspection, and is troublesome to collate by reason of the care necessary to record everything.

The MS. commences with the Prologue on f°. 1, but apparently a leaf is lost between folios 1 and 2, as a considerable portion of the Prologue is missing (it closes 1 verso bottom with: το δε τριτον δηλαδη, and f°. 2 recto begins with commentary on i. 1: θῶ, ὡς ἡ ἡμέρα ἐχθὲς ἥτις διῆλθε, λελογισται: † *κειμ*ε*ν* continuing with the latter part of verse 1: καὶ ἐσήμανεν κ.τ.λ., so that the Inscription and first part of i. 1 are missing).

On the other hand, while ἀμην at xxii. 21 is lacking (with A etc.), the close of the Apoc. is followed on p. 81 verso by: "ἵνα συνελὼν ἐν ὀλίγω τὸν ἅπαντα ἐπώφελῆ σκοπὸν αὐτῆς παράθομαι: † Ἀνακεφαλάιωσις τῆς βίβλου" for four pages to foot of 83 recto, closing:

"Τέλος σὺν θῶ τῆς θείας τοῦ μακαρίου ἰωάννου τοῦ ἀποστόλου καὶ θεολόγου ἀπο
.: καλύψεως :. "
[followed by signature (of former possessor) Ægid. de Noailles].

The MS. starts out at once with a curiosity, having τε in i. 2, thus ὅcατε uno tenore with 1-208 f. 62 and 95 almost alone, the latter being Scrivener's MS. g (brought by Lord Curzon from Caracalla on Athos). All other MSS. omit. Both 1 and 95 are "commentary" MSS. Scrivener says that the com. of 95 is "a kind of epitome of that of Arethas," but this may not be exact.

Immediately following (i. 4) we have ἃ εἰσιν for ἃ ἐστιν, with 36 alone, with which MS. our document has much in common; and many other novelties in the very first chapter, which will be found tabulated with the rest. The MS. is a very full, and most carefully prepared document, with complete κεφ. and λογ. throughout the text, and original marginal comments besides the full commentary itself between the texts. It was evidently copied from an elder document of similar pretensions, and judged of much importance, I should say. We are far from commending it, as a whole, for we have to wade through a vast complexity of readings, and the many novelties (at this stage of our investigation) are more than suspicious. Still, many valuable elements are latent in it, and it throws more light on the vicissitudes of the text. When we have done with more of these commentary MSS. (several more to follow shortly from the libraries of Paris, Rome and Munich) we shall perhaps be able to estimate the problem at its true value.

For the present, we must content ourselves with saying that the MS. is closely allied to 12 (a MS. without commentary, but copied from one which had it), besides the above-named 1.36 and 95. The real sympathies come out best in the agreement with this and somewhat larger groups in passages identical with the textus receptus, of which we will give a selected list.

There are very many new readings, which will be duly recorded. But at ix. 5 the MS. strikes a new chord, and gives us κρουση for the scorpion's sting (with which 121 alone The scorpion's sting.

agrees). We have already had παισῃ, πεσῃ, πληξῃ and δακῃ. There remain still plenty of synonyms in the rich Greek tongue for the scribes to have played with, such as the verbs κροτέω (a variation on the above κρούω), θείνω, βάλλω or ἐμβάλλω, κόπτω, ἐλαύνω, ἐλελίζω, πατάσσω (used elsewhere in Apoc.), σποδέω, κυρηβάζω, ἐμπίπτω (practically used by *syr*S), προσπταίω etc. Also our old friend τύπτω. It is curious why the scorpion's sting fascinated the scribes into improvising here. While they were about it, why not have used the verbs φλάω, or ἀράσσω, or ἀμύσσω, or ἱμάσσω (as with lightning). They are good strong words! Like δακῃ, (of 23-55) = Coptic, it was to make sure we did not read πεσῃ here.

Now there cannot have been alternative readings in our scribe's exemplar, for he gives no marginal readings, and his curious text flows perfectly smoothly, with elaborate chapter headings, as if it were a regular standard. So the fault of eclecticism lies in the parents of our MS., showing that the family 1. 12. 36. 46. 95 etc. was more widely disseminated, though full of license, than the examination so far properly reveals. Nor do the new readings come from the commentary, except in very rare instances (e.g. xix. 12 fin. +μονος). And this was an old text, preceding B.

Our MS. is practically never with B and cursives alone (perhaps twice in the whole book). It is more often, however, with B in combination with other uncials. Thus, at xix. 12 —ως with ℵBP etc., is a good combination. It is the harder reading, but no doubt correct, and ὡς was only imported from a sense of want, or from the commentary. For the commentary clearly recognises its absence, the text running:

> "τὸ ἄγνωστον τοῦ ὀνόματος, τὸ τῆς οὐσίας αὐτοῦ σημαίνει ἀκατάληπτον. ταῖς γὰρ "οἰκονομίαις ὢν πολυώνυμος. ὡς ἀγαθὸς. ὡς ποιμὴν. ὡς ἥλιος. ὡς φῶς. ὡς ζωὴ. ὡς "δικαιοσύνη. ὡς ἁγιασμὸς. ὡς ἀπολύτρωσις......ὡς ἄφθαρτος. ὡς ἀόρατος. ὡς "ἀθάνατος. ὡς ἀναλλοίωτος κ.τ.λ."

This MS. family also antedates the lost exemplar of the large cursive groups scattered throughout the book in many passages. Thus 59 has επλυναν at vii. 14 against the big cursive combination. See also vii. 17 [ποιμανει..οδηγησει]; also ix. 20 [Habet και τα χαλκα]; also xvi. 3 [ζωσα], etc. About the only place where it falls into line with a large group of cursives is iv. 3 —και ο καθημενος ην.

Omissions, even new readings, seem mostly ancient and from the exemplar copied, much more than from any carelessness of the scribe. Numerals, too, are nearly all written out in full, see vii. 5/8, xiii. 18, xviii. 23 etc., showing not only that the MS. was copied from an elder one, but that, that MS. was in itself ancient or of ancient line.

Date of P recension.

When alone with an uncial, or an uncial line, the MS. is generally found with P, or P and a small group, thus further emphasizing the priority of P over B in point of time. From other evidence, it looks as if this P system was not later than V[th] or VI[th] century. The most serious deflection of our MS. from P and a very large group is at xxi. 3, where we read λαοι with t.r. ℵAB and but a few cursives against P and most.

Lâches of ℵ.

As usual in such a MS., we find the carelessness of some other MSS. reproduced. For instance of ℵ* (alone) at iv. 9 —δοξαν και, though ℵ* only omitted δοξαν, showing that it was a mere error, and ℵ[a] supplied it. See also v. 1 —γεγραμμενον 59, while ℵ* omits βιβλιον γεγραμμενον. Also ix. 7 ομοιοι (pro ομοια) with ℵ alone. Again, xviii. 19 της κεφαλης (pro τας κεφαλας) with ℵ alone.

Text history.

It is quite evident that the exceptional readings of this MS. must be viewed with suspicion, and have but little critical value, except where they agree with other commentary MSS., or with other groups. At the same time, from the standpoint of the history of the text, corrupt though it be—and its corruptions are both ancient and modern—it affords certain definite information, lacking hitherto. Thus, at ii. 19, we learn for the first time, how the famous και before τα εσχατα came to find its way into the text. It has always been a surprise why practically all MSS. omitted και, which seems quite natural here. Only two MSS., however, had it so far, viz. 1 and 12. Now 59 reads here the stupid and impossible "τα πρωτα και τα εσχατα πλειονα των πρωτων" from confusion of thought or from ignorance. A subsequent scribe, drawing his pen through τα πρωτα, and leaving και, this passed to 1 and 12 (both much related to 59) as well as the original reading undisturbed to our less fortunate friend 59, who, in his turn, perpetuated it verbatim for our information. See also ii. 25 —οὗ [ἂν ἥξω], i.e. ἄχρις ἂν ἥξω txt. In the com̄. we find ἄχρις ἂν ἐντευθεν etc. Hence the ἂν ηξω from αχρις αν for αχρις οὗ. See further, vii. 3 αχρις αν pro αχρις οὗ (with 18 and f. 21). Compare Phrynicus on this.

But in eliminating such a MS. as a reliable witness for the text as a whole, it must be borne in mind, as before stated, that it opposes and antedates B and group.

That its evidence cannot be neglected is seen from such a passage as iii. 2 εμελλον αποθανειν with ℵCAP and a number of reliable junior documents, all the others going with B, or having other variations. This certainly is an ancient reading.

Notwithstanding its late date, there is no iota post. or subscript; we find λαοδικια (quite exceptional in cursives) as well as φιλαδελφια, and the usual contractions occur (except ii. 14, vii. 4 ισραηλ in full; xii. 10, xv. 8 θεου; xiii. 6, xiv. 7 θεον; xii. 17 ιησου; ανθρωπων once at xiii. 13; κυριος κυριων at xix. 16; πνευματα at iii. 1 and xvi. 13/14; ουρανος xx. 11; ουρανω iv. 1, 2, xii. 7; ουρανου xiv. 17, xxi. 10). ἱερουσαλημ, however, always contracted ἰλημ.

There are quite a number of itacisms, but not so many gross ones as might be expected, if we eliminate ἔπαισα sic for επεσον xix. 10, and a few more. εδωθη is frequent with B. 7. 12, and it may be that though quite opposed to B in text, the scribes of these two recensions were geographically related, which makes it all the more interesting. See x. 4 etc. χλορον with BP. 12. 36 only.

At the end there is no ἀμην, but there follow four pages of ἀνακεφαλαιωσις της βιβλου, and after αμην a subscription, thus: τελος συν θεω της θειας του μακαριου ιωαννου του αποστολου και θεολογου αποκαλυψεως.

The arrangement of the twelve gates (xxi. 20) is out of the ordinary, for opposite the names of the precious stones, stand, in the same line of the text itself, the names of the twelve apostles, thus:

Ὁ θεμελιος ο πρωτος, ιασπις: α^ος πετρος:

then commentary; then

Ὁ θεμελιος ο δευτερος, σαμφειρος:— παυλος, β^ος

then commentary; then

Ὁ θεμελιος ο τριτος, χαλκηδων:— γ^ος Ἀνδρεας and so on, with Ιωαννης, Ιακωβος, φιλιππος, βαρθολομαιος, θωμας, Ματθαιος, θαδδαιος, Cιμων, Ματθιας.

The noteworthy thing is that though Paul (as one born out of due time) is put second, his extra-apostolic position, is signalised by the number β^ος (i.e. δευτερος) following his name, instead of preceding it, as in all the others.

We have found the sister MS. in our 121, but they do not always agree.

The extraordinary thing in the above lists is the very partial agreement only of 121.

This MS. 59 is a gross retranslator as subsequent investigation shows, and this recension was based, quite early in the history of the text, on Latin and other Versions, notably the Crawford Syriac. Its base is ancient, but it has been abused. A careful consideration of the above will show that it must have been copied from a very old copy which had not been revised. In 121 most of the strange variants had been removed. Besides agreement with *syr*S and Latins, observe arm frequently supports.

189 is friendly with and without 121 sometimes.

Apart from the sidelight of the Versions (as indicated above) one would think the MS. was mad.

Complete agreement in the order of words with t.r. is as frequent as unusual transposition. In this connection we have the curious addition of εκει POST επεστρεψα in i. 12, instead of before it, with the B group.

Now as regards agreement with the textus receptus, one of the most remarkable readings is the presence of the words ταις εν ασια in i. 11 alone so far among Greek MSS. (for 57 does not count). The words are absent in all other MSS. uncial and cursive, including all the other MSS. sympathetic to our document, except perhaps 19*. Erasmus imported the words from the Clementine Vulgate. The Coptic and Armenian versions are cited for the phrase, but I do not know how important the documents are which have it (apparently in all Bohairic (see Horner) but not Sahidic (see Horner)). Another most important place is the retention of the more difficult μεγαλης at ix. 2 in preference to the more attractive καιομενης adopted by most MSS., even by such careful scribes as those of 47 etc. See Matthaei ad loc. See also x. 4 with t.r. alone of MSS. so far; and xxii. 3 καταναθεμα. See Gwynn as to this in *syr*S.

It would be almost an interminable task to mention the places, where 59 goes with other MSS. and small groups. It is alone, for instance, with C at ii. 10, with א at ix. 7 and xviii. 19,

with א[a] at xiii. 16,
with A at v. 6, with P at xviii. 17 and xxii. 2, with 36 twelve times alone, with 12 ten times, with 38 four times, with 56 thrice (and once with 56); with 21 thrice, with 46 thrice; twice each with 87, 39, 17*, 31, 97, 32, 90 and 14-92, and once each with 1, 2, 7, 16, 40, 41, 15, 28, 45, 95, 55*, 91, 98, 47.

This does not give a proportionate picture, however. Its real affinity, after 121 189, is for 1. 12. 46, and then the 36 readings, plus 17, fam 21 and that company. It completely bridges the Complutensian-Erasmian text, if we eliminate its strange personal readings, for its agreement with t.r. is remarkable. Even καταναθεμα (xxii. 3) against 1, and ταις εν ασια (i. 11), and μη ταυτα (x. 4) alone with St. and Erasmus.

Apoc. 60. "Vacat."

This, in Scr. III., was erroneously attributed to Paul. 152 = Reg. 136[a] (Scr.) (or "nat. suppl. gr. 136" teste Gregory), which does not contain the Apoc. but only excerpts—"theologica varia non vero Heb. Apoc." (Greg.).

Scr.-Miller IV. uses this number for Vat. gr. 656, which is Gregory's Apoc. 79.

We leave it blank, with Gregory, though it would have been much more convenient to have put back in this place what is now Apoc. 139, Scr. IV. and Greg. (= Paris nat. gr. 240), instead of separating the Paris MSS. by 80 intervening numbers.

GROUP 61-95-126-218-219. [After ch. xi. cp. fam. 25].

Apoc. 61 = Paris nat. gr. 491. [Scr. 61. Greg. 61, new 2027. Sod. α 1374]. Apoc. 61.

Of about end of XIII[th] or beginning of XIV[th] century. Contained on 26 pages, but wanting after xxii. 8 ἀκου... Long lines, 37 to a page, close together, ten or twelve words to a line. The MS. is wormed in places, but nearly always legible. There is no iota post. or sub., except at iii. 3 γνωσῃ, a very small iota subscript. At iii. 18 περιβάλλη is without iota, but with our old friend the large comma following. Even at vii. 1 the exceptional πέσῃ with 95 alone, is without iota, though 95 writes πέσηι. φ is generally looped as for φρ so common with many scribes, but is always meant for plain φ.

No ν εφελκ. ειδον, φιλαδελφειαν etc. occur consistently.

The usual abbreviations, including υἱος and cases, though not always with this word. Other exceptions are only κυριε vii. 14; κσ̄ κυριων xvii. 14, xix. 16.

ιωαννης is abbreviated ἰω̄' everywhere but once, including xxii. 8, which is rare.

But few itacisms. We notice a new one, however, at vi. 13 ὀλίνθους.

There are many omissions from homoioteleuta, some from carelessness, some of older origin from the copy, like iv. 3 —και ο καθημενος ην with many. Also additions from the same cause, notably vii. 17 +και εξαλειψει ο θεος πηγας υδατων (post υδατων), while retaining και εξαλειψει ο θεος παν δακρυον etc. which follows. Addition from homoiotel.

The MS. is of a very interesting B type, yet not slavish (note iv. 8 αγιος ter). It has also the "cursive" readings of the Arethas line.

But beginning in the third chapter, it has some new readings, and a most remarkable agreement with 95, a distant circuitous relationship, if you will, going far back (for they are apart in a number of ordinary passages), yet a most thorough verbal agreement in certain exceptional readings, so far peculiar to 95, as per list further on. Curiously enough this ceases abruptly in the eleventh chapter and is not resumed.

There is an old basic text to 61—(see iii. 12 εν τω ονοματι for εν τω ναω with 95-126-219 alone, yet αυτω for αυτον prim. with ℵ 47 92 111 130 167 201 219)—coupled with and refreshed by the effects of the B revision, as a whole.

That we are in presence of a pretty carefully chosen text is seen from the affinity of our MS. for 22* and 22 and with others combined, as seen in small groups. This MS. 22 often joins in somewhat larger groups. The eclectic yet very old basic text of 40 comes into combination not unfrequently as well. With 90 there is some unusual agreement also. But all this will be set forth in due course in a bird's-eye view.

A curious feature of the orthography is found in the use of κύκλωθε, ἔμπροσθε, ὄπισθε for κυκλωθεν, εμπροσθεν, οπισθεν, but these forms are not uniformly employed. We notice it because it is a novelty among our N.T. manuscripts.

The only other things noticeable are at xxi. 13 πυλῶνες' and πυλων'ες thus [Codex A has straight marks of apostrophe ʹ], and ἔβαλλεν ἔβαλλον with double lambda nearly constant.

Going back to the inscription, which is unusual, viz.:

αποκαλυψις του ευαγγελιστου παρθενου και θεολογου ἰω̄

we are led to suppose that our MS. may have much in common with Apoc. 30, but this is not found to be so in any peculiar degree. [95 has simply ιωαννου αποκαλυψις].

The inscription of 30 is: αποκαλυψις του αγιου ενδοξοτατου αποστολου και ευαγγελιστου παρθενου ηγαπημενου επιστηθιου ιωαννου του θεολογου, which Matthaei suggests may be made more intelligible by adding four words, thus:

ἀποκαλυψις του αγιου ἐνδοξοτατου αποστολου·
και ευαγγελιστου παρθενου· Ἠγαπημενου (χριστου φιλου
και μαθητου) επιστηθιου·
Ἰωαννου του θεολογου·

As regards παρθενου, Matthaei, p. 223, Apoc. 1st edn., quoting Knittel, refers to a Menologium for XXVI Sept. "φιλος επιστηθιος, παρθενος ἠγαπημενος," and then says that in one of his codices at this date in the Men. is found a long dissertation (which he gives in full, q.v.) also including the use of the words ηγαπημενε, παρθενε, φιλος του χριστου, and adds "His ergo firmatur τοῦ θεολόγου, χριστοῦ φίλου et ab ipso Ioanne in Euangelio xiii. 23. 25, xxi. 20 μαθητοῦ ἐπιστηθίου. Quæ, si probentur, aut certe, si his similia probentur, existunt versus sic dicti politici," and then proceeds with his suggestion (as above) for the addition between παρθενου ἠγαπημενου and ἐπιστηθιου.

Παρθενου also occurs in the MSS. 108 102 226 and 236. In the latter including επιστηθιου φιλου παρθενου ηγαπημενω τω Χριστω.

If the reader will refer to the notice of Apoc. 95 he will find that this cursive is ranked high by the critics. Yet 61 and 95 do not compare with 47 for instance.

The only reason I can assume for the abrupt change in 61 from the text of 95 after the middle of ch. xi. is that 61 thenceforward copied another exemplar [probably from the many on Athos (whence 95 was derived)].

The text anyway, though fairly smooth, is of the predominant B type, and furthermore shows the ℵ*B combinations, discarded by ℵ correctors and other uncials and many, so that the recension is not particularly good from a critical standpoint.

We do not find continuous agreement after xi. with any one group, if we except the 25 family, to which the second half of our MS. is more closely allied than to any other. This is borne out by an examination of the first half, where a somewhat similar correspondence obtains, but not nearly so emphatic. In no place is there slavishness to any combination.

There are no gross errors except those due to homoioteleuton—(of course our man makes a tangle of xviii. 22, 23; that could have been guaranteed), but the new readings are only very partially due to carelessness, and most were probably found in his copy.

The MS. ends xxii. 8 ἰω̄' ὁ ἀκου.. probably reading "ο ακουων και βλεπων ταυτα" with AB etc. including the friendly fam 25.

Of agreement with t.r. we notice exceptionally iii. 18 κολλουριον, xiii. 4 δυναται; but we do not find ἄρκτου of t.r., although 95 has it.

The above shows a very true recension of the four MSS. 61-126-218-219, and not so recent either, since Prim. joins at the exceptional βιαια in xvi. 21, and Hippolytus at xviii. 5, and h copt at xii. 14.

In the following places 95 joins the exceptional family readings:

Here any special agreement with 95 ceases. Resumed once, at
xii. 9. ο οφις ο μεγας (and 74 127-215 164-166), and then abandoned.

The above is sufficient to indicate the tone of the recension, but the family must be followed in other places in the general collations, to obtain a grasp of its somewhat interesting affinities, sources and background.

GROUP 62-63-72-136-147-162/3-184, sub-type of the great 1 family.

Apoc. 62 = Paris nat. gr. 239 (formerly CIϽCIↀLXII (sic), 2279, and 2908). [Scr. 62. Greg. 62, new 2028. Sod. Aν[54]]. Apoc. 62.

From the library of "Jo. Huraultii Boistallerii."

Apoc. 62 formerly included nat. gr. 239 and 240 in the catalogues. Now 240 becomes Apoc. 139 both in Gregory and Scrivener-Miller.

The MS. is on paper, on 117 leaves (Gregory says 119, but this includes two leaves at end, in a more modern hand, according to Martin, containing a fragment concerning the infancy of the Saviour). On 117 verso the MS. is dated 1422, i.e. "In the year 6931" (—5509 = 1422 A.D.) "Oct. 9, the work of Michael? Kalophrena a priest and sinner."

Gregory and the others leave out the θῦ and πονος. Doubtless θῦ stands for θυτης or θυτου = sacerdos, sacerdotis in Craston's Lexicon of (1478) and 1483 (reprinted without acknowledgment by Aldus in 1497), but not to be found in Liddell and Scott, who merely say "θυτης = θυτηρ, a slayer, sacrificer," but in mediæval Greek θυτης meant a priest of the church, with other combinations; thus in the Butler MS. (B.M. Additl. 11837) of the whole N.T., including Apoc. 94, dated 1357, we have "μεθοδιου χειρ του θυτορακενδυτου," rendered by Scrivener "by the hand of Methodius the priest-monk." Note, however, that the subscription of Apoc. 62 is not by the first hand, but perhaps, though not certainly, in that of the διορθωτης. Perhaps Kalophrena died shortly afterwards; the form of the subscription and the word πονος lends colour to this supposition. As to θύτης.

Curiously enough 251, the last MS. in our list, much related to 62 as to base, is also dated 1422 in modern letters (͵α · υκβ), but also by a second hand. Clearly then these two MSS. came from the same Scriptorium. 251 is now at Athens.

The MS. is well and clearly written, with full commentary of Andreas, and numerous illustrations of the Dragon, and the Beast, etc.

Above the ornate painted heading on f°. 1, by the first hand, is "ῑῡ μου βοήθει μοι." Below the painted headpiece, the inscription is included in the heading of πιναξ, in semi-uncials,

> "πιναξ των κεφαλαιων της ἑρμηνειας της αποκαλυψεως του αγιου αποστολου και ευαγγελιστου ιωαννου του θεολογου κ.τ.λ." [This is the same insc. as in Apoc. 37].

Follows table of κεφ. with κεφ. "ᾱ. αποκαλυψις ιῡ χῡ."

On folio 4 verso begins the Apoc. with new headpiece and simply αρχη in the middle, above the first line.

The MS. is probably reproduced from an old copy, or by one used to such early commentary MSS. as ran the text or commentary above or below the next line of the other (or vice versa) as suited the scribe's convenience. It is, however, faithfully modernised (pace Hort) by the removal of all ν ἐφελκυστικα, and the use of ειδον etc., except φιλαδελφια (once) and φαρμακια (once). But it is not quite freed from itacisms.

There is no trace of iota sub- or postscript. The usual contractions occur, but υἱος and cases are generally in full, and more occasionally ἀνθρωπος and cases. πνευματα only in full (correctly) at xvi. 13, 14; πνευματος (correctly) at xviii. 2; and κ͞ς κυριων at xvii. 14 and xix. 16.

There are not very many marginal remarks. There are a very few corrections, chiefly by a diorthotes. At xiii. 16 is a curious marginal comment, apparently by the first hand, where he was so impressed, he could not resist noting: "ουαι τοις μελλουσιν ευρεθηναι εν τω καιρω εκεινω."

But enough of these introductory remarks. Let us say at once that this MS. is important because it is a close sister to Apoc. 1. Truly they need not have sought so long and earnestly for Apoc. 1, when 46 lay to hand (with 88 and 101) at Venice, and 62 at Paris!

The connection with 1 is the more interesting, as 1 and 62 are absolutely independent copies from quite an old exemplar. They are so close, however, that we can often safely supplement 1 in doubtful or missing passages by the readings of 62.

Like Apoc. 1, the text is sometimes lost in the commentary (notably i. 18 και εχω τας κλεις του αδου και του θανατου, xviii. 13 και ψυχας ανθρωπων), and, vice versa, the commentary introduced into the text (as at xii. 10/11, xvii. 4, 8, xxii. 16 fin.), but much more rarely than in Apoc. 1. Frequently, but only in the early chapters, φησιν is introduced by mistake into the text, showing how imbued was the scribe with the spirit of what he was copying.

Synonyms. At first we thought we had to deal with a very vicious MS., but after a while the scribe settles down to work seriously, and copies faithfully. Meanwhile, however, from his inner consciousness we thought he had evolved such synonyms as των ἀνομιων for των ἁμαρτιων (i. 5), πενίαν for πτωχειαν (ii. 9), αρχων for δρακων (xii. 9), which are perfectly regular in form, but seemed wholly illegitimate, yet they are reproduced by all the family. In this connection, nevertheless, please to note δολος (xiv. 5) alone with 1, and we gather from this synonym for ψευδος that perhaps our MS. is not altogether to blame for its many fresh synonyms, and that some of these perhaps had a place in the common original of Apoc. 1. 62, but were discarded by Apoc. 1, except in this case of δολος.

Outside of Apoc. 1 our MS.' best friend is 38 in peculiarities, but is not so latinizing as 38 in the omission of the article, as can indeed be seen from our scribe's use of thoroughly Greek synonyms. Nor do we go with 38*marg.* at xv. 6, our MS. having λίνον plainly. But the connection with 38 is interesting and important; see full list further on, together with other sympathies.

Our MS. has an interesting old base; note, for age, some curious C readings, and specially xvi. 9 οὐκ ἐμετενοησαν for οὐ μετενοησαν, while C reads exceptionally ουχιμετενοησαν. See also the C 38 combinations, and quite a good deal of agreement with that very old base 56. Of some value for type is the unusual passage in ii. 3 with only 1. 16 and 38 f. 119: [κεκοπιακας] —και ου κεκμηκας, and + και (ante κεκοπιακας) with 16. 38 f. 119. This C sympathy traces to a common syriac-latin source as shown by the Crawford Syriac readings.

The MS. is not faithful to any one Andreas recension, however, and has quite many unnecessary novelties; yet is all the more important where it agrees with the mass, or a weighty rendering of the majority, for it seems to be rather a critical jumble.

By means of such MSS. we draw closer the net which encloses the Erasmus and Complutensian versions, viz. 1-46-59-62 etc., and 10-17-21-37-49 etc., showing how such MSS. as 36 and 38 come in between.

It is curious to think that for 400 years Apoc. 46 in Italy and Apoc. 62 at Paris have lain ready to the hands of the critics, while they were for so long vainly looking for Apoc. 1, yet they have never unearthed their readings, or they would have seen to what a considerable family Erasmus' codex belonged.

Erasmian codices. The point to notice is, that these Erasmian codices, while agreeing freely with the uncials (together with several Complutensian MSS.) in minutiæ and matters of detail, drift away from them in more important places, where the Complutensian codices do not follow. Thus the Compl. recension is in many respects the better. But it is all working out satisfactorily, and we are convinced that if we can pursue the matter to the bitter end, we can reach some definite conclusions.

Loss of MSS. In the course of our collations of the last ten MSS. we realize how very many MSS. of the Apoc. have perished, but enough remain to discover the origin of the mixture, I think and hope. And, if this applies to the Apoc., how much more so to the Gospels and Epistles.

Would that we had more time, and better eyes to cover the whole field! It is cruel that such rich fields—long since ripe for the reaper and gleaner—are not harvested.

The following are the new readings.

Notice specially i. 2 the Compl. group addition, but without the words μετὰ ταυτα.

The curious gloss at ii. 13 "for every witness is faithful," while 59 says "for no witness is faithful"!

An unnecessary change at ii. 15 ἣν μισῶ, showing most decided critical editing.

The stupid conflation απο εκ πασης sic vii. 4.

The forced redundancy of εὑρεθη at xviii. 23 for φανη and ακουσθη. And so forth.

New Readings. [See Apoc. 63].

Alone with 1.

[So close is the connection in many places with 1 that I am able to check Delitzsch and Tregelles where they differ in their collations of Apoc. 1].

There is a large connection with 38 and the rest of the family (178-203-240) with and without 1.

Note also very particularly 251, our last MS., which not only has the 62 base and much sympathy also with 38 and its Patmos group, but 251 is dated (by another hand) the same year as 62, viz. 1422, thus ͵α· υκβ̄!

COPY OF 62.

Apoc. 63 = Paris nat. gr. 241. [Scr. 63. Greg. 63, new 2029. Sod. Aν[66]]. Formerly belonged to de Thou (No. VIII), then to Colbert (No. 4032), afterwards Regius 2998. 3, and now as above. Folios 294. Apoc. 63.

As Martin says, bad western handwriting [XVI].

But this is not all. Not content with sprawling over his page and putting me to the very large expense of so many photographs (588 !), it at once develops that this MS. is nothing but a slavish copy of the previous one (No. 62).

On folio 1 recto we read nothing but the inscription:

† ἀποκάλυψις τοῦ ἁγι' ἀπο^σλ' καὶ εὐαγγελιστοῦ ιω̅ τοῦ θεολόγου, ἑρμηνευθεῖ^a ὑπὸ ἀνδρε' ἀρχί επισκόπου καισαρίας καππαιδοκιας : ⁓	which is that of 37 and Compl., and resultant from 62.

A printed slip at foot of the page says "xvi. copié par André Darmarios."

The early κεφ. are missing, verso of 1 being blank; they begin on what is now 2 recto at ι̅α̅, thus:

"τέρων · καί τῶν ἑξῆς:
"περὶ τῆς βίβλου τῆς ἐσφραγισμενης ἑ- ι̅α̅
"πτά σφραγίσιν, ἥν οὐδείς ἀνοῖξαι τῆς
"κτίσῆς φύσεως δυνάται κ.τ.λ. ending f°. 7 recto.

7 verso to 11 verso are taken up with the epistolē of Andreas. 11 verso, threequarters down, after three blank lines, begins the text, without inscription, and without even the "αρχη" of Apoc. 62.

Iota sub. is rare, but occurs a few times.

The scribe starts out with a blunder, viz. αυτω for αυτου (i. 1), and his ὅσατε εἰδ.. may be either ειδον or ειδεν. The scribe of 62 himself is ambiguous with εἰδ^{ον}.

Then 63 runs on more correctly, but carefully copies all the superfluous "φησιν" introduced into the text at i. 5, 15, 16, 17, and ii. 13, iii. 3, which I have not recorded in the collation of 62-63.

The thing is manifestly a slavish copy of 62. I have listed the differences merely to show the number of errors normally made by a XVIth century transcriber, who is after all fairly accurate, and I grieve to say as much so as one of the present day. Fortunately the Eastern scribes of an older day were infinitely more careful, as I have shown elsewhere.

The scribe changes back for instance, the error, at i. 16, of the omission of the article by 62 before ἥλιος, but this is not because he is a smart Greek scholar, but because he himself made an error of eye and took the sigma of ωc before ηλιος of 62 for an omicron !

He follows 62 in the form θυατεροις not only at i. 11, where 62 made a slip, but at ii. 18 and 24, where 62 has plainly θυατειροις.

He omits after vi. 1 the commentary and the whole of verse 2 by error of homoioteleuton.

He is with 62 in every single new reading, including all the "monstra," and if anything further were needed to clinch the matter, he begins, with 62, to add the full chapter headings only after vi. 6.

At vii. 2 where 62 has αγγ^βελον αλλ^αον he pays attention to it, and writes αλλον αγγελον.

At vi. 16 he corrects the πεσεται of 62 to πεσετε, but at vii. 3 does the same thing himself, writing αδικησηται for αδικησητε of 62.

He neglects, however, the marginal corrections of 62, as at ix. 7, though he writes επατηθη at xiv. 20.

But it is useless to particularize further, or to list the differences between 62 and 63. It would be trifling. The collation of 63 has simply afforded me a good check on my examination of 62.

The most inexcusable blunders are at—

iv. 9.	καθηγουμενω pro καθημενω
vi. 11.	στολη λευκινη
xviii. 13.	—και οινον which is gratuitous and spoils the family resemblance.
xix. 2.	πολιν pro πορνην ,, ,, ,, ,, ,,
xx. 4.	του θεου pro ιησου
xxi. 8.	—και πορνοις
21.	πυλων pro πυλωνων

GROUP 4-20-48-64-74 (Arethas). Compare family 6.

Apoc. 64 (Paul. 159) = Paris nat. gr. 224. [Scr. 64. Greg. 64, new 1934. Sod. O^{15}]. Apoc. 64.
This is a fine and very large MS. of xiith century in large cursive, with decoration and capitals, κεφ. etc. being in gold uncials. Very few corrections and very few new readings. Text in the middle, surrounded by full commentary of Arethas. The Apoc. and Com. contained on folios 223/274 as paged; should be 223/275 including last leaf, which is blank.

Iota postscript is very frequent, as in Apoc. 4, its sister, but not usually with ἀδῃς as in Apoc. 4 (once, however, at i. 18). ιησους, θεος, ουρανος, πνευμα etc., and cases are written as often in full as contracted, which is very unusual. ἱερουσαλημ is also written three times in full. A curious square form of ου occurs frequently, being somewhat cruciform, thus $\overset{\tau}{\times}$' for τοῦ.

The letters in the text refer to the section headings of the commentary. This is not confusing, except at iv. 10 βα$^{\lambda}$λοῦσι, where the superimposed λ clearly refers to the λ section of commentary, and does not indicate βαλλουσι.

The inscription ιωαννου του θεολογου και ηγαπημενου αποκαλυψις is word for word with Apoc. 4, of which it is full sister, omitting (ex homoiotel.) two passages at viii. 12 and xviii. 2 with this same MS., and having at xviii. 13 the reading "και ελαιον και οινον" with 4 (and 6. 14. 20. 31. 32. 34. 48), of which more anon. But 64 was not copied direct from Apoc. 4, see xiii. 18 ἑξακόσια ἑξηκοντά ἑξ of 64 with P. 7. 16. 29. 39. 45. 47. 59. 95 against χ̄ξ̄ς̄ of 2, 4, 6 etc.
This MS. 64 marks an epoch in our investigation, and is most important.

As said above, it is full sister to Apoc. 4 and also to Apoc. 48, the former with commentary of Arethas, the latter without; and to my mind these MSS., written within 200 years of Arethas' time, afford a pretty pure representation of his text. We are now in presence of proof positive of what was Arethas' text, and of how it is to be found disseminated in other MSS. The pure "cursive" groups, some of which we thought might belong to a "lost uncial" line, now fall distinctly in with 4-48-64 in every particular, and all these MSS. 2, 6, 9, 13, 31, 32 etc., are proved to be more or less simple Arethas types. Now what was Arethas text? It was a slight modification of B, and therefore essentially modern. Retaining most of B, and incorporating most of B, it deviated only in the so-called pure cursive readings, none of them thus older than the beginning of the xth cent. (floruit Arethas circa 930 A.D.), except in the special places to which we shall shortly call attention. Arethas' text.

The MS. 64 is also important as there has been no reviser on it, and it was carefully copied and remains absolutely true to type, without fresh readings due to scribal infirmity, perplexity or critical tendency. Of unique readings there are practically none. Here are the very few we have gleaned (practically mere slips):

xiv. 3. καινην ωδην So 164-166 182 Meth. latt.
xv. 8. —ὁ (ante ναος)
xvi. 14. του θεου bis script.
xxii. 8. —και (ante οτε) So 81-204 191 220 sah.
11. ετη (pro ετι prim.)

But we find it alone with 4:

iii. 19 init. και (pro εγω)
iv. 4. περιβεβλημενοις
viii. 8. μετακαιομενον (—πυρι)
12. —το τριτον του ηλιου και.

Now turn to its sisterhood with 4 and 48, and we find:

vii. 8. transposes εκ φυλης ζαβουλων and εκ φυλης ιωσηφ viii. 5 fin. —και σεισμος (and 74).
7. χλωρος χορτος
xi. 15. +και (ante του κυριου) (and *syr*S).
xii. 1. στεφανοι
xviii. 10. —ἡ prim.
xix. 10. του υἱου (pro του ιησου sec. loco) 18. +των (ante ελευθερων) (and 176-206).
xxii. 2. πολεως (pro πλατειας) (and 81-204).

Again:

vi. 17. σωθηναι with 4-48 and 74 with 40-210 219.

and:

xix. 9. +οἱ (post λογοι) with A 4-48 and 121 149 222.

also:

ii. 19. χειρονα (pro πλειονα) with 4 20 (and 109*gr.*).

The other 4-20 grouping is adhered to by others.

The problem is becoming simpler.

We learn several things from this MS. First and foremost, we gather, as we supposed, that the omission of και οινον at xviii. 13 with B and a very considerable group is quite unauthorized. Arethas confirms the words και οινον, but (owing to his text being based on B) he inverts the order in restoring the words, and reads "και ελαιον και οινον."

Then we learn from passages such as xiii. 10 ει τις εχει αιχμαλωσιαν υπαγει (—συναγει εις αιχ.), where 17-37-49 of Compl. family go with us, that the Compl. family is younger than the Erasmian.

Our junior branching families are now clearly established, and we can proceed with great confidence.

Arethas MSS. with full commentary are not very numerous, but his text, with and without abbreviated scholia is found in a large number of the cursives hitherto examined. Thus, while we know how independent Arethas' commentary is from Andreas, we also recognize that he departed largely from Andreas' text. The problem grows simpler now at each step.

Now add to the Arethas group Apoc. 74 (cum com.), a MS. of XII/XIII. cent. (Greg. XI), copied independently from the group 4. 6. 20. 31. 32. 48. 64, but agreeing with them in a good many characteristic readings. This MS. was also carefully copied by a scholar, and confirms the standard Arethas text.

FRAGMENTARY DOCUMENT OF HIGH IMPORTANCE. Consult family 21.

Apoc. 65 (formerly Coislin 229), now at Moscow. University No. 25. [Scr. 65. Greg. 65, new 2030. Sod. α 1272]. On f^os. 203 209 are contained (XII^th cent.) Apoc. xvi. 20 εφυγε και... written in double columns, to the end of the Apoc. F^os. 1-202 contain, in an earlier hand, writings of Gregory of Nyssa, etc. Apoc. 65.

On a blank page opposite the beginning of the Apoc. is written—θεοδώρα ἡ ὀρθόδοξοσ συν μιχαὴλ τῶ ῡω αὐτῆσ καὶ συν ταῖσ θυγατράσιν ἔτη ιβ̄ . ὑπω ουσὺν ἀλεξανδρω τω ἰδίω ἀδελφῶ μετα θά νατον τοῦ πρ̄σ αὐτων βασιλείου.

This is in the same hand as the extracts from Basil and Gregory (according to Mr. Popoff in a private communication).

Matthaei gives a collation in his later edition of the N.T. 1807, vol. III., supplement, pp. 98-102. I have collated the fragment from photographs made for me at the instance of Mr. Popoff, then librarian of the Library of the Holy Synod at Moscow. Matthaei's work on this occasion is very imperfect and careless. He omits to record all variations between xvii. 6-16, xviii. 2-11, xix. 1-3, 4-9, 9-12, 12-17, 17-21, xx. 2-5, 5-8, 9-12, 13-15 etc. Neglect his collation.

The MS. is bi-columnar and carefully written. No iota post. or sub. Wherever ου occurs the upsilon is generally written above, thus ανθρωπο^υς for ανθρωπους, or ἐπ' αὐτο^υς for επ' αυτους, the object of which is not to be gathered unless approximating Coptic ϒ. There are a number of Coptic readings.

Many words usually contracted are written in full. Breathings are very square. ν εφελκ. is absent at first, but comes in later. κρίμα is accented thus, but μῦλον thus.

The very first various reading, xvi. 21 προς (pro επι) reminds us of family 21, the MSS. of which have (all except 170) προς (pro επι τους) alone of MSS. This is important, as 28 is missing from xvii. 5 to the end (and the leaves hereabouts are misplaced in 21); but as soon as we proceed, we fall into line with B etc. We do not pick up 21 again especially till we reach xix. 17 +τω (ante μεσουρανηματι) alone with that family, though we were in company with 31 38 87 al. at xviii. 11 αυτης (pro αυτων). We find, in addition to a few new itacisms, agreement alone with ℵ at xviii. 20 ευφρενου, and with A and 98 at the same place εν αυτη (pro επ αυτην), and again frequently further on.

We gather therefore, that we are in presence of an old basic text of Egyptian origin (see ℵ fam 21 etc.), revised later pretty thoroughly, but not completely, on B.

And I think this tells the whole story. It is an interesting fragment. The curious fact remains that 28 is missing xvii. 5 to end. 21 has the leaves misplaced xvii. 5–xix. 7, and this MS. 65 begins at xvi. 21 and holds to the end. Evidently the original—at some early date—got split and separated.

We have a few agreements with the 1 family, further confirming the age of this group. The agreement with A alone taken with the AB+(Arethas) cursives is also interesting.

Of new readings, at first they are found to be either itacisms or errors due to homoioteleuton, but later on they become bolder.

Here is the list:

xvi. 21. προς (pro επι) [προς (pro επι τους) fam 21].
xviii. 22. —και φωνη κιθαρωδων usque ad εν σοι ετι sec.

It will be seen that this MS. confirms the agreement of the Old Syriac with the Syriac-Egyptian represented by ℵA 21-28 etc.

It is a thousand pities that chs. i.–xvi. are missing from this MS., as it now develops that it is a close relation to the remarkable document Apoc. 130. See under that MS.

Apoc. 66. Vacat.

Ev. 131 (Ac. 70. P. 77) = Vat. gr. 360, was erroneously numbered 66 for the Apoc., which it does not contain. Scr. III. had already erased this number, and Gregory leaves it blank.

Scr.-Miller IV. says of Apoc. 66 = Act. 419 (Athos). At Act. 419 he says = Paul. 493, Apoc. 185, both numbers, however, non-existent at pp. 319 and 326 where they should be. I pointed this out to the late Mr. Miller (with many other things), but he failed to rectify it. In the Appendix F., published by him later, he gives (p. 396*) the number Paul. 493 to a MS. at Florence, Laur. IX. 10, thus making confusion worse confounded.

This is, however, nothing. Wait till we get beyond Apoc. 100 for confusion of numbers! The forest gets very dense there, and we have to grope our way.

Apoc. 67.

Apoc. 67. = Rome. Vat. gr. 1743. [Scr. 67. Greg. 67, new 2031. Sod. $A\nu^{41}$]. xiv[th] cent. MS. with Andreas commentary on 111 leaves of coarse vellum.

The inscription preceding Andreas' letter is:

Ανδρεου του αγιωτατου αρχιεπισκοπου καισαρειας καππαδοκιας της προς το αργεω. ερμηνεια εις την αποκαλυψιν του αγιου αποστολου και ευαγγελιστου ιω̄ του θεολογου κε̄ εὐ ⋊ : +

The Apoc. itself, p. 4, begins without inscription proper. There is no subscription at the end of the text, not even Αμην. The commentary runs on for five pages more to the foot of 111 verso, but my photographs show no subscription there, yet Gregory says it is dated 1301, and Scrivener says 5 Dec. 1302.

The topmost lines of some pages are injured by a "set off," but are nowhere illegible except at xx. 9.

This is rather a careless and troublesome MS., yet it has its uses and serves to fix the type. It belongs to the Erasmian group, with quite a leaning for many Complutensian readings, and later along, a few touches of the Arethas (B 4 etc.) recension. It is present in nearly all rare combinations. We have had no MS. since 12 with as many variations, including many itacisms. Yet the scribe, ignorant in some respects as he was, is not responsible for much, which evidently prevailed already in his exemplar. We have no doubt that this was an uncial MS., as many things show. So late along in this examination it will be useless to list all the vagaries of the MS. We shall try and confine ourselves to show here the more important things. Yet we will have to give a number of lists to emphasize the ramifications of the double family group.

When we say it helps fix the type, we refer to such a place as vi. 6 the unusual κριθων for κριθης with family 1 and ℵCAP. The four uncials here are only supported by the Erasmian group.

Again, at xx. 11 and xxii. 2: ο ουρανος και η γη (with tol Aug. Prim.) and αποδιδους respectively are pure Compl. readings, the latter with addition of some Erasmian MSS. See also x. 7. The combination is seen at xviii. 7 —και πενθος prim.

The Arethas recension is seen at xvii. 15 +και ἡ γυνη (ante οὗ) with E fam 4 31 32 106 109*gr.* 171-174 182 aeth, and of course our sister 120, for we have now found in 120 the counterpart of 67, very useful as a check. There are a host of new readings, many of but slight importance. I do not mean that the scribe is severely critical, but he does go out of his way from time to time to write such grammar as (iv. 11) δῖὰ τὸ σὸν θέλημα for δια το θελημα σου.† And there is really no excuse for such things as ἐν μεσουρανήματος at xix. 17! or again ix. 12 εἰ μὴ for ἡ μία! or ii. 18 εν θυατειρων!

Fortunately no corrector has been at work to complicate matters, although there are some marginal scholia, besides the full commentary in the text.

Its basic old text can be traced, among other things, through its itacisms, to several old forms of spelling prevalent only in the uncials. This MS. further proves the Egyptian part in the origin of the Erasmian recension from its 21 family readings, e.g. x. 1 ιριν for ιρις.

ειδον and forms of ει in words are always present except once ιδον at vi. 5 and πορνιας at xiv. 8.

† Retranslation (very old) may be responsible for this.

επτα is nearly always written ζ̄; so much so that the scribe writes ζ̄ for τεσσαρα at v. 8! [See Apoc. 81 at iv. 6 the same]. Even ἑζ̄ thus twice in x. 4 for επτα! [This occurs in Apoc. 50 at viii. 6].

ν εφελκ. is very frequent. A hiatus for lack of it rarely.

Capital nu is practically the same as eta (H) throughout, which is the tendency of Calabrian scribes. Upsilon nearly always Y. Cursive combination of ου rare.

Iota post. does not appear at first, and then becomes fairly frequent, more often wrongly than rightly added. The scribe delights to add it to the first person singular of verbs! I do not give a list of these for obvious reasons. Iota post. is generally used with ἅδης, but not invariably. It is even found tacked on to μανασση at vii. 6.

The usual contractions are prevalent. πνευμα very rarely in full, and once κυριος, besides the ordinary places at xvii. 14 and xix. 16. ιερουσαλημ and ισραηλ are contracted as usual, except ισραηλ once in full at vii. 4. In connection with the genealogies in ch. vii. it may be said that this MS. exhibits the excessive rarity of having present the εσφραγισμενοι throughout vii. 5/8 of the textus receptus, alone as far as I know (not even 81 has this).

The text, when not missing, is sometimes found buried in the commentary, but where it agrees with t.r. I have not noticed these places. Strange to say the scribe does not get the text and commentary mixed until we get to chapter xxii., where several bad places occur.

But lacunae exist at ii. 11, viii. 13–ix. 3, xii. 5, xiv. 4, xxi. 23 init.–xxii. 2 ζωης, and xxii. 14 init.–17 fin.

This MS. is a stepping-stone also between 7-16-39-45 the Græco-Latin family and the Erasmian-Complutensian families, and with 17 and 22, another key between said groups, favouring the direct Erasmian line, yet agreeing largely with Compl. The dividing line between Erasm. and Compl. seems to be 37. Our MS. agrees less with 37 than we expect, while largely with 10, and also with such MSS. as 36.

Its critical value, in short, is solely in conjunction with others.

Breathings are very mixed. Accents more generally correct. Therefore κρινεῖ xix. 11 is worthy of notice.

Itacisms are sometimes corrected, e.g. iii. 19 παίδευω sic a prima manu; xxi. 10 μοι *sic; xxi. 18 ἴάσπιδι *sic. But πιάσει remains for παιση ix. 5! (παίσι 120).

Of monstra we may notice κρανιου (pro αρνιου) vi. 16 [non 120]; κοσμω (pro σεισμω) xi. 13 with 120; ληνῶν (pro χαλινων) xiv. 20 [non 120]; κεφαλας (pro φιαλας) xvii. 1; so 72 100 [non 120]; πτωχῶν (pro πηχων) xxi. 17 [non 120], doubtless only errors of eye or ear. Add also ὅρα· μη συνδουλος κ.τ.λ. in both places, thus punctuated.

We may also note at xv. 6 λϊνοῦν, both text and commentary with 120, and so B 14-92 18 f. 97 124 176-206 251*txt.* In the commentary "λϊνοῦν, η λιθον καθαρον καθα τινα των αντιγραφων" as in other Andreas MSS., except for λινουν instead of λινον, further emphasizing the gulf between this word and λιθον.

Note further the additions at xvii. 4 and xxii. 6.

The form of the addition at i. 2 "και ατινα εισιν· και ατινα χρη γενεσθαι μετα ταυτα" agrees with 12 22 marg. This sympathy for 22 and correctors is followed nearly throughout; as may be seen at ii. 20 πολυ (pro ολιγα) with 120 and only ℵ 12 17 22 36 81-204 f. 114 143 159 169-216 251. Notice the company kept. To which add gig and *syr*S.

Among "new" readings we have to notice:

The MS. has a very old base, but too much familiarity with polyglots has injured the text. It appears to have knowledge of the very earliest readings of all three Versions, Latin, Coptic, and Syriac.

Now see 81-204, which have a close relation to the parent of 67-120. I have said above how 67-120 show Complutensian tendency in places.

Now although the best friends of 81-204 are 1, 12 and the Erasmian and Græco-Latin group, 17 is very friendly too. And yet more, as showing 67-120 and 81-204 are true Complutensian links, we find actually at ix. 11 that 81-204 supply a Complutensian reading so far vouched for by no MS. at all, viz. +ὁ (ante ἀπολλυων)! This shows conclusively that I have not yet found the real Complutensian MS., for this reading must exist somewhere else, and it is curious to find it first occurring in a MS. of such Latin tendencies. Complutensian links.

In connection also with what I say above about 67 and its Egyptian leaning, note the very peculiar agreement in spots between A and 81.

I will not record itacisms here, but our MS. is often alone with ℵ.

We find it alone with 17 as follows:

i. 10. ὧν (pro ἃ) though 17 = ὡν. Now add besides 120, 99 103-112 135 170 191 220 221 and 251.
v. 13. +παλιν (post ηκουσα) So 120 only.
x. 9. —και tert. So only 120.
11. —μοι So 120 and 169.
xiv. 5. +οτι (ante αμωμοι) So E (now available) and 120, 169-216 with the fourth hand of 17.
6. —εν So only E 120.
12 fin. +χαρησονται So E 120 (χαρισονται) and 169-216 251.
18. εκ του θυσιαστηριου εξηλθεν So E 120 and 130 169-216 176-206 251.
xx. 9. εκ θεου απο του ουρανου So E 120 and 81-204 121 159 169-216 172 (εκ θεου απο ουρανου 114-241).
xxii. 5. εστιν (pro εσται) So E 120 and 116 169-216 171 172-217.
6. +διαμεσον τοῦ τὴν ὀπτασιαν εωρακοτως μακαριον ἰω̅ (ante δειξαι) (17*) So E 120 and (169-216, 171sup), and in other small combinations.

And with 12 alone in the following place:

xvii. 4. και τα ακαθαρτα της πονηριας αυτης [non 120]. N.B. της πονηριας της γης 130.

In small combination:

vii. 17.	ἐξελεῖ (pro εξαλειψει)	xviii. 4.	—εξ αυτης
ix. 19.	εχουσαις with ℵaP 12. 36.	16.	—και λεγοντες
xi. 6.	—αυτα	ibid.	—και (post κοκκινον)
xiii. 4.	—και προσεκυνησαν το θηριον	xix. 3.	—αυτης
xiv. 5.	—γαρ	5.	—λεγουσα
13.	—αυτων sec.	xx. 3.	εδησεν (pro εκλεισεν)
xvi. 1.	—του θεου	10.	—εις τους αιωνας των αιωνων (txt.)
xvii. 6.	—ιησου	xxi. 3.	ιδε (pro ιδου)
16.	—και γυμνην	10.	—και (post μεγα)
		16.	—οσον

Other small cursive combinations are interesting but too numerous to mention.

Compare now 72 with 62/3 and 67. [116 q.v. was a copy of 67].

The real basic group is now found to be E-67-120.

Our eclectic 251 has much sympathy with 67-120.

THE GROUP 34-35-68, to which add (124) 132 and 156 165 and 181-188, forms the stepping-stone between Coptic or Egyptian versions and the Syriac as represented in the Crawford MS.

Apoc. 68. Apoc. 68 = Rome Vat. gr. 1904, vol. II. [Scr. 68. Greg. 68, new 2032. Sod. $A\nu^{11}$].

A large MS. containing about one third of the Apoc. with surrounding commentary of Arethas. XI–XII. cent. Looks earlier than Apoc. 64.

Scholz did not see all the folia containing the Apoc. Scrivener III., still following Scholz, gives the same imperfect account of the contents. Scr.-Miller IV. again carelessly repeats this, although Gregory had corrected it. But Gregory himself strangely overlooked part of the contents. He says the fragments are on 19 leaves, f°. 264-282, and then gives the Apoc. contents correctly. But the Apoc. contents are on 17 of these leaves, the other two containing 1 John iv. 3–v. 3!

Here is the correct list:

F°. 264 recto—265 verso = Apoc. vii. 17 init.–viii. 12.
266 recto—268 verso = „ xxi. 18–xxii. 13.
269 recto—270 verso = „ i. 11–ii. 6 fin.
271 recto—272 verso = 1 John iv. 3–v. 3. [We give collation further on].
273 recto—274 verso = Apoc. ii. 7–ii. 20 ἡ λεγει ἐαν...
275 recto—275 verso = „ viii. 12–ix. 5 μηνας...
276 recto—281 verso = „ iii. 16–vi. 9 init.
282 recto—282 verso = „ xxii. 14–xxii. 21.

The whole contains therefore Apoc. i. 11–ii. 20, iii. 16–vi. 9, vii. 17–ix. 5, xxi. 18–xxii. 21, besides the Johannine fragment of his first epistle.

I speak from my photographs, and cannot assert that there is no more in the MS. volumes, but I am assured by the photographer that he photographed everything.

Scrivener says text agrees with A. Simcox says with 35 and 87. Both statements have some truth.

The MS. is a close sister to 34-35-87 and the rest of the family, as will be shown almost immediately. It has some little sympathy for A, which dates back probably to the Egyptian base of fam 34-35, but nothing out of the common. This text then is an Arethas revision on an old Egyptian base, and of no particular value. We notice less of B than in many other Arethas MSS. At xxii. 11 comes in the most important agreement with A, viz. —και ο ρυπων ρυπωσατω ετι with A 67 97 121 122 143 164-166 208 214. This does not inspire us with any more confidence in A.

Iota subscript does not occur, and iota post. only twice. ν εφελκ. is rather frequent. υιος is contracted, whereas other words are often written in full, even θεος and ισραηλ, and δαυϊδ once out of twice.

There are practically no new readings. Only these:

ii. 13. —το (ante ονομα)

iv. 4. θρονους (pro θρονοι) Now agreed to by the new sisters 124-132-156-181-188 and 146 169-216 f. 178.

viii. 7. καη (pro κατεκαη ult.) txt. *Correxit marg.

xxi. 20. σαρδείων (pro σαρδιος) So 181 (σαρδιων 132 with 146-155 164).

xxii. 3. ὁ δουλοι errore

5. και ου χρειαν ουκ εχουσι (—λυχνου και) φωτος ηλιου (But for the double negative agrees with 35). So 181.

Thus 68 and 181 seem the closest of the sisters.

The family traits are as follows:

i. 13. +των χρυσων (post λυχνιων) All except 124 and 165 (the half-sisters), also Vict.

ii. 1. +χειρι (post δεξια) All the family, and ℵ* boh after αυτου. (χειρι pro δεξια *syr*S Tyc 2).

9. +σου (post βλασφημιαν) } All the family except 124.
17. του μαννα φαγειν (—απο) }

iv. 3. σμαραγδω The whole family.

8. +ἑστως (post αυτων) The whole family and *syr*S.

9. +τεσσαρα (ante ζωα) The whole family and *syr*S boh.

v. 2. +αλλον (ante αγγελον) All the family (but 124) plus 143 164 200 *syr*S Orig.

13. ὁσα (pro ἁ) The whole family and 146? 201.

14. ελεγεν το αμην The whole family. Cf. copt.

vi. 4 init. και ειδον. και ιδου εξηλθεν Whole family with ℵ f. 119 164 boh$^1/_2$.

viii. 7. εβληθησαν The whole family with *syr*S and boh.

8. +μερος (post τριτον) The whole family and copt latt aeth (but no other Greeks).

12. και εσκοτισθη (pro ινα σκοτισθη) The whole family and *syr*S. No other Greeks.

ibid. και η ημερα ουκ εφαινεν (εφαινε 34) το τριτον αυτης. και η νυξ ομοιως The whole family as a unit with *syr*S as against many variations by the other Greeks.

xxi. 24. των εθνων (pro αυτων) Whole family and *syr*Σ boh. (*syr*S omits).

xxii. 6. +των πνευματων (ante των αγιων) Whole family conflate; agrees with *syr*S and 164-166 169-216 172-217.

11 init. +και Whole family and 164-166 *syr*S aeth Prim$^1/_2$. Tyc.

We find it alone with part of the family:

ii. 13. +και (post αντειπας) 68-87-124-132-181 and *syr*S [non 34-156-165-188].

viii. 5. εγενετο 68-156-165-181 [non 35-87-124-188].

ix. 2. ωσπερ (pro ως) All except 35 and 87.

xxi. 19. καρχηδών So 35-68-132-181 with Coptic and *syr*S and 146 155*com.* 164*com.* 166 200 [non 156-165-188, hiant 87-124].

27. ψεῦδους sic errore So only 35-68.

xxii. 14. η εξουσια αυτων εσται All but 34-156-165-188 (hiant 87-124), but plus 164-166. Cf. sah boh.

15. ο ποιων και ο φιλων All but 34-156-165-188 (hiant 87-124) and 164-166 (sah).

19. εγγεγραμμενων So 35-68-132-181 [non 34-156-165-188] (hiant 87 124).

Add i. 20. και αι επτα λυχνιαι αι επτα εκκλησιαι εισιν So all of the family [except 35 and 165] and 38-203-240 (against 178).

In combination with one or more other MSS. besides 34-35-87 at:

i. 13. εν (pro προς)

16. ειχεν (pro εχων)

ii. 1. +κυριος (post λεγει)

13. —ος

v. 9. αδουσι καινην ωδην

ibid. ημας τω θεω

13. +και (ante ηκουσα)

ibid. λεγοντων

viii. 1. +και (ante εγενετο)

9. +μερος (post τριτον prim.)

ix. 4. αυτοις (pro αυταις)

xxii. 11. —και ο ρυπων ρυπωσατω ετι.

Again:

xxi. 21. ἱνα (pro ανα)
ibid. +και (ante εκαστος) xxii. 5. ετι (pro εκει) ibid. επ αυτους
6. +μου (post λογοι)

And finally:

ii. 4. —σου sec. 68 alone with 12 81-204 178
iii. 16. αἱ μέσαι 68-181 with 12 36 114 143 149-186.

68 and 181 are close throughout, but closer still is 181 to 87. Most of the group are of very respectable age and carry forward very old Egyptian traditions.

The collation of 1 John iv. 3–v. 3 (f^{os}. 271-272) gives (besides ν εφελκ. at iv. 5 εισιν, λαλουσιν; 10 απεστειλεν; 14 απεσταλκεν; 16 εστιν; 17 εστιν; 20 εωρακεν bis):

FULL GRÆCO-LATIN FAMILY IS 7-16-39-45-69-102-104-151-180.
(Sub-division 7-45-104-151; and 16-39-69-102-180).

Apoc. 69 (Act. 161. P. 198), Rome. Vat. Ottob. 258. [Scr. 69. Greg. 69, new 628. Sod. α 400]. Apoc. 69.

In both Latin and German editions of Dr. Gregory's lists the indication is erroneously given as of Act. 116 instead of 161. But under 161 will be found the description.

It is a bi-columnar Græco-Latin MS. of about XIV.

Lacks xviii. 22—the end.

Scholz claimed to have collated it "almost completely," and likens it to codex A, with which it has some sympathy, but it is an erroneous description as a general one.

Gregory says the Latin version is in the outer column. This is incorrect. The Versions alternate in position, first the Latin in the outer column, then the Greek, and so on. There is no Latin version of the prologue by the first hand, although space was left for it, but it has been added by a later hand.

There is ample space for a Greek inscription below the decorated top border, but no inscription, although the sister MSS. referred to below have inscriptions (q.v.), and the Latin only has Incipit liber Apocalipsis.

The codex terminates on f°. 216[B] owing to the loss of the last leaves. Apparently we should have written above "Lacks xviii. 23 to end," as the last clauses of verse 22, although wanting, are doubtless missing owing to homoioteleuton, the last words being και φωνῆ ῦ (. . . μφιον ver. 23), with absence of και φωνη μυλον ver. 22 usque ad εν σοι ετι prim. vers. 23.

This MS. is the sister of the previous group 7-16-39-45, and it is difficult to say whether it is a modern text with an old base, or an old text with a modern revision.

Reference is asked to the account of these other sister MSS., given previously. No. 39 be it noted is also Græco-Latin, but two centuries older.

No iota post- or subscript occurs.

ν εφελκ., quite infrequent at first, becomes almost the rule later.

ειδον is the rule, except at v. 11, vi. 1, 8, vii. 9, xiii. 1, xvi. 13, whereas the other related MSS. generally favour ιδον. Indeed, this MS. writes μαρτυρειαν (alone i. 2), ιματεια (xvi. 15), βασειλια (xi. 15), ευχαριστειαν (iv. 9 with 28. 32. 67. 95.), ευλογεια (v. 13), and even σοδωμα xi. 8 (being the first scribe to do so), but its use of itacisms is so free as to be very annoying to chronicle. We shall not do so here. They were no doubt largely due to local influences, and are more concerned with change and interchange of ι, αι, ει, η, υ, ε and οι, than ο and ω (except in χαλκωλιβανω εγενετω and εδωθη). υ for η is quite frequent, especially in θηριον.

Breathings are most improper, and occur quite often as follows: καιὄμενος, καιὄμενον, καιὄμεναι, καθῆμενος; even ἐξῆλθε and ἀπὲκρίθη; also κατοἰκοὐντας, λεὥντων, ποιῆσει, θεὦροὐντας, τἔκνον, διἄβολος, ἐσφὰγμένου, στρυνϊἄσαντες, τιμῖὤτήτος, ἀλλὰσΰναγωγôι. (See also 39).

There are many omissions owing to homoioteleuton, some new, but not at ix. 2, where all of the group agree in retaining the clause και ηνοιξε το φρεαρ της αβυσσου against ℵB and so many.

When you come to compare it with its four previous sisters you will wonder that I did not throw it out in disgust as untrue to type, although quite of this same family. But with patience there is always something to be learned from a careful examination of a MS., and this forms no exception. For instance, it has not been a waste of time to collate it, for it enables us once more to realize the opportunities of scribes to make similar mistakes. We find omission by homoioteleuton at iv. 5/6 with ℵ*, but none of the four 7-16-39-45 omit. Again, at v. 13 —και υποκατω της γης with ℵ and ten others, 12. 14. 22. 33. 47. 59. 61. 67. 92. 95, but not 7-16-39-45. Fortuitous omissions.

On the other hand, we find the old true text of ℵ influencing 69 especially in the following places:

xiii. 18. οὖς (pro τον νουν)! Alone with ℵ 16-39-69-102-180, but the Latin counterpart is intellectum. One outsider in our 159 joins the group.

xiv. 4. ἀπάρχῆς (pro ἀπαρχὴ) Alone with ℵ 16-39-69-102-180 corresponding to primitiae.

6. ἐν μεσωουρανηματι Alone with ℵ 69 104[non fam]. Cf. 200.

xvi. 6. αἵματα prim. Alone with ℵ 16-36-39-69-102-180.

19. επόλις (pro αἱ πολεις) With 151; a survival of ℵ* 113 ηπολις?

xviii. 21. +οτι (ante ουτος) Alone with ℵ 39-69-102-180, while 16 has οτι but transposes ουτος and ορμηματι.

From the above the sub-division of our considerable family is indicated, viz. 16-39-69-102-180 and 7-45-104-151.

Latin Version. As regards the Latin version also, there is something to learn, although it is written in too trying a handwriting to collate entirely at this time. About the xiv[th] chapter onwards a third hand has made alterations in the Greek to bring it more into conformity with the Latin, for instance, xiv. 8 post βαβυλων +εκεινη from the Latin opposite illa; same verse post μεγαλη +ητις from the Latin also; xvi. 7 while first hand properly omits αλλου εκ, this third hand not only adds αλλου from the Latin, but obelises του θυσιαστηριου to conform further to the Latin omission of these words; and again xviii. 12 he changes ξυλου to λιθου to conform to the Latin.

xv. 6 λινον and lapide. I note that notwithstanding these changes he leaves severely alone the reading λϊνὸν in xv. 6, although right in his path, where the Latin is clearly opposite lapide. This is significant. At xviii. 13 this hand has changed λιβανον and ελαιον to the genitive λιβανου and ελαιου to agree with the Latin, and has added και οινου for the και οινον omitted by the scribe. On the other hand, earlier, at ii. 4 we find +ολιγα (post κατα σου) from the Latin opp. "pauca."

Rather a more curious place, untouched, is found previously at vii. 5: δαν for γαδ in the sealing of the tribes. This is only read by 13-23-75 130 and 16-39-180, but not by 7-45-102-104-151. The Latin opposite is Gad quite plainly, as in 39-180.

We shall not bother particularly here with itacisms, but simply show from a few instances its absolute relationship with the family type, its closer hold to 16-39 than to 7-45, its nearest sister 16, and a few of its own peculiarities, which indicate that it was copied from none of these, nor they from it, but that 16-39-69 were probably derived from a common original, though a copy may have intervened.

Of course, it will be noticed how much revision of the B type there is, holding against original forms used by ℵ and A long before, and even a large measure of agreement with the pure cursive or Arethas group.

Itacism with B and P is rather frequent, but doubtless local. See viii. 4 ανεβει, x. 4 γραφην with B alone, etc.; v. 11 and vii. 9 ιδων with B alone, xviii. 7 δωτε with P alone, ii. 5 ερχομε with BP jointly alone.

The following lists form a selection, including most things of any importance, but eliminating many cases of itacism, of conformity to all four 7-16-39-45 where they stand apart from all others (including passages where 39 is lacking):—

i. 5. Ante λουσαντι +και λυσαντι και των της αμαρτιας κηλιδων λουσαντι τη εκχυσει του ζωοποιου αιματος και υδατος και ποιησαντος ημας βασιλειον ιερατευμα. Add now 102*-151-180.

8. +και (ante ὁ ὢν) Add 102-104-151-180.

15 init. —και Add 102-180 sah [non 104-151].

ii. 16 fin. +και εν τη απειλη η φιλανθρωπια Add 102*-104-151-180, and f. 114 169-216 170 arab.

iii. 2. στηριζων Add 104-151-180 and (200) 226 only.

ibid. ἁ ημελλεν αποθανειν Add 102-104-151-180.

11. —μη λαβη τις (pro μηδεις λαβη) Add 102*-104-151-180 [contra lat].

iv. 1. και λεγουσης (pro λεγουσα) Add 102-104-(151)-180 [contra lat].

5. εξεπορευοντο Add 102-104-151-180.

v. 8. μεστας (pro γεμουσας) Add 102-151-180 (μετα 104).

11. —πολλων Add 102-104-151-180 and 145 arab [non lat].

vi. 1. —και sec. Add 104-151-180 (supra lin. habet 102*).

xiii. 11. +τω (ante αρνιω) Add 102-104-151-180 and 200.

xiv. 18. της γης (pro αυτης fin.) Add 104 (hiat 102)-151-180 and f. 119 233.

xvi. 2. του θηριου το χαραγμα Add 102-104-151-180 [non ord. lat.] and 153-211 222 233.

14. ἁ εκπορευοντε* sic (..αι) Add 102-104-151-180 (plus B 113 164-166 167 218).

xviii. 2. +δαιμονιου (post πνευματος) Add 102-104-151-180 [non lat juxta].

11/12. +και (post αγοραζει) Add 102-104-151-180.

With 7-45 alone.

viii. 11. ελεγετο pro λεγεται and 151 with 36.

ix. 11. εχη

xvi. 11. εκ τα ἕλκει (pro εκ των ἑλκων) and 151 (εκ τα ελκη 16-39-180).

xviii. 15. μακρωθεν and 151.

With 16-39 (where 39 is available).

iv. 8. —και ο ων and 102*-180.

10. οἱκοσῑ (pro οἱ εικοσι) —οἱ and (180).

GROUP 25-58-70-78-84-94-207 (of which this MS. 70 is Queen).

Apoc. 70 (Ev. 386. Ac. 151. P. 199) = Rome Vat. Ottob. 66. [Scr. 70. Greg. 70, new 386. Sod. δ 401]. Greg. XIV; Feron and Battaglini (cat. cod. ottob. 1893) XII; others XV. Belonged formerly to Giovanni Angelo, Duke of Altaemps, died 1627. Apoc. 70.

I am not surprised that the date of this MS. is difficult for scholars to determine, their estimates varying from XII to XV. At first it impresses one as old, but from careful inspection as I proceeded with the collation, I do not believe it is older than XIV[th] century. It was written in the East in a fine large hand, and has inscription and subscription (the latter not being very usual with MSS. of the Apoc., curious though it may seem), but is not dated.

The scribe is singularly careful, and we can convict him of but three variations from his standard, which early develops to be the small family 25-58-78-84-94-207. This is a fine record for a scribe. The text is the standard B text, with the modifications incident to the sympathetic group of cursives.

No iota post- or subscript is to be found, and no letters for numerals except at xiii. 18 χξς ειδον and such modern forms are constant, but one variation φιλαδελφια in iii. 7.

The usual contractions, but ὑιος and cases always in full. πνευμα κυριος and cases never in full, except quite correctly at xvi. 13, 14 πνευματα; xviii. 2 πνευματος; and xvii. 14, xix. 16 $\overline{\kappa\varsigma}$ κυριων. κυριε also at vii. 14.

No ν εφελκ. No itacisms. μὴ̈ occasionally thus.

The accents in such a careful copy by an accurate educated scribe are perhaps worth attention. We find ἶρις not ἴρις; μεγιστᾶνες against the frequent or nearly usual μεγιστάνες; σφραγῖδα not σφραγίδα; λῦσον, λῖνον, ταλαντϊαία, κρίμα, μύρων (for μύρον), σῖτον, κρίνει (xix. 11), μαργαρῖται.

ὄρα μὴ · is properly punctuated. We can see how careful he is from ἀββαδων in ix. 11, agreeing with all the family, for sister MSS. often have variations here inter se. He first wrote αἰ at xi. 4 before ενωπιον and then changed to οἰ, only read by the family, additional proof of great care in copying. Again at vii. 4 he corrects the MSS. 25-58-78-84-94 in a place where he could not help noticing an error, writing τεσσαρακοντα instead of τεσσαρακον of the family. Yet he does not agree with them at ix. 5, writing plainly παιση against their πεση. At one other place xiii. 6 he writes οἰκοῦντας for σκηνουντας, with 36. 62-3, while the family read κατοικουντας.

Again from him we can again convict A (with 13 and f. 95) of a "plain and clear error" at xviii. 23 —οἱ prim. None of the sisters omit this, and all have just passed safely through the ordeal of verses 22/23 without variation.

The only new readings are:

xi. 9. —και (ante φυλων) [א reads των φυλων και λαων].
xix. 2. δικαιαὶ sic pro δικαιαι αἱ
xxi. 16. αυτης bis script.

All three of the above are mere errors, so there is no revision about this honest scribe. A very extraordinary record.

Note further xiii. 14 λεγον the reading of B 1. 14. 25. 58. 92* ? 94. 95. B merely wanted to change back the λεγοντος of B to λεγων, but our scribe faithfully copies on this one occasion the λεγον of his copy, though not addicted to itacism. In another place, xviii. 13, he writes also μύρων for μύρον from his copy. At xii. 6 he reads +εκει (post εχει). 58 does not, but this is an error of copying by 58.

This MS. 70, then, may be borne in mind as a very good and accurate exponent of the late

B recension, with most of the standard Arethas readings besides. The family variations being limited, as follows, to:

i. 8.	+και (ante ὁ παντοκρατωρ)
iii. 1.	—του θεου
2.	—πεπληρωμενα
14.	πιστεως (pro κτισεως)

ibid.	τας χειρας
8.	—τα (ante εθνη)
xxi. 11.	τιμιω (pro τιμιωτατω)

The inscription is:

αποκαλυψις του αγιου ιω̃ του θεολογου (with 17. 23. 25. 27. 28. 31. 33. 38. 51. 55. 57. 58. 90. 94 al.) and the subscription: τελος τῆς ἀποκαλ̈ ιῶ, which is new.

The subscription is followed by "περι του κυριου μηνα" at foot of page, continuing on next page:

† οἱ κατήγοροι τῶν ἐπαινουμένων · οἱ σκοτεινοὶ περὶ τὸ φῶς · οἱ περὶ τὴν σοφίαν ἀπαίδευτοι · ὑπερ ὧν χ̄ς δωρεὰν ἀπέθανε · τὰ ἀχάριστα κτίσματα τὰ τοῦ followed by two words so ornate with flourishes I cannot read them.

This is again followed in a neat, but younger, hand by:

† τοῦτο προσετέθη ἐνταυθα διά τὸ ὑπό ἐν ἰώνώς ἐοικω διαβάλλεσθαι τας γράμματας τοῦ παρόντος βΐβλιου, ὡς μή συν (illeg.) εὖ ἔχοντες · καίτοι, πάνϋγέοντα, κάλα ~

To family 25-58-70-94 now add 78 84 94 and 207, but to 70 we must turn in places of doubt. This family is of purely Syriac origin, see the Crawford Syriac.

Apoc. 71. Vacat.

Formerly attributed in error to: Ev. 390 (Act 164. P. 203) at Rome, (Vat. Ottob. 381).

Miller would make Apoc. 71 Athens 142, but this is not to be found at pp. 399/400 of his index, and I cannot find that Gregory mentions Athens 142.

My 189 = Athens 142. Greg. 511 (later 2091). Von Sod. $A\nu^{502}$.

GROUP 62-63-72-136-147 (of which this MS. is the most incompetent). Sub-division of family 1.

Apoc. 72 = Rome. Chigi R. iv. 8. [Scr. 72. Greg. 72, new 2033. Sod. $A\nu^{60}$]. [xv.]. Apoc. 72.

Ch. xvi. 12 to middle of verse 19 is misplaced by scribe. Missing at f°. 113^A the passage (and commentary) is to be found on 117^A to 120^A, when follows directly κεφ. νΓ and xvii. 1 on 120^B.

Admittance to the library or use of the MSS. in the library of Prince Chigi was not usually allowed. By the courtesy of the Prince, however, an exception was made, and Danesi was allowed to photograph this MS. for me.

It was formerly in the monastery τοῦ σωτῆρος χῦ τοῦ ἀρκαδοῦ. It is absolutely allied to the MSS. 62-63 (of the family of 1), even to the plain inscription "ἀρχη."

There is no subscription, but at the end of the commentary we find:

ὦ πρέπιπέζα δόξα τιμὶ καὶ προσκύνησας τῶ πρι καὶ τῶ υἱῶ καὶ τῶ ἁγίω πνι νῦν καὶ ἀεὶ καὶ εἰς τοὺς αἰῶνας τῶν αἰῶνων ἀμὴν :— by the original scribe, followed by: "Benedicti A. Seleuciæ," in a XVI[th] century hand.

There is no iota post- or subscr. (although the MS. is late) except possibly, postscript, once, at x. 6 ἐν αὐτῆι primo loco. Iota on the other hand is occasionally dotted, and sometimes has the two dots of the diæresis.

There is a good deal of carelessness, and some omissions from homoioteleuton. Breathings are incorrect and tend to the 'rough,' ὁπισω etc. There are many itacisms, insistently ϋ for η, yet ὑμων and ἡμων are not confused except at xxii. 16. Many "new" readings are simply due to itacism. We merely record these in the synopsis of readings. But itacisms can never be safely neglected. Thus, we find, that we can now drag in the whole MS. 15 (represented only by the small fragment on some of the leaves of Evan. E) as a member of the 1-46-62 group. This, from itacisms in agreement with 72, coupled with the reading at iii. 9 (since confirmed by Apoc. 81).

A curious long sigma ʃ occurs in the middle of words.

χαραγμα is consistently written χαραμα.

φιαλη, however, always thus, and not φυαλη (except v. 8 φυαλλας).

A peculiarity is the tacking of a nu to εχουσα, χειρα etc. We have even ἡ θάλασσαν (xx. 13).

There are not many real monstra. Yet notice μεταρετην for τεταρτην (vi. 7), and see xviii. 4. This, and other things (such as ϊ for δε in the middle of words), and the style of itacism (reproducing most of those in 62 besides new ones) leads to the double conclusion that the MS. was copied quite independently of 62/63 from the original exemplar, which was probably a late uncial.

The type of 1-46-62 is very real. Observe μεσουρανισματι xiv. 6, xix. 17; but the scribe of 72 has his own way of doing this. viii. 13 μεσου ῥανήματι, xiv. 6 μεσου ῥανίσματι, xix. 17 μεσου ρανισματι. See also καὶ ὁμενον (viii. 8).

There is then practically nothing new in this MS. Still it helps to fix the 1 type, and is useful to correct the errors of 62. Thus we have λευκας vii. 9, omitted by 62/63. We have του ult. xix. 15, omitted by 62/63 (this time with 1 29 46 57). We have the clause in

xxi. 12 omitted by A 62/63 65 and 67. [Note that 67-120 in many places are quite close to 62/63 and 72]. On the other hand, we find 72 evidently following the original at vii. 4 with απο εκ πασης as in 62/63. The weary work of going over such a duplicate MS. is perhaps compensated for by such light as this. At xvi. 11 εκ του πονου (of 56 62/63 72) is confirmed as the true reading of the original exemplar, by finding in 72 the αυτων following, first written αυτου and then changed to αυτων, showing that the scribe paused here, looked again at the copy, and left του πονου unchanged.

Again xvi. 13, this MS. has τρια (txt.) against 62/63.

Agreement with t.r. can be referred back to the notes under 62/63. Note δολος xiv. 5 alone with 1 62/63.

But αναβαντα vii. 2 alone with 1 (and 57). And αὐτης · παντας v. 13, not αὐτοις · παντας of 62/3.

It would be too long to prove the identity of 72 with 62-63 here. The lists show it.

There has been a good deal of retranslation here from Syriac and Latin sources, common to this group.

Now add 80-138 to the group. 80 is a very old representative of the two families 1-62 etc. and 21-28 etc. before they became separate texts, and is worthy of close attention.

72, however, is utterly useless without the group-control.

GROUP 21-28-73-79-80-(99-100)-103-112-135-138-139-170-191-221.

Apoc. 73. Apoc. 73 = Rome. Corsini 41 E 37. [Scr. 73. Greg. 73, new 2034. Sod. $A\nu^{50}$].

Very neat XV or XVI cent. MS. on paper, executed in Italy, with com̄. of Andreas. Formerly in the library of S. Silvestri de urbe. Strongly reminds one of the writing of the beautiful vellum MS. in the library of Ste. Geneviève, Paris, of Act. Paul $\frac{210}{247}$ (library mark A.O. 35), facsimile in Hoskier, "Collation of Evan. 604" etc.

Apoc. 73 has two library stamps at foot of the first page "Bibliot. S. Silvest" and "Lynceorum Bibliotheca."

There is no inscription to the text. At the head of the prologue is the long inscription given in full in the collation.

This is an extremely interesting MS. It is a full sister to 21, and a half sister of 28. 21 and 73 were evidently copied from the same exemplar, and it seems strange that such an archetype should have disappeared completely since as recent a period as 1500 A.D. Perhaps further research may reveal such MSS.

Apoc. 73 is carefully and faithfully copied, yet has some omissions, and some additions from the commentary. It reflects the original, however, without any editing whatever. It is of Egyptian origin (see No. 135) probably (yet not Aethiopic, although iv. 3 ἱερεῖς (pro ἶρις), and its tendency is to go with the uncials ℵAP. It has some Armenian leaning, and altogether represents an old recension, which we see is at the bottom of the Andreas texts. It is less careless than 1, and gives us a more interesting form of this family. Its minor relations with 18 47 56 59, as also with 65 and 67, are very interesting for the history of the text, bringing out the ancient basic character of the MS. Its relations to fam 34 fam 38 and 40 also merit attention. It confirms the old element in these, and is distinctly a key MS. The idiosyncracies of 21-73, which are tabulated further on, have a bearing which can be discussed later in a review of the whole position. These MSS.—one for all practical purposes—have the elements of several lines of transmission, all of them old, and some very good.

Apart from the pure 21-28-73 fluctuations, the basis of the text favours the Compl.-Erasmus MSS. and recension, and is close to the t.r. in many passages. Coupled with its Eastern origin and adherence in some minutiæ to the uncials and to ℵ, it shows the Andreas' text to be really old, and many grammatical forms have been changed back in error by other cursive scribes from the xth to the xvth century.

Iota subscript is frequent, but not invariable. It occurs even with κυκλῳ. Contractions occur off and on. There is a great lack of punctuation between our modern verse divisions, and the MS. was probably copied from a late uncial. I have not noted this "uno tenore" of two verses, except where other MSS. agree, as it does not seem to be intentional to run them together.

A late second hand has been busy in the first chapter, but not afterwards.

The unique readings are but few and far between, and are practically all traceable to error. Here is the list:

ii. 25 fin. αν ηξιω

iv. 3. ιαστηδι So 79 its nearest sister.

vi. 5. και ηκουσα ανεωγμενης της γ' σφραγιδος του Γ' ζωου (pro και οτε ηνοιξε την τριτην σφραγιδα ηκουσα του τριτου ζωου) So practically 79 except τριτης and τριτου for γ' and Γ'.

6. σχοινικες ut vid. as 140 145.

viii. 7. + και το τριτον της γης κατεκαγη (post εις την γην) [sec. et tert. loc. rectè κατεκαη].

ix. 10. σκοπιοις

xi. 2. την αυλην την αυλην την ἐξωθεν sic
15. ἔβδος
xii. 4 fin. κατεφαγη xiii. 2. +δυναμιν (ante ἐξουσιαν)
10. αὐτὴν (pro αυτον)
14. ποιεῖσαι (sec. loco) So 79. Also 81 182 188 204.
xv. 1. —εσχατας usque ad fin. vers. ex errore.
xvi. 13. +και εκ του δρακοντος (post δρακοντος)
19. ἐμνή- (in fin. lin.) pro εμνησθη ex errore
xviii. 4. και εκ των πληγων αυτης ινα μη βλαβῆτε So 79 and the whole of the rest of the family (hiat 28).
17 fin. ἑστηκασι (pro ἑστησαν) So 79 and all the family except 21-28, which are wanting here.
xx. 7. παντελεσθη (pro τελεσθη)
15. ζωης bis script. errore.

Two new family readings appear at xviii. 4 and 17, confirmed by the subsequent members of the family.

The most important reading is the one above at xx. 7, for which there is no other authority that I know of: παντελεσθη. It is probably a mere visual error from the ταν of οταν preceding, coupled with a mental process of complete ending, on the part of one who was not a Greek scholar. Latt. finiti fuerint, but vg gig consummati fuerint.
Sah Boh. ⲉⲩϣⲁⲛϫⲱⲕ ⲉⲃⲟⲗ. Arab^{int} absoluti fuerint. (Om. arm^{pl}).

The passages where 21 and 73 are alone is very large, amounting to at least eighty-two passages:

i. 9. +ὁ (ante ιωαννης) Add 139 of the family.
ii. 1 init. —τω αγγελω
2. τους (pro αυτους)
4. εχων
4/5 uno tenore, —μνημονευε ουν ποθεν εκπεπτωκας
10. ὃ (pro ἃ) Add 79-139.
iii. 18. εχρισε Add 79-112.
19/20. Post μετανοησον +βαβαι της φιλαῦιας ποση αγαθοτητι ο εγχος (ελεγχος 21) κεκραται. Add 79-170 and 152 169-216 208.
iv. 1. —η (ante πρωτη) Add 79-139 and 122 200.
8. εχει (pro ειχον) Add 28-73-79-103-112-139-170-221.
vi. 8. επι το τεταρτον μερος της γης αποκτειναι So 28-79-80-100-138-139-170 copt. (αποκτεινον 103-112).
11. ἐδοθη ἡ ἑκαστω αὐτων (εδοθη εκαστω αυτων is read by the rest of the family and syr).
vii. 16. —ηλιος ουδε παν καυμα (habet ὁ) txt.
17. ανωμεσον Add 79.
ix. 10. και ἐξουσιαν αδικησαι (pro και η εξουσια αυτων αδικησαι) [Abest και in 21]. Add 171-174.
15. προητοιμασμενοι Add 79-103-112-139-170 (and προητοιμασμενη 28).
18. —εκ sec. (non tert.) Add 79-103-112-139-170 and 159.
20. —τα (ante λιθινα) Add 122 130 200, but not the rest of the family.
21. κλιμάτων sic
x. 1. ἶριν So 73-79-103-112-138-139-170, but all these sisters ἶριν or ἴριν. Add 67 80 81 120 164-166 204.

x. 11. +και (post προφητευσαι) Add 79-103-112-139-170.
ibid. +επι (ante γλωσσαις) Add 79-103-112-139-200 arm 4 [non 170]. +και 28.
xi. 11. [τας] τρεις και ημισυ ημερας Add 28-79-80-103-112-138-139-220.
ibid. και (pro εκ)
ibid. επεπεσε μεγας (pro μεγας επεσεν) Add 79-80-103-112-138-139-170. (επεσε μεγας 28-100).
xii. 11. μετα (pro δια sec.)
xiii. 12. αὑτου (pro του pr.)
13. ινα (—και) εν πλανη ποιη· πυρ εκ του ουρανου καταβαινειν εις Add 79-80-103-112-138-139-170 (hiat 191)-220 (and 28 ποιει).
xiv. 4. ὅποι (pro οπου) No others. It is clear that 21-73 are the closest to each other, with 79-139 next.
ibid. ηγωρασθησαν Add 79-139.
15. —το δρεπανον σου και θερισον
20. ϙχ϶ Add 79-100-103-112-139-170 (80-138).
xvi. 10. σκοτισμενη
18. εγενετο (pro εγενοντο pr.) Add 79-100-103-112-170 and 167.
21. ταλαντία
ibid. +οτι μεγαλης (post χαλαζης) } 21-73 only. Not even 79 or 139.
xvii. 8. εν βιβλω (pro επι το βιβλιον) Add 79-100-103-112-139-170-191-220 syr Prim. gig. (εν τω βιβλιω f. 95 113 200).
ibid. —της (ante ζωης) Add 79-100-103-112-139-170-191-220.
9. +και (post καθηται) Add 79-100-103-112-170-191-220.

9. μή ὅρα. So all the family.
10. σφραγίσαι
12. κατα τα εργα αυτου (pro ως το εργον αυτου εσται) So all the fam. and 164/5*com.*
13. +ουτε προ εμου ουτε μετ' εμε θς̄ εστιν So the family and f. 119.
18. επιθηση επ αυτα επιθηση So 79-139.

From the above we see that 21-73 are sisters, and 79–139 are sisters, and these four together hang very close from one original. The others are occasionally aberrant, as 170 (who had access to other books), while 103-112 are sisters, and 191 and 220 are close. But 80 and 100 are more or less independent. Analysis of the family.

We sometimes find 73 alone with the family (where 21 differs) at:

but 79 is to be added to all.

(Note 79[a] is by the same scribe as 73).

Now, if we are going to get textual criticism "quick" by the old empiric methods, lists are useless. But if we look at them closely we will see that they aid our problem considerably. The same MSS. occur and re-occur with fam 21, and we find that they are all old friends with a basic old text. Either that, or they all belong to a common original foreign version, translated back into Greek.

Accepting the proof that they trace to a common original, we find ourselves a long way on the road to differentiate between what is true and what is false in these old texts by a close application to the groups. We can throw out mere errors almost at a glance now. Errors common to all, or errors reimported into some by chance. And when we come to sift the whole matter, we shall find that f. 7 18 f. 21 f. 34 f. 38 40 47 56 etc. are not only as important witnesses as ℵABCP, but more so, in so far as they check the readings of these older codices by independent lines of transmission of equal or greater age. Importance of the group for checking.

This entire group is related to the oldest forms of both Syriac and Coptic.

Apoc. 74. Apoc. 74 (Act. 140. Paul. 215) = Venice. S. Marc. 546. [Scr. 74. Greg. 74, new 617. Sod. O[13]].

This is a neatly written MS. of about the XII[th] or XIII[th] cent. (Greg. says XI.), with commentary surrounding it, not of Andreas, as Gregory says, but of Arethas, much abbreviated, and is of the ordinary B and "cursive," i.e. Arethas family, except for the peculiarities noticed below. The breathings are square for the most part, though both square and round occur on the same word. Iota postscript is very frequent, generally with ζωιον and cases, with αἴδης, and even with ωῖδε. There are a good many omissions from homoioteleuton; see xix. 18 a new one by no other MS., and ν εφελκ. appears off and on. ὅτάν generally thus. Abbreviations of θεου etc. are not constant; ισραηλ in full (xxi. 12).

This MS. is written by a Greek scholar, a thing fatal to the accurate transmission of the sacred text, it would seem.† It is not particularly interesting, although it contains a few exceptional readings, for these are plainly inserted from some critical sources and do not belong to the straight family type observable in the text as a whole. It favours no particular MS., yet, already at:

iii. 19 we find the unusual ζηλου for ζηλωσον, (instead of the usual variation ζηλευε), with 6 and 31, yet not again until

x. 8 the unusual +και ante λαβε with 4 6 20 31 32 44 48 64.

To family 4 it has merely the affinity of critical lections. We find it at:

iii. 16 reading ἐμμέσαι with B* 4 48 56 64 98 etc.
vi. 17 reading σωθῆναι with 4 40 48 64, yet immediately below it has πνεη, whereas 40 and some others read πνευση.
viii. 5 omitting και σεισμος with 4-48-64.

Yet at:

viii. 11 it reads [αψινθον] whereas 4-48-64 etc. = αψινθιον.

At xiv. 5 we find fam 34 joining fam 4 in the unusual addition of ουτοι εισιν οι ακολουθουντες τω αρνιω (pro ενωπιον του θρονου του θεου).

The groups rather merge, with the addition of 67, at:

xvii. 15. +και ἡ γυνη (ante οὗ η πορνη) with f. 4 20 31 32 67-120 106 109 171-174 182, whereas at xviii. 2 it is probably carelessness, which with P al. leads to the omission of και φυλακη παντος ορνεου ακαθαρτου.

But the type begins to hold pretty steady. See:

xviii. 8. —ο θεος with f. 4 f. 6 20 f. 38 40-210 61 64 98 146 171-174.
13. και ελαιον και οινον with f. 4 f. 6 14 f. 34 107 108 109.
16. —και (ante κοκκινον) with P f. 4 f. 6 21-73[non fam] 113 171-174.
17. επι των πλοιων πλεων with EP f. 4 f. 6 12 al.
22. φανη (pro ακουσθη sec.) with f. 4 f. 6 34-156-165 171-174.
xix. 13. +εν (ante αιματι) with f. 4 f. 6 f. 34 109 113 171-174 251 copt.

† We find confirmation of this in the accenting. The scribe writes ἑλκος once; shortly afterwards ελκων without any accent. Then κριμα without accent, evidently in doubt and intending to look the matter up.

Then we get:
xx. 5. α̅ν̅ω̅ν̅ (pro νεκρων) with B 20 32 f. 34 113 189 only,

but we come back at:
xx. 12. εστωτας τους μικρους και τους μεγαλους with f. 4 26 f. 31 32 f. 34 107 171-174.

Then we get:
xxi. 10. απο του ουρανου εκ του θεου with f. 20 f. 31 32 34-156 51-90 142 146 171-174,

and again:
xxii. 1. ωσει (pro ως) with f. 20 f. 31 34-156-165 113 171-174 200.

In the next verse:
+καταγγελλεται (post ξυλου) with f. 20 32 (f. 31) f. 34 113 171-174.

Again the group comes in:
xxii. 9. +εγω (post ειμι) with f. 4 f. 31 32 34-156-165 113.
15. ο ποιων και φιλων with f. 4 f. 31 32 f. 34 174 gig.
16. ο πρωινος ο λαμπρος with f. 4 f. 31 32 f. 34 40-210 113 140 143 174 200 *syr*S.
18. μαρτυρομαι εγω with f. 4 f. 31 f. 34 174 176 (200) 206.

And finally:
21. —κυριου ημων ιησου with 4 20 31 32 48 64 106 182 only.

Again at x. 11 we suddenly get some unusual 61 and 95 readings; then 38 and 98 come in (xi. 18). Whereas this MS. comes together with 61-95 at the end of chapter x, and in xi (and once in xii), it is not with them in their other peculiar readings prior to this, such as vii. 1 πεση. The curious thing is that 61 and 95 cease their community shortly after chapter xi, just where we first meet them with our MS. 74. The passages referred to are:

x. 11. λαου pro λαοις with f. 61 alone.
xi. 6. υετος βρεχη της ημερας αυτων της προφητειας (—εν) with f. 61.
ibid. —παση πληγη with f. 61 and 149.
7. —*και οταν τελεσωσι with f. 61 and 201 only, but the "commentarius" hand of 74 has inserted the words in the margin.
xii. 9. thus: ο δρακων (—ο μεγας) ο οφις +ο μεγας ο αρχαιος κ.τ.λ. with all f. 61.

Then in the same neighbourhood:
xi. 18. εθνων (pro νεκρων) with f. 38 f. 61 124* 146 200.
ibid. +σου (post αγιοις) with f. 38 f. 61 sah, although at xi. 19 we have του κυριου (pro αυτου prim.) with cursives, but without 61-95, although with 126 164-166 218-219 of the type.

We find elsewhere other influences, but all of the same semi-critical kind.

The solecisms are not very many, and are chiefly either due to pure oversight or the mental inaccuracy of the scholar. Thus:

i. 18. ζῶ (pro ζων sec.)
ii. 7. ακουετω (pro ακουσατω) only on this occasion.
iv. 11. δια τοῦ θεληματος σου
v. 1. —επι του θρονου So 190 now.
xiii. 11. ιδου (pro ειδον)
16. *μετωπον (pro των μετωπων) το μετωπον ex emend.
xiv. 9. —εν So f. 114 187 224.
xvii. 16. κατακαυσωσιν εν πυρι So 112[non fam] 140 200 215[non fam] 241[non fam].
xix. 18. —και των καθημενων επ αυτων και σαρκας παντων (ex homoiotel.).
21. ἑρπετὰ (pro ορνεα)
xx. 12. —της (ante ζωης).

Of these iv. 11 and xix. 21 are rather surprising.

Do not allow the variations enumerated to destroy the idea of a simple continuous "B cursive" type, which our MS. has. For the readings of f. 4 f. 6 f. 38 40 f. 61 are only a few out of the many variations of these other MSS.

GROUP 9-27-75. (And see 13-23-55).

Apoc. 75. Apoc. 75 (Act. 86. Paul. 96) = Florence, Laur. IV. 30. [Scr. 75. Greg. 75, new 456. Sod. α 52].

This MS., without commentary, of about XII[th] cent. (Greg. X, al. XI), is also of the B and "cursive" type like the last MS., but of a different branch of the family.† It is a sister of 9 and 27, and as we were very brief in our description of these MSS.—as to the first because it occurred so early in our list, and the second because it was collated by Scrivener—we will enter into more detail here.

To differentiate once for all between the pure Arethas text (74 etc.) and this B recension, we may add the following test passages:

We have omitted the pure 4-40-48-64-74 combinations for the most part.

The last leaf, containing only a few verses, is of later date than the rest of the MS. The document has an inscription:

αποκαλυψιϲ του αγιου ιωαννου του θεολογου with 17 23 25 27 28 etc.

Beyond its very close association with 9 and 27, we will find 13-23-55, and some others frequently in sympathy. (Later 89 comes in).

But first as to its outward appearance. Breathings are both square and round. There is no iota sub- or postscript. Psi is peculiar. When not square, it is made (more often than not) by writing first a semi-uncial upsilon and then passing through it a perpendicular line crossed. Thus: ψ. οι (generally final) is curiously made throughout, thus: Τδ̂ισ for τοῖς. At vii. 14 etc. μδι looks like μου, but is meant for μοι. Very occasionally a cedilla is found under upsilon, even when ουν is not intended. At xvi. 14 and xvi. 18 we notice the same monogram μ̸ for μεγαλης and μεγας respectively. In xvii. 1/5 we find μ̸ιλησ and μ̸ιλη.

There are a good many omissions from homoioteleuton, generally in company with 9-27. Thus in iv. 7 the fourth living creature is entirely absent by elision, the clause reading και το τριτον ζωον ομοιον αετω πετομενω. in all three MSS.

Again at xiv. 8/9 owing to the reduplication of λεγων we lose nearly the whole of verse 8, this time with the support of ℵ*.

The scribe was his own diorthotes, but has not made many corrections. At xiv. 20, however, he writes in the margin opposite ͵ᾱχ̄: "εν ἀλλ͂ ͵β." I do not know what he means, except that ἐν ἀλλῷ means distinctly in only one other copy. ℵ* and 26 read διακοσιων for εξακοσιων here, but σ′ would be 200, whereas ͵β stands for 2000.

At xv. 6 we have λινον without any accent. From the photograph I judge that the scribe was very careful here. The ink of the word λινον appears fainter than that of the words preceding and following it. He either left a space and filled it in later, after consulting his authorities, or he rewrote the word, after perhaps writing λιθον first. Anyhow these two passages show a knowledge of important critical material. The judgment being in favour of the standing traditional text in both instances.

The most important innovation is at vii. 5, where our MS. reads δὰν for γαδ with only 13-23 130 and 16-39-69-180 (gr. non lat) and against 9 and 27 and the rest.

At xvii. 8/9 our MS. joins together και παρεσται ὡδε against 9-27, showing that small weight can be given to this mediæval punctuation, where even sisters disagree.

At xviii. 2 we find the rather curious omission of φυλακη παντος secundo loco (without the omission of one of the larger clauses), with 22 47 89, but not with 9-27 13, 23 or 55. This looks rather like editing, for euphony, but why only here?

We have had a few indications of some special sympathy for ℵ, but they looked like fortuitous errors.† But now a curious thing happens. In xviii. 9 our MS. omits και στρηνιασαντες with ℵ alone (add now 189, a critical codex). This might be a pure error, but that, in the first place, the scribe of 75 reduplicates οταν by writing it again in the margin, for some unknown reason, and that immediately after (at xviii. 11) we are again practically alone with ℵ, reading σου pro της γης, while ℵ reads +σου post της γης.

Note that the stumbling block of scribes at xviii. 12 is verbatim with t.r.

There are not many new readings. Here is the list:

i. 9. —τη (ante θλιψει)
iii. 7. ἐκκλη sic (But there are quite a few as bold abbreviations).
vi. 4. πῦρρσσ sic (pro πυρρος) ibid. —οι δυο So 215[contra fam] gig arm aeth Auct. pr. (Cf. f. 61).

xxi. 21. +και (ante ἀνα) [Cf. f. 62/3 gig και (pro ανα)].
xxii. 17. —ο (ante διψων).

On the last page (which is by a later hand) we have:

xxii. 19. ξυλου absque του (pro βιβλου sec.), which is new.

Quite a number of numerals are given in letters, as in B al. But as above, xix. 4, the scribe shows he was not copying these, but shortening his text by their employment. For they are generally absent from 9-27, and, as above, he confused οι and ει of εικοσι, leaving the redundant ει, yet writing the numeral symbols κδ̄.

Alone with 9-27, a real family type.

ii. 5. +κατα σου (post κινησω)

xxi. 6. —της ζωης with 2 16 25 35 39 58 70 87 89 94 96.
20. χρυσοπασος with 2 19 24 29 44 52 89 98.

From this it results easily that 9 is quite the nearest relative, that 27 follows close, next is 13, and then 23 and 55 and 89.

In comparatively few instances does our scribe forsake 9-27, the most notable case being at vii. 5, where, as already pointed out, he follows 13, + 16, 23, 69-180 (gr.) in reading δαν for γαδ. The standards in his library are thus easily shown to have been 9-27 and 13-23. It so happens that 23 is also at Florence to-day with 75.

All told 75 is a pleasant and harmless MS.

Apoc. 76. Vacat.

Numbered in error.

N.B.—Miller in his edition of Scrivener says = Act. 421, which is, however, non-existent at his p. 306. On pointing this out to him, he has endeavoured to correct it in his appendix (separately printed) and would give the number to Rom. Vat. 656 = Gregory's Apoc. 79. But why displace Gregory's 79? There would have been some sense if he had made Gregory's 79[a] (Munich) this 76, but let us leave it blank.

COMPLUTENSIAN GROUP 10 etc.

Apoc. 77. Apoc. 77. Flor. Laur. VII. 9. [Scr. 77. Greg. 77, new 2035. Sod. $A\nu^{605}$].

A late and very bulky MS. on paper of the XV/XVI. cent. with commentary of Arethas, the text in red. 363 leaves. Too bulky to have photographed (sometimes there is only one line of text on a page and sometimes none). I have, however, had the text copied (thanks to the kind offices of the chief Librarian Biagi) by Prof. Enrico Rostagno, who has done it very faithfully and accurately, and recompared his copy with the MS. I have no reason to doubt the entire accuracy of his work. The collation with the textus receptus is mine.

There is no iota sub- or postscript, and a good deal of unnecessary ligature (such as ἐδχ^ε for εδοξασεν xviii. 7). I expect it was not executed later than 1500, possibly earlier. The photographs of the first and last pages show that it was written by two different hands. We find αἴδου once i. 18, but not at vi. 8 nor at xx. 13, 14, and no other iota postscript.

The usual contractions obtain, including ἰῶ at i. 4 and xxii. 8, but not at i. 1 or i. 9. We find, however, χριστου once in full at xi. 15, and again xii. 10 χρηστοῦ sic.

There are but few new readings, as chronicled further on; the only thing peculiar to this scribe is a tendency to the reduplication of και in two clauses, following one another, as at xix. 12 and 19. But it is early shown that instead of an Arethas text, with 4 48 64, as we might expect, the text is a pure Complutensian one, with 10 37 49 91 96 etc. This is found throughout, but the full proof is offered in the following markedly characteristic passages:

ii. 7.	—αυτω	xii. 4.	τίκτειν
iii. 18.	εγχρισον επι	xiv. 12.	+του (ante ιησου)
ix. 4.	[μονους]	xv. 4.	+εἰ (post αγιος)
5.	πληξη (pro παιση)	6.	οὐνου (pro ναου)
xi. 1.	+και εἱστηκει ο αγγελος (post ραβδω)

even to the accent over λῖνον in xv. 6 with 17-37-49-91-96 and a few others, though the Compl. itself has λίνον [but we find λῖνος in the Vocabulary at the end]. And even:

xvii. 5. πόρνων So Compl. and 49-96 and a few.
xviii. 7. —και πενθος primo loco.
21. —ουτως
xix. 1. [φωνην οχλου πολλου μεγαλην]

12. και βιβλια ανεωχθησαν και αλλο βιβλι^λ (vult βιβλιον) ανεωχθη
xxi. 24. [Hab. και την τιμην].

In this last case our MS. holds true to type, showing that the omission by its friends ℵAP 1 12 17 18 21 and some others, is probably due to error, repeated along the same lines of transmission.

One more MS. added to the Complutensian group does not seem a very great thing to accomplish. Yet, quite a number of helpful things stand out. Among these, notice that we convict C and A again of errors.

At xiii. 6 our MS. omits και την σκηνην αυτου with C alone, being the first cursive scribe to do so, but against all the sister MSS.

At ii. 23 init. —και with A 16[non fam] and sah boh.

xiv. 10. —*αγιων with A 26-107[non rell. fam] 108[non 56] 112[non fam] 113 124 149 170[non fam] 186 187 boh.

but none of the other Complutensian MSS. omit, nor does the Compl. text itself. Clearly these are errors on the part of all these MSS.

Once again we see the value of sister MSS. in checking errors.

To the above one may add:

i. 20. —και αι επτα λυχνιαι ας ειδες επτα εκκλησιαι εισι 77*txt., with 14 22 35 92*txt.* (In Schol. 77 hab. και αι επτα λυχνοι εισιν αι επτα εκκλησιαι).

Observe here ℵA together with sah, and above at ii. 23, xiv. 10 the undoubted influence of Copt. on A, which has been doubted.

The scribe was his own διορθωτης, yet he does not cancel his ὁ νυμφιος (as above) at xxii. 17, but contents himself with writing over it το πν̄α.

μη is sometimes, but not always, written μη̈. At xxii. 9 ὅρα · μή συνδουλος is incorrectly punctuated, but previously it is correctly given.

κρυσταλω is written consistently with one λ. υαλος but once (xxi. 21) takes the form υελος.

If the student wishes to consult the other, and the larger Compl. groupings, he can look up:—

The MS. 77 does not have any close sister in the Compl. group, unless it be 187 or 190.

GROUP 25-58-70-78-84-94-207.

Apoc. 78 (Paul. 197) = Rome. Vat. Ottob. gr. 176. [Scr. 78. Greg. 78, new 1948. Sod. α 505]. Apoc. 78.

Gregory says XV, on paper. It certainly is not much earlier and in a very poor hand, although there is no trace of iota post- or subscript. No commentary. No chapter headings, or breaks of any kind in the text. The usual contractions are present for the most part. α is often peculiar, not to be confounded with iota. ξ is made almost exactly like zeta, but not to be confounded with it. Nor is eta to be confounded with υ, for there is no interchange of these two vowels but once (xix. 20) υ for η, and again xxi. 12 η for υ, and once double change xxi. 20 βυρηλλος (with Apoc. 25). There are at bottom of f°. 131[B] the catchwords ὁ κατηγορων.

Practically no ν εφελκ., but a good many omissions from homoioteleuton.

This is rather a curious copy, inasmuch as, although there are no flagrant changes by itacism (which is fortunate, as the scribe's vowels are badly formed; but we notice τρεφετε alone at xii. 14), yet there are some curious substitutions of consonants, some new and some with 25 alone. For it early develops that this MS. is a sister to the 25 group, and closest to 25. No doubt this confusion of consonants is partly due to the exemplar used. What a pity these late uncials have disappeared. Evidently the exemplar was an uncial and highly thought of to have been copied so often and so faithfully. Such families are very useful for determining the real value of certain readings. Thus, 58 is more careless than 25. At xii. 16 Apoc. 58 omits the εκει after εχει, though it is undoubtedly a family reading as all the others have it. Again at xiii. 2 ἄρκου is read by all the family except 58.

Apoc. 70, being the most carefully copied of all, perhaps merits the greatest attention.

At vi. 3 we see οτι (pro οτε) by 25 and 78 and the Compl. edition against the others. At ix. 4 we see our MS. 78 with 25, reading χοντον for χορτον, and again at ix. 5 they both omit αυτων ως βασανισμος (but not 58 70 94). Note also at xiii. 18 εξακοσιοι εξηκοντα εξ with A 25 alone. Even at xvi. 21 we have αὐτῇ (for αυτης) 25 78, while 58 70 84 94 207 give αὕτη. None of these five MSS. were copied from each other.

At viii. 1 we have ἡμιώνιον for ἡμιωριον (alone) showing how χοντον came from χορτον in 25 and 78, for the original had evidently a curious ρ, yet 25 did not fall into error at viii. 1, nor the others. Only 78 makes the mistake. At xxi. 20, Ap. 78 reads χρυσοπραγοσ alone for χρυσοπρασος, confounding sigma with gamma.

78 alone omits several whole clauses from homoioteleuton, yet he is not careless as a rule, and has copied pretty well as these things went in the XV[th] century. Notice at xiv. 1 τεσσαρακοντεσσαρες is read by 25-58-78-94 (though not by the careful 70), and at xiv. 3 two verses further on, all but our MS. 78, read τεσσαρακοντατεσσαρες, whereas 78 again omits the τα with 84. Probably the original had it twice like this MS.

Later again towards the end, we read quite alone with 25 at xxi. 14 δωδεκα θεμελιους; xxi. 20 βυρηλλος; xxi. 22 αυτω (pro αυτη); xxii. 6 απεστειλλε. And finally note at xxii. 21 we find ἡμων ιυ χυ of t.r. with 25 etc., and against all 58-70-84-94-207.

New readings, besides those mentioned above (all of no account), are as follows:

i. 7. επ αυτων
13. και bis script.

ii. 3. και υπομονην εχεις και εβασταστισ sic
7. αὐτὰ (pro αυτω)

12. πηλωνας (pro πυλωνας)
20. χρυσοπραγος
22. και sec. bis script. errore
xxii. 5. βασιλευουσιν

Clearly therefore 84 is nearest 78 in little things.

Such places as the following are fortuitous with some others:

ii. 8. —ο (ante εσχατος)
iii. 2. γρήγορων sic
9. ηγαπισα

From this it is evident that A 61 and 72 seem the most friendly to the group, though ℵ and others obtrude a good deal.

These sister MSS., it will readily be seen, are extremely useful factors in computing the probable errors and ratio of error in transmission. Errors abandoned and reintroduced and sometimes abandoned again are here to be observed. And this detail alone can give us keys to important passages as regards weighing the importance of our documentary evidence. Ratio of error.

Now add 94 and 207 to the group besides 84.

(of which 170 191 and 220 221 do not agree in everything).

Apoc. 79. Apoc. 79 = Rome. Vat. gr. 656. [Omitted by Miller in his Scrivener who, in his appendix (separately printed) would make it 76. But we let it stand as 79 with Gregory]. [Greg. 79, new 2036. Sod. Αν⁴⁰].

This MS. is fairly well known, but is not classified as carefully as it should be. Thus, Gregory under Apoc. 73 says Simcox grouped this with 28-79-99. Yet, under Apoc. 79 he says nothing of this group, nor under Apoc. 99. The true group is 21-28-73-79-99 etc., as will be shown later. [Now add latter half of 100 and 103 112 etc.].

Greg. ranks Apoc. 79, which is on paper, with commentary of Andreas between the text (on 207 pages), as XIVth cent., which is probably correct [al. XIII]. But XIV is early enough. Gregory adds "Viri cll. Fessler et Brunn in usum Delitzschii cont." But Delitzsch only says that Brunn compared the inscription, the beginning and end of the MS. for him. Delitzsch's account is very meagre and unsatisfactory, but Tischendorf in his notes has incorporated practically a fairly full collation of the MS., whether made by himself or another. We have therefore signified occasionally "malè Tisch.", or "om. Tisch.", where the passage seemed important enough to warrant it. He misquotes but seldom, but omits a good deal, even when not embraced under "al."†

The last leaf, containing the close of the commentary on the last verses of the Apoc., is in another hand, and I think probably that of Ap. 73. It is just possible that 73 was copied directly from 79, but from a close examination not very probable. In 73 the commentary surrounds the text. In 79 it is between. In rearranging the matter it is possible that 73 made the slips, where the two MSS. do not quite agree. They were both very careful scribes, but the palm must be awarded to the scribe of 79, who was certainly copying a MS. considerably older, and who is exceptionally and most severely exact. Thus, no new reading occurs until we reach xviii. 11 κλαυσονται εν εαυτοις with the rest of the fam. against κλαυσονται οι εν αυτοις of 21-73 (hiat 28), while 1 has εν εαυτοις but the rest with textus receptus. Once again only, at xix. 9 we find a unique reading in 79, viz. μακαριοι εισιν οι εις, where 21 73 read μακαριοι εισιν εις, having εισιν instead of οι, but 100-103-112-139-170-191-220 subsequently all confirm 79. This militates against the theory of direct copy by 73 from 79, but does not entirely shut it out.

For the rest, the solecisms of 79 are confined to a few of the veriest trifles, viz.:

ii. 5. μετανοήσεῖς *sic
13. τὼ ονομα
iii. 18. εχρισαι (sine ινα) So 103-139, although the 79 scribe first wrote εχρισε with 21-73-112. Now CA 7 28 55* have ινα εγχρισαι [Malè Tisch. 79 εγχρισον].
x. 1. ἵριν sic, against εριν of 28, ἷριν of 21-73 and ιριν compendio of 67 al. pc. But 138-139-170 agree to ἵριν, while 103-112 make it ἵριν.
6. ὤμυσεν
xiii. 15. ποιήσει sic
xiv. 12. ἤ δε (pro ὦδε prim.) But so I find 28-103-112-139.
xvii. 9. Ὁι^{αι} (pro αἱ) sic
xx. 3. πλανήσεῖ sic (πλανησει habent ℵ 12 67 114 200 241).

These are all, and they also do not exactly favour a copy by 73 of 79 direct; but what we wish to emphasize is that 79 is the most important MS. of the group, being copied by a most scrupulously exact scribe, who shows no knowledge of other lines of transmission, but gives us faithfully his type, which fixes the vagaries of the others.

Notice, for instance, at p. 27, where the words και το ονομα της πολεως του θεου μου are written at foot, as an afterthought. Now 1 12 61 69 omit these words. This gives us the connection with 1 12. It is not very close however. And we regard 79 as rather more important than the strict 1 (or Erasmian) family. The places where 79 goes alone with another MS. outside its group 21-28-73 are insignificant.

As militating further against direct copy of 79 by 73, notice vi. 11 εκαστω αυτων (pro εκαστοις) with 28-103-112-139-170-220 [Malè Tisch. de 79], whereas 21-73 read η εκαστω αυτων.

Again: xi. 1 και φωνὴ λεγουσα (pro λεγων) with 28 and the rest, whereas 73 has και η φωνη λεγουσα and 21 has και η φωνη η λεγουσα.

On the other hand, 79 steers clear of such things in 28 as στοματα xi. 9, reading σωματα (pro πτωματα sec.) with 21-73 the family and 59 124 152* sah boh pl. latt.

There are practically no errors due to homoioteleuton, except with the others of the group, as at xviii. 18, 19. There is no iota sub. or post., as far as I have noticed, except at viii. 13 to the addition τῷ before μεσουρανηματι, and xiii. 12 αυτῃ, both subscript. There are no ν εφελκ. The usual contractions are present, but ιερουσαλημ in full at iii. 12. Lines occur over proper names, and the double bar generally over numerals.

Iota is sometimes dotted once, sometimes has the diæresis—(the diæresis is not particularly frequent over vowels)—but at xxi. 20 iota of the variant βηρυλλιος has three dots!

Accents are correct. Κριμα is generally accented κρίμα. Once κρῖμα. μεγιστάνες occurs thus. At xix. 11 we find the rather unusual κρινεῖ with 21-73 and some others like 41 42 f. 46 53 56 67 74 87 al. Μη, which sometimes is found in other MSS. doubly accented, thus μὴ, is here exceptionally μή̈ especially with ὁρα, and doubly punctuated: ὅρα· μή̈· συνδουλος κ.τ.λ.

About chapter x. a small ε stands sometimes for και. It is not to be confounded with epsilon, or at x. 5 we should quote "—και sec." This is not the case.

A few places have been "gone over" to remedy faintness. There is no difficulty except at xi. 18 (p. 88 top) where σου has been altered to του by mistake.

The remains of signatures are seen at foot of some of the pages.

As already remarked under Apoc. 73, this group throws a flood of light on such strains as f. 34 and f. 38, placing many of their unusual readings where they belong; in some cases robbing them of any value, and in others leaving the matter to be carefully weighed. The same applies to much of the text of 59. We find 47 rather more with our group than we had realized before. In many ways we continue to regard 47 as a king-key. We are struck by the fact that instead of calling the testimony of ℵ to the support of our group, it looks often like a previously corrupt text of ℵ. On the other hand, there is testimony of ℵ with ACP and but a few cursives, which are joined by the strong group 21 with or without strict Erasmian or Complutensian groups, which merits careful attention. But this is not the place to go into the matter in detail. Notice, however, that many weaknesses of A are revealed and accentuated. We must be very careful not to accord undue weight to A, as has been done in the past. As to A[gr].

The inscription to the commentary runs exactly as in 73. There is no inscription before the text. Ἀμην is lacking at the end of xxii. 21 (with A 21 58* 59 67 73 etc.), and although occurring at the close of the commentary, as usual, there is no subscription.

We feel, although most of the readings of 79 have been known for some time, that enough importance has not been accorded to the influence due to this group, to help differentiate between the true Andreas text and what has crept into it. It is a severe problem, but the 1 group, the 10-37 group, and this one, with early semi-independents like 49, will eventually solve the problem. Solution of the problem.

This must be my excuse for again burdening this volume with heavy "lists" at this place. It may make the discussion of the Munich texts, to follow, more profitable and easy, within a narrow compass. And I have tried to show more clearly than hitherto the connection with other lines.

The absence of 56 from most of the exceptional readings should be noticed. When it occurs it is of importance, except perhaps at xviii. 2, where the omission of the clause και φυλακη παντος ορνεου ακαθαρτου by P 1 4 7 12 the 21 group, 31 38 45 48 56 59 64 67 74 etc., is probably an error due to homoioteleuton.

The only indeterminate place is probably xxi. 10 ἐδειξὲ sic (pro εδειξε μοι in fin. lin.). Did the scribe wish με with 4 9 13 and a few? Probably not, as the rest of the group reads μοι.

From this it can be seen, almost at a glance, what is pure idiosyncracy of the small family, what fortuitous agreement, and what due to a common Egyptian base, as in fam 34. It also reveals the dubious character of A as a witness, and where ℵ is conservative or not.

This list has been a long one, but it will serve its purpose if the reader will consent to recognize the base.

Coptic order. We see then at xiv. 8 alone among Greeks this entire family write the Coptic order τα εθνη παντα. The hasty critic will say it is an accident. I maintain that it is not, and for proof I ask attention to many other passages in the list as to Coptic, and notably: v. 5, ix. 15, xi. 12, xii. 5, xiv. 12, xv. 6, xvi. 3, xvii. 13, 14, xviii. 10, 13, xix. 10, xxi. 12, 23, xxii. 6, 12, 16; and conjoined ix. 12, xi. 14: παρηλθεν pro απηλθεν, the first time the family as a unit alone with boh, the second time with ℵ and boh.

Apoc. 79a. Apoc. 79a Gregory (= 79 Miller). Munich, Reg. gr. 248. [Scr.-Miller 79. Greg. 79a. Sod. Aν69].

A XVIth century servile copy of Apoc. 79 according to Gregory (= Rome. Vat. gr. 656), the preceding MS. described. This is not strictly correct. It is another copy of Apoc. by the SAME scribe as 73. See under 73 as to exact connection with 79.

Peltan used the MS. in 1547 for his edition of Andreas, and called it "Codex ducalis alter."

We do not cite 79a, as in 73, by the same scribe, we have dealt with the matter fully.

GROUP 80-138. Subdivision of family 21.

Apoc. 80 = Munich, Reg. gr. 544. [Scr. 80. Greg. 80, new 2037. Sod. Aν[45]]. Apoc. 80.

XIII/XIV cent. with Andreas commentary, used by Peltan and Sylburg. Hoeschel, and Bengel ("And. 1") collated it. Matthaei, Scholz and Delitzsch also ran over it. Tischendorf gives some readings.

In the light of my other collations, it now turns out to be of very considerable importance, and is extremely interesting. Bengel treated it as representing a standard Andreas text, and seems to have failed to see its connection with Erasmus 1.

Now it partakes of two distinct families, being closely related to the 21-28-73-79 and at the same time to the 1-12-46-59-62/3-67 groups. And it goes back far enough to antedate their division. [I have collated 80 after 106 (being prevented from getting at the Munich codices earlier), so I have had the benefit of the additional MSS. 86 to 106 with which to contrast results].

This MS. 80 is the work of a Greek, as seen by his occasional lapse from the οὖν of scripture to γοῦν, that is γε οὖν, which he uses several times by a lapsus of accuracy, as also θαλατταν twice, which was perhaps not in his copy, as neither form occurs in the other members of the double group. On the whole the scribe is superior to most, and careful in his work; he therefore represents with fidelity his type. Occasionally, as at iv. 8 εχοντα (pro γεμοντα); xiv. 7 δοξα (pro ωρα); xv. 7 σωζοντος (pro ζωντος); xvii. 11 +οὐδόλως; xix. 10 αληθειας; xxi. 3 κοινωνησει (for σκηνωσει); xxi. 13 απο ανατολης πυλωνες τρεις, απο βορρα πυλ. τρεις, απο νοτου πυλ. τρεις, απο δυσμων πυλ. τρεις και απο μεσημβριας πυλ. τρεις (giving five quarters of the Heavens) he wanders into fairyland, but it is not often.

Some of his new readings come from the commentary, as might be expected from a copyist who was thinking in Greek while he copied. φησι occasionally intrudes in the text in error as at iv. 1.

His text was older than that of the main body of its relations which have come down to us; see xiii. 18 ἑξακόσια ἑξήκοντα καὶ ἕξ new thus with και in words. It occurs only in figures in fam 62. xiv. 20 fin. +ἕξ new thus also, given in figures in fam 21.

Besides this note of 18 it has notes of others like 22, 56, 59, 61, f. 16, f. 38, 77, 36, f. 34, of which more later.

It is a bridge between the families 21-28-73-79-100-103 and the Erasmian, as said before.

It shows on the one hand the pure family 21 as at:

vi. 5. και ηκουσα ανεωγμενης της τριτης σφραγιδος (pro και οτε ηνοιξε κ.τ.λ.)

Note an emendation at xi. 19 και σεισμοὶ (ex emend.?) with f. 34 boh sah$^1/_2$. Emended against f. 21 etc. Here is a sign of the families cutting apart, and a division between f. 21 and f. 34 both thoroughly impregnated with Egyptian influence.

Obs. 80* at xix. 10 fin. αληθειας pro προφητειας with boh only.

Sometimes we get a real split, or mixture, as: at xviii. 3 στρήνου with C 1-152-179-208 f. 25 47 57 f. 62 f. 119 141 f. 178 Er. 1. 2. 3. Ald. Col. without the 21 family.

[This sevenfold group, thus brought together, is of significance].

See also x. 4 μετα ταυτα (pro μη ταυτα) f. 1 f. 10 f. 21, 36 67 81 f. 119 159, and is quite friendly to 77 (a member of Compl. group) elsewhere.

The above will repay study.

It is sufficient to say that this MS. is perhaps one of the most important of all the affiliated groups, where it takes us back to Syr and Gigas and ℵ at a bound, with some ancient readings underlying the strata of Arm.

Now see 138 for its full sister, a later MS. (at Vienna). Both derive from a common archetype and are not copied from each other.

† Consider, a moment before, xviii. 5 μεχρι (pro αχρι) by 80-138, 67-120 only (εως P and Hipp. alone).

‡ Consider also xix. 10 where 80 has in the text αληθειας for προφητειας, but in margin γρ και προφητειας thus agreeing alone with gigas "spiritus est et prophetiae," while 138 ignores αληθειας, but it is found in boh (codd. omn. !).

GROUP 81-204. Subdivision of family 34 and family 1.

Apoc. 81.

Apoc. 81 = Munich, Reg. gr. 23. [Scr. 81. Greg. 81, new 2038. Sod. Aν600].
MS. on paper of xvith cent. with Andreas commentary, and works of Gregory of Nyssa.
Used by Peltan as "codex ducalis primus."
Hoeschel also collated it for Sylburg, and Delitzsch further refers to it.

It has however been too much neglected, and Delitzsch simply overlooked its importance and its readings. He devotes two pages to it and gives a few unimportant readings, nothing to what it deserves. The first part of the codex is by one Cornelius, a Venetian, 1542; the latter part, including Apoc., by another, probably also a Venetian hand. It really is of very great importance. In the first place it is quite late (circumflex is ~), but although without any abbreviations (for κυριος, θεος, ουρανος, πνευμα and ιερουσαλημ are given in full, although ιηλ is contracted) it is also without trace of iota post- or subscript, except once subscr. x. 3 φωνῃ μεγαλῃ and thrice postscript xi. 13, xviii. 10, xxii. 12. Sigma is occasionally given as c; ιδον is frequent, ν εφελκ. occasional. Although so late a cursive, it takes us back, further than any yet, into the realms of ℵ and 56 and 38; not only so, but with the strongest element of the 1 or Erasmian family throughout as well. It is very strange to find the new reading ἂν ἔλθω at ii. 25; 56 alone so far gave us ἔλθω, against αν ηξω and ανοιξω of all the rest, but while siding with Latins like 67 etc. it leaps back to Græco-Latin and ℵ, and ℵCAP groups (note iv. 11 —την (ante τιμην) alone with ℵ 113), while having the strangest affinity for the Erasmian group as a whole and some of its MSS. in particular. Thus it gives us a good deal of sympathy with 12 but without its misspellings.

It is undoubtedly copied from a MS. we have not come across, and a most interesting one.

Unfortunately carelessness and license come into play in this MS., (the carelessness and license of the scribe himself), but most of the "old" readings are really part of the old exemplar, as we can see from the absence of the B readings.

We have now found a sister MS. 204 at Venice written in very abbreviated cursive, but agreeing with 81 almost throughout.

It remains for this double xvth century MS. to catch up with some unique readings of A and of ℵ, but whether they are mere errors on the part of 81 throughout or not is not certain as A is favoured in somewhat larger groups.

Besides ii. 20 πολυ (pro ολιγα) with ℵ etc.; xvi. 18 —και φωναι etc., which, with our other affiliations, takes us a long way back (apart from mere errors) and places this MS. in the Græco-Syriac-Latin group at a very early stage, before the Erasmian and the Complutensian families became separated.

We come together with 1 a⁻ʲ Compl. at x. 4 μετα ταυτα and γραφεις, and we have actually (with 204) at ix. 11 +ὁ (ante Ἀπολλυων) with the Complutensian only, and none of its MSS. except 228/9.

See also v. 6, vi. 7 etc., vi. 16/17. Note further remarks under 204.

Group 44-52-82.

Apoc. 82 (Act. 179. Paul. 128) = Munich, Reg. gr. 211. [Scr. 82. Greg. 82, new 177. Sod. α 106]. Apoc. 82.

Referred to by Delitzsch (XIII). Gregory calls it an XI[th] cent. MS. on vellum, and he is right. Delitzsch calls in question the date assigned by librarian Hardt, but Delitzsch is quite wrong. The MS. is XI and early XI.

I emphasize this because the MS. turns out to be the most important member of a small group, and should be dated properly.

Iota post. is not infrequent, but often with the article alone. Breathings are often square and occasionally (v. 6, vi. 12, ix. 9, 11, x. 8) thus: ἑστηκὸς; ἕκτην; ἵππων; ἀβααδδῶν; ἦν etc.; μὴ is thus written as well as μὴ. δὲ more occasionally thus. ν εφελκ. has been removed where present. But we notice εστιν (v. 12), which its sisters 44-52 do not have. It develops early that 44-52-82 form one MS. The idiosyncracies of the family stand out in relief [see under 44 52]. Besides this, as remarked under those MSS., this group represents an early and pure representation of the B family, before our MS. B obtained its present form. There is "abweichung" to ℵ, A, ℵP etc., and chapter v shows this in an excellent manner.

The omission at v. 14 —και τα τεσσαρα ζωα ελεγον αμην with 19 61 89* 95 is not shared with 44 52.

Notice iv. 3 [και ο καθημενος] —ην with ℵABP 44-52 and 7 13 19 23 26 36 41 42 45 53 55 92 104 107 against the mass. Again ii. 2 —ειναι ℵCAP 44 52 82 only. 41 42 are occasionally friendly as above, and at iii. 7 —ὁ (ante εχων).

This MS. 82 is a faithful copy in the main. Witness βάλω sic ii. 24 by all three 44 52 82.

Notice the unusual conjunction at:

In fact, occasional pure cursive grouping is to be found in 82 (as at v. 8 προσευχων) where Apoc. 2 (see above) is always to be found in company.

Our MS. ends abruptly in the middle of xxii. 20 at the first ναι, as does 44 (52 wanting), closing as if they had absolutely no knowledge of the real ending.

We oppose 44 and 52 together only in one other place, xviii. 21, where they both add εξ ἀυτων and we do not. But at xix. 5, while reading τω θεω with ℵCABP and a few cursives, we do not seem to be joined by 44 or 52. And at xxii. 2 των καρπων by 82 and 26 104 107, apparently they are not joined by 44 or 52 (at any rate I have no note on this for these sister MSS.).

Appended to the MS. is Dorotheus'† treatise on the 12 Apostles and 70 Disciples, as in Act. 89 (P. 99. Ap. 45); Act. 10 (P. 12. Ap. 2).

The scribe has a well-formed, regular and consistent handwriting.

This is another XI[th] century MS., in which it is refreshing to find cultivation and accuracy in the copyist, far beyond anything found in later (or earlier) MSS. For the archetype is reproduced with great fidelity. [See under 52 and 44].

Apoc. 83. Apoc. 83 (Ev. 339. Act. 135. Paul. 170) = Turin, Univ. B. v. 8. [Scr. 83. Greg. 83, new 339. Sod. δ 303].

Hort collated the first five chapters in 1864 and reported it related to the B family. This may be, although it should always be borne in mind that many MSS. of the Apcc. agree with the CAB readings for the first five chapters, and then drift off to other lections. Scholz said that it was of the AC family! Anyhow, we regret to report that this number must be left vacant, as the MS. was severely damaged by the fire in the library, and the librarian so reported to me when I asked if its readings could be recovered.

Apoc. 84 (Ev. 368. Act. 150) = Florence, Riccardi 84. [Scr. 84. Greg. 84, new 368. Sod. α 1571]. Apoc. 84.

Under Evan. 368 Gregory indicates Act. 15 in error. Under Act. 150 he gives it as containing Paul. 230, but under that number says it is a mistake.

We have collated the Apoc. from photographs in 1907, and at once identify it with the family 25-58-70-78-94.

The MS. has an inscription "Cosmæ Oricellarii καὶ τω · φιλων." Gregory places it as a xv[th] century copy, but it is older than it looks, and probably XIV[th], and possibly XIII[th]. Its most youthful sign is the semicolon of interrogation (occurring once) at xvii. 7 after ἐθαυμασας; and the catchwords του ἀετου at foot of p. 70 verso.

It is written in a fat round Latin hand. There is no iota post- or subscript, except at i. 9 ἐγενῷμην sic. ν ἐφελκ. is absent, but hiatus occurs for want of it sometimes, often added by a second hand, who flourished a century later. This hand is indicated by **.

χ is very Latin, made above the line, and exceedingly like κ. So much so that we look for confusion, but only find it at i. 18 χλειδας *sic; perhaps at viii. 7 καλαζα for χαλαζα ut vid.; xxi. 23 κρειαν ut vid. pro χρειαν; and definitely at xviii. 12 καλκοῦ for χαλκοῦ, with C*.

μη is generally written μὴ. Yet at xix. 10 we have ὅραμη in one word, without any accent on μη, and without stop after it. At xxii. 9, however, we have ὅρα μή συνδουλος, the words separated, no stops, but one accent on μη. Contractions are usual, except πρόσ for πατρος (iii. 5, 21), and μ̄ρ̄ for μήτηρ (xvii. 5). κυριε is in full at vii. 14. θεος and cases sometimes in full.

It was copied from a cursive, see x. 7 —και and ετελεσθη. This results from copying a cursive, the ε of ετελεσθη taking the place of the sign for και.

Accents and breathings are irregular, the soft breathing occurring very frequently in error. At viii. 13 we are treated to οὐ ἀι · οὐαὶ · οὐαί, sic.

Our scribe shows latinisms at xiii. 10 —ἡ with 12 (contra 25 group); also xiv. 3 —αἱ with 7 16 28 (32*) 39 45 69 93 (non 25 group); and vi. 7 —την, xv. 2 —την (ante θαλασσαν sec.). New with 122 218 sah[1]/[3]; but has αψινθον with the group at viii. 11, where we might expect a latinism. This has some importance.

There are very few cases of omission by homoioteleuton. The scribe avoids many occurring in the sister MSS., yet has one, not in the family, at xviii. 2 —και φυλακη παντος ορνεου ακαθαρτου with P 1 4 7 etc. (added by second hand in margin). Also at xv. 3 he omits και αδουσι την ωδην μωσεως δουλον του θεου alone with C. This is again a fortuitous proof of the carelessness of the uncials. All other MSS. avoided this mistake till we reached 84. The second hand has also added this in the margin with the reading μωϋσέως. Further: xx. 7 the scribe omits και οταν τελεσθη τα χιλια ετη. Second hand adds in margin "και μετα" (pro οταν τελεσθη) "τα χιλια ετη." The scribe himself revised partially, and this later hand more thoroughly, yet nothing occurs to destroy but only to emphasize the character of the family group. The last member of this was 78, where we found considerable confusion of consonants. The same mistakes do not occur here, yet there are others, viz. xi. 6 καταξαι for παταξαι, xii. 10 καπηγορος for κατηγορος, xiii. 1 ἑκπτὰ for ἑπτα, xvi. 7 παντοκρατων for παντοκρατωρ, xvii. 3 ν̄π̄ι for π̄ν̄ι, xvii. 14 εκλεπτοι for εκλεκτοι, some due to similarity of brain sound as the scribe turned from the original to his copy, but others due perhaps to a poor exemplar, original of both 78 and 84. There is no evidence that any of the group were copied from each other. It is perhaps furthest from 25, and nearest 58; see xi. 1 εγειρε with 58 etc., but none of the rest. Yet 58 alone reads ἄρκτου against all the rest, including 84, at xiii. 2.

It is alone with 78 at xi. 4 —γης, and at xiv. 3 τεσσαρακοντεσσαρες, but against it in omission of xiv. 17. It is against all the group in a few places, e.g. xiv. 4 [αν], xvi. 6 ποιεῖν with 14 16 21* 35 36 50 98, xxi. 27 —οι and εγεγραμμενοι etc.

The inscription αποκαλυψις του αγιου ιωαννου του θεολογου runs with 17 23 25-58-70-78-94 etc. There is no subscription. After Apoc. follows the first epistle of St. John. The only subscription among the group is in 70.

The MS. as a whole is not very carelessly executed, † yet there are a number of solecisms of which the more important follow:

Of errors common to other MSS. there are many.

† Exceptionally, however, are several cases of hiatus for want of ν before a vowel, which is rare.

For the rest, it must be sufficient to refer to the lists of agreement of the group given under Apoc. 78, to which the testimony of 84 is now to be added.

Add to those:

xviii. 7. οτι ειμι καθως 25-58-70-84-94. (Hiat 78).

In places of doubt consult and lean on 70, whose scribe was marvellously accurate, far ahead of any of the others of the group, and whose single testimony is worth all the careless agreement of 25-58-78-84-94 even with 207.

Take for instance xxii. 21 —ημων by 58-70-84-94, against 25 and 78. There is no doubt in my mind that the omission is correct as far as the exemplar goes, from which all these are derived.

This is a Syriac text as foundation. See Crawford Syriac.

Apoc. 85 }
Apoc. 86 } "Vacant."

There is too much confusion here between Gregory and Scrivener for us to use these numbers at all.

Gregory calls Apoc. 85 (Act. 184. Paul. 232). Jerusalem, Holy Sepulcre No. 9, whereas Scr.-Miller gives Escurial ψ. iii. 17. Scr.-Miller does not say = Gregory 142, but Gregory says his 142 = Scr. 85. However, Gregory's Apoc. 142 = T. iii. 17 (which in Miller's index = Paul. 470) and not ψ. iii. 17. We shall try and clear up the Spanish codices later. There is no sacred codex ψ. iii. 17 in the Escurial. Scr.-Miller meant T. iii. 17, thus numbering twice 85 and 142. Meanwhile we neglect Scrivener's 85, and also Gregory's 85, for Gregory has also mixed up his Jerusalem and S. Saba codices, and it is better, in order not to complicate matters for future reference, to leave this number alone.

The same applies to Apoc. 86 of Gregory (Ev. 462. Act. 187. Paul. 235) S. Saba 10, as Miller's Apoc. 86 is Gregory's 23, although Miller says Greg. 122. I do not find in Miller Gregory's S. Saba 10. On the other hand, in Miller under Apoc. 86 he says (= Act. 251), a codex at Berlin, another error. Under Act. 201, however, he gives (= Paul. 396. Apoc. 86) Athens, Natl. Libr. (490, 217) = Greg. Apoc. 122. No comment is necessary as to leaving out this poor number 86, about which there has been such a muddle.

GROUP 34-35-68-87-(124)-132-156-(165)-181-188.

Apoc. 87 (Ac. 178. P. 242) = Cheltenham 1461 (formerly Meermann 118). [XI or XII]. Apoc. 87.
Collated and published by Scrivener in Cod. Augiensis (m), which collation we have incorporated. See Scrivener's Introduction, pp. lxxvi/vii, for description. [Scr. 87. Greg. 87, new 172. Sod. α 404].

Its friendship for various other MSS. has been taken up under those different heads. But it really falls into the 34-35 group as above, which is an old Egyptian text, revised on Arethas type, but not true. See under 34, 35 and 68. Of no great critical value in a way, yet throwing a good deal of light on original Coptic forms, and showing up Egyptian influence in both ℵ and A. Also a helpful key is this combination to the re-influence (in very early days) of the trilingual versions: Latin, Syriac and Coptic. See under Apoc. 104.

Under Apoc. 132 I have exhibited a list of the family characteristics, which we can now control more thoroughly from these additional sister MSS., especially as 132 is very accurately written and transcribed.

GROUP 46-88-101. Sub-type of fam. 1.

Apoc. 88.

Apoc. 88 (Ev. 205. Ac. 93. P. 106). Venice, S. Marc. No. 5 old catalogue. [Scr. 88. Greg. 88, new 205. Sod. δ 500]. Early xv., but looks much older. Beautifully written. Usual contractions, but no iota post- or subscript. ιωαννης is contracted as in 46.

There is no inscription, as in 46, to which we must instantly refer. As, however unlike in exterior these two MSS. may be, they are for all practical purposes one and the same, as has already been intimated by previous examiners (see Scrivener, Burgon, Holmes, Gregory, Rinck, etc.) to which must as certainly be added Apoc. 101 Scr. (Ev. 206. Ac. 94. P. 107) [=Greg. Apoc. 109, but same numbers in Ev. Act. and Paul.], we need not dwell on their exterior characteristics. All we can say is, if this MS. 88 was copied by Cardinal Bessarion's librarian John Rhosen, then he had a singularly fine and clear writing; and if on the other hand John Rhosen wrote Apoc. 101, that he had one of the most abominable styles of writing to try the eyes of the poor collator which was ever conceived (though neat-looking enough at a distance).

Well, it is absolutely true, as has been surmised, that 46 88 and 101 are for all intents and purposes one and the same MS. This is quite a different case from 14 and 92, where we showed that they were probably derived from the same exemplar, but that neither was copied direct from the other, and first one and then the other preserves the truth.

Here the three MSS. are really the same, and it may be thought waste of time to collate 88 and 101, after having satisfied ourselves that the other MSS. are identical with 46. But there are several reasons why we should do so, and chiefly to see, in such a case, how many errors a scribe would habitually make himself, and how many he would repeat, i.e. propagate. These are points raised by Birks in his valuable essay on the transmission of our documents, and never properly determined, chiefly for lack of material. Here, however, we have abundant material. It may be limited in its application, however. For these xv^th century scribes of 88 and 101, though diligent enough, lacked knowledge of variants, which other scribes had, and have simply reproduced, either from ignorance or by direction of their superiors, the solecisms of 46, without even marginal comment. That 46 was not copied from either 88 or 101 we can establish. That it was used by 88 or 101 to copy from is in the highest degree probable. That 88 was copied from 101 is practically impossible, as 101 is written in such a way as to provoke much error in the MS. of a scribe copying from it, which we do not find in 88. That 101 was copied from 88, although possible, is also unlikely, as referred to later. It really looks here again as if another cursive, and a contemporary one, existed, which is responsible for the slight differences. Possibly the original of Apoc. 46, now in a different and younger hand from the rest of the MS., was the basis of 88 and 101.

The matter is of little importance, however, and we can certainly count 46-88-101 as one MS., deriving from an important archetype of the family of Apoc. 1 [see under Apoc. 46].

Were we writing at Venice, we would have sifted the problem to the bottom as regards the body of these three MSS. of the whole N.T., even at much expenditure of time and strength, but another may be interested to do this at some time in the future, and the data I provide will render the task much lighter.

But here follows a complete list of the differences between the three MSS. On examination it will be found that they are very few. Certainly the XIV^th or XV^th century scribes who wrote 88 and 101 were more exact than we could be to-day in all probability. They are both slavish copies of 46, and apparently in Bessarion's time 46 was considered a most excellent MS. If this was so, there is no reason to fall foul of Erasmus for using Apoc. 1, which is of precisely the same family. When I say slavish copies of 46, it appears so except in the places recorded in the following lists, and it has occurred to me that Apoc. 46, which is said to be younger than the main body of that MS., may have been copied at some time in the same way as 88 and 101, and all three from the same original which belonged to Evan. 209.† There has been much confusion hereabouts anyway. Burgon thought Apoc. 46 of Evan. 209 was in a younger hand than Apoc. 88 or 101, and I thought on first examination of my photographs that 88 was XII[th] cent. and 101 XII[th] or XIII[th], but they are evidently much later, and 46 is earlier.

But to the point: I rise from a severe examination of these three MSS., unable to tell which was copied from the other. Thus, if both 88 and 101 were each modelled independently and directly on 46 how can they both read ὁτι for ὁσοι of 46 at ii. 24? or ηκολουθησαν for ηκολουθουν of 46 at xix. 14? or both have ἡμων in xxii. 21 where 88 and 101 both omit the word? If, on the other hand, they were not modelled on 46, why do they both read μετανοῆσ at ii. 5 for μετανοήσῃς of t.r., following 46 which reads μετονοησ? compendio?

Again, if 101 were re-copied from 88, why should it read αηρ in ix. 2 with 46, whereas 88 has αστηρ? or why, at xx. 4 omit του before χριστου (with 46) against 88, and have τα before χιλια (with 46) against 88?

I know 88 could not have been copied from 101 as said above, though there are plenty of proofs below to this effect. The only other known solution would be that two scribes wrote simultaneously 88 and 101 from dictation of 46 by another person. This again presupposes accuracy absolutely shown here which is beyond human reach, and we can put that theory aside.

The matter is of small importance in itself, and more important is it to see the error that can creep in by transmission and re-transmission. Now the places where these MSS. really differ from each other are very few in the aggregate, as follows:

Taking the places where they agree, all together, of course we simply have to look back to 46 for an appreciation of the text, for there are really no new readings. The remarkable thing is to see how absolutely the scribes of 88 and 101, two very different men, of very different handwriting and characteristics, followed 46 blindly, never revised their copies on any other MS., and accepted the vagaries of 46 down to the minutest detail, all of the specialties of 46 finding a place without remark, e.g. minus ii. 21, iv. 8 +σαβαωθ (ante ὁ θεος), vii. 12 +αγιος ter; even down to οἱ δ' ὀφθαλμοι of xix. 12.

The strangest thing about this is to observe a foolish and wrong order of words like xix. 5 λεγουσα εξηλθεν for εξηλθεν, λεγουσα, or xvi. 5 λεγοντος των υδατων by 46, followed equally blindly by 88 and 101.

Also to see one or the other influenced by the punctuation of 46, as at xix. 10, where we find ὁρα · μη . συνδουλος σου ειμι, but 88 and 101 have ὁρα · μη συνδουλος κ.τ.λ., completely changing the meaning, whereas the poor punctuation of 46 was easy to see through.

The only thing we should perhaps notice and mark down for reference is where 88 stands alone, or almost alone, without 46 and 101, eliminating itacisms and errors etc., viz.:

ii. 10.	+και (post ιδου)
v. 5.	−μοι [cum P].
ibid.	δάδ [contra 46 101 δαυϊδ].
vi. 8.	−εν (ante θανατω)
ix. 2.	αστηρ (pro αηρ) [cum 2 19].	Notice three very distinct places in one chapter.

21 init.	−και

xii. 5. —παντα [unique so far. See Coptic].
12 init. +και
xiv. 13. απαρτι· και λεγει το πνα
xvi. 14. εκπορευεται (—ά) [N.B.—Apoc. 1 has εκπορευεσθαι (—ά), the ά being written in later].

And also, perhaps, the rarer places, where 88 has the support of 101 against 46:

Apoc. 89 (P. 266). London, Highgate. Burdett-Coutts II. 4. [Scr. 89. Greg. 108, new 466 or 699. Sod. δ 104]. Collated by Scrivener and published in Adv. Sacra critica under the letter δ. [XI]. This is Gregory's Apoc. 108 (Ev. 699. Ac. 256. P. 306), but for various reasons I must adopt the older notation, especially as Gregory's substitute for Scrivener's 89 is a document Ev. 466. Ac. 189. P. 267. Ap. 89, which he calls S. Sabæ 20, although he gives this same Eastern pressmark to his Apoc. 104 (Ac. 243. P. 287), which by the way is Scrivener's Apoc. 105. Apoc. 89.

GROUP 51-90-(125)-172-217-246.

Apoc. 90. Apoc. 90. = Dresd. reg. A. 95. Gregory calls it XII, Griesbach X, and Scholz XV! The latter designated it 50^2, as in Scrivener. But Tischendorf calls it Apoc. 90, and this number must stand. [Scr. 50^2. Greg. 90, new 713 or 2039. Sod. α 1271]. It certainly seems as old as XIII[th] cent. and may be XII[th], but at the end seems to be finished by a XIV[th] or XV[th] cent. scribe. A very attractive little bi-columnar MS. to look at, written in a rather unusual style. Formerly "in monast. Iberorum in monte Atho." Belonged to Matthaei, who sold it in 1788. He collated it and used the letter r to designate it.

I have collated this MS. from photographs immediately after collating No. 47 (=Matthaei's k), and refer to an extract from Matthaei's preface given in my description of 47 as regards his estimate of 90. As I have said, I think he hardly gives enough weight to 47 in his comparison. For ordinary practical purposes Matthaei's collations are sufficiently accurate, but he collated with a different standard, and it would be difficult to extract from his notes a perfect collation, although I have found him very careful. Therefore I apply myself once more to the recollation of a document, already fairly well known, though not used by Tregelles, and only partially by Tischendorf.

Iota subscript occurs very frequently, even with contracted words, as θῳ̄, but not with ᾅδης except twice, at xx. 13, 14. As regards the age of the MS., this is set off by constant diæresis over ι and υ and even over ε at xvi. 16 μα̃γε̈δών sic. In this connection we note, i. 11 φιλαδελφϊαν, but λαοδϊ'κειαν. Dots are placed inside large sigmas, C, and other letters, as if the MS. were copied from an ornate late uncial of the IX[th] cent. Also over numerals and proper names there are unnecessary contraction bars, breathings and accents. The scribe frequently carries down the last syllable to the next line instead of contracting it at the end of a line.

The usual contractions occur, except πνευματα	in full at iii. 1, v. 6, xvi. 13, 14	ουρανος	in full at xx. 11

κυριε	„ „ vii. 14	ουρανου	„ „ xii. 4, 8; xviii. 1
κσ̄ κυριων	„ „ xvii. 14, xix. 16	ουρανω	„ „ xix. 14;

while υἱος and cases are always in full.

Of stops, the semicolon sometimes occurs, but not of interrogation.

This MS. makes quite a few changes in verse division, not occurring elsewhere (see collation)—and when careless of the order of clauses, no attempt is made to revise them; hence there are some solecisms in this respect also.

On the whole it is to me a very unsatisfactory MS. Why Matthaei should rank this above 47 I do not see. Apoc. 90 bears throughout the marks of the all too thorough B revision, and is a far less interesting and a far less important MS. He has collated it most thoroughly, however, with fewer oversights even than in Apoc. 47, and I, following him in 90 immediately after 47, with only a few days intervening, ought to be a good judge of the relative importance and value of the two texts. In proof of the thorough B revision, see not only countless places throughout, but especially viii. 7 (note Compl.), xvii. 16, where the error of B* (corrected by B) remains untouched in 90, and of course και οινον is omitted at xviii. 13. Nearly all the revisions of AB, ℵB, also appear; that is the emendations of A or ℵ, discarded between times, and revived by B; also those of ℵC, ℵP, and CP, CA, ABP, which are less usual and have not much authority. This MS. therefore is one of the chief exponents of revision generally, and of the B revision throughout in particular. This makes it the work of a critical scribe, or of one slavishly following a standard of this depraved type. The many B corrections, as is well known, have no support from ℵ, A, C, or even P. Therefore, when in addition to following B and some cursives alone, it indulges in the occasional lapses of A, ℵ, C and P, or of the joint vagaries of ℵC, ℵP, CP, CB (a rare combination without A, and when with A of considerable importance), CA, ABP, etc., we are forced to put the MS. low in our scale of authorities.

We now have for control a sister MS. in 51 and in 172-217-246.

Other more distantly related MSS. to 90 are 98† and 36. The latter frequently occurred in the small 40 groups. The former (98) does not seem nearly so much related to 40 as to 90, to which it is in close agreement in many places. This proves that the text of 40 and 90, while branching back to 12, 36 etc., has an element of independent revision not of very ancient date. As a matter of fact the base itself of 90 is very old, but has been too much tampered with.

Many pure "cursive" readings also occur. Many of these are due to scribal infirmities. To some extent they represent a post B revision.

One of the most important omissions, as to type of exemplar from which 90 is derived, occurs at vii. 4 —ρμδ χιλιαδες εσφραγισμενοι with 51 and 16, 28, 29, 30, 40-210, 61, 90, 93, 95, 98, 113 f. 119 122 125 126 128 129 142 149 164-166 186 218 219 246.

On one occasion the scribe cannot make up his mind, and writes (ix. 5) πέσῃ (with αι written above), giving us two readings out of five (so 56 166 188 219). Also notice xvi. 6 πεῖν (with ι written above) *sic.

Many omissions occur from homoioteleuton, e.g. a whole verse xiv. 17 without 51, where the only other authority is our old friend 14 [against 92] 78, 214, and 246 [against their families].

To show the company our MS. keeps we might cite:

xv. 7. —ἐν before ἐκ (in the case of 90, dropped between two columns [non 51]) with ℵ* and no less than fifty cursives, but not by such authorities as the Compl. group nor 18 nor the 34 family 36 40 113 130 200.

Here 1-152-179 (hiat 208)-f. 62-f. 119 59 159 oppose fam 46, the 7 family is divided, the 21 family is divided, 58 opposes its six sisters, 38-203-240 oppose 178, and so forth, while 90 is opposed by all its relatives 51-125-172-217-246.

† Notice xix. 9 where Apoc. 90 alone [not 51, however] changes the order of του αρνιου κεκλημενοι to κεκλημενοι του αρνιου, and Apoc. 98 omits the clause. There is an obscure connection here. Also xxii. 6 where 90 and some cursives (including 40) omit δειξαι τοις δουλοις αυτου, Apoc. 98 on the other hand transfers the clause to the end of the verse.

We might add to the above,—but they have no consequence—, xix. 17. Post πετομενοις "ἐν μεσ͂" in ras.

xxii. 6. Supra πνῶν των (i.e. πνευματων των pro αγιων) script. est "εν θῶ," sic $\overset{\text{εν θω}}{\text{πνῶν}}$ των.

One of the most important of the foregoing is at xviii. 14 —απηλθεν sec., instead of the usual απωλετο (pro απηλθεν) with CAP etc., etc., but it seems an error.

Euphony bothered some scribes; see, due to this cause, οὐ (pro ουτε sec.) above—alone among MSS. so far. Now the scribe of Apoc. 16 did the same thing at this verse, only he changed the third ουτε to ου instead of the second!

From the above no deductions can be drawn, except that after ch. xi. the sisters 172-217 drift away from 51-90, and 246 approaches.

Of special interest perhaps are:

vii. 2. ανατολων the family with A 203 206 *sah boh syr*S.
viii. 6. αυτους (pro εαυτους) 90-246 with ℵ*A alone.
[xvi. 6. πῖεῖν sic 90 with A (πειν) alone, and C (πιν)] xviii. 14. αυτα ου μη ευρησουσιν 51-90 with CP and only 87 111.
22. σαλπιγγων 90[non fam] with ℵ f. 35 111 130 f. 178 200.

Although an adherent of the readings favoured by 40, we never find the 90 group alone with that MS. See ix. 9, xi. 19, xv. 3, xvii. 3, xx. 6, xxii. 2.

Alone with 36:

xviii. 22. +και (ante πασης τεχνης) 90-246 with 36 and 146 and ps-Ambr. This is quite an ancient reading.

GROUP 10-17-37-49-77-91-96-110-150-(154)-157-160/1-187-190-192-202-212-221-223/4-227/8/9/30-(231)-232-(233)-242-243-244-250.

Apoc. 91.

Apoc. 91 (P. 263 Scr., P. 293 Greg.) = Rom. Vat. gr. 1209, the more modern part of the great Codex B of the Vatican. [Scr. 91. Greg. 91, new 1957. Sod. α 1574].

Gregory says "guter text." It may be true, but it isn't generally what he means by "guter text," as it approximates fairly closely to the text. recept., being without any doubt one of the handful of pure "Complutensian" text MSS., and the companion of 10, 17, 37, 49, 77 and 96, this making the seventh of the group, to which add as above. Used by Tischendorf in his notes, but not exhaustively.

Changing symbols.

This younger (XIV–XV. cent.) supplement to the Vatican Codex B must not be confused with B of the Apoc., sometimes known as Q, and so designated by Tregelles (followed in this by Weiss and Bousset), but, as Tischendorf calls it B throughout his VIII[th] edition, followed in this by Gregory in the Prolegomena, we have considered it best to do so too. Bousset calls this "missverständlich" of Tischendorf, but it is much more missverständlich to be for ever changing symbols and numbers, as Gregory has done for us.

The modern portion of the Roman codex extends from p. 1519 (Heb. ix. 14) to p. 1536, the Apocalypse being contained between pp. 1523 and 1536.

Compluten-sian edition.

The MS. should have been fairly well known before now, but its readings, always subordinated to the fascinating character of the elder portion, have been not only neglected, but, even Delitzsch, who professed to make a study of the sources of the Complutensian Polyglot, did not at all realize its importance in this connection. His notes in Handschriftliche Funde, zweites Heft (Leipzig, 1862), are almost puerile concerning the whole subject, but had he realized what a thoroughly Complutensian text this MS. 91 has, we feel quite sure he would have emphasized it more. In fact, the curious thing is that in the whole controversy concerning the MSS. used by the Compl. editors, and whether any Vatican MSS. were lent them, including B (as was at one time supposed), no one ever called attention to the character of this text of the Apoc., or a strong, but specious, argument might have been drawn from it. As a matter of fact, I do not believe Stunica saw this MS., though it belongs absolutely to the Compl. family 10 17 37 96; it has a good many readings peculiar to itself, none of which influenced him, nor has it any of the readings still peculiar to the Compl. text, and which we still expect will turn up in another MS. Again, there are cases where the whole Compl. group, including 91, does not agree with the Compl. text, which is another reason for believing that another MS. of this group was used.† But we are anticipating.

I have collated from the phototype edition of 1904, which is rather trying to the eyes, and very much inferior for such use to the direct photographs I have been using of other MSS.

There is no use made of iota postscript, and iota subscript is only twice used throughout the Apoc., viz. at iii. 18 περιβάλλῃ and v. 9 ᾄδουσιν. It is not used with ᾅδης, nor with αδουσι elsewhere (xiv. 3; xvi. 3, where we have ἀδουσϊ). The forms ειδον, λαοδικειαν and φιλαδελφειαν etc., are constant.

The usual contractions are used most consistently, there being no exceptions in the first thirteen chapters. Later we notice:

xiii. 15.	πνευμα in full	xvi. 9.	ανθρωποι primo loco in full
xvi. 13, 14.	πνευματα in full	21.	ανθρωποι in full xviii. 2.	πνευματος in full	xvii. 14.	κ̄ς̄ κυριων and at xix. 16.
xx. 1.	ουρανου in full

† Note also such a place as ix. 15 — και ημεραν ℵ 1-208 and Compl. alone (again establishing the very close relations of 1 and Compl.), and showing large divergence from 10 17 37 91 96 etc., some of these reading + την (ante ημεραν) and emphasizing thus.

ιερουσαλημ is written in full xxi. 2, but not xxi. 10 nor elsewhere. ιωαννης is contracted (thus: ιη̄) at i. 2, but not elsewhere. υιος and cases always in full.

The inscription is by a later hand than the MS. There is no subscription.

Erasmus has been much blamed and often, for using but one MS. for his edition, but in principle his No. 1 agrees, curiously enough, in the main, with the Complutensian group 10 17 37 91 96, which so far is restricted to these MSS. as regards the pure and consistent type. And the textus receptus came about from the connection of Erasmus and Apoc. 1 with Ximenes and his Complutensian group. This Compl. type is grouping itself more and more with C and A and P, as against B and ℵ and ℵB. On the other hand, note xii. 5 ηρπαγη with ℵ etc. and Compl., xiv. 6 ευαγγελισασθαι with (ℵ) etc. and Compl.

But, for all that, we believe the opening up of this MS. materially helps the problem. The Complutensian group is the key to the P revision, and the P revision, so moderate and conservative, was almost entirely independent of the B recension, although fully as old. Remembering that the Compl. group is opposed to the B revision as a whole, we must recognize that the textus receptus of 1 10 17 37 91 and 96 is in the main much older than the VIII[th] century. We find such evidence as this: alone with all the uncials except B at P recension.

xvi. 4. —εις sec. ℵCAP f. 10 f. 21 etc. Compl.

and again

xiii. 4. +και (ante τις sec.) ℵCABP f. 1 f. 10 f. 21 22 f. 34 36 f. 38 47 etc. Compl.

In order to check possible errors of the uncials we find this group useful too, e.g. xxi 24 —και την τιμην of ℵAP and a powerful group, but not by the Compl. group.

With space we could exhibit some lists making all this clearer.

Note:

ix. 11. ἀβαδδὼν of t.r. is read by ℵAP and 91 almost alone against the countless variations of other MSS., including the Compl. group.

from which it will readily be seen that 91 is not the best exponent of the group. All are errors. Agreement with some others here and there is purely fortuitous.

We will now indicate the few places where 91 is found alone with other single MSS., which will throw the matter into greater relief if we take this phase after the exhibition of his solecisms:

vii. 13. —εκ with ℵ 111 130 176[non 206] 216[non 169].
iii. 8. εχει (pro εχεις) with 1 (Del.) 80 102* 138 152-179*.

xv. 5. —της σκηνης with 90[non fam].
xviii. 13. —και προβατα with 13? (q.v.).

This simply shows that no MS. outside the larger Compl. group influenced our MS. in an important way, these changes being more or less fortuitous.

Alone with two or three:

ii. 17. εκ (pro απο) with ℵ and a few, but no other Compl. MSS.
vi. 1. φωνην pro φωνης with ℵ 26 36 61 100 107 125 130 159 203 207 220.
x. 1. στυλος* with f. 38 f. 46 67-120 164-166.

Among the "larger" Compl. groupings will be found prominent 12, 21, 28, also 36; less often 16, 22, 34 and 35.

As regards 12 we have written very fully elsewhere, but this agreement of 1 12 fam 10 cannot be overlooked, bridging as it were the gulf that was supposed to separate Erasmus and Stunica from ℵ.

† Apoc. 40-210 with part of f. 21 alone omits τιμιω, and we find 25 40 and 94 with 91 just above xxi. 13 reading και απο δυσμων..και απο βορρα..και απο νοτου..in this unusual order, so that there may be some obscure family connection with 40 hereabouts. We also find the relationship again at ix. 9 —ιππων with 9 16 18 27 29 40 (47) (non 10 17 37 96). Again more closely at xi. 19 κυριου (pro αυτου prim.) with B 7 18 40 45 90, whereas Compl. and Compl. group has του κυριου. However, I do not believe the scribe of 91 consulted any reliable documents.

GROUP 14-92 (interpenetrating all groupings), to which add now 201 partially.

Apoc. 92 (= Evan. 61. Act. 34. P. 40) in the library of Trinity Coll., Dublin, A. 4. 21, formerly G. 97, the famous Codex Montfortianus, containing at 1 John v. 7, 8, the clause of the three witnesses. [Scr. 92. Greg. 92, new 61. Sod. δ 603]. Apoc. 92.

The Apoc. collated in 1906 from photographs kindly supplied to me by the courtesy of the Librarian, and of the assistant librarian Mr. de Burgh. [xv/xvi].

After chapter v. 1 there are no marginal corrections to speak of; previously the MS. is full of them, mostly by the scribe or a contemporary. Only two or three by a later hand. Iota subscript is employed, but very partially. Contractions are not consistent, and θεος is very often written in full. The semicolon of interrogation occurs once (xvii. 7).

The form ιδον is nearly constant, however, and ν εφελκ., except towards the end, is almost constant. Herein the MS. differs a great deal from its sister 14. By chapter v already I had come to the conclusion that neither MS. was copied from the other, which impression has gained ground as I proceeded, and I close the examination quite satisfied that the two MSS. were merely derived from a common exemplar. In 92, for instance, the large numerals are given always in figures (i.e. letters), whereas in 14 the words are written out in full. An element of ℵ and of B comes in to 92 not accounted for in 14, whereas mistakes of 14 are not reproduced in 92, and so on. Of the two, 92 favours an older exemplar by writing ν εφελκ. perpetually, and far more than the scribe of 14; further, the form it takes is frequently the sign < above the line for the termination εν, which would be manifestly inconsistent if the scribe of 92 were copying the final open ε of 14. Contrariwise at viii. 6, e.g. σαλπισωσιν with ν εφελκ. is the reading of 14, whereas 92 has plainly σαλπῑσωσῑ in full without contraction, and without the superfluous ν.

The passage in viii. 7 is practically conclusive that neither MS. was copied from the other, and the (unique) των ανδρων of 92 [for των δενδρων of the t.r. (for which 14 substitutes της γης)] passes without any correction. As to viii. 7 δενδρων, ἀνδρων or γης.

Such things as iv. 5 του θρονου αυτου· και with 14 alone, instead of του θρονου αἱ εἰσι might point to a direct copy, but in the previous verse 92 writes κδ twice for εικοσι και τεσσαρες and εικοσι και τεσσαρας, whereas 14 has the words in full, less the και, pointing in the contrary direction, and merely to a common origin.

We will waste no further space on these special considerations here, but refer to the complete "exposé," chapter by chapter, which speaks for itself, in our manuscript deposited with the University of Michigan, so that no further questionings can arise in the future for any who care to control the matter. It is too long to print.

What we may refer to here, however, is the side-light thrown on the connections of both 14 and 92 by this examination. In the first place, they are distinctly of the B group, yet partaking also of the P revision, having also quite an element of ℵ—(and of old ℵ* at that, as a rule)—as well as reproducing some of the idiosyncracies of A.

Of the cursives, it is easy to see a family-likeness to 1 and its followers, but by no means a slavish one.

But really 14-92 is a composite document, which interpenetrates all groups.

Thus we find 1 12 14 17 f. 21 31 36 92 etc. together sometimes in combination as at xvi. 17 εις cum t.r. Of single elements the most constant adherent is 36.

When we come to the individual sympathies of 14 and 92 themselves, we find such MSS. as 18 and f. 21 nearer 92 than to 14.

The idiosyncracies of 12 are so numerous that it is not surprising to find it joining our MSS. from time to time.

Here is another group:

vii. 7. ἰσσάχαρ cum ℵAP 1 7 18 29 36 45 93 98, non 14.

Again:

xix. 10. —του (ante ιησου sec.) cum ℵABP 1 14 17 18 21 36 95.

Tabulating the differences in synopsis, we arrive at this result: Of unique readings 92 has a score, including no less than three in the first chapter (i. 2, 7, 9), and the most interesting is found at viii. 7. Besides this, there are some fifteen more in chs. xxi., xxii., where Ap. 14 is not available for comparison, viz. xxi. 8, 10, 16 (two), 17, 18, 20, 22; xxii. 1, 2 (two), 3 (two), 8, 19, the most noteworthy being at xxii. 1.

Notice next, peculiar cases of agreement of 14-92 with all the uncials and a very few cursives:

x. 8. λαλουσαν ℵCABP 7 12 33 36 45 67 [non 69] 81 111 f. 114 al.
ibid. λεγουσαν ℵCABP 7 12 [non 33] 36 45 67 69 81 111 114 al.
xix. 5. αινειτε τω θεω ℵCABEP 9 12 27 36 41 42 43 53 67 f. 73 82 108 al.

And again with 92 [non 14]:

xiii. 14. ὃς (pro ὃ) CABEP f. 21 f. 34 36 59 67 f. 114 al. pc., but both 14-92 together again without ℵ at:

xv. 4. —σε CABP 1 12 f. 21 22 36 f. 46 47 55* 59 f. 62/3 67 al.

Beyond this, in seeking for closer affiliations, we find:

92 is practically alone with B twice
14-92 are practically alone with B four times
14 is practically alone with B not once

92 is practically alone with C not once
14-92 are practically alone with C not once
14 is practically alone with C once

92 is practically alone with A not once
14-92 are practically alone with A twice
14 is practically alone with A not once

92 is practically alone with ℵ not once
14-92 are practically alone with ℵ once
14 is practically alone with ℵ not once

92 is practically alone with CA not once
14-92 are practically alone with CA once
14 is practically alone with CA not once

92 is practically alone with ℵB not once
14-92 are practically alone with ℵB once
14 is practically alone with ℵB not once.

So much for the uncials alone up to xx. 15.

In ch. xxi., xxii., where 14 is wanting, we find

92 practically alone with B once
92 practically alone with P once.

Therefore the relation as a whole is found to be five times with B, twice with A, once with ℵ, once with C (14 alone), once with P (92 alone available); and once with CA and ℵB.

As regards the cursives:

92 alone with 18 once
14-92 alone with 18 three times
14 alone with 18 once

92 alone with 36 not once
14-92 alone with 36 three times
14 alone with 36 not once

92 alone with 38 once
14-92 alone with 38 twice
14 alone with 38 not once

We summarize the relationship of 18, 36 and 38 as apparently being the closest so far, to which add the following combinations, containing these:

B 14-92 18 97 once
A 14-92 18 once
ℵ 14-92 f. 16 f. 21 36 f. 95 once
ℵ 14-92 f. 38 (95) once
ℵB 14-92 12 f. 17 f. 21 36 f. 95 once ℵB 14-92 f. 38 once
B 14-92 f. 38 once
A 14-92 8 36 once
CA 14-92 f. 34 f. 38 f. 95 once 14-92 f. 1 f. 4 f. 7 19 26 36 once 14-92 12 36 f. 38 once
14-92 9 (36) once
14-92 f. 1 f. 7 12 f. 23 f. 34 36 once.

It will be noticed that in the above B comes in again four times,† ℵ four times, A three times, and C once, the relative proportions agreeing about as before. Now, to these have to be added the places where 14 and 92 disagreeing, support is forthcoming from the same codices; but all this will be seen fully tabulated in vol. II.

I forbear to swell this with a long account which I had prepared of the idiosyncracies of these two MSS. chapter by chapter. Their testimony will be found winding in and out of every possible combination.

In brief, therefore, Apoc. 14 and 92 (chiefly 92) have all the elements of an old text, subject to a severe revision later, so severe that in addition to many readings of B, and even of B and B, we have also a trace of the moderate independent P; and also we find untouched or revived many stupid slips and grammatical errors or idiosyncracies, long since discarded in the Church. While the text conforms in some respects to the t.r., it is a somewhat vicious and light-hearted recension of it, and the scribe of 92 himself (or his forerunner) was careless enough to import or invent some new and grotesque readings. Chief of these seem to be:

viii. 7. ανδρων for δενδρων
ix. 15. ουρανων for ανθρωπων (αστερων 113* !)
xxi. 16. —και το υψος αυτης ισα εστι (—και το υψος αυτης 200 Beat.).

† Consult also B at such passages as xii. 16.

xxi. 19. —κεκοσμημενοι with P† 111 143 gig Prim. Tyc 2. Beat. arm.
xxii. 1. στοματος for θρονου now found in 111 200 (Regno Prim. =ουρανου).
2. —ζωης So 111 (Cass.), and xiv. 14. κεφαλην for νεφελην with 14 f. 21 22 f. 178 216[non 169], as well as reproducing the form:

ix. 11.	αβλαδδων	of 14.
and xi. 9.	το σωμα for τα πτωματα sec. (So boh^BCN^).
xvi. 16.	μακεδδων (So boh^EFG^).
xviii. 13.	ψυχων for σωματων (σωματων και ψυχων 108 164 176-206 boh only).

The change at xix. 5 του ουρανου (for του θρονου) with B 103-112 [contra rel. fam] and Prim. is in another class.

Relationship of 201.

Very late along we come across 201 (the second Meteora MS.) which draws near to 14-92 in a number of places, but never alone, showing that this conjunction is not of malice prepense. I give the places under Apoc. 201 q.v.

Note that after xviii. 7 up to xx. 15 we depend on Mill, Jackson and Wetstein for the readings of 14. At xviii. 7 Scrivener's collation ceases, the MS. now being more mutilated than at an earlier day. After xx. 15 only 92 is available.

† In this connection see the unnecessary change of order by 46-88-101 κεκοσμημενοι τιμιω, an indication of the origin of the dropping of the word. See the Crawford Syriac. 14-92 go back at least to that MS.

GROUP 93-128 (B family).

Apoc. 93 [P. 256 Scr.(=P. 290 Greg.)] =Lambeth 1186. [Scr. 93. Greg. 93, new 1955. Sod. α 119]. Collated by Scrivener in Supplement to Codex Augiensis and called a in Apoc. (e of the Paul. Ep.); see p. LXII. of his Introduction. Apoc. 93.

Scr. says "a fine copy 4° on vellum, 144 leaves, 23 lines to the page," and assigns it with Todd to the XIth cent. He claims that its critical value in the Epistles is the least of those at Lambeth, whereas in the Apoc. "it is indeed of singular weight and importance."

Begins Rom. xvi. 15 and ends at Apoc. xix. 4 αμην, with hiatus from 1 Cor. iv. 19 to vi. 1 (one leaf); also from x. 1-21 (one leaf); from Hebr. iii. 14–ix. 19; and from Apoc. xiv. 16–xv. 7 (one leaf).

No iota sub., but quite frequent iota adscript. Itacisms scarce.

His collation embodied, in my synopsis, speaks for itself, and its relationship can be traced under the heads of our other MSS.

GROUP 25-58-70-78-84-94-207.

Apoc. 94 (Ev. 201. Ac. 91. P. 104) =London, B.M. additl. 11837, formerly B.M. Butler 2. [Scr. 94. Greg. 94, new 201. Sod. δ 403]. Apoc. 94.

Scrivener published collations in supplement to Codex Augiensis (see p. LXIII, Introduction) of Acts, Epistles and Apoc., the Acts and Epistles being represented by the letter h, and the Apoc. by the letter b. He had previously published a collation of the Gospels in his "Collation of about 20 Greek MSS. of the Holy Gospels, etc.," Cambridge, 1853, under the letter m (see p. XLIV. of that Introduction), where it is more fully described.

The MS. was purchased from the heirs of Bishop Butler. It is a "folio" vol. on 492 leaves in a large clear hand; Catholic Ep. follow the Acts. At the end of Hebrews is a subscription with date 6866 (=A.D. 1357). The Apoc., apparently in the same hand, follows this subscription and date, and "abounds in various readings," in fact it contains "more than all the Gospels put together." I am quoting from the Introduction to Scrivener's "Gospels." In the Introd. to Cod. Aug. he says "the various readings in the Apoc., like those of Lambeth 1186 (Apoc. 93), being of great value." The collation, reproduced in our synopsis, must determine whether these two statements agree. It also shows the relationship of 94 with our other MSS., referred to in many places in this Introduction. It belongs absolutely to the group 19-25-58-70-78-84-94-207.

The volume, Scrivener continues, was originally at Florence, and is described by Birch (N.T., Prol., p. LIV.), referred to by Wetstein, Griesbach and Scholz, but really unknown till Scrivener's day. See under the other members of the group, and particularly under 70.

STRICT GROUP 95-127-215 +172-217 and 159 partim.
Add 61-126-218-219 +164-166 partim.

Apoc. 95.

Apoc. 95 (g Scr.) = "Parham 17" of Scrivener's Introduction to Codex Augiensis (p. LXXII, Introduction), or more correctly no doubt "Parham 82. 17." Gregory calls it "Curzon 82. 17." [Scr. 95. Greg. 95, new 2040. Sod. $A\rho^{11}$]. Scrivener says "Parham No. 17 I believe to yield in value and importance to no copy of the Apoc. except the three uncials." Gregory says "Vorzüglicher text." The collation, faithfully reproduced in our synopsis, speaks for itself. The praise seems rather exaggerated, especially as Scrivener and Gregory are supposed to represent opposite poles of critical thought on this subject!† But its relative 61 has already stood out prominently and been dealt with in this Introduction. As to the rest of the family see beyond.

Mr. Curzon obtained the MS. 95 in 1837 at Caracalla on Mt. Athos (Curzon's "Monasteries in the Levant," p. 350). It is on 16 leaves of vellum, 4° shape, the 12th and 13th leaves being misplaced. It breaks off at xx. 11 και τοπος. Iota adscript is uniformly used, never omitted and often wrongly inserted. Breathings are very capricious with a tendency towards the hard breathing. Words are repeatedly written twice over, some five cases of homoioteleuton, and about fifty itacisms. The Apoc. is surrounded by a commentary (also by the scribe) of Arethas, and Scrivener dates the codex between the XIth and XIIth centuries. The second hand changes are "early."

Apoc. 61 at Paris, collated subsequently, we now find agrees absolutely with 95 in nearly all its so far unique readings, and generally as a whole, but not entirely, up to chapter xi, where the agreement ceases. Apoc. 61 is also quarto in shape with some scholia in marg., and occupies 13 leaves, breaking off at xxii. 8, so it is about the same size as 95, and they were evidently copied from another similar MS.

It may be interesting to reproduce Curzon's remarks.

"The library I found to be a dark closet near the entrance to the church; it had been locked up for many years, but the agoumenos made no difficulty in breaking the old-fashioned padlock by which the door was fastened. I found upon the ground and upon some broken down shelves about four or five hundred volumes, chiefly printed books; but amongst them, every now and then, I stumbled upon a MS. Of these there were about thirty on vellum and fifty or sixty on paper. I picked up a single loose leaf of very ancient uncial Greek characters, part of the gospel of St. Matthew, written in small square letters, and of small 4to. size. I searched in vain for the volume to which this leaf belonged.

Jam-pot story.

As I had found it impossible to purchase any MSS. at St. Laura, I feared that the same would be the case in other monasteries; however, I made bold to ask for this single leaf as a thing of small value. "Certainly!" said the agoumenos: "what do you want it for?"

My servant suggested that, perhaps, it might be useful to cover some jam pots or vases of preserves which I had at home.

"Oh!" said the agoumenos, "take some more"; and, without more ado, he seized upon an unfortunate thick quarto MS. of the Acts and Epistles, and drawing out a knife, cut out an inch thickness of leaves at the end before I could stop him. It proved to be the Apocalypse, which concluded the volume...it was of the XIth century..."

The last leaf was probably left in the volume, as this MS., Apoc. 95, is wanting at the end.

It is impossible to say what early treasures the monasteries on Mount Athos contained in the XIIth century, when such MSS. were copied, but evidently up to a comparatively late date † Tregelles, Alford and Hort also thought it "one of the best cursive MSS. of the Apoc.," but it turns out to be a very particular recension of good critical value, but cannot be characterised in general terms of approval or disapproval.

there was material enough on Athos alone to reconstruct the history of the text. Alas now, long since gone to make fleeting covers for preserve jars and then to the rubbish pile or otherwise destroyed and disposed of.

This MS. 95 is very interesting for the history of the text, and is claimed by both schools of textual criticism. It should be studied in detail. For the present we will call attention to the fact that it is rather eclectic, but undoubtedly takes us back to the early part of the III[rd] century.

See xvii. 6 alone with Hippolytus +του (ante ιησου) So the sisters 127-215, and 159. Again xviii. 6 διπλασατε alone with Hipp. (So some others, but not the sisters).

Then again with Hipp. and other few:

Its cousinly group 61-126-219 reads alone with Hipp. xviii. 5 —αυτης prim.

Hippolytus and echoes of early times.

Alas, alas, where is this Hippolytus' codex that f. 61 and f. 95 were copied from?

95-127-215 is the only cursive group with 111 146 200 to join ℵAB in reading δαιμονιων at xviii. 2, undoubtedly the wrong reading, and unsupported by Hippolytus. Again, it alone supports the transposition of ℵCAP at xviii. 14 σου της επιθυμιας της ψυχης with 130 only against Hippolytus. Here is a key then between ℵCAP and Hippolytus.

To show how minutiæ may help in these matters, we close with a curious thing.

As to xviii. 13.

In Apoc. xviii. 13 Hippolytus gives us the gratuitous and unique addition και τραγους after και κτηνη και προβατα and before και ιππων. Whence this addition in the accusative? Impossible to say. See the Arabic alone below † reproduces this traditional reading.

Now f. 95 with 56 130 159 200 alone give us ιππους with *syr*SΣ. Ergo ιππους occurred in a very early MS. of Hippolytus' time, for 56 is of independent parentage going back of Aleph's time, and f. 95, as we see, represents an Hippolytus codex.

I think Hippolytus' codex must have read ιππους, and while he was thinking of the constituent biblical parts of κτηνη and the counterpart of προβατα, his mind thinking of goats and his eye seeing ιππους, he possibly wrote in και τραγους. Yet in Galland. and in Lagarde's edition it is succeeded by ιππων. A small matter, but helpful in placing 56 and f. 95 where they belong, namely among the codices with an exceptionally strong flavour of the earliest times.

Now compare f. 61 and f. 95 in spots with the Crawford Syriac.

Note some lurking basic sympathy with the numerically large and important recension to follow: f. 119, e.g.:

vi. 1. —ενος So only 61 95 f. 119 126 (146) 218 219.
xix. 16. —αυτου So only 12 f. 61 119* 251 Aug.

Again:

xvii. 11. —και sec. 55* 95 f. 119 121 and Hipp.

Lastly please refer to 127 and 215 the sisters of 95, and to the group 61-126-218-219 part sister and part cousin (for the first half of the Apoc. differs somewhat from the second part in these two groups), and further observe the agreement in some of the old readings in 159 164-166 and 172-217.

† "Et pecora" say Prim. and Beat., but Tyc 2: et equorum et rhedarum et porcorum (some MSS. "pardorum"). The Arabic grabs from everywhere and adds "of camels" besides arietum: "Et jumentorum et arietum et equorum et mulorum et camelorum." The Sahidic ($^1/_4$) had "and mule-colt."

BELONGS TO THE COMPLUTENSIAN GROUP.

Apoc. 96.

Apoc. 96 (h Scr.) = Parham 2. (See Scrivener: App. to Codex Augiensis, p. LXXIII Introduction). In his Introduction to the Criticism of the N.T., third edition, he refers to it as "Parham 67. 2," and, whereas Gregory ("gesehen 4 Mai 1883") says Curzon 93. 2, he adds "28 scheint die richtige nummer zu sein." A pretty muddle of numbers! But doubtless not hard to identify. [Scr. 96. Greg. 96, new 2041. Sod. α 1475].

The MS. contains only the Apoc., but complete, on glazed paper, 4° shape, 22 leaves, 28 lines to a page, in a neat hand. Scrivener and Gregory assign it to XIVth cent. This MS., like 95, also came from Caracalla. There is a scrawling subscription, without date. Marginal glosses in a later hand. Iota subscript used very sparingly, but six times, always with ᾄδῃς and ᾄδουσιν; iota adscript never. [In this connection compare Apoc. 91]. Scrivener adds that the MS. "is remarkable for coming nearer to the Elzevir text than perhaps any other in existence." In this he is not exact, for it approximates the Elzevir text only inasmuch as, while it agrees with our received text as a whole, it really belongs to the strict Complutensian group 10, 17, 37, and 91, as may be seen at once on referring to the collation reproduced from the Cod. Augiensis Appendix in our synopsis, and which neither Scrivener nor Delitzsch has noticed. It is only when we bring all the MSS. together, and compare with a common standard, that the family groups can be made to stand out in all their nakedness, and had I done nothing else, I flatter myself this one group alone was worth digging out, showing, as it does, the connection as well between Apoc. 1 and the Complutensian group, and the double origin of our "received text," now revealed in all its bearings to the known uncials, patristic and version testimony, and shedding innumerable sidelights on many vexed questions, especially that of the P readings (which seem to have constituted a simultaneous and much more modest revision than the B recension), and drawing attention to the archaic character of this "received text" represented by family 1 and family 10 in its frequent agreement alone with ℵCAP (without B).

True grouping as against pure guesses.

GROUP 97-122-214.

Apoc. 97.

Apoc. 97 { (Ev. 584. A. 228. P. 269 Scr.) / (Ev. 498. A. 198. P. 255 Greg.) } = Br. Mus. add. 17469. [Scr. 97. Greg. 97, new 498. Sod. δ 402].

Not collated in Gospels, Acts or Epistles, and only in the Apoc. by Scrivener, and known as j Scr. in App. to Codex Augiensis (see p. LXXIV. of the Introduction).

Bought for the British Museum of T. Rodd, bookseller, in 1848. Small folio in form, of 186 leaves of vellum, 35 lines to a page, "not much earlier than XIVth cent." Writing neat and small. No instances of ν ἐφελκ., and but few itacisms. Iota subscript regular and perpetual, but not with ᾳδῃς or ῳδῃν, and occurring wrongly four times. Scrivener adds "this copy is of great value and full of interesting variations from the general mass, especially in the earlier chapters." He compares it to 29 and 31, but we find that it has a much nearer neighbour, viz. 38 (q.v.), especially in "a tendency to omit the article," noticed by Scrivener; a form of latinism and sometimes of euphony, as I take it. Notice its proper place and weight in the full synopsis of all readings, where it is now joined by two sister MSS. 122 at Rome and 214 at Athos, which serve for admirable control. See under those two documents beyond.

An examination of the Crawford Syriac reveals many very old readings in this group of MSS.

GROUP 29-30-98-129.

Apoc. 98 { (Ev. 488. A. 211. P. 249 Scr.) / (Ev. 522. A. 200. P. 257 Greg.) } = Oxford, Bodl. canon. græc. 34. [Scr. 98. Greg. 98, new 522. Sod. δ 602]. Apoc. 98.

Scrivener collated the Apoc. alone in App. to Codex Augiensis and calls it k; see his Introduction, p. LXXV.

One of a large series of Greek MSS. purchased for the Bodleian Library in 1817 at Venice.

This MS. is on 319 leaves of paper, with 25 lines to a page. A subscription at the end dates the MS. 1516. Gregory and Scrivener compare the text to Apoc. 30, a MS. at Wolfenbüttel, and known to us previously from Knittel's and Matthaei's published readings, a MS. supposed to belong to the "Complutensian" group, yet only, as regards 30 and 98 in the larger sense (see under Apoc. 91). The readings of 98, in their agreement with other codices, have already been taken up under various heads previously, and Scrivener's assurance that the scribe did not use Erasmus' first edition of 1516 is hardly necessary.

There is a lacuna from ii. 11-23, but the text runs on smoothly, without sign of omission; and there are many cases of homoioteleuton. Iota subscript is present. "Corrections are few and seem p.m." "The Apoc. begins on the same page as the Cath. epistles end, with a simple capital letter in red." Scrivener means that the MS. has no inscription (as stated at the head of his collation). A full recapitulation of all its readings will be found in our synopsis. For a late MS. it is worth study, evidently based on a much earlier copy of rather exceptional character.

Now see back in our Introduction to Apoc. 30, in which MS., however, there is no lacuna ii. 11-23. They are certainly sister MSS., although 30 was copied much earlier.

It is an old text pretty thoroughly revised on B and Arethas lines.

An important omission occurs at xxii. 9-10 with only 102 and gigas, which carries the parent of this MS. back to the very earliest times.

The group (in special peculiarities) now becomes 29-30-98-129, the latter a MS. which I acquired in the East and have since presented to the Pierpont Morgan Library, where it can be consulted. So far I think it is the only Greek MS. of the Apocalypse in America.

For further particulars see under 129.

GROUP 21 etc., but 99 is much the closest MS. to 170.

Apoc. 99. Apoc. 99 (Ac. 83. P. 93) = Naples II. AA. 7. [Scr. 99. Greg. 99, new 88? Sod. α 200]. Greg. XII (al. X vel XI).

This is only a fragment, beginning i. 1 and ending at iii. 13 fin., on folios 122 and 123. Gregory says nothing of this under the Apoc., merely saying under Act. 83 "mut. post Apoc. 3?)." It is a pity we have not the whole MS. as it would be a golden key to unlock the group 21-28-73-79 etc. Older than most of these MSS. (it is a bi-columnar MS. of XIIth cent. in a poor hand, with many contractions), and while having many readings peculiar to this group (see further on), it goes back beyond the family, has no commentary, and gives us readings drawn from antiquity, such as can alone be traced in A, ℵ etc. While emphasizing the peculiarities of group 21, it abandons them in places, but gives us further proof not only that this group is of Egyptian origin, but also that ℵ was written in that country.

The writing is peculiar. We have to be careful, and f°. 123 is in bad condition. ει is very like η, and must not be confounded with it. See numerous places, but especially iii. 7 κλει (illeg.; prob. κλειων) και κλεῖ. This looks exactly like κλη, but the scribe intends κλειῶν.

At i. 7 we find apparently μετα του νεφελον, but on closer inspection it will be found to be [μετα των νεφελων].

At i. 8 we might almost quote " —λεγει," for τελος and λεγει seem to be merged. Here please note 170 (see beyond) 200 Hipp. and Tert. are without λεγει.

At ii. 7 we find τ̄ ικωντι for τῶ νικῶντι!

Note further εαυτους is always ἑάυτους. At ii. 18 we find υἱος, thus: ῡῑς̄, which is an early form.

At i. 11 we find agreement with ℵ alone and 170 of this family +το ante βιβλιον, but thus: εἰσ̄ βιβλιον.

The first verse of ch. i. as far as ταχει is given as an inscription. (Hence the way the verse is arranged in such MSS. as 79 and others). Then there is a very large K in the margin to και ἐσημανεν, with which the text proper is meant to begin, though κεφ. ά is not marked until i. 4.

Tischendorf quotes this MS. for the first eight verses of ch. i., but apparently not afterwards, which is misleading.

Now, as regards the analysis.

The new readings are:

i. 1. τῶ δοῦλου omitted by Tisch. (This seems to trace to the του δουλου of A alone).
8. αρχη και το τελος The omission of ἡ before αρχη is perhaps a slip, but 170 again agrees.† Otherwise, with the rest of the family.
ibid. fin. παντοκρατορ So 113 143 218 236 241.
11. εν σαρδεσι (pro εἰς σάρδεις) omitted by Tisch. (with all the readings after this). This is quite new, but is confirmed by 170 [ℵ and 97* omit altogether και εις σαρδεις].
12. τίς (pro ἥτις) Confirmed by 170 200.
13. ενδεδημενον ut vid. So 145 156 207.
ibid. ποδήριν (Nearest approach is ποδηρην A, ποδηρι 36).
16. ειχων ut vid. pro εχων (ειχεν ℵ f. 34 h gig Prim.).
17. την χειρα αυτου την δεξιαν So 154.
20. [και αι επτα λυχνιαι ας ειδες] εκκλησιαι (—επτα ult.) εισι
ii. 3. ἔσχες ut vid. pro εχεις
16. ἴδε (pro εἰ δε) Showing probable copy from an uncial.
24. οσοι ουκ εχουσι την διδαχην ταυτην bis script.
This shows pretty clearly the confusion in this family, which resulted in the following reading: ὅσοι pro οἵτινες of fam 21 alone.
iii. 5. περιβαλιβαλῆται sic.

† See under 170, a very important member of the group and of the XIth century.

For the rest, as there are so few verses to consider, we can run through the chapters seriatim.

At i. 1. We at once strike the family note with δι' αγγελου.
2. —του θεου with the family.
2/3. The addition is the same as in fam 21 with 23 38 f. 46 49 55 al. pc. except that ατινα has twice the smooth breathing, but correct breathings were not our scribe's forte. He writes ἑάυτος and cases thus always, and once οὐκ.
At i. 4. We find τῶν (pro ἁ εστιν) with ℵA 47 73*-79-103-112-135-138-139-170-221 and 80, as against 21-28 and the mass. Thus early we connect ℵA 47 with this basic text, or rather this text with their base.
ibid. του θεου (pro αυτου fin.) alone with the 21 group.
5. [αγαπησαντι]
ibid. λυσαντι
6. —των αιωνων with the 21 group +AP Oxyr[1079] and only a few others and boh.
7. αυτων ut vid. pro αυτου prim. [om. Tisch.] with 28 alone (140?).
9. συνκοινωνος [om. Tisch.] with ℵCP 12 79-139 140 and 200 only.
ibid. [Habet εν τη sec.] [om. Tisch.] Contra 21 group in its entirety [except 170] etc.
This is rather curious, especially as, immediately after, at:
11. [Habet εγω ειμι usque ad εσχατος και] omitted by 21 group [except 170] etc.
ibid. εἰσ̄ βιβλιον sic is instructive. +το is read by ℵ alone and 170, confirming what we said under verse 4.
ibid. we read εἰσ μύρναν with A 16 etc. Note 79* has εἰσ^σ μ̕ύρναν sic.
ibid. εν θυατηροις with 36 and f. 114 121 169-216 170 [cum t.r. 21 group]. Cf. ii. 18.
ibid. φιλαδελφιαν with 21-28-73 etc. Non 79.
12. [Abest εκει]
ibid. [ελαλησε] Contra 21 group etc. [non 170].
13. μασθοις So also 170. Contra μαζοις 21 group +A f. 10 etc.
14. ερειον with f. 7 12 121 149* 163 201 only (112). ibid. ωσει (pro ως) with 36 f. 38 100 106 113 f. 114 121 130 146-155 218 251 and 170 only. ibid. [Habet ως ante φλοξ] Contra 21 group alone [but not 170-191-220-221].
16. —ο (ante ηλιος) with 21-73-100-170 etc. Contra 28-79 and rest of family.
ibid. φαίνη with 36 98 233 (φαινι CA).
17. [επεσα] Contra 21 group etc. [non 170].
18. τας κλεις του θανατου και του ᾅδου. Contra 21 group +1 12 36 (62/3 72) which preserve order of t.r.
20. οὓς (pro ὧν) and so 170 with ℵCAP 1 f. 46 f. 62/3, 12 al. Er. Ald. Col. Contra 21 group and all the rest.

Thus with 170 we draw nigher to the Erasmian recension here than in the 21 group.

i. 20. +οι (ante αγγελοι) with 36 alone and 170.
ii. 1. εφεσιων (pro εφεσινης) with 1-208 f. 62/3 38 67-120 h against all others and the 21 group except 170 which agrees with 99. Again we see the Erasmian has a very old base.
2. —σου sec. with the 21 grouping +CAP f. 10 12 18 36 f. 46 67-120 113 130 gig Compl., but immediately following:

3. +με (post εβαστασας) with 170. Contra 21 group etc., and with P f. 7 f. 46 only.

9. —την sec. with 21 group +12 114 152-179 only.

10. ὧν (pro ἃ) with 17 67-120 251 and 103-112-170-191-220-221 of the 21 group (ὣ 28, ὃ 21-73-79-139).

11. εκ του δευτερου θανατου with most of 21 group including 170.

14. —των (ante υιων)?? Owing to mutilation cannot be certain of this.

17. [φαγειν απο]

18. εν θυατηροις with P 21 etc. (non 28) [Cf. i. 11].

Explicit iii. 13 fin.

Now from the above it will readily be seen that this MS. as a whole would have been valuable to throw out the misdemeanours of the 21 group, and some of those of the 1 group. At any rate, as far as it goes, while emphasizing the old base of these, with that of 59 67 etc., it condemns these. The absence of such MSS. as 47 and 56 from the combinations is noteworthy and helpful for those who know how to read the lesson aright. We must now rely on 170 for the rest of the 99 recension.

Add to the 21-28-73-79-99 combination the latter half of 100, and let us pass on.

Belongs to GROUP 21 partially after ch. xi. Eclectic previously and very unreliable, but has old bases.

Apoc. 100 = Naples, gr. II. AA. 10. [Scr. 100. Greg. 100, new 2042. Sod. $A\nu^{400}$]. Apoc. 100.

This is a copy of the Apoc. with commentary of Andreas surrounding it, in large format, in a good hand of XIVth century or earlier [Greg. XIV or XV] on 27 leaves, numbered 115 to 141, so that the codex doubtless contains or did contain other matter. Gregory seems in doubt as to its identity with Tischendorf's 100, but I do not think there is any question about it, although Tischendorf seems only to have run through the first chapter and does not quote after ii. 2.

The inscription: αποκαλυψις ιῶ του θεολογου is of the simplest, with 9 14 91 92 97 and Stephen's edition, but Tischendorf omits to give it with the rest.

At i. 3, reading τον λογον with ℵB and 32 only, it bids fair early to be interesting. It is, however, most smoothly executed, and has not been the subject of revision by later hands. (Note δυναται sic a pr. man. ix. 20, about the only alternative reading given). We find ιωαννης contracted ιῶ in every place (i. 1, 4, 9; xxii. 8), the sign of a very respectable exemplar, as regards age. Other contractions are as usual, though υιος is sometimes in full, and πνευμα, ουρανος, ανθρωπος, κυριος and cases, occasionally given in full. ειδον passim, but φιλαδελφια once.

There is no iota post- or subscript. Nu is written in four ways, and twice can be confounded with upsilon. It is very difficult to date this MS. accurately, but I think Gregory puts it a good deal too late.

The scribe's text flows smoothly and quietly, covering not only a very mixed text, but is intentionally eclectic and critical, and hence vicious in its very innocent smoothness. It appears plainly that the scribe had access to different texts in his library, for after ch. xi we reach a clear case of the copy which he used belonging to the 21 family, although previous to this the type was different. Thus, once more, do we exhibit the futility of partial collations, and the utter uselessness of Scholz', Soden's and others "cursim contuli." Futility of partial collations.

It is not even certain that omissions apparently caused by homoioteleuton were not in some cases more or less deliberate.

At any rate we have near a hundred fresh readings, some plausible enough like ἐκμέσαι iii. 16, others, like νυκτος for ημερας xxi. 25 utterly wrong, but whether intentional there, or caused by the νυξ following, it is not possible to say.

The type of the early chapters is of B with an admixture of 1 (the Erasmian family). It gradually abandons B, but the 1 type holds through, even beyond ch. xi to the end. The inscription with 9 14 91 92 97 is no guide, for the text of these MSS. only appears at rare intervals, and is only recognisable in minutiæ, as in σαρδειω, κρυσταλω etc. Even 32, appearing with ℵB at i. 3, only reoccurs a few times at long intervals, say at iv. 3, x. 6, xi. 2 etc. At iii. 12 we get our first proof of a 92 text (non 14). Now 92 is older than 14, and the text of all here is old, with ℵ 47 61 92 111 130 167 201 219 241*.

We find sins of ℵ and A revived or reproduced, both before and after ch. xi, but all this will be better seen in the lists to follow. Notice distinct doctrinal bias in the changes in ch. xii. Sins of ℵA.

As before pointed out the latter half is largely of the 21 family, yet not at the beginning, and it has no addition at i. 2/3 like that of this family or of others, nor for the first half, e.g. ii. 20 πολλα (pro ολιγα) by f. 21, but 100 omits ολιγα with CABP etc.; nor has 100 σαβαωθ at iv. 8 as have the group 21 with fam 7. Thrice it agrees (fortuitously?) with the 25 group [i. 11, vii. 4, xxii. 19] (and even χόρτον at ix. 4 has a kind of hook rather than an accent, reminding one of the error χοντον by 78 of this group), but the first conjunction of the 21 family—in the earlier half—is at vi. 8, where only fam 21 (+36 80 sah boh) agree in writing επι το τεταρτον μερος της γης αποκτειναι.

Thenceforward there is some agreement—partial, as at vi. 13 αποβαλλοῦσα by 100 and 200, and αποβαλοῦσα f. 38 and 109, against αποβαλλει (pro βαλλει) of f. 21 and 37; nearer, at vi. 16; vii. 2, 13; ix. 6, but only occasionally, and not till the xi[th] chapter do we get close agreement. After this it is very close, and it looks as if the scribe had taken another exemplar to copy from, yet at such a place as xi. 15 our MS. does not omit του κοσμου with the others, and it goes against them with ἄρκτου at xiii. 2, βλασφημιαν at xiii. 5, nor does it omit the clause ινα και λαλησῃ etc. at xiii. 15. It reads απαρτι at xiv. 13 against απο αρτι of the 21 group. It omits εκ των πληγων αυτης at xviii. 4, and reads λαβητε, while all the 21 family, but 21 itself, have και εκ των πληγων αυτης ινα μη βλαβητε. This, after being very close for several chapters, and again immediately afterwards, but for the unique changes. It does not have the addition at xviii. 14 fin., nor does it omit part of xxi. 23 with the 21 group. At xxi. 13 it gives a different order.

This MS. then, eclectic, and elastic in its interpretation to the last degree, yet affords a useful check on the other related MSS., and they on it, as to what is false in each, and what is careless, and what has other MS. authority. E.g. xxii. 11, where 100 has the clause και ο αγιος αγιασθητω ετι, which fam 21 and 92 omit. And again, where 100 adds εις τους αιωνας at xxii. 21, countenanced by no other MS. and only by (boh).

A vein of the Erasmian family (notably f. 46) runs through the whole. This is especially noticeable in the order of words agreeing with the textus receptus, where t.r. 100 and its few allies are almost certainly in error. This is interesting, occurring in this "bad" MS., and clinching the argument against this order.

But first let us exhibit the series of "new" readings to which our scribe has treated us:

New Readings.

License of the scribe.

Now, whereas ἐκμέσαι (iii. 16) is rather a good change, it is unsupported except by 106 154 210, a careful scrutiny of the above ninety passages will show an unbridled license on the part of our scribe. The most friendly codices, as tabulated, are 113 130 and 189, all severely critical and latinizing codices. It shows up enough in twenty-eight passages in the first ten chapters, and afterwards, as he copies a different exemplar (itself very loose), instead of improving, its vagaries tempt him to further and bolder improvisations, and he adds sixty to his other sins, reaching a climax at xxi. 25 with νυκτος (for ημερας), not a "monstrum" by any means, but a change any other scribe might have made, but did not.

If to these we add those passages (which follow) where, generally by chance, there is some other MS. support, we reach a very formidable total at this stage of the investigation.

Notice how the "incuria" (or worse) of ℵ and A is followed; also that of 12 40 46 72 etc., all bad examples, and, worst of all that of 57 (at xvii. 5) πονηρων for πορνων, which Colinæus (=57) does not have!

Yet it is a question whether at xii. 8 —αυτων and xiii. 5 —εξουσια, both with ℵ* alone, it is pure incuria or a trace of a basic text going back of ℵ itself. See for instance xvi. 13, where the transposition in 100, taken in conjunction with the omission of the clauses by ℵC 9 etc. and 16 36 respectively, may indicate the same thing.

Observe the support vouchsafed to 100 in the following passages:

i. 3. τον λογον with ℵB 32 102 130 154 178 238 240 arm pl.

xxii. 20. ερχομαι (pro ερχου) with 40 [non 210].

It is alone with ℵ* twice; (thrice, if we add xx. 2/3 with ℵ partly)
" " " A twice
" " " ℵ^a A once
" " " 12 several times,
besides the other small combinations, largely of the 1 family.

This is the most annoying MS., because such things as xix. 17 —πασι supported by *sah syr*S should point to an old underlying text, whereas the mixture is too confusing to place any reliance on many of these things, which may be fortuitous.

Now to illustrate the real exemplar sought to be followed, we will cite the following:

vi. 8. επι το τεταρτον μερος της γης αποκτειναι with f. 21 (36) sah boh.

16. πεσατε with AP 7-45-104-151 f. 21 56 178-240 200 201 218.

vii. 2. —αυτοις with 16 17-49 f. 21 44-52-82 67-120 130 169-216 200 218 gig.

13. τας λευκας στολας with f. 21 176-206 f. 178 200 251.

The above are the small groups occurring, in which are found the veins of several families, the 21 group occurring but not yet predominating. Henceforward it predominates.

Note that even this licentious scribe and this group retain πνεη vii. 1, and παίση ix. 5. They have και οινον at xviii. 13, and our MS. 100 even corrects all eight Nos. 21-73-79-103-112-139-191-220 at xxii. 11, where with 92 and 147 they conspire in omitting και ο αγιος αγιασθητω ετι.

So this XIV^th century critic has his uses after all, especially when in company of 170. The association with 113 and 130 is more doubtful.

Stepping-stones.

In connection with the group 21 add 80-138 and 81-204, which are stepping-stones between this and 1-46-62 etc. group, or rather holds the old base embracing both and from which all sprang.

GROUP 46-88-101.

Apoc. 101 (Ev. 206. Ac. 94. P. 107) = Venice, S. Marc. 6. [Scr. 101. Greg. 109, new 205[Abschrift]. Sod. δ 501]. [xv]. Apoc. 101.

This is Scrivener's notation, which we adopt in this case for various reasons. It is Gregory's 109 in his list (with same Nos. for Ev. Act. and Paul.).

Refer back, please, to Apoc. 88 and Apoc. 46, where full information will be found as regards these three MSS., which are dependent copies.

In 101 there is a slight trace of iota subscript not found in the other MSS. and occurring a few times, of slight importance as at i. 18 ᾄδου, but more interesting at xix. 15 ποιμανεῖ, where a tiny iota is apparently present. I judge only from the photograph.

The handwriting, while neat viewed as a whole, is composed of letters very irregular in size, and abounding in utterly unnecessary ligatures, some of them taking up more room than the word itself would have occupied if written in full. Note further at xviii. 12 μαρμαρου (cum 46 88 et t.r.) looks like μαργαρου (as actually found in a few codices), but it is meant for μαρμαρου. Such forms are indeed trying to the eyes, and call for an incessant watchfulness.

I have collated 46 88 and 101 together. But for this, I should certainly have misquoted 101 often, the three MSS. affording a check which was of great assistance.

This MS. has τοῦ δαυὶδ with 46, while 88 writes τοῦ δάδ. It uses the comma freely, but not the semicolon of interrogation.

Apoc. 88 differs from 46 much more than 101.

101 and 88 are found in conjunction against 46 in a few places indicated under 88. Ap. 101 stands by itself only very occasionally, notably xviii. 22/23 φωνὴ against φωνὴν of 46-88 ℵ* 87* 90. It joins 88, however, in the stupid punctuation of xix. 10 and xxii. 9 ὁρα· μη συνδουλος σου ειμι, because 46 had ὁρα· μη·, and at xxi. 13 has an error of order απο βορρα..ᵇαπο δυσμων..ᵃαπο νοτου, corrected, however, by the scribe with the indication α. β.

At xxi. 21 I do not know what 101 means by the ligature χρυσι⅋. He never makes ων thus, but always curved ⋋. Whether he intended χρυσιον with t.r. and 46 is doubtful, for 88 has χρυσίων.

[Gregory's 101 is Petersburg, Muralt 129 = Miller, Apoc. 103. But in Scrivener, edition III., Apoc. 103 = Ev. 472. Act. 235. P. 276, at Poictiers. Nevertheless in Miller under Ev. 472 we find (Act. 235. Paul. 276. Apoc. 103), which Gregory says "= Steph. 1550." Turning up Act. 235 in Miller I find " = (Evan. 472)", but Paul. 276 he says = (Act. 321). This is referred to Evan. 796 ! Another glorious muddle].

Apoc. 102.

Apoc. 102 (Evan. 451. Ac. 104. P. 122) = Ferrara 187.188.N.A.7, vol. iv. (vol. i.–iii. =O.T.). [Scr. 102. Greg. 103, new 582. Sod. δ 410]. An enormous codex 15 in. high by 11 across, dated, according to Gregory, 1334, and by him numbered Apoc. 103 (Evan. 582. Ac. 206. P. 262). 39 lines to a page. The inscription is rather noteworthy:

εὐαγγελἴστοῦ παρθένου θεολόγου: ἀποκάλὒψἴς ἡ̃σεβασμι̂ πλ: (with which Apoc. 226 now agrees).

The headings of the open pages are also distinguished by ἀποκά λὒψἴσ

We have to go back to Apoc. 30 and 61 for the expression παρθενου, but if I read aright the latter half of this inscription here it is apparently ἡ σεβασμια πελει. It can then be rendered "(The cry of) the awe-inspiring revelation of the stainless evangelist and theologian ascends to Heaven or sounds forth (πελει)."

Modern nu is conspicuous. No iota post. or sub., except possibly at xiv. 14 ἀνῷ ex emend. and αὐτῃ xx. 13. No ν εφελκ. ιωαννης always contracted. υιος generally in full. Other contractions as usual, but κυριε in full vii. 14.

A very few Latin notes in the margin. (On the whole the codex is not a latinizing one).

Modern chapters are indicated by Greek numerals, but by a somewhat later hand.

Fairly careful otherwise, the scribe leaves out many passages owing to homoioteleuton, which are usually supplied in the margin by another hand.

The MS. is very clearly of the family 7, adhering more closely to 16-69, and sometimes with one of these, though more generally with them together. Sometimes avoiding their individual errors; and occasionally incorporating a novelty as at iii. 13 ὦτα (pro οὖς), read by none of the others. Similarly πόντον for τοπον (xviii. 17) against the group, with 56. At other times inventing the Greek with another, as at iii. 18 ἀναβλεψης (with 59 sah boh) for βλεπης. Or, as at iv. 6 (partially with 18), θαλασσαν ναλινην ομοια. Or, as at v. 3, δυναται alone with 46-88-101 for ηδυνατο and εδυνατο.

At iii/iv it omits the heading (incorporated into the text of 7-16-45) "περι της οραθεις θυρας εν τω ουρανω."

Attention is asked to the corrections and marginal additions by the second hand. His writing is somewhat similar to that of the scribe, but it is that of another and somewhat later scribe of syriacising tendencies. In this connection I would say that it seems rather unlikely that the MS. is as early as 1334.

However, some of the corrections of 102 are now found in 108*, which looks like a XII[th] cent. MS., and is probably not later than XIII/XIV., so we may leave 102 and 102 in the XIV[th] cent. or earlier. 226 (at Athos) now upholds 102 in places.

There are a few interlineations by a third hand, and yet a fourth hand has occasionally latinized in the margin, but has left xv. 6 λἴνον quite untouched (against the Latin).

This group preserves the true text in some places, e.g. xvi. 3 ζωσα, against a number of cursives.

We learn again original readings of the exemplar from this MS., corrupted by others of the group. Thus xviii. 22 αὐλιτων was originally only an itacism for αὐλητων. But the others (39-69-104-151-180 with 113 149) finding αυλιτων (and σαλπιστων following) changed it to αὐλιστων. This is clearly seen in 39, who hesitated, wrote αὐλιτων first, then added sigma, whereas 69 wrote straightforwardly αὐλιστων.

More consistent sometimes than its neighbours, 102 omits at xx. 13 the article before both θανατος and ἁδης, whereas hitherto there is only authority for omission before θανατος with 16-39-180 (hiant 45-69) 9 13 27 f. 46; but seeing the omission of one, it omitted the other, although immediately after (xx. 14) it writes, with t.r., και ὁ θανατος και ὁ ἁδης.

Note, at ix. 5 the scribe writes plainly παιση of t.r. agreeing only with 16 of the group. 69 = πέσει, 7-39-45-104-151-180 = πεση.

Here are the new readings:

The marginal and other corrections of the second hand will be found in the collation, as also the few marginal notes of the latiniser.

Here we will confine ourselves to the relation of this MS. to the group, first taking up other affinities, which are (for the most part) only apparent, being errors common to each other, as proved by the absence of the other members of the group.

Now it cannot be said that the scribe was not familiar with some various readings in the above, but they are so mixed up with errors of omission and errors common to a few others (like 98) that they have less value than usual. He merely repeats old errors of ℵ etc. as a rule. But the list is worth some study, for, with the relationship to our other bilinguals, it now carries the text back as far and farther than they, and we see the Latin influence here behind ℵ and A. Mixture.

We can now run through the deep affinity to the sister MSS.

An examination of the foregoing will I think only confirm what I wrote (some time ago now) under the other MSS. of this group.

They are all a little independent one of the other, yet conspire in the stupidest mistakes. The very fact, however, that none of the scribes were good scholars only serves to emphasize the error of the changes when they attempt to dogmatize.

The MS. throws quite some light on 98, 40, 32, 87 etc.

Note in closing, that 7*-16-69-104-151-180 and 33 121 143 191 194 all write at: iii. 7 ἁδου for δαυιδ. 102, however, has δᾶδ, but the word has been rewritten.

So again at vii. 5 we find γὰδ is an emendation by 102, while ΔΑΝ is found in 9 13 16 23 39 69 (but Gad in the Latin version of each) and 75 130 180.

The MS. is perhaps less slavishly copied than any of the others. See iii/iv. where 7-16-45 add "περι της ορωθεις εν τω ουρανω," 39 leaves a blank line, but 102 with 69 show no signs of anything omitted from their exemplar.

We have hardly done justice to this MS. as a key. Compare it to the gigas recension, and note as regards the age of both, the curious omission xxii. 9/10, common only to 98 102 and gigas and no others.

GROUP 21-28-73-79-80-99-100-103-112-135-138-139-170-191-220-221.

Apoc. 103. Apoc. 103 = St. Petersburg, Muralt 129. [Scr. 103. Greg. 101, new 2043. Sod. Aν^{57}].

This is a MS. probably of the early xv[th] cent., a close member of the family 21-28-73-79 and latter half of 100, but copied from an old exemplar, and not derived in any way, as far as we can learn, from any of the above directly. It is near 28 in places (v. 10, vi. 11, viii. 8, xi. 1, 10, xv. 7, xvi. 18), but perhaps nearest 21, see the omission at vi. 6; compare also xvi. 6 etc. At xiv. 18 it reads τους βοτρυς with only 21-28-79 of the family. It is alone with 79 at xiv. 12. But at xviii. 18/19 it has the long omission, due to homoioteleuton with 40-210, 73-79 etc., while 21 omits still more. At xxii. 21 fin. it retains αμην with 100, against 21-73-79 (hiat 28).

It has one long omission due to homoioteleuton at xix. 9/10 not shared by any of the rest of the family except 112, which is a close sister, nor by any other MS. Yet it is carefully copied as a whole, though there are quite a few itacisms and small peculiarities of spelling, many of them we feel sure due to the scribe's idiosyncracies, but some probably found in his copy, which was undoubtedly of respectable age, and seems to have been an early cursive or an uncial.

There is no trace of iota sub- or postscript.

The scribe was his own διορθωτης as far as a score of small corrections go, very neatly made. We have not noticed these, except at xxii. 19, where he first wrote αν (with ℵ* 108 alone), and added the ε for εαν, as it may possibly point to the exemplar thus reading. The representative of the family which he used was undoubtedly respectable, and had an old base, as can be gathered from such passages as vii. 3, vii. 16, x. 8, xi. 3, xii. 6, xiv. 1, xviii. 23. We see also occasional lapses to ν εφελκ. as at xi. 7, xvii. 7, xix. 2, xxii. 6 with the uncials and but few cursives, which confirms us in this view. See also ἰῶάννη sic [non 112] at xxii. 8 for ιωαννης (100 writes ἰῶ here), another proof that the scribe was copying an uncial or an early cursive with the contraction ἰῶ. At i. 9 he writes ἰῶ, but previously at i. 4 ἰωαννης. The scribe is not a good Greek scholar, and is a poor speller, yet he does not often fall into glaring mistakes and is too accurate for "monstra." His errors are peculiar. He is a combination of a good penman and a pretty accurate copyist, but labours under some local education in the matter of pronunciation, leading to the occasional misdemeanours of which the scribe of 72 is so often guilty. All this is merely advanced by way of preface to our text on the subject of family MSS. and their bearing on the problem, of which more anon. Meanwhile note our MS. opposing the whole family at viii. 12, ix. 21, x. 6, xi. 6, 18, xii. 6, 12, xvi. 20, xviii. 7, 11, 15, 16, xix. 5, 9, 10, xxii. 5, and the evidence divided in such places as vii. 17, ix. 5, x. 4, xviii. 4, xix. 15. Curiously enough, 103 does not follow 21-73-79 with ανω μεσον at vii. 17, but retains αναμεσον.

Gregory says the MS. is with commentary apparatus in an abbreviated form. This is not so, but a peculiar thing has occurred, for the scribe has never finished the commentary, and introduces it in a novel style. The commentary, where given, is in full. It is introduced first following i. 1 fin., and runs along unabridged and uninterrupted to cover the text up to ii. 7. Then follows the text from i. 2 to ii. 11. After this the commentary covers the text of ii. 8 to ii. 11. Then the text from ii. 12 to ii. 17. Following this comes the commentary, covering only ii. 12 to ii. 13. Then the text flows on with no more attempt at introducing the commentary, although the κεφ. are regularly introduced throughout, with headings, between the text.

It is interesting to note that the addition (with 21-73-79) at xviii. 14/15, and also those at xxii. 6 and xxii. 13/14 (both with 21-73-79-100) no doubt formed an integral part of the original of the text of these codices, as 103 gives no commentary after ii. 17, and does not get mixed up with it elsewhere. Perhaps we are dealing with a MS. in the very early history of Andreas' commentary. Note also that at iii. 19/20 the schol. βαβαι κ.τ.λ., present in 21-73-79 etc. and 23 is absent in 103 (and also from 112).

The inscription is in a form not so far chronicled: "αποκαλυψις του (compendio) αγιου (compendio) ιωαννου (compendio) του θεολογου και ευαγγελιστου." This inscr. is nearest to 10 96 (Complutensian MSS.), which have αποκαλυψις του αγιου ιω̄ του αποστολου και ευαγγ. θεολογου, and omit the αποστολου, but the form of 103 is confirmed by 112 and found also in 121 125 and 177.

At xviii. 16 we find a good example of the absorption of και, thus: κεκεχρϋσωμένην (not done by the sister MSS.), but found in 108 (apparently executed in the same neighbourhood), and practically by 112.

We will now complete the usual data by giving the new readings found here, most of them simple errors:

For the rest there is thorough and complete agreement with the family, including such things as iv. 3 ἱερεῖς (for ἰρις). See for the lists under the other members of the group, but there are exceptions.

Note also that the combination, including 103, lacks the support of 100 (from xi. on) in the following:

Groupings. Detection of errors.

We have now reached a stage in our investigations, where we can surely see the value of accurate collation of family manuscripts. It is quite useless for scholars to identify roughly a given family. It serves no purpose; whereas accurate comparison of all reveals many things, hidden from the hasty critic, of incalculable value for the history of the text. Out of family MSS. (however tarnished with error, license, or carelessness) we can hew real corner-stones. And this applies still more to the text of the Gospels and of the other books of the N.T. If this effort would induce others to follow in my footsteps, we should gain much. Is it too much to hope?

It may be thought that von Soden set the pace for the family grouping, but in his work no kind of attention is paid to the leading and most accurate member of his families. He merely takes the first number of his group and adds an f.

In this connection notice the following:

While 103 omits, alone with ℵ*, the clause επι της θαλασσης και at x. 8, we know this is an oversight of both, for the rest of the family MSS. do not omit, except the sister 112.

This doubtless puts ℵ in the wrong.

Now take a case of A, where the family MSS. all agree in conspiracy. We can still detect the error.

At xxi. 7 A wrote αυτων for αυτω (changing the sense). He is so followed by 1-208 21 (hiat 28) 59-121 62/3 65 67-120 73-79 80 81[non 204] 100 and 103 (add 130 136 138 139 147 152 162/3 170 179 184 191 220). The difficulty following, A solved by dropping αυτος, but let stand the rest with υιος in the singular as a generic name, signification plural or singular. But the above cursive group had to make it agree with αυτων, so they wrote και αυτοι εσονται μοι υιοι for και (αυτος) εσται μοι (ὁ) υἱος. The article before υἱος is of course dropped by A, with ℵBP and a good number of cursives, and is probably correct.

Now in both these cases Westcott and Hort have steered the proper course, abandoning ℵ and A respectively. But in many other places they follow them in equally untenable readings, which could have been obviated by further recourse to MS. testimony, properly digested.

To go further. When, e.g. 47 or 56 come to join ℵ or A alone, we would think it good support, but sometimes these family MSS. come to our rescue there also. For now, if one out of seven of a family, either by sheer incuria, or for eclectic or critical purposes, join ℵ 47 or A 56, we know it is not good for this testimony.

In the same way the textus receptus with 1-152-179-208 f. 46 59 f. 62 159 does not gain from being in company with f. 21-28-73-79-100-103 etc., or some of them, but rather loses, except where there is other support, for the last-named group has undoubtedly a "peculiar" text, and its affinity for some of the readings of the t.r. is open to criticism from several points of view. As already stated, in some particulars, notably in the use of the order of words, this recension almost savours of a translation from a version back into Greek, just as we detected Erasmus translating the Latin of the last six verses of Apoc. xxii. into Greek, for lack of a complete MS. when he went to press with his edition of 1516.

On the other hand, the more MSS. we examine, the more we see that both the Erasmian and Complutensian texts as entities are of very ancient base.

The MS. also throws some light on the ℵB, AB groups, perhaps the most difficult of all. And we find this large cursive family [which now and again goes with B and group (but very rarely with the pure Arethas cursive group)] in company with ℵB or AB in rather suspicious places, which does not tend to support but rather to invalidate their testimony, in view of the general critical character of the text of fam 21 etc.

We now find 112 (Scr.) (i.e. 182 Gregory) at Dresden, a XVIth cent. MS., to be practically identical with 103.

This introduction was written, and Apoc. 103 collated, before we had the opportunity to collate Apoc. 80. This MS. now turns out to be a key linking the 21 group to the Erasmian or 1-12-46-62/3-67 group. It is more than this, and reaches back to the earliest times, showing the common origin of both, and with the help of gigas and Gwynn's Syriac taking us back to the very foundations.

37 is another key in the Compl. grouping which sometimes goes with group 21.

81-204, also collated later, has some sympathy with 103.

Add, besides 112, the others on our list including 135 at Sinai and 170 (135 is very close to 103-112).

Group 7-16-39-45-69-102-104-151-180, of which 104 belongs in sub-group 7-45-104-151.

Apoc. 104.

Apoc. 104 (Ev. 531. Ac. 199. P. 231) = Greg. 107 (Ev. 680. Ac. 255. P. 305). Fenwick, Cheltenham, Phillips 7682. [Scr. 104. Greg. 107, new 680. Sod. δ 103].

I have not seen this interesting little MS. ($6\frac{1}{3} \times 5$) since 1886, but Mr. Fenwick kindly caused the Apoc. to be photographed for me, and had the photographer make the plates twice the size of the original, as the ink is rather faint and writing small. See some description of this codex in Appendix E to my collation of Evan. 604.

I now find that it is a child of a bilingual group, and draws us nearer to the history and ancestry of its fellows. For it develops at once that it is one of the group 7-16-39-45-69-102, being closest, however, to 7-45. Now this recension is neither East nor West, but savours of both, and doubtless comes through rather barbarous hands in S. Italy or Sicily. We may say of this MS. as the Abbé Martin wrote of one of the Gospel group 13-69-124-346-348-556-624 etc., as follows:

The language of S. Italy.

"Ce manuscrit nous aide, ainsi que nous l'avons observé, à suivre les progrès que le latin et le grec font en sens inverse l'un de l'autre. Au commencement du onzième siècle tout le sud de l'Italie parle grec et est encore soumis aux Empereurs de Constantinople. C'est à peine si les Normands paraissent à l'horizon et menacent les possessions byzantines. Aussi, fidèles, prêtres, évêques, tout le monde parle grec en Calabre et dans la Pouille. Cela est tellement vrai qu' Ughelli, dans son Italia Sacra, peut à peine citer des titulaires latins pour ces pays avant la fin du onzième ou le commencement du douzième siècle. Les Normands apprennent eux-mêmes le grec en Italie et en Sicile; la plupart de leurs chartes sont rédigées en cette langue pendant cent ou cent cinquante ans. Peu à peu cependant ils poussent leurs nouveaux sujets à reprendre la liturgie Romaine et à rentrer dans l'obédience du Pape. Le changement s'opère quelquefois de gré, d'autres fois de force, généralement avec assez de ménagement. C'est pourquoi on voit, dès lors, apparaître des diocèses, où le grec et le latin se mêlent et se compénètrent. Une paroisse demeure fidèle à la liturgie grecque, tandisque la voisine passe au Latin et au Romain. Cet état de choses dure pendant plus de quatre cents ans. À la longue, néanmoins, le latin et l'italien gagnent du terrain. Au douzième siècle, des fidèles qui parlaient autrefois Grec ne comprennent plus que le Latin, et au treizième siècle, on est obligé de traduire en latin des actes qui, cent ou cent cinquante ans auparavant, avaient été rédigés en grec. Ughelli dans son Italia Sacra cite des exemples de ce genre vers l'an 1240 ou 1250, c'est-à-dire au moment où Conrad, l'archiprêtre des grecs, renouvelle, en présence de témoins, les conventions conclues entre lui et les héritiers de Marie Pélerin, morte cent vingt quatre ans plus tôt."

(Martin. "Quatre MSS. importants etc." Paris, 1886, pp. 41/2).

At first I was inclined to date our MS. as late as XV^th^ century or no higher than late XIV^th^, but it may be early XIV^th^, or indeed late XIII^th^. It is hard to tell. I am at a disadvantage in these studies at a distance, and from photographs of a portion of these MSS. Others, more fortunate, may easily bring out points I have missed. (Its sister, our 151 still at Athos, is dated 1112).

Magna Græcia.

This MS. 104 then, in the Apoc., at any rate, is of a Græco-Latin family from a region of Magna Græcia where "le rite grec s'est perpétué sous une forme plus ou moins complète, jusqu' aux derniers jours du moyen age" (Martin, op. cit., p. 43), and has the modern chapter divisions with the exception of xii., which begins at our xi. 19 (corresponding to κεφ. ΛΓ'), and where doubtless S. Hugo de Santo Caro left it in 1240. All modern printers of the Greek and English N.T. abandoned this division, although it is found in Wiclif's version.

Our scribe's MS. then, besides identifying itself absolutely with 7-16-39-45-69-102, goes further, and joins such MSS. as 67, 72 and others in extraordinary itacisms and forms, all serving to identify the writers and confine them to this Eastern-Western or Western-Eastern locality. We observe the same thing in B. We draw the editors of the MSS. 12, 23 in places, 33, 40, 43 (in places), also 14 (in a good many places), even 88 and 103 into our net, and include them all in the bilingual recension. Now this is important and helps develop many important points and forces into the light of day a lot of obscurities, such as the exact relation of 12 to the 1 group; the bearing of 40 on our problem; the uses that the apparently ultra-careless 67 and 72 can be put to; the locality where the B recension originated, and so forth.

So far I have been shy of drawing deductions. I think we can begin henceforth.

For we can go much further than all this, and in discussing this apparently humble and illiterate member of a well-known group, we can learn a number of things. Its collation is thus not a matter of indifference to be passed over lightly, but it has value in elucidating some of the points connected with the important MS. 56, and it sheds light on the history of A and of C and of ℵ. We can go yet further still, and find the Coptic recension identified with us through fam 34/35, with ℵ as the original compounder of Greek retranslation through Latin and Coptic sources.†

Of this later. First we will describe the MS. more particularly.

I said in my short account of the whole MS. (under Appendix E in Evan. 604) that apparently two scribes had been employed. The writing changes quite a good deal in appearance even in the Apoc., but I am inclined to think after all there was only one. The chief feature of interest in the alphabet is kappa, which is made almost exactly like H, perhaps to avoid blots in such diminutive writing, but, at any rate, the same form appears in the pages of less square a character of writing. Occasionally capital Γ and Δ intrude, but not very often. There is no iota post- or subscript, but I have long since abandoned this feature as an aid to dating MSS. Like some others we find (perpetually) κατοὶκει, σηὀμένη, καιὀμένον, κὀμένης, δικαιὀσύνη, ωρᾶσει, ἐσἱρινίασεν, κἀπνὸς, πρὸσ̀εκήνησαν, and the like; παῤδαλι, ἀμέθυσος; and even οὐρὀῦνω meaning οὐρανω, but confusing the writing in full with the usual contraction. Ιωαννης, and υιος and cases are always in full. Other contractions are regular and as usual, except ουρανω (as above) xii. 10 and xix. 1, ουρανου thrice xviii. 4, xx. 9, xxi. 2; ουρανος xxi. 1; ανθροπων ita pleno ix. 15; κυριε vii. 14, κυριος κυριων xvii. 14, xix. 16; and πνευματα v. 6; while, contrary to custom, in πν̄ατα τρια ακαθαρτα xvi. 13 and πν̄ατα δαιμονιων xvi. 14, with πν̄σ̄ δαιμον. ακαθ. xviii. 2, πνευματα is contracted.

ιδον always (except x. 5), πορνιας regularly, and λαοδικιαν etc. This, with what is to follow, shows a very early Greek stem. Not since 36 have we had a MS. so consistent in this.

But the text got mixed with early and later Latin. See xii. 10 where εβληθη is used. κατεβληθη of T.R. is from some O.L. and Vulg. projectus est instead of missus est used elsewhere. Note the opposite at xii. 15 υπερεβαλεν with 7-45-151 alone, against the plain misit of Latin, even 16-39-69-102-180 having εβαλεν and misit.

ν εφελκ. occurs off and on, but not perpetually.

Errors of omission due to homoioteleuton are of constant occurrence and would be very serious but for the evidence in these places of the rest of the family group. Yet x. 6 we have integrally, so often subject to the dropping of a clause.

† Note here: xvii. 1 εξηλθεν alone with A (Latin venit); immediately following τὶς (pro εἶς) alone with 7-45. Certainly looks like *re*translation into Greek.

Note xviii. 18 + ταυτη (post πολει) with C alone. Add 151 and 200 copt latt arm.

Note ix. 4 − ουδε παν χλωρον with ℵ* and ℵ^a alone with sah½ [non 151].

So that there may be as much method as madness in some of our scribe's doings, notwithstanding the heavy indictments to appear against him for carelessness or worse.

Additions are few until towards the end of his task, when our scribe takes liberties, making the following additions:

xviii. 18. +ταυτη with C (as we have seen before). Now add 151 and 200.
19. +και εβαλον (post μεγαλη)
21. +πόλη (post πολις)
23. οι μεγαλη της γης μεγιστάναι (pro οι μεγιστανες της γης) and xviii. 7. +οτι εν τη καρδια αυτης λεγει ante ουκ ειμι.
} Alone.

Before proceeding, let me quote the Abbé Martin for the last time:

"Les études bibliques ont été florissantes dans le sud de l'Italie à plusieurs époques du moyen âge; le pays a été longtemps couvert de couvents basiliens et bénédictins; les Latins et les Grecs ont vécu là côte à côte et en rapports permanents pendant près de mille ans, depuis le cinquième jusque' au quinzième siècle. De plus, les grecs ont possédé, outre la Calabre et la Sicile, l'Afrique et l'Egypte. Or, il est certain que les textes dissidents représentés par les anciens onciaux ont des rapports étroits avec les versions Coptes et avec Origène. Nous constatons maintenant leur presence dans le sud de l'Italie, vers le onzième siècle. Il s'agit donc d'expliquer de quelle manière ces textes dissidents sont venus là, de les suivre dans leur migrations et de remonter, s'il est possible, jusqu'à leur point de départ. C'est l'œuvre que doit accomplir la critique biblique contemporaine. Le travail est complexe et délicat, il exige de longues et pénibles recherches, mais les résultats qu'on est sûr d'obtenir dédommageront amplement de la peine qu'on se donnera pour les recueillir. Puisse cette entreprise tenter le zèle de quelque étudiant de nos facultés naissantes. Nos vœux l'accompagneront dans son voyage et nos félicitations le salueront à son retour, s'il nous rapporte la solution claire et nette du plus grand des problèmes qui tourmente la science biblique contemporaine."

(Martin. Op. cit., pp. 61/62).

With that as a text, we can now proceed.

Apart from a number of new readings (to be catalogued later) we are met by such a curiosity as (v. 8) μετα for the unusual μεστας of this Latin group, which takes the place with them of the usual γεμουσας. This shows at any rate a mental process that is interesting, whether our man be improvising, or whether this was the origin of μεστας. The worst "itacism" is at xix. 9 ουαι ουαι for οὗτοι!

We find throughout, not only a basic text of the oldest bilingual MS. types, e.g.
xviii. 14. απωλοντο (for απωλετο and for απηλθεν) with these: ℵ, this Græco-Latin fam 7, f. 35 and the Compl. MSS., that is to say:

perierunt of Gig. Am. Vulg. (Prim. perient) copt syr aeth [Gwynn quotes Syr. Crawford for απηλθεν, however, without remark] opposed by all others: CABP and most reading απωλετο; some απηλθεν. The curious thing here is that we have the Latins 7-16 etc., we have the Complutensian family 10-17-37 etc., we have Andreas 49, we have Arethas 77, we have Egyptian 35-87, but only small representatives of each, concurring in a reading that the mass of the Greeks read differently, viz. απωλετο.

A Latin key. Hence the Latin is responsible for this not only through Coptic, Syriac, Aethiopic, Andreas, Arethas, Complutensian [Erasmus group 1 62/3 reads απηλθεν, 12 (with 69) is wanting owing to a careless omission, 46-88-101 have απηλθον], but with the great ℵ!

Now let us see if we can trace this kind of thing further.

We fasten at once on a place where our MS. (with 7-45) rejects the Latin reading, viz. xiv. 4 reading απαρχη with the mass.

But ℵ 16-39-69-102-180 alone, mind you, with part of fam 114, read απ αρχης, which is simply the Latin genitive primitiæ of Gigas and Amiatinus and Vulg. (not so Primasius MSS. b f = ab exordio and Beatus = ab initio). [απαρχῇ sic 108 210].

This is a pretty conclusive place. Such places in a short book like the Apoc. are not easy to put your hand on, but there is plenty of minor relationship of a very peculiar type:

xi. 15. εγενετο φωναι (pro εγενοντο φωναι) ℵ* 104 alone. And now 214 against 97-122.

xii. 4. των αστερων του ουρανου το τριτον pro το τριτον των αστερων του ουρανου 104 alone.

Now in the copy used by ℵ he writes το τριτον after των αστερων as well as before. There may be a connection.

ix. 4. —ουδε παν χλωρον 104 and ℵ* and ℵ^a alone with *sah*1/2. [As Tisch. expresses it: "super δενδ C* scripsit χλω rursusque abstersit"].

vii. 7. —εκ φυλης συμεων ιβ χιλ. εσφραγ. ℵ 35-87 and 104 alone! [The "Urtext" of 104 therefore is evidently as old as ℵ 35-87, for note the omission at xviii. 6 of απεδωκεν υμιν και διπλωσατε αυτη 104 35-87-181 alone! These two places taken together are perhaps not fortuitous].

iv. 5/6. —αι εισι usque ad θρονου pr. ℵ 69-104 alone with 75 159.

iii. 19. αν (pro εαν) ℵ 16-104 alone with 36 143 146 149 178 186 187 226. [See 108 (from same locality) favours this elsewhere]. Possible reflection of early retranslation.

vi. 3. The form ηνυξε ℵ alone with 7-45-104-151.

xxi. 16. " " εισα ℵ " " 104 and 241.

(So also πλατια xxi. 21, διξω xvii. 1 etc. alone with ℵ; σισμος bis, xvi. 18 alone with ℵA; προφητιας xix. 10 alone with ℵB).

xiv. 6. ἐν μέσω ὀυνῖ ματι. So 104. μεσωουρανηματι ℵ* 69, but modified to μεσουρανιματι in 7-16-39-45 36 95. [At xix. 17 μεσωουρανιματι again by 104 alone].

7. εν φωνη μεγαλη λεγων, change of order, —λεγοντα. 7-16-39-45-(69)-102-104-151-180. ℵ shows deep sympathy by omitting λεγοντα.

Now add, for ancient forms, this word:

xviii. 4. συνκοινωνησηται ℵCA 104 alone. (151 συγκ...).

This in itself would not be so weighty, but for the fact that 104 is a villainously eclectic speller, and he might more easily have stumbled on συγκοινωνησειτε	of 69

συνκοινωνησειται	of 12
συγκοινωνησεται	of 16-39-180
συγκοινωνησηται	of 151 and 14 67 73-79 98 and 108 146
συνγκοινωνησηται	of 81-204
συγκυνωνησητε	of B 42 215
συγκυνωνησηται	of 200
συγκοινωνησιτε	of 95
συνκοινωνησητε	of 114-193
συγκυνωνησητεε	of 41
συγκοινωνησετε	of 136-147
συγκοινωνησατε	of 92
συγκονωνησητε	of 107
or συγκοινησετε	of 106,

for these MSS. are nearly all friends of his! No, he chooses to copy correctly here what was written 1000 years before in his family MS.

Consult further such a place as xxi. 4 εκ pro απο by ℵA 32 56 113 127 alone. None of our group read thus, which emphasizes the probability of an independent and partial retranslation by ℵA 32 and 56. See also xvii. 10 etc.

Again, leaving ℵ and the group ℵCA, take C. What do we find?

xviii. 18. +ταυτη (post πολει) C alone with 104-151 200 as shown above.

Add to this:

vii. 13. ισιν (pro εισι) C alone with 104.

Take A and we find the same thing:

viii. 5. σισμος A 104-151 and only 140 218.

xvi. 18. σισμος bis ℵA 104-151 only.

vi. 4. —απο fam 7 and 12 f. 46 59-121 67-120 81-204 152 f. 178 with A alone, i.e. to take away the peace of the Earth, not peace from the Earth. ℵ[a] marks the three words εκ της γης for deletion. (Nearly all the rest read εκ for απο).

More important is:

xvii. 8. as to υπαγει or υπαγειν, where Tyc 3. actually conflates the two readings, giving us "irae (ire) ibit." Many witnesses here are missing, viz. Tert. Vict. Cypr. Aug. Cass., but Auct. prom. has 'itura,' and Beat. 'ire'; vg gig ps-Ambr. 'ibit,' but Iren[int] and Prim. give us 'vadit.' So A has υπαγει with 55 59 (a notorious retranslator against its sister 121) and 104 with 111 (another notorious codex) and f. 119 120 [non 67] 146 182 218 [against its fam] and *boh aeth syr*S (was going sah). Er. Ald. Col. and 57 also prefer to follow in this reading although against their MSS. 1 and 46. (208 is wanting here).

xvii. 1. close by. εξηλθεν (pro ηλθεν) A 104 alone, to which we have already referred.

v. 4. is omitted in A 23* 98 102* and also 104 with 124 130 140 143 200.

xxi. 11. —εχουσαν την δοξαν του θεου omitted by A 30 35 98 and 104 with 166 187 190.

P, too, sometimes agreed with the fam 7 as at: xviii. 12 χρυσουν.

Remains perhaps the most curious place of all:

xiv. 10. εκ του ποτηριου with A 7-16-39-45-69-102-104-151-180 and 56.

Notice all the Græco-Latin codices plus only A 56. But it isn't a Latin reading! (Note that 56 belonged in the same locality; see under 108).

All other Greeks read εν τω ποτηριω.
All Latins read in calice.

Such is the course of action and reaction.

In this connection, we might perhaps refer here to the pronunciation responsible for πεση in ix. 5 instead of παιση. All Latins including 104 write πεση ix. 5 except 16-69-102, but at iv. 10 παισουνται is read for πεσουνται by 104 alone! So interchangeable was the sound of these vowels.

Now to show the real character of the text of 7-16-39-45-69-102-104 +151-180, take up the following agreed to by all, without other support:

iii. 11. ινα μη λαβη τις ταχυ
iv. 1. και λεγουσης (pro λεγουσα)
5. εξεπορευοντο
v. 11. —πολλων
vi. 1. —και (ante ηκουσα) and Vict. Prim. Tyc 3. sah boh.
xiii. 11. +τω (ante αρνιω) and 200 only.
xiv. 17. —του sec.
18. της γης (pro αυτης) with fam 119.
xvi. 2. του θηριου το χαραγμα

xviii. 2. +δαιμονιου (post πνευματος)
11. +και (post αγοραζει)
22. και πας τεχνιτης πασης τεχνης ου μη ευρεθη εν σοι ετι transferred to end of verse.
24. ευρεθησαν
xx. 5. +οτι (ante αὐτη) [non copt].
10. —και sec.
ibid. —και (post θηριον).

Now the only one of the group of Gospel codices 13-69-124-346-556 which has an Apoc. is Evan. 69 = our 14 APOC., and it is interesting to see that Apoc. 14 sometimes keeps company with this other Latin-Syriacizing group in the Apoc. as 7-16-39-45-69-102-104, to which 108 is related geographically. I wonder if both the Gospel group 13 etc. and the Apoc. group 7 etc. both originated in Calabria?

Now see the places where 7-45-104 are together quite alone (151 agreeing everywhere):

ii. 2. δυνει
viii. 5. και αστραπαι και βρωνται (7-45-151 βρονται).
13. +τρεις (post μεγαλη)
ix. 6. —και εν ταις ημεραις εκειναις ibid. τον θανατον (pro αποθανειν) } ibid. —ο θανατος }
10. του (pro και η εξουσια αυτων)
12. δευτερα (pro ετι δυο)
17. —των (ante στοματων)
18. —εκπορευομενου
x. 8. και ηκουσα φωνην εκ του ουρανου παλιν λαλουσαν και λεγουσαν μετ᾽ εμου 10. γλυκαζων (pro γλυκυ) (see γλυκυν 108).
xi. 1. —και (ante μετρησον)
xii. 15. ὑπερέ̈βαλεν
xiii. 10. αιχμαλωτιζη (pro αιχμαλωσιαν συναγει)
xiv. 5. και ουκ (sic omnes) ευρεθη εν τω στοματι αυτων ibid. αμωμητοι
xvi. 16. ἑβραιστεῖ
xvii. 1. τίς (pro εἷς)
15. οιδας (pro ειδες)
xix. 14. καθαρον λευκον (—και)
xxii. 12. Post ταχυ + μακαριος ο τηρων τους λογους της προφειτιας (sic) του βιβλιου τουτου
14. οι πλυναντες τας στολας αυτων
18. επιθεῖ επ αυτα · επιθησει

We cannot list the changes of spelling for they are legion, and will be better appreciated grouped in the collations. Yet, such minutiæ are really quite interesting. I think we will find in this MS. (which may perhaps assist to date it accurately) a distinct indication of the transmutation of β into υ. Several times I have noticed a suspicious looking υ instead of u for β in words like εβδομος, εβδελυμμενοις etc., where it would seem as if upsilon were intended rather than beta, to be pronounced υ.† (Note ii. 27 ῥαύδω ut vid. pro ῥάβδω). We find θληψει θληψις almost continually (so generally 33), δοσω sometimes only (often with 36), ψιφον (with 67), οξιαν (ii. 12 with CAP 33), οξια (xix. 15 with A 72), πορνιας Pronunciation.

† This is in line with the locality in which these MSS. were written. Notice a definite case by 108 at the end of that MS. (xxi. 20 ευδομος). A reference to 56, the common original, shows what might be a β or a υ at this place.

always (with ℵ and 103), χριαν (with 67), προφηтιας (xix. 10 with ℵB), νησσω (i. 9 with 44), μελλας (vi. 5), αμον (xii. 18 with 33 103), κληδα (iii. 7 with 45 and 72), ομοι (with 62 72), πλειωνα (with 72), πιγας (with 33 39 72 95), πυγας (alone xiv. 7), εχεταί (ii. 25 with ℵ[c] 36 67 69), εγχρισαι (iii. 18 with 16 18 36 etc.), αινειται (xix. 5 with ℵ 12 39), υ for η: τυρων (with 72), κυρυσσοντα (with 72 84), θυριου (with 39 72), υ for ι: βυβλιον (once v. 2), φυλω (for φιλω with 69), ι for υ: ισχις (with 72), η for ι: μελη (for μελι with 109), αιμολυναν (iii. 4), ηγαποισασαι (pro ηγαπησασε iii. 9), μεγιστάναις (vi. 15), δυναντε (with 67), μυκατε (with ℵ 36 72), πεδευω (67 69 84), ανυξαι (v. 2) / ανηξαι (v. 3), ηνυξε (vi. 3 with ℵ 7 45), ηνηξεν (vi. 9 with 69), ὁ παντωκρατωρ (iv. 8 with 39) but generally correct, οι χιλιαρχαι (with 32), επληναν (with 36 39), ξυλυνα (with 69), βλασφιμιας (with 72), ειμοι (pro ει μη xxi. 27). We even go as far as ἡόύδα (pro ιουδα v. 5), εν αυτης· (sic) παντας κ.τ.λ. (v. 13 with 39 72 103), πετρες (vi. 16), φωνην μεγαλει [vii. 2 (with 39)], ζητοισουσιν (ix. 6), αἱπτα several times for ἑπτα, γληκη (for γλυκυ), εἰτις (for ἥτις with 59 67 69 79), ἡμισι; εἶκε (pro εχει xiii. 14), βασταιζοντος (xvii. 7), μαιμησημενου (xviii. 2), not to speak of τους δρακοντα (xx. 2) etc.

Besides such forms as συναγαγαγειν (xvi. 14) and γεγραμμαμενον, the latter nearly constant, βαιβαμαίνον (xix. 13), καικοσμημενην (with 1 39). Sometimes επι τῶ βιβλιον (with 67 xvii. 8), καικινου (for και κοκκινου, see 43), τους δρακοντα! (xx. 2); ἴρις twice, indicates the former pronunciation which resulted in the confusion with ἱερεις.

We have now at last to look at the "new" readings, most of them of no intrinsic value. We subjoin a certain number of perhaps some interest:

i. 5. The addition of 7-16-45-69-102 takes this form: Ante λουσαντι + και λυσαντι και των της αμαρτιας κιλιδων νουσαντι (sic) τη εκχυσει του ζωοποιου αιματος και υδατος και ποιησαντι ημας απο των αμαρτιων βασιλευον ἱερατευμα (sic) και."

It may be thought after the foregoing exhibition (and we have omitted some 100 cases of misspelling) that such a codex is useless. Far from it, especially when it has sisters, and when the itacisms are of local origin.

For the next list will show such words as ημιωριον (viii. 1), λινον (xv. 6) carefully preserved amid the license used.

So finally consider these, principally with textus receptus, indicated as usual by square brackets:

Syriac.

I have suspected for a long time that there was Syriac action and reaction on the 1-46-62 groups (our Erasmian recension), and of a very old type. This is rather emphasized by a partial agreement with this MS. 104 in spots. The relationship is remote, and due to a very old Latin-Coptic-Syriac sympathy in its earliest stages, antedating ℵ (confirmed by the group 119).

But for proof of the influence of the Greek of 1-46-62 etc. on the Syriac see Gwynn's analysis of the Syriac Crawford S. manuscript, p. xxxiii, where he says: "For ἀσχημοσύνη (xvi. 15) S has ܒܗܬܬܐ (.ܒܗܬܬܗ in text p. 20), which would better stand for αἰσχύνη pudor, than (as here required) for pudendum."

Now f. 62/63 read thus αισχυνην, together with 29 f. 61 and 7-45-104-151 (and that friend of 104, viz. 72 "την εσχυνη") plus 108.

This position is reversed at iii. 18 where ασχημοσυνη replaces αισχυνη, the place of 62/3, of the 1 group, being taken by 46-88-101, reinforced by 7-16-(39 illeg.)-45-69-102-104-151-180, with the addition of 17* 36 56 59-121 67-120 113 f. 114 159 169-216 251 and P. Here then we have P too, whose history is still rather obscure. But at any rate we get a view of a very subtle Latin-Syriac element here.

Value of cursive testimony.

We cannot then agree with Dean Gwynn (whose admirable monograph on the Syriac Crawford MS. is before us) as to small value of the unexamined cursive testimony on these problems. He says (p. xxxix) ". . . and about 180 cursives—numbers far short (no doubt) of those by which the copies of other parts of the N.T. are reckoned, yet seemingly enough for adequate attestation. But of the cursives, though not a few (perhaps a larger proportion than in the case of any other N.T. book) give important textual evidence, the majority contribute little or nothing towards establishing the best text."

Now we shall have failed entirely of our purpose, if we have not already demonstrated the enormous value of cursive testimony, and of its power to act as a balance in which we can weigh, and a sieve through which we can sift the readings of our uncials.

For the venerable and learned author has just failed of "a grasp on the central problem" by misunderstanding the slight value of B (= his Q) taken singly (see pp. xlii–lxx). He should not rank it with and weigh it against ℵCAP, for its case is quite different. But we have treated of this at length and will not stop here on the subject.

Notice for instance as to this 1 family, how 46-88-101-137 with 124 reads σαβαωθ ο θεος (iv. 8) against the plain substitution for ο θεος (read by most) of σαβαωθ by the whole of fam 7 17* ? f. 21 36 67-120 80-138 130 169-216. What can this mean except a most roundabout Syriac sympathy. Ephraem reads σαβαωθ. No Versions.

Note that at i. 3 the addition ταυτης after προφητειας is witnessed to by the Syr., and only by the full family 7 + 23 55* 111 146 of MSS. + copt. Vict. Prim. gig etc.

We have forborne to allow ourselves to be led away hitherto from the Gk. MSS. evidence, but the time has come to begin to apply our material, and we must now try to open up the field further.

Rather a strange thing occurs in one member of the Latin group, viz. 102, whose second hand has some readings quite distinctive of Gwynn's Syriac Crawford MS. Thus i. 5 he reads ὁ ἀγαπων (so now 226) alone with Gwynn's S. In the same verse, where Gwynn translates λυων (the rendering of S for λυσαντι of some and λουσαντι of others), 102 226 have λουσας sic, as if they had a similar recension under their eyes.

The revision of the text of 102* by this corrector may repay some study.

On the other hand, 102* has quite a good deal of direct sympathy for *syr*S. Note for instance his unique use of ὦτα for οὖς in iii. 13. Now, although Gwynn gives us οὖς here, if you will turn back to his note on ii. 7 you will find he says that the Syriac is "literally ὦτα and so throughout S and also Σ likewise."

See the important place xviii. 17 where ποντον is used by 56 and 102 alone with *syr*S and a few Latt. lacum. (Now add gr. 169-216 and 172-217).

That the text of the 1 group (including 12) is very old can be seen in many ways. Take an exceptional case, however, viii. 3. There is a variation here for ταις προσευχαις, viz. τας προσευχας read by (17) 36 53* 59 67 77 and a few, but 46-88-101 read τας εὐχας a form found in the Didache.

Now *syr*S runs not only with ℵ (τον αιωνα i. 6; +την εκ ante των λεγοντων ii. 9) but with ℵ 1 12 in combination (οψονται i. 7) and so on. Note viii. 9 ψυχην ℵ 46-88-101-137 and *syr*S alone with Tyc 1. copt. Such singular for plural is always an interesting point to consider as to Syriac bases.

These various members of the 1 family, viz. 1 12 46 59 62/3 with 67 80 81 etc. 111 113 130 200 etc., are all found witnessing singly, when not in combination, with *syr*S. Thus ἁ (pro ὁ) i. 11 : 34 35 38 62/3 72 87 with *syr*S. Such readings seem to be the eclectic readings of the Egypto-Syriac-Latin tribe.

This matter is very deeply involved. For at i. 13 where A alone reads ομοιωμα for ομοιον, we find Gwynn would translate his *syr*S as ὡς ὁμοιωμα.

Again, i. 17 *syr*S reads alone with f. 62/3 επι (pro προς).

Further, i. 18 *syr*S reads alone κλειν or κλειδα in the singular. No Greek copy so far; but see clavem in Capr. Carth.

We draw the net wider at i. 17 where *syr*S has χειρα, omitted by all Gk. MSS. except three groups, viz. the 1 group, the Compl. group and the 21 group, the latter being apparently a stepping stone between the Græco-Latin group 7 and the Græco-Syriac group 1-12-46-62-119 etc. We have not emphasized the relationship of 21-28 etc. enough perhaps with the Latins in dealing with 104, but an inspection will show it.

As to *syr*S. The Compl. group again joins ℵ and *syr*S alone at ii. 7 in omitting αυτω after δωσω.

Of course we must remember that the Crawford MS. differs a great deal from the other Syriac MSS. (and still has a number of unique readings), but who was the author of it? Ephraem? It may be. At any rate we establish not only that it is based on a very old text, but that both it and the groups most largely influencing the textus receptus go far back of ℵ.

Note, in passing, that Syriac knows no distinction between εκ and απο, and hence action and reaction causes the confusion in the use of these two words, and without a great stretch of imagination behold us face to face with a very ancient bilingual (Syriac-Greek) or even *tri*lingual (Latin-Syriac-Greek) recension, which was at the base of the various readings.

But enough on this subject in this place.

There is much more in the relationship of other MSS. (e.g. 13-23-55 at i. 17 οτι εγω alone with *syr*S copt) which will claim attention before we have done.

It only remains to say that this enquiry points in the true direction.

Transpositions. What disfigures the Greek textus receptus is the large number of transpositions. This can easily be seen in my comparison of T.R. and several other MSS. with the text of Hippolytus as a standard. This must be due to some special cause, and that cause is no doubt the retranslation of part of a very old Syriac version, in what Hort would call pre-Syrian days, which resulted in the 1 family, which gave us our textus receptus.

In a certain way the 34-35 group shows exactly the same trilingual influence. Note xxi. 19 καρχηδων read both by Coptic and Syriac (Crawford MS.); xviii. 12 μαργαριτων ℵ f. 35 59, f. 95 111 113 159, f. 178 syr and gig Prim. Note a conflate reading at xxii. 6 των πνευματων των αγιων προφητων read only by f. 34 164-166, 169-216, 172-217 and Syriac Crawford, and note how 23 and 34-35-87 draw together at xii. 4 etc. Note also connection of archetype of Apoc. 18 and Syriac in very early days.

Now see under 108, where we find the scribe who wrote the last three pages (xxi. 14 onwards) has a handwriting very similar to that of this MS. 104.

Although 108 = definitely 56 and no other, there are sympathies for the 69-104 family, and notably in xxi. 3 φωνην μεγαλην by 108*, just before 108 begins, so that they all come from the same locality.

See also xvi. 15 αισχυνην, xvii. 2 εμεθυσαν, xviii. 11 —και πενθουσιν, and finally compare πρων for πνων at xxii. 6 by 108.

Apoc. 151 now joins the group 7-16-39-45-69-102-104, being much the closest to 104. Yet neither 104 nor 151 were copied from each other. 151 is another very small MS., dated (if we accept an uncial subscription) in 1112, but both inscription and subscription are different from 104. The last MS. of the group is 180 at Florence. Of this whole nine-fold group only one (151) is at Athos (monastery of St. Gregorius No. 3).

Apoc. 105 Scr. = (Ev. 394. Ac. 170. P. 186) = Vallicell. F. 17
„ 105 Miller-Scr. = (Ac. 301. P. 334. Apoc. 109!) S. Saba 20
} = Greg. 104? (Ac. 243. P. 287) = S. Saba 20.

„ 105 Greg. = (Ac. 307. P. 469, 351) Athens nat. (43) = Scr. 111, is said by Gregory to be identical with his newest No. 1611 and to correspond to the Athens No. 94. (Soden α 208).

The above confusion, added to the fact that Gregory also calls his Apoc. 89 S. Saba 20, justifies us in leaving out this No. 105 altogether.

See under my 111 for Athens nat. 94.

GROUP 6-31-106-(164-166 as to i–xi.)-171-174-(182).

Apoc. 106. Apoc. 106 (Ev. 605. Ac. 233. P. 243) = Zittau A 1. = Greg. 106 (Ev. 664. Ac. 253. P. 303). [Scr. 106. Greg. 106, new 664. Sod. δ 502]. In the town-library of Zittau. F^{os}. 761^A to 775^B. Collated from excellent photographs supplied through the courtesy of the librarian Dr. Th. Gärtner in 1908.

[Early XVI]. (Greg. XV). Belonged to David Fleischmann (ob. 1606), then to Joh. Fleischmann, who gave it to the city in 1620. It survived the siege and fire of 1757. Matthaei collated it in 1801/2, but the collation has disappeared. Gregory says Ed. von Dobschütz "hat sie bearbeitet besonders das Beiwerk." Scrivener says Matthaei collated the O.T. portion—(it is a large codex of 775 leaves, with O.T. down to Esther, with I Esdras, IV Maccabees, Judith and Tobit, and whole N.T.)—for Dean Holmes' edition of the Septuagint and "saw its great critical value," and adds that Lagarde was then (1868?) using it at Göttingen for the Septuagint (Genesis, pp. 7, 8. Lips. 1868), describes it as a paper copy, XV or XVI, and cites from Matthaei, who dated it XIV.

For a late MS. it has considerable interest, and a certain critical value. It consists of a very old base (going back to ℵA and 56) thoroughly revised, incorporating P readings, as well as being brought into harmony both with the B revision, and that of Arethas as particularly represented by 4, 20, 32, 34, 48, 64, 74, as well as 6 and 31, whose sister it is.

It appears, however, as if it were copied independently from a fairly old MS. We may come across this yet.

Anyhow, it shows up quite a few things of interest in the history of the text. While one cannot call it really careless, there are a number of unnecessary new readings, which are for the most part not due to the copy; some are due to errors of eye, and of absorption of similar looking or sounding words (ii. 13, 14; xi. 13; xv. 4 etc.), others to reasons more obscure.

Eclecticism. Among other things it helps to invalidate the ℵB readings, showing them up as purely critical lections; those of ℵ, only revived by B for insufficient critical reasons. It is thoroughly eclectic, having every possible and unusual combination, such as BP, ABP, CB, CBP, ℵP, CP, ℵBP, AB, ℵAP, CA, ℵC (vi. 11), ℵCAP (without B), ℵCA (without BP), even πορνιας ℵ^aCB 67 (without ℵ*AP xiv. 8) and πορνια xix. 2 with ℵA 2 12 72, but the main body of readings is revised on B. Even this is subject to arbitrary change when desired [see infra on readings agreeing with text. rec.], and certain Arethas readings adopted with a handful of cursives, but the fact remains that the base is Egyptian, and that of A in a large measure; see xvii. 8. ουκέγεγραπται sic pro ού γεγραπται alone with A [non fam].

Here 6-31 have evidently corrected the error, but not 106.

At xviii. 16. ἡ is omitted before περιβεβλημενη alone with A, a thing not remarkable without the above to emphasize it.

Again, it brings ℵ and A into a relationship more close than hitherto appears. Added to this, it has a measure of the text of 56, that very old text in a modern MS., which almost carries us back of ℵA, but the text, as I say, has been so thoroughly revised that the help we might derive is nullified to a large extent. It has an old base, with traces of a very old base, is all that we can say.

Before running through the exceptional readings, we will take up briefly the palæographical features of 106.

Although there are plentiful commas and the punctuation not too bad, the scribe is apparently reproducing his exemplar when he writes twice ορα μη συνδουλος σου ειμι without any stops at all. Notwithstanding the severe revision, we are carried back probably to the IX[th] or X[th] century of this revision, for ν ἐφελκ. is still plentifully sprinkled throughout. The form ειδον is constant, yet occasionally we find φιλαδελφια, πορνιας etc.

There is no iota post- or subscript, unless we so consider a minute dot at i. 16 δεξια, vii. 10 αρνιω, vii. 11 θεω, but I doubt if this be intended for iota sub., and the scribe was copying quite an old MS. From xx. 12 it would appear that it might have been a late uncial or short double-columned cursive, for he imports κατα from nowhere except a line below what he was copying, writing καταγεγραμμενων for γεγραμμενων, apparently taking up the κατα below, thus:

εκ των γεγραμμενων εν τοις βιβλ ιοις κατα τα εργα αυτων και εδωκεν

There is no trace of numerals for επτα, δωδεκα etc., though he blunders at vi. 9 and writes τριτην for πεμπτην, and again at xvii. 7 δωδεκα for δεκα! οταν is generally written ὅτἂν (so also in others and in 74, which is a sympathetic MS.).

Epsilon is very straight and has a very small bar. Must not be confounded with iota.

Abbreviations are rather thorough. ανθρωπος, θεος etc. always abbreviated. πνευμα also, except i. 4 πνευματων; xviii. 2 πνευματος; iii. 1, iv. 5, v. 6, xvi. 13, 14 πνευματα; υιον in full i. 13, xii. 5; υιων ii. 14; κυριε in full vii. 14; κυριος κυριων xvii. 14, xix. 16.

The revision has failed in some places, which brings out the old basic text well. E.g. ix. 16. [του ιππικου cum unc. et t.r.]. Contra minusc. Mox δις (pro δυο) cum A 1* 12 31 (hiat 6) 36 f. 46 56 59-121 67-120 al. (δεις P). [—δυο B et mult].

Here we see the 1 family holding true. The old text of this (errors and all) is sometimes caught up by our MS. See below where marked with the sign §.

But let us run through the MS., leaving the new readings till later.

Inscr.: αποκαλυψις του αγιου ιω^χ του θεολογου is with 17 23 f. 25 27 28 31 33 38 51 55 57 75 90 109 127 135 178 al. pc. Er. 2. 3. 4. Col.

Of no particular importance, except that we find 31 in the list.

i. 14. ωσει (pro ως) with 36 f. 38 99-100 113 f. 114 121 130 146 170 218 251.

We shall see later some sympathy with 38 and 100, but nothing exceptional, except at:

iii. 16. ἐκμέσαι alone with 100 154 210; but ἐμμεσαι B* 4 48 56 64 98.

x. 4. τας εαυτων φωνας with 87 100 and 182.

§ ii. 6. εγω (pro καγω) with 12 alone. Now add 160 164-166 200.

13. —ὁς (absorbed by πιστος) with 6-31 f. 34 164 165 171-174 182 206 226 only. Here the whole 6 family is included.

17. ειδεν instead of οιδεν (pro εγνω) with 26 33 59 88 92 101 108 144 156 161 204 boh, a very mixed lot.

§ 18. τοις (pro της) with 1 28 31 (56) 113 145 146 156 210 223.

28. πρωινον with AB 33 72 204.

iii. 19. ζῆλον (pro ζηλωσον) with 6 31 74 123[non fam] 171-174-182 and 176 206.

14 and 92 agree in some places with our codex. The relation is merely of their old text revised or not, as the case may be. (Vide infra ix. 13, xiii. 10). But xviii. 2, 14 are exceptions.

vi. 8. +και (post ᾅδης) alone with 6-171-174-182 only.

Now take the rather particular and interesting Arethas type which has intruded here and there; not particularly till we reach ix. 10 and x. 8, and not again till xvii. 15 when it holds to the end.

ix. 10. εξουσιαν εχουσιν αδικησαι xvii. 15. +και ἡ γυνη (ante οὗ)

xviii. 1. +αλλον (post αγγελον)

13. και ελαιον και οινον

[N.B. Above is the clearest kind of restitution; και οινον omitted by B and his host, was restored (only with this change of order) by some of the Arethas MSS.].

xviii. 16. —και (ante κοκκινον)

All the foregoing does not fairly bring out the relations of ℵ A and B to the codex. This must be seen in the general collation.

Before giving the list of unique readings, let us run through a few passages chiefly of agreement with the textus receptus. Perhaps this will throw some light on it:

Notwithstanding ανοιξω (at ii. 25) of B and group, our MS. reads [ἂν ἥξω]. Here then B and group are clearly accused, when even 106, after weighing the evidence, refuses to go with B. See also iv. 3 [ομοιος ορασει σμαραγδινω]. Contra B etc., and 100. Also v. 10 βασιλευσουσιν with ℵP etc. Contra B etc.

† See other instances above with ℵ[a].

Also note xviii. 2 [Habet και φυλακη παντος ορνεου ακαθαρτου και μεμισημενου] against not only 4 56 64 67 74 84 and a few, but against 31 (hiat 6).

This is excellent testimony here, for, coupled with evident sisterhood of 31, and affinity for 4, 64, 67, 74, 84, and basic sympathy with 56, our codex really justifies its existence by retaining these words. Of such circuitous proof are these minutiæ capable.

Note then:

xxii. 14. πειλῶσιν (pro πυλωσιν) (ποιλωσιν 39 179).

From the above a fair estimate can be made of the individual carelessness of the scribe, and where the sister 182 joins a probable excuse. The agreement with the Versions is either fortuitous, or as deeply seated as the original of this family, corrected out of the others of the group.

As regards punctuation it does not go very far astray as a rule, except as pointed out concerning ὁρα μη συνδουλος σου ειμι, and at xix. 10, where the absence of του before ιησου prim. (with ℵABP permult.) has led to this: την μαρτυριαν · ῑυ τῶ θῶ προσκυνησον · sic.

As regards accents, κριμα is written once κρῖμα for twice κρίμα. ἶρις always with acute.

We have λῦσαι v. 2, λῦσον ix. 14.

μεγιστᾶνες vi. 15, μεγιστάνες xviii. 23.
ἀγορᾶσαι xiii. 17.
μύρον xviii. 13.
κρῖνει xix. 11.

ὅτᾰν (as said before) is everywhere thus but in two places; ἀγγελλων is once written with two lambdas (v. 11, cum 87), κρυσταλος varies between one and two lambdas.

In conclusion, for fear I have not made myself entirely clear, it would appear as if the ancestor of this MS. was the father of A, rather than A itself, about contemporaneous with ℵ. That it was transmitted purely to the x[th] century, when it was brought into more or less conformity with B and Arethas, and was retransmitted without appreciable change, or at any rate with changes which we can identify. That the ℵB lections are to be considered part of the B revision, and not as giving us the parent text, the parent probably being purer than ℵ in these places. That the ℵAB lections on the other hand are largely not revision, though part may be. Pedigree.

We now have a pretty good check in Apoc. 182, also of the family 6-31-106, but closest to 106, joining in several unique readings of the latter.

182 itself indulges in new readings, but by comparing 106 with 182 we can see where each goes astray from type.

Consult 171-174 also.

GROUP 26-41-42-53-107-(153-211-222).

Apoc. 107. Apoc. 107 (Act. 232. Paul. 271). B.M. Addit[1]. 28816 [=Greg. Apoc. 181 (Ac. 205. P. 477)]. This is a dated MS. [A.D. 1110] on vellum. [Scr. 107. Greg. 181, new 203? Sod. α 203].

The Apoc. extends from f°. 125-139, followed by a few pages of other matter and a subscription giving the name of the scribe and monastery with the date. It begins with ἀποκάλυψιν πεπονημένων θεαρέστως, σύνοψις σχολικὴ · παρατεθεῖσα ὑπὸ ἀρέθα ἀναξίου ἐπισκόπου καισαρίας καππαδοκίας, followed by τὰ κεφάλαια τῆς ὀπτανθείσης ἀποκαλύψεως τῶν εὐαγγελιστῆς ἰώ ἐν πάτμω τῆ νήσω:—72 in number, and then by the inscription in capitals:

Ιησου χριστου αποκαλυψις, δοθησα τω θεολογω ιωαννη (sic) with Apoc. 26 alone; and it develops early that these two MSS. 26-107 are the closest sisters of the family 26-41-42-53-107. I collated the first three chapters nearly 20 years ago, and now (July 1908) having reached this number in the regular order, I have completed it at the British Museum, and not from photographs.

It seemed to me it was going to be a very dry task, but, as usual, each MS. has something to say. And we get a little view occasionally behind the scenes, which helps to establish the origin of the text of this group and to make clear the type apart from a few vagaries of its more modern sisters 41-42-53.

We need not let it detain us very long; but long enough to record the following.

Among the new readings, either not recorded by Scrivener under 26, or passed over by him, or really belonging to the older exemplar, the basis of both, notice:

ii. 7. — *το
11. ακουσατο
20. αφικας (pro εας) · αφηκας ℵ[a] 26 36 111 f. 119 121 143 241 *syr*S.
vii. 4. ρμ (abbrev.) sic
8 fin. εσφραγισμένεσ
xii. 14. [οπου] τρέφηται with 32 189 alone.
14. καιρὸ (pro καιρου) sic
xiv. 10. τοῦ οἴνοι errore
15. θερμὸς (pro θερισμος) errore xviii. 4. *συγκονωνησητε (41 42 συγκυν...).
23. εν τη φαρκεία (pro εν τη φαρμακεια) errore
xix. 2. την πορνη[ν] την μεγαλην Not recorded as την πορνη for 26, as την θαλασσα is at x. 6.
xxi. 19. *κεκοσμενοι errore (corrected by third hand).
21. — ανα inprimo So 130.

To which add:

xi. 2. και την αυλην την εξωθεν του ναου, εκβαλε εξωθεν του ναου · εκβαλε εξωθεν (42 53 have the reduplication, but with final εξω, while 41 reads ανωθεν for εσωθεν and apparently 26 reads εξωθεν twice without the reduplication!)

xiii. 16. ινα λαβωσι το χαραγμα αυτου και ινα δωσωσιν αυτους χαραγματα (pro ινα δωση αυτοις χαραγμα) So 26 exactly, while 41 42 53 cut out the first clause, but have αυτους and δωσωσιν, and f. 95 shows the ancient origin of the additional clause by reading λαβωσι τω χαραγμα αυτου instead of δωση αυτοις χαραγμα.

Then with 26 alone:

ii. 7. εν τω παραδεισω του θεου σου

vi. 2. —και ult. (ante ινα) but so 81-204 111 124[non fam] 126 146 171-174 215 and gigas Tyc 3.

vii. 12. και η σοφια και η δοξα (A change of order which 41/42 and 53 neglect).

ix. 20. οὐκατεκάνθησαν errore pro ουκ απεκτανθησαν, while 26 has ου κατεκαυθησαν.

Even the error at x. 6 την θαλασσα is common to 26-107.

xi. 17. ὁ παντοκρατορ (also 36) So both at xvi. 7, and with 26 102 103 at xv. 3, but not elsewhere.

xii. 13. +τον υιον (ante τον αρρενα) See copt.

xvi. 18. οἱ οὐνοῖ (pro οἱ ανθρωποι) Also now 149-186.

xvii. 17. τεθῶσιν (sic) οι λογοι του θεου

xix. 14. ενδεδυμενος 107, ενδεδομενος 26 (See *syr*S and ℵ 113 152-179 f. 178 182 ενδεδυμενοις)

xx. 4. αὐτου (pro αὐτων sec.) And 207.

12. τοις βιβλοις And 108. (Also ℵ 18 ταις βιβλοις; τω βιβλιω *boh syr*S).

15 init. και εἰσ τισ

xxii. 3. +εκει (post θεου), while at xii. 15 ποταμοφόρον (an easy error, strangely enough avoided by nearly all scribes) is recorded by 26-107 and 29.

And x. 2. και τον ευωνυμον (—δε) by 26-107 and 18 with sah arm aeth arab Cass. Prim. Tyc 3.

Also vi. 14. —αυτων by 26-107 and ℵ 31. No others.

Even vii. 16. πιvασουσιν finds a place still in 26-107, being also read by ℵA 73 108 154 200 212 218 and Compl., all things which 41-42-53 avoided.

Now ℵA 18 29 31 are all old witnesses (as gigas above vi. 2 and 95 in xiii. 16), which reminds us that the base of this text is distinctly old, and the Arethas reviser missed these points.

Again, a little error viii. 10 τον τριτον is still found in 41 42 53, but not recorded for 26, while the omission in ix. 21 of ουτε εκ των φαρμακειων αυτων by 26-107, together with 8-24, 72, 98, is evidently unauthorised, not being found in 41-42-53, nor in 30 the sister of 98, nor occurring in the MSS. related to 72.

Further, we get more light on viii. 1, for 107 with 26 reads ἡμιωριον distinctly, against 41-42-53 of the family MSS. This, the reading of Westcott-Hort, with only C 44-52-82, 97-214, 146*txt.* and 41-42-53 above recorded, loses prestige still further when it is shown that 26-107 and their original did not countenance the change by 41-42-53, and 122 contradicts 97-214. As to viii. 1.

We are carried back into early days at

vi. 1. φωνην (pro φωνης)

xii. 9. —μετ' αυτου εβληθησαν

12. κατοικουντες (pro σκηνουντες)

xiv. 8. ἡ (pro οτι)

10. των αγγελων (—αγιων)

13. γαρ (pro δε)

14. εχοντα

17. αγγελος αλλος

and 20 fin. διακοσιων (pro εξακοσιων) with ℵ* 26 *syr*S absolutely alone.

But xix. 5. [τον θεον cum t.r.] So 26. Contra τω θεω ℵCAP, even B and a few including 41-42-53 *syr*S gig.

And xxii. 2. τῶν καρπῶν (pro τον καρπον) 26 82 104 (ℵ 65 = τους καρπους, 113 f. 178 *syr*S = καρπους), thus focussing once more on the probable community of origin of all these Greek MSS. on bi- or tri-lingual origin. These little things cannot have come down piecemeal or by selection, but must be due to common heritage from other bi-columnar Versions. Take the exceedingly rough γαρ pro δε in xiv. 13 : τα γαρ εργα αυτων for τα δε εργα αυτων, borne witness to by ℵCAP—all of them—only our MS. 26-107 and those very old stems 18 38 111 113 130 146 159 200 and f. 95. It passed out of everything else, yet was in ps-Ambr. and gigas, in Prim. and sah ; so it is no use to say that γαρ was the product of an error oculi from the propinquity of εργα, for if so it passed into the Latin simultaneously, for gigas was not modelled on ℵCAP, but perhaps they upon it and upon its forerunner, that is its accompanying Greek version.

This place we see the B reviser missed in our 26-107. But on the other hand, the text as a whole has not only been generally accommodated to B and the Arethas cursives, but we find B peculiarities, as at ix. 14 ἐφράτῃ for ευφρατῃ, while at xvi. 12 B 19 and 59 repeat the form ἐφρατην, but our MS., with 26 and 16, does not.

So iv. 3 σμαραγδω · και σαρδιω (pro και σαρδινω) with 26-41-42-53, 44 and 52, and practically B 13-23-55.

So xvi. 5 ὃς ην (pro ὁ ην) with B and a few.

As regards πληξῃ for παισῃ ix. 5 with 26-41-42-53 and f. 10, we notice that while the group holds, it goes with the Complutensian MSS., which are a branch of the Andreas recension.

The pure Arethas forms are favoured particularly as follows :

xxi. 22. θεος (pro κυριος ὁ θεος) 4-48-64, 26-41 44 52 (42-53).

xxi. 5. ιδου ιδου (bis pro semel) 4-48, 26-41-42-53.

xx. 12. εστωτας τους μικρ. και τους μεγ. 4-20-48-64, 26, 31 32 34 74 106.

xx. 4. επανω (pro επ') 4-48-64, 26-41-42-53.

One more reference and we have done. Above at xix. 19 —της γης and xx. 4 ελαβε we find 90 obtrude. This would be a small enough thing, without a sidelight at xviii. 12 where we find the scribe of 107 wrote first μαργαρου no doubt. At any rate it has been corrected to μαρμαρου. This no doubt came from the relationship of 90.

Note also i. 11. βλεπῃς 26 67 95 113 141 188 201 218.
i. 12. ελαλη 8 26 72 81-204 95 108 113 140 162 167 233.

In entering our group up to the present, we find we have not recorded "non 26" when absent from the combination 41-42-53. This was omitted purposely for fear Scrivener's collation of 26 might be imperfect. But now with the additional check of 107 we shall be able to add this as we enter 107, for the documents 26-107 are almost word for word alike, down to errors one would have supposed any scribe should have corrected.

There is no iota sub- or postscript in the MS., while it is found in the others of the group. Breathings are square. Numerals are sometimes indicated by letters, but not always. When they are, they generally have three horizontal lines superimposed, thus κ̿δ̿. υἱος and cases are generally contracted. We find πόρνων xvii. 5 with the Compl. MSS. The scribe himself copied carefully and made very few new errors, so that the parent stands clearly before us, probably a MS. of the IX[th] century.

The inscription is alone with 26. There is no subscription proper, but an addendum by the scribe, saying: αἶνος κράτος δόξα τὲ τῶ λόγω πρέπει · τῶ τηδέλτ̄ δουη̄ μοι ταυτὴ τὸ πέρας · ἀνδρέα τάλα μοναχῶ παρ' ἀξιαν · εὔχεσθε καμοῦ τοῦ ταπεινοῦ γραφέος:—

And a further and longer subscription by the same hand at the end of the volume, ten pages further on, saying:

Δοξα πατρι και υιω και αγιω πνευματι τω δοντι τελος (in abbreviated capital script) ἐτελειώθη χάριτι χῦ ἡ ἱερὰ καὶ ψυχωφελὴς βίβλος αὐτη . Διὰ χειρὸς ἀνδρέα ἁμαρτωλοῦ (sic) και παρ' ἄξιαν μοναχοῦ . μηνὶ μαρτίω · ἰνδικτιόνος τετάρτης . ἔτει ἐκτίσεως (sic) κόσμου . ἐξακισχιλιοστον · ἐξακοσιοστον · ἐννεα ϛ δέκατον ∴ εἰς ὄρο τοῦ πρσ̄ ϛ ἅ μελετίου τ (illeg.) ἐν τῆ μονῆ τοῦ σρσ̄ ∴ παρακαλῶ δὲ δυσω πω (illeg.) ϛ δέομαι παντας and so forth.

Ending: ἡ χεὶρ ἡ γράψασαση πε ταυτα ει (∴) τῶν χείρων μοῦ τὸν κόπον λύσαι χε̄ μου · ϛ τὴν ἄφεσιν δίδου τῶν ἐσφαλμένων ∴ ἀμὴν γένοιτο χε̄ μοῦ θῦ λόγε. τέλος ἐν ἔτει ,ϛ̄ χ̂ ιθ̄ ἰν̂ δ̂ (= A.D. 1110. Ind. 4).

Now consult 153-211-222 for a line of affinity. 222 is our oldest dated cursive, and 107 comes 100 years after, also with a date.

[N.B. 108 = 56].

Apoc. 108. Apoc. 108 { (Ac. 236. P. 273) = Upsala Univ. gr. 11 = Greg. 129 (Ac. 334. P. 436) =
129 { (Ac. 238) = Linkoping Linkoping Benzel 35.

The above is rather a muddle. Therefore neglect Scrivener's 129. Make 108 equal to Gregory's 129, only correcting his reference, and Scr. 108 = Greg. 129 becomes properly the Upsala codex.

The photographs were kindly supplied to me by the good offices of the Librarian at Upsala. [Scr. 108. Greg. 129, new 1852. Sod. α 114].

Rather a peculiar codex, neatly written, of small format, and not very easy to date exactly.

While the text is in the main the B recension, ν εφελκ. is the only thing which carries the date back somewhat, other old forms being generally wanting, although they obtrude occasionally. The converse, however, at vi. 5 ειδε pro ιδε with only 102, while ν εφελκ. is almost constant.

Neither iota post. nor sub. are present, and palaeographically we could place it in the xii$^{\text{th}}$ or xi$^{\text{th}}$ century, but I hardly believe it is earlier than xiii$^{\text{th}}$ or xiv$^{\text{th}}$. I think it is the most difficult codex which I have met with to date.

The only confusing letter is τ, which sometimes exactly resembles π.

B readings. Anyhow, we could dismiss it very shortly as a good representative of the B type and hardly more. But it is so good a representative of the B type that it helps us definitely to recover some of the B readings, obscured by B itself—thus, as I have said before, every manuscript, however humble, has its uses.

We find that: ix. 6 και ου μη ευρωσιν not και ου μη ευρισουσιν; xii. 2 εκραζεν not εκραξεν; xii. 8 ισχυσεν not ισχυον; xiv. 18 κραυγη not φωνη; xix. 17 το δειπνον not τον δειπνον should doubtless be the readings of B; while it confirms such things as xix. 5 τω θεω pro τον θεον, few cursives but ℵCAP and B.

A pretty light is thrown on this at xii. 2/3, where after our codex shows εκραζεν with C in verse 2 against B, we are all three together immediately after at verse 3 with πυρος μεγας.

Not until the twelfth chapter can I establish any definite relation with another cursive. But here at xii. 14 we have οπως στρεφηται (for the usual οπου τρεφεται, or the οπως τρεφεται of B) while 69 gives alone so far οπως στρεφειται. We had already suspicions of this (see πολοι for πολλοι by 108 at viii. 11 alone [πολυ 69]; ix. 5 αποκτηνωσιν 69, 108; xi. 7 θυριον 69, 108 and only 41), and shortly after it is confirmed at xii. 17 τυρουντων 69 and 108 alone. See also xiii. 15 τη εικονη 69 108; xviii. 11 —και πενθουσιν 69 108 and others of 69 family.

Now 69 is a græco-lat of the family 7-16-39-45-69-102-104-151-180, and curiously enough some agreement is found with the second hand of 102.

As both 69 and 102 are xiv$^{\text{th}}$ century, my estimate above as to date for our codex is perhaps somewhat confirmed.

While we rarely approximate the particular 69 family text, we suppose the scribes of 69 104 and 108 may have been from the same locality or monastery.

It is, however, clear from certain new little readings and mannerisms that we have an element in 108 which is foreign to our collection so far. This will be seen further on in the unique forms and readings and in occasional agreement with other cursives.

We are attracted, for instance, to the curious error ἐὰρ for αν at xiv. 4. B and its tribe read εαν. A simple error one says at first, but we must have patience for a moment. The scribe is too careful for this kind of error. Something must have caught and distracted his eye. But no MS. shows trouble here. Turn up the Complutensian edition, however, and what do you find but +γαρ post οπου. This is very far-fetched you may say. Not at all. Follow the scribe closely. At xv. 6 we have a reading absolutely alone with the Complutensian edition, viz. +και ante καθαρον !

Again, in between, at xv. 2 we note the unique omission by our MS. 108 of μεμιγμενην before πυρι. Now the Complutensian alone changes the order to πυρι μεμιγμενην, reading υαλινην πυρι as our MS., but adding μεμιγμενην instead of dropping it as we do. So h and Prim. 'igni permixtum.'

Therefore, we shall establish some connection later with another MS. having influenced the Complutensian, OR we shall find that our innocent-appearing scribe of the XII-XIV century really flourished after 1514, notwithstanding his consistent use of ν εφελκυστικον; but this is certainly not the case.

Here are the new readings of our codex:

i. 1. ἰωάν̄ου sic (pro ιησου χριστου) Vigil.
ibid. +κυριος (ante ο θεος) So now 176-206.

ii. 17. εχω ut vid. (pro εχων) ibid. οὐδε εἷς vel οὐδ εἷς (pro ουδεις)

iii. 20. —και κρουω usque ad θυραν sec. (ex homoiotel.). So now Oxyr[1080°] 214 233.

iv. 4. περιβεβλημμενους (Vide x. 1 περιβεβλημμενον 32 et 108).

v. 1. σφραγίσεις sic
3. οὐδῆς (pro ουδεις)
ibid. +και λῦσαι τας σφραγιδας αυτου (post βιβλιον) with *syr*S.

vi. 17. ἡ ἡ ἡμερα sic (Om. ἡ 38 142 233 246).

vii. 4. εσφαγμενων PRIMO LOCO (pro εσφραγ.) So now 113.
† ibid. εκατον και μ̄δ (Observe ρ̄μ̄δ 107, ρκμδ[es] 240, ρ̄κδ 200).

viii. 11. πολοι (pro πολλοι) (Hoc loco πολυ 69 solus, πολλυ 201; saepe alibi 69 πολλοις sic, et 108 in xvii. 1 πολῶν solus).

ix. 4. ανθρωποις (pro ανθρωπους) ibid. επι του μετωπου Cf. copt.
14. —μεγαλω So now all fam 119 and 149-186 and armm (except 3).
17. ὁράσεισ sic
19. —αι γαρ ουραι [*Cf. syr*S].

x. 1. ἡ ἔρις (pro ἶρις) (+ ἡ CAB etc.; ερις nova, sed 28 εριν, rell. fam 21 ιριν).
ibid. —και το προσωπον
10. γλυκύν (pro γλυκυ) (Cf. γλυκαζων 7-45-104-151).

xi. 4. και (pro αι post λυχνιαι) (Om. αι ℵ etc.).
12. αναβετε sic (αναβειτε 39-180, αναβατε ℵCAP 9 26 etc.).

xii. 14. οπως στρεφηται (οπως στρεφειται 69).
ibid. καιρον και καιρονσ sic

xiii. 5. εδοθι prim.
ibid. +πολεμου (sic) ante ποιησαι (+πολεμον B etc.).

† Our scribe does not favour writing symbols for numerals. This is the first time. The next occurs at xi. 16 οἱ κ̄δ, then not until xiii. 18 χ̄ξ̄ς̄, xiv. 1, 3 ρ̄μ̄δ̄, and not until much later does he ever write ζ for επτα or Γ̄ for τρια etc. (see xxi.).

xiv. 4. ἐὰρ sic plane (pro αν) [+γαρ post οπου Compl. solus; vide postea, Compl. cum 108 xv. 6].

9. χαραγματα Cf. sah.

11. τὸ χάραγμον sic

19. εξεβαλλεν primo loco (εβαλλεν 39 63 216).

ibid. εβαλλεν sec. loco So 113. [56 (=108) saepe hoc modo].

xv. 2. —μεμιγμενην (Ord. invert. h Prim. Compl. πυρι μεμιγ.).

ibid. εκ της εικονος και του θηριου (—αυτου) Cf. 13 127-215 217.

6. —οι (ante επτα prim.) So now 146-155.

ibid. +και (ante καθαρον) With Compl. alone (vide supra xiv. 4).

xvi. 11. —αυτων prim. Cf. boh.

15. γιμνος ut vid.

ibid. βλεπει (pro βλεπωσι vel βλεπουσι) (βλεπη 167, videat Prim.).

18. τηλοικοῦτος So 113.

xvii. 1. πολῶν sic (Vide supra viii. 11 πολοι, viii. 8 θαλασαν, xx. 8 τεσαρσι, xix. 3 αληλουια).

3. κκόκκινον sic So 233. (and below xviii. 12).

15. λαὸς Cf. arm 4.

xviii. 12. κκοκκινου (Cf. supra xvii. 3, et hoc loco 43: κκοκινου).

13. [σωματων και] ψυχων (pro ψυχας) So 164 176-206. [14-92 ψυχων pro σωματων].

xix. 9. ὗτοι sic (pro ουτοι)

10. την μαρτυριαν · ιῦ τῶ θῶ προσκυνησον So the punctuation in 120 182 207.

21. επι (pro εκ prim. ante του στοματος)

xx. 2. επατησεν (pro εκρατησε)

15. ἤ τις (pro εἴ τις) (39 67-120 81-204 114 154 233).

xxi. 9. [την νυμφην] —την γυναικα (Cf. vg MS. dem.).

(For xxi. 14 to xxii. 21 by 108 see beyond).

The most notable of the above are:

i. 1. ιωανου pro ιησου χριστου +κυριος ante ο θεος

xx. 2. επατησεν.

For other affiliations, consult the collations.

For traces of 56 by the first hand:

iii. 1. τοῖς (pro της) Thus wrote 108* but corrected it. So 16 21 29 41 and 56.

2. στηρισον

9. προσκυνησουσιν

iv. 7. [πετωμενω] and elsewhere.

ix. 21. φωνων

xv. 4. φοβηθει [σε]

xvii. 2. εμεθυσαν.

A most interesting thing now occurs, however. The last three pages of the codex (from xxi. 14 to the end) are written by a different hand, who resembles a good deal that of Apoc. 104,† but does not seem to be the same. However, it develops instantly that this hand is copying quite another MS. and that MS. none other than our good and hitherto unique friend 56 (or its parent).

As the last page of 56 is very much the worse for wear this codex checks our previous collation.

Instead of μακαριοι οι πλυνοντες τας στολας αυτων of ℵA 38 at xxii. 14, and as we thought for 56, 108 confirms a conflate (which can now be calculated for 56) of: μακαριοι οι ποιουντες τας εντολας αυτου + και πλυνοντες τας στολας αυτων.

At xxi. 16 ισον is read for ισα by 108. This we did not record for 56, yet re-examination shows that 56 reads thus.

That these people all belonged to the same locality is shown by 56 favouring εβαλλεν very much, which the first hand of 108 is partial to. See other remarks under 56, which may be apposite to this.

Here are the readings witnessed to only by 56 and 108^{sup}.

16. και πρωινος 56-108 (so f. 46 127-215 167 203-240 vg gig Prim. Beat. Apr. ps-Ambr. και ο προινος A).
18. τας πληγας εν τω βιβλιω γεγραμμενας (—τουτω) 108 (so 56 +τας).
21. —χριστου 56-108 (so ℵA 10 26 41/2 47 53 107 111 146-155 149 154 186 212 sah$^2/_3$) (—ιησου χριστου 113).

As to 108 itself note:

xxi. 16. χιλιαδας 108 (illeg. 56).
17. τεσσαρακον τεσσαρων sic (illeg. 56).
20. ενδομος (the β in 56 is exactly like υ).
23. —το αρνιον error 108.
24$_{f}$. —και τα εθνη usque ad περιπατησουσι error 108.

xxii. 2. ξυλων pr. loco error 108.
3. —παν καταναθεμα etc. error 108.
6. —οι (ante λογοι) error 108.
19. αν pro εαν 108 and ℵ (103) non 56.

Our examination of 108 and 108 is therefore not without fruit.

108* remains a new type so far. Note finally as to 108*:

v. 3. +και λῦσαι τας σφραγιδας αυτου (post βιβλιον) without Greek support but with *syr*S!

Other sympathy with *syr*S also appears both by 108* and 108, as above with the first hand, and as with the second hand at:

xxi. 14. εχει only 108-56 and *syr*S.
21. +και (ante εκαστος) 108 with P 56 al. pc. and *syr*S.
22/23. 108 and 47 61-182 200 with *syr*S joins these verses.
xxii. 12 fin. —εσται 108 39 56 113 150sup and gig only with *sah boh syr*S.

See further remarks under 104 as to the probable locality and monastery in which 108 was penned and where 108 flourished and was compared with other documents such as the 56 type.

Bilingual and Partly Trilingual MS.

Apoc. 109 (Ac. 240. P. 282) = Paris nat. Armen. 9 = Greg. 102 (Ac. 301. P. 259). Apoc. 109.
Formerly Regius 2247 and De Mesmes 337. [Scr. 109. Greg. 102, new 256. Sod. α 216]. This is a bi-columnar and bi-lingual MS. of XI/XII cent. It is Græco-Armenian, with a later Italian version in a third column from f°. 75, Catholic epistles to Apoc. iv, where it ceases. The Italian does not agree with the Greek.

Gregory has made several mistakes about this MS.

It is mut. xv. 7–xvi. 4 and xix. 16 to the end. The lacuna xv. 7 (MS. ends 316 recto bottom after επτα)–xvi. 4 (MS. begins τους ποταμους) consists of the cutting away of half a page. Armenian col. is thus missing opposite the Greek for xv. 2-7, and the Greek missing xv. 7–xvi. 4, while the Armenian is extant. Martin (pp. 123/6, MSS. of Paris 1884) examined it carefully and gives a facsimile. He examined it especially as regards 1 Tim. iii. 16 for the unusual combination reading ος θεος εφανερωθη, and says the Armenian gives the equivalent of θεος ος εφανερωθη.

Gregory says (p. 644) "Nerses episcopus Tarsensis (1153-1198) videtur versionem Nerses. Armeniacam addidisse," but Martin did not say this [nor would it agree with Gregory's own date of XI (which is, however, full early)]. Martin said "La traduction Arménienne placeé en regard et qui parait avoir été revue par St. Nersès de Lampron, porte, non pas etc." True, he says earlier "L'arménien semble avoir été écrit par St. Nersès de Lampron (voir note f°. 292b) qui vécut de 1153-1198," but the Armenian has been revised and annotated throughout, and this must be a slip of Martin for revised.

As regards the Greek and Armenian texts (to which we shall recur later) Martin says (p. 126) "La version Arménienne a été revue en quelques endroits sur le texte Grec. Cependant elle ne l'a pas été d'une manière régulière, car elle contient des passages que le Grec ne renferme pas (Act viii. 37) et en omet d'autres que le Grec présente..."

The MS., as regards the Greek text of the Apoc., is of the B type and Arethas, but is quite interesting. It was copied from a late uncial (note the combination ῶ for ωρ at the end of words, and the abbreviation bar at the end of lines τεκνο῀ for τεκνον etc.). Itself an early cursive, it therefore gives us, in the main, an early form of the B text and of the Arethas branch. Of this more in a moment.

Iota postscript occurs once only, but early (at ii. 7 τωι νικοντι). ν εφελκ. is very frequent, but ειδον, πορνεια etc., not ιδον, πορνια. Yet σιρικον alone with ℵCABEP and only a few of the cursives. For a luminous view of the text and revision note this passage, xviii. 12/13. First we have πορφυρον of BE and cursives (instead of πορφυρας of ℵCP) to harmonize with μαργαριτου, βυσσινου. Then we have σιρικον alone with ℵCABEP etc., as above; then θυμιαματος alone with B 14-92, 32 104 109 113 124 130 140 194^A; and, finally και ελαιον και οινον, the omission of the wine by the B group restored, but the order changed, with fam 4, fam 6 14 32 fam 34 107 108 109*gr*.

The usual contractions are present except υιος and cases in full, and xi. 8 πνευματικως and εσταυρωθη in full (which is unusual). Otherwise only πνευματα once (iii. 1) and not at xvi. 13 πνευματα ακαθαρτα, where it is generally found in full. ουρανω once v. 13, ουρανου thrice xi. 13, xii. 4, xvi. 11, κυριε vii. 14, κσ̄ κυριων xvii. 14. ανθρωπων once ix. 20.

It has a good deal of affinity for 20 32 which is not fortuitous (see iv. 10 —πεσουνται ab init. usque ad αιωνων ex homoiotel. with 20 32 53 93 121 215), and also with 4 (6-31) 48-64, also not fortuitous. Note xvii. 15 + και η γυνη (ante οὗ). ὅτὰν nearly always thus.

Accents are pretty correct. Notice (for it is not superfluous to notice these things in early MSS.) ἶρις; λύσαι (v. 2), λύσον (ix. 14), μεγιστάνες, βενιαμῖν, σιγῆ, μυκᾶται, αγορᾶσαι; λῖνον (xv. 6), κρῖμα xvii. 1 (but κρίμα xviii. 20), μύρον.

As regards orthography there is a good deal of sympathy with the scribes of B (πετωμενου), 67 (εβραιστη) etc., and 36 (αποκτηναι) etc., while ισσαχαρ is unusual.

The text, as will be seen, is quite old. Note δικαιε (for δικαιαι) xix. 2 with 6-218 alone. We see that all the group have corrected this but 6-218 and 109. This text was evidently as old as III[rd] or IV[th] century. See also xi. 1 εγειρε with ℵABP and a few. See also xi. 4 ἐλαῖε. New thus with our oldest cursive 200.

Having found χειρονα (for πλειονα) ii. 19 with 4-20-64 (although against this group at iii. 19, vi. 17, vii. 8, viii. 11), we thought we might almost dismiss 109 into this group and collate roughly, but no; we are repaid for our plodding, for we find at xix. 13 the very unusual (in Greek MSS.) ερραντισμενον with only f. 35 f. 95 113 164 240, which we should otherwise have missed. 32 with (159) reads εραντισμενον. Compare also ℵ* ℵ[c] P and 36 200. See also below on xviii. 2 cum t.r. Note also στεφάνους xii. 1, new with 189, but στεφανοι 4-48-64.

Apoc. 53 shows two marks of sisterhood, at ii. 17 and iv. 20, both omissions.

109 is not, however, by any means a slave of B, as will be seen further on, xvii. 1 etc. etc.

Of new readings (which are few and almost negligeable) here is the complete list:

ii. 2. εαυτους (pro αυτους) So arm in this MS.

6. μισεῖ (pro μισεις)

8. και (pro ὃς) So arm here. [N.B. —ος cursives 32 etc.]. Italian has ὅς, i.e. 'el qual.'

23. γνωσωνται

iii. 9. —ειναι So arm here and 146.

iv. 2. καθιμενος So 204.

vii. 16. —ουδε διψησουσιν ετι Not so arm here, but 200 supports.

viii. 12. ἐπλήγην sic Not so arm here, but so 104.

ibid. και το τριτον αυτης μη φανη· ημερα (sine ἡ) και η νυξ ομοιως.
The omission of ἡ is new. Otherwise with B 2 4 etc. Arm differs and has αυτων. (—ἡ also 98 113).

ix. 17. αυτων (pro των prim. ante ιππων) Not arm, but *syr*S has αυτων after ιππων.

[21. Textu ουτε εκ της πορνειας αυτων omisit librarius inprimo, sed addidit ipse in marg.].

x. 9 fin. μελη* ? ut vid. (104).

xi. 4. ἐλαῖε sic So 200. (See xix. 2 δικαιε with 6-218).

9. πτοματα secund.

xii. 1. στεφάνους with 189. [But στεφανοι 4-48-64].

xiii. 1. και επι των κεφαλων αυτου κερατων αυτου*

18. ωδε εστιν η σοφια So 146*com.* *syr*S (η σοφια ωδε εστιν 200).

ibid. Omit. text. χξς. Marg. a pr. man. χξς ·χάκεμ· sic. Arm = 366.

xv. 2. εκ της εικονος και εκ του θηριου αυτης

xvi. 7. κρίσσεις sic So 140.

10. εσκωτομενη So 153. [69 188 = εσκωτωμενη].

14. —ολης So *syr*S and cod. Valarshapat of arm. [No variant in other MSS. except 56 = ἀπασης της οικουμενης (—ολης)]. 59 109*arm et boh omit.* της οικουμενης ολης.

xvii. 16. —τα.

18. ἡ πολεις errore

xix. 1. λεγοντων εν τω ουρανω So 182 (of fam 6). (Not so arm here).

This, with xiii. 18, is a new order, but transposition is evidently chiefly due to a scribe writing a word, further on in the text, first in error, and rather than erase, he adds the previous words after it.†

The following are fortuitous apparently, or deliberate outside the group:

iv. 6. —και κυκλω του θρονου (dropped between the columns of 299 recto and verso) with 28 29 67 98 129 130 143 200 226 and the arm of this MS.

viii. 7. —και το τριτον των δενδρων κατεκαη 75 90 (100) (113) 121 146 al. gig sah Compl. So arm.

ix. 8. —ως τριχας 33 58[non fam] 67[non 120] 113 218[non fam]. Not arm.

2. δικαιε with 6-218. (See 109 200 xi. 4 ελαιε).

Now let us trace out the family likeness.

ii. 17. Post δωσω prim. —αυτω φαγειν απο του μαννα του κεκρυμμενου και δωσω 53.

The Italian version omits φαγειν απο, but has the clause thus: Al vincitore daro maña abscōdito > daro . . . Arm does not omit.

ii. 19. χειρονα (pro πλειονα) 4-20-64. [Italian agrees piu] (arm = πλειονα).

12. ετι δυο ουαι ουαι 14 32. So arm.

† Thus, many errors of B, chiefly of omission of single words, are not reproduced in any of the B cursive MSS. which followed. This disposes once and for all of the theory of a "shorter text" as such. Here, however, we have proof positive, e.g. xviii. 16 —τιμιω by B alone. Now B merely made a slip in transcribing his copy. Have any of the ramified family of B MSS. reproduced this? Not a single one. And we shall not find one till we meet a scribe who actually copied B itself.

The late Mr. F. C. Conybeare has kindly supplemented his account of the Armenian version of this MS. (Text and Translation Soc., 1907, "The Arm. version of Revelation," etc.) by answering a number of questions as to the readings of certain passages where I was in doubt. It enables me to present in the general synopsis a reliable record where the arm does not agree with the Greek, and sometimes to emphasize where it does. As regards the portion xv. 7 to xvi. 4 where the Greek is wanting, but the arm is extant, note that—

xv. 7. arm omits του θεου

xvi. 1. „ omits εκ του ναου ibid. „ adds επτα (before φιαλας)

3. „ omits ζωσα

4. „ omits αγγελος

For the rest, at ii. 19. arm agrees with Syr. Crawford adding εστι

So also at vi. 6. „ „ „ „ „ εκ μεσου

So also at xvi. 15. „ „ „ „ „ αισχυνην

So also at xvii. 8. „ „ „ „ „ επ' αυτης, but disagrees with Syr. Crawford ix. 20 reading των εργων not του εργου

xi. 7 „ αβυσσου „ θαλασσης

15 „ βασιλευσει „ εβασιλευσεν

18 „ τοις μικροις και τοις μεγαλοις

xvi. 11 „ τον θεον.

Complutensian Group 10 etc.

Apoc. 110 (Ev. 622. Ac. 242. P. 290) = Cryptoferrata A′. a′. 1 = Greg. 113 (Ev. 824. Ac. 267. P. 316). [Scr. 110. Greg. 113, new 824. Sod. δ 404]. Apoc. 110.

[Gregory's 110 = 149 Noster].

Apoc. 110 is a large and handsome MS. (10 × 8) of the XIVth (Greg.) or XIIIth century, with a short marginal catena by the same hand who wrote the text.

There is no trace of ν εφελκ., but equally no sign of iota post- or subscript. This seeming antithesis seems to be a concomitant of the group, for this MS. is another member of the large Complutensian family: 10-17-37-49-77-91-96-110 etc. μὴ̀ is written thus, in contradistinction to μὴ, and μὴ̀ occurs perhaps for 60% against μὴ 40%, while once in ὅρα · μή · συνδουλος σου the accent is acute, but never μὴ̀ in compound words; ἂν̀ thus occasionally; στῦλος, στῦλοι with circumflex; κρυσταλω uniformly with one λ (with 77); this is not a definite family characteristic.

We have again to do here with a most careful and agreeable scribe. He only makes seven mistakes in the whole book. These are:

v. 8. ββλίον sic

vi. 6. λεγουσα (pro λεγουσαν)

xi. 10. επι γης (—της) xiii. 16. —τους (ante ελευθερους)

xviii. 8. —ο θεος [Supplied by the 'reader'].

xix. 12. ειδεν (pro οιδεν) [Not a family reading; but with 30 32 46-88-101 67 98, and ειδε 90, ιδεν 12].

xxi. 2. κεκοσμιμενην [Not recorded for the family, but with B 67 72 81*].

Otherwise he follows the strictest family traditions. It may be remembered that 17 is the most independent of the true group. At first we thought that 77 was closest to us, and that 77 might have been copied from us [αββαδδων 77 96 110], but this is disproved by occasional aberrations of 77,† and we think 110 was copied from the parent, and had no intercourse with the intermediate MSS. already chronicled. Inscription is with 10 and 96.

Note xviii. 21 —ουτως 10 77 91 96 110 [non 17 21 37 49]. He is the first scribe of the family to give us a few alternative readings. Thus, at:

vii. 17. ποιμᾶνεῖ (αἰ above) οδηγῆσει (εἰ above)

ix. 5. παισῃ (πλήξῃ above)

xiv. 14. καθήμεν̀ον ὅμοιον̀ [Compl. group is divided].

xvi. 19. επεσᾶν (ον above) (So the sister 10* also: επεσᾶν sic).

xvii. 10. επεσᾶν (ον above)

16. 'Ηερημωμενην

xix. 10. επεσᾶ (ον above)

all by the first hand, which is the more significant as he is so very accurate in reproducing the family text elsewhere. This, however, is characteristic of most of the Compl. MSS. to follow, and probably stood in the parent MS.

Note at iv. 8 how αγιος (novies) is written: ἅγιοc · ἅ̈ῑ · ἅ̈ῑ · ἅ̈ῑ · ἅ̈ῑ · ἅ̈ῑ · ἅ̈ῑ · ἅ̈ῑ · ἅγιοc.

† xi. 18 διαφθειραντας [non 77], xiii. 2 αρκτος 77, xiii. 14 +τους ανθρωπους 77 not +τους εμους as the rest, xvi. 12 —τον μεγαν 77, xxi. 9 την νυμφην την γυναικα του αρνιου.

It is really noteworthy how closely the Erasmian and Complutensian texts agree in the main. This is to be seen in such places as:

ii. 7. —αυτω Compl. group and א, 46-88-101 67 and *syr*S. [The older reading?]
iv. 8. +αυτων (post εν καθεν) Compl. group and אAP, 12 46-88-101 59 67 and 7 15 16 28 34/6 38 45 56 68 69 73 79 81 87.

14. ευρησεις Compl. group and 1 46-88-101 59 62-3 72 and 57 81 Er. Ald. Col.

and in other places, where such MSS. as 36, 47, 56 (see above) join. (I have not added the later evidence here).

For the rest, it seems unnecessary to repeat the characteristic Compl. group readings. Suffice it to say that this 110 is not the MS. used to set up the Complutensian, as it does not give any of the peculiarities still remaining unique in the Compl. edition.

It may be of interest, however, to consider for a moment some of the places where other MSS. show sympathy and join our Compl. group:

The above list is also not brought up to date, but as I say, the affiliations of these other 'half-way house' MSS. have a bearing on the problem of transmission, upon which the above little table seems to throw light. Notice 47 and 56 again intruding, making for age for those readings.

Single Type of Prime Importance.

Sympathetic to *syr*Σ, but reaching far behind it by its affiliations with our most ancient Greek documents.

Apoc. 111.

Gregory gives this twice in error under his older Pauline numeration, Nos. 351 and 469. His latest Number is 1611 (Nachtrag, p. 1163) for this MS., corresponding not to Athens Nat. 43, but to 94, = Soden α 208.

I have at last (after numerous attempts) succeeded in obtaining in 1923 photographs of Athens No. 94 in the Apoc., and find it agrees with Gregory's description of Act. 307 on p. 645 of his vol. III. of Prolegomena to Tischendorf, so I will enter the matter here and adopt for Greg. 1611, Soden α 208 this Athens number 94 and call it:

Apoc. 111. [XI^th cent.] "Olim Μεγ. πυλῶν." [pp. 266 verso to 300 recto]. Soden α 208.

It is, as Gregory says, bi-columnar, with 22 lines, and the στιχοι are mentioned as being 1400 (,αῦ), and they seem to be clearly indicated everywhere, which lends additional interest to the punctuation throughout. [Apoc. 200 gives 1000 στίχοι]. Gregory dates it XII, but it is more probably XI. He says "man. rec. suppl. Apoc. xxi. 27–xxii. 21," which is correct, but it is not a very recent hand, but one of the XIII^th or XIV^th century, and evidently a few pages near the end were defaced or injured, for this scribe supplies in single column what is missing, and undoubtedly recopied the older MS., because the very last original leaf still subsists and takes up again where the second hand ceases. But Gregory has not stated the whole matter, for besides supplying the last part of the text, the second scribe writes a short epitome of the contents (not 'fidei' Greg., which comes later) of the Apocalypse, which I reproduce, and it is towards the close of this that the original hand goes on upon the last bi-columnar leaf, so that both text and epitome belong to the original document.

Breathings are correct and square absolutely throughout. This is a very remarkable record, and no scribe as late as the XII^th century would be able to do this so consistently. Only twice does the scribe record rough for smooth breathings. On the other hand, ν εφελκυστικον is quite rare, and ειδον is constant.

Iota post. is most regularly and industriously supplied, but withheld from ζώος and cases, from ἅδουσι (xv. 3), while being found very occasionally in error as at δώσωι (ii. 7), and present in ὡιδὴν (v. 9 and elsewhere), and κύκλωι (vii. 11).

Note ἐξουσίαι (xiii. 7) against the usual nominative singular.

Numerals are nearly always written out in letters with a circumflex or mark, even over δῦο and ἕπτα.

Singular readings are exceedingly interesting, and while most can be traced to Versions or an exceptional Greek text underlying some Versions—[as in the xviii^th chapter: verse 4: συγκοινωνήσηις (following ἔξελθε for ἐξέλθετε) alone with Prim. and Cypr. 'ne particeps sis' (for 'ne participes sitis' and συγκοινωνήσητε); verse 9: καὶ κλαύσουσι + και πενθήσουσι alone with gig 'et flebunt et plangent'; verse 13: σώματα (for σωμάτων) alone with *aeth syr*S Prim. (mancipia); verse 7: καταστρηνιάσαι for καὶ ἐστρηνίασε alone with *syr*Σ (Walton)]—others cannot, as in the same chapter at verse 6 ἀποδοῦναι for ἀπόδοτε, which appears unsupported.

Verses 5/6 are thus conjoined in this MS.:

τὰ ἀδικήματα αὐτῆσ ἀποδοῦναι αὐτῆι ὡσ καὶ αὐτὴ απέδωκεν·

In this same chapter a new reading appears in verse 7 for βασανισμόν, but owing to the corner of the leaf being cut off only the first three letters are visible, but these quite clearly, viz.: ἀφα, with a space following for five or six more letters. We can read therefore, either: ἀφάνισμον 'disappearance by destruction,' ἀφασίαν 'dumbness,' ἀφαυρότην 'weakness,' ἀφάνειαν 'ruin by obscurity,' ἀφάρωτον 'nakedness' (absence of a covering cloak), or even ἀφαίμιξιν 'blood-letting,' although βασανισμοῦ appears in the next place involved at verse 10.

As to xviii. 7. ἀφανισμον & vastationem of *syr*Σ.

We can, however, establish ἀφάνισμον as the reading, because Walton in his polyglot gives us the key correctly in his: 'vastationem' for the translation of the Syriac Σ. (Vide infra). See my article in the July No. of the John Rylands Bulletin for 1923 on this subject in the Postscript, where but scant justice has been done to this remarkable document.

In this same chapter we omit του οινου in verse 3 with A alone, and have τοπον for καπνον in verse 18 alone with A (and the Vulgate).

In verse 13 we read in the singular ἵππον, ρ͂ηδον (αι above) sic—(followed by σωματα for σωματων already referred to)—and as the scribe is almost entirely free from itacism, these accusative singulars are purposeful. The only support for ἵππον is the ϩⲑⲟ of boh and ϩⲧⲟ of sah. The only possible support for ῥῆδον or ῥαιδον is in the 'rhedarum vehicula' of Prim.

In verse 19 our MS. substitutes ἔκλαυσαν for ἔκραζον κλαίοντες καὶ, reading:

"καὶ ἔκλαυσαν πενθοῦντεσ καὶ λέγοντεσ," for which I can find no authority except Vg and Vg MSS. clamaverunt.

Altogether it constitutes a very interesting study, so that when we find in ch. xi. [after μέτρησαι for μέτρησον (verse 1), and μνημεῖα for μνῆμα or μνήματα (verse 9), and —του ante χριστου (verse 15)] an absolutely incoherent + ιε̃ before ἐχθροί (verse 12) we cannot relegate it to sheer carelessness, for the scribe is anything but careless. What does this mean? "And they ascended into the heaven in the cloud and their fifteen enemies beheld them"! The numeral ιε̃ has nothing to do with the chapter numbers, and cannot have crept into the text from that, because just above stands λᾱ opposite xi. 11 quite correctly.

The only possible clue is from a reading of the Latin INIMICI EORUM, but in the previous chapters we have been following almost all the versions except the Latin! Yet an error oculi is possible from a sight of the Sahidic (Budge, p. 298) where we read:

ⲁⲩⲱ ⲁⲩⲃⲱⲕ ⲉ

ϩⲣⲁⲓⲉ ⲧⲡⲉ ϩⲛ ⲟⲩⲕⲗⲟⲟⲗⲉ ⲉⲩⲟⲩⲱ

ϣⲧ ⲉ ⲣⲟⲟⲩ ⲛϭⲓ ⲛⲉⲩϫⲁϫⲉ.

Observe large Coptic sympathy in the list of new Greek readings beyond, especially xxi. 2.

Again, in chapter xvi., while in verse 1 we have an accusative φωνην μεγαλην. . . λεγουσαν alone (compare the latin accusative), and: *ψυχῆσ with A^{gr} alone verse 3, δέδωκας with CA alone and no cursives verse 6, a singular quite alone with *syr*Σ in verse 7: "ἀληθινὴ καὶ δικαία ἡ κρίσισ σου" (a relic only of κρισις being left in ℵCA 12), an addition in verse 15 init. of και [with aeth only and syr (Walton)], an omission in verse 17 of του ουρανου with A Oxyr[848] 14-92, 95-127 *sah boh syr*S aeth, a new order in verse 19: ενωπιον εμνησθη του θεου (the only approach being in Prim.: "recordata sub conspectu Dei venit"), another omission in verse 18 of μεγας (primo loco) quite alone with Primasius, we are left to explain an apparent monstrum at xvi. 2, where we read (at the end of a line), ταν by the first hand for τους ανθρωπους τους (before εχοντας). It is corrected by superimposition, compendiis, of the missing words, but does not ταν perhaps stand for an indistinct παντας in the original, corresponding to the 'super omnes' of Primasius?

Now to indicate the carefulness and consistency of the scribe we have only to notice the use of επεσον throughout. He never once uses επεσαν. I suppose but for the equally consistent square breathings it would be impossible to date this MS.

Besides the 1400 στίχοι, chapters are indicated, and the headings generally supplied at the top (sometimes at the bottom), of the pages.

As to xxi. 11. αὐγῆς pro αὐτῆς.

But what are we to say of ὡς φωστὴρ αὐγῆς (for καὶ ὁ φωστὴρ αὐτῆς) in xxi. 11? Retranslating from the Syriac of Σ, Gwynn actually gives us this word in advance of its discovery in our MS. (see his p. 44 note). Walton has 'splendorem radii.' So that we can really couple our 111 and *syr*Σ in the other places to which Walton draws our attention, as at:

v. 13. και ηκουσα τον καθημενον επι τ. θρον. λεγοντος τω αρνιω δοθησεται instead of και ηκουσα λεγοντας τω καθημενω επι τ. θρον. και τω αρνιω

xvi. 15 init. +και

xviii. 7. καταστρηνιάσαι (pro καὶ ἐστρηνίασε) [See above as regards Walton's vastationem].

xix. 16. ονοματα γεγραμμενα (—το)

xx. 6. +αὐτοῦ post χριστοῦ, besides many others (see beyond).

This αὐγῆς in xxi. 11 is a most noteworthy reading. It could so easily have slipped out of the text in early days. It seems probable that an original φωστὴρ αὐγῆς αὐτῆς may have stood there and αὐγῆς have been cancelled by some well-meaning but ignorant person, who did not appreciate the great significance of the mention of 'rays' or 'radiance' in this connection. The passage can be restored as follows:

"And he carried me in spirit up to a very great and high mountain, and showed me the Holy City Jerusalem descending out of Heaven from God, having the glory of God as the light-source of her radiance (ὡς φωστὴρ αὐγῆς [αὐτῆς]), like a very precious stone, sparkling like a jasper."

I do not believe that κρυσταλλίζοντι means 'clear as crystal,' but 'sparkling'—like a diamond—for as λίθῳ τιμιωτάτῳ is mentioned, ἰάσπιδι probably means a diamond here. And this, following αὐγῆς, lends point to the whole thing. The glory of God was the source of her 'rays' or 'radiance,' which accompanied the metaphorical descent of the Heavenly Jerusalem earthward. In other words, these 'rays' formed the link—the ladder—between Heaven and Earth. It is a word of occult meaning, and fits well into the setting of the Seer's vision.

The above is the most illuminating list of old readings which we present to the reader, only to be equalled by the record of 113 143 146 fam 38 and 178, and 200.

As regards 143 it has been partially exhibited in Charles' recent volumes on the Apocalypse, but as to 111 113 146 and fam 178 this is the first exhibit of their important testimony.

NEW READINGS of a very important kind are as follows:

This most interesting MS. is clearly a critical one and has no immediate relative, yet as its testimony winds in and out of the Record, we can assess its value as a rule, which is very unequal, although it is more often present than not in rare combinations with other important documents.

Underlying and overlying texts.

There has often arisen the question as to what constitutes an 'underlying' Greek text, and what a reflection of the Versions in an 'overlying' Greek text. Our MS. answers many questions on this subject. As regards *syr*Σ at first it would seem as if 111 might have been influenced by *syr*Σ, but a closer study shows quite clearly that 111 represents the Greek text underlying *syr*Σ. We thus have now at least one clear Greek MS. going behind the junior Syriac recension, and as it takes us simultaneously into the heart of very ancient precincts it is worthy of most earnest attention.

I print the Epitome following, because I have not observed any such an one before in my manuscripts.

There is nothing remarkable on the first page, but on the second page, lines 8/9 notice the expression:

"τον κυριον της διαθηκης," and in line 11 (of the woman) ἐσώθη εις την ερημον, and towards the end: "παρθενων αδουσων εν τω ουρανω."

Towards the close of the third page notice the "αλλα τω θεω" after μη εμοι προσκυνοι.

The closing words of this third page: και αυτος εστιν ο του θεου λογος· οστις υστερον are completed on the next and last folio by the original hand (in double columns) with the words: δι' ημας σαρκωθεις.

Shortly afterwards follows the subscription:

"εχει δε το βιβλιον ἡ αποκαλυψις ιωαννου του θεολογου: στιχοι ,αυ̅."

What follows is rather faint, but I have deciphered most of it, and Dr. Bolides, late of the Athens National Library, has kindly verified the doubtful places.

Here we close.

This amazing 111 type takes us into the very heart of the textual problem, and positively explains the polyglot position occupied by ℵ A C. Most earnest study of it is requested by the author.

Group 21-28-73-79-103 etc.

[Gregory's old 112 and Scrivener's 150 is our 149].

Apoc. 112. Apoc. 112 (Scr.) [=182 Greg., new 2082. Sod. α 1682]. Dresden, Reg. 187. xv/xvi^th cent. MS. with commentary.

This turns out to be almost a duplicate of our 103 (Petersburg, Muralt 129), down to the minutest details (barring of course a few errors due to the copyist), including the peculiar arrangement of commentary, which is slightly modified before and after ch. ii. to correct the overlapping to ii. 7, which occurs in 103. Thus the com̄. in this MS. covers the first chapter entire and ends before the commencement of ch. ii. After ii. 7 we have the four sections of com̄. α, β, γ, δ, covering ii. 1-7 and then the text ii. 7. After this the arrangement corresponds exactly with that of Apoc. 103 to ii. 17, where the com̄. ends, though the chapter headings are continued as in 103.

Conflate at xv. 3. I did not propose to collate this copy in detail, until I noticed the reading in xv. 3 fin. of "ὁ βασιλευς των αιωνων και των εθνων" as reported by Von Soden, and which, in this conflate form, agrees, so far, solely with arm. The sisters 103-135 have the ordinary reading of των εθνων, whereas the reading of των αιωνων is vouched for by the important documents ℵC 18 56 95-127-215 (all agreed) 111 159 169-216 172-217, by both Syriac versions S and Σ, by $^2/_3$ of the Sahidic, but not by the Latins, except the Vulgate and ps-Ambr., while amiatinus reads "caelorum"! (Prim. and h read omnium gentium. Evidently των αιωνων precedes h).

I have therefore carefully collated this copy, which, although late xv^th century, may have been compared with other MSS. in the same monastery. I find that in some respects it is not an absolutely slavish copy of 103, and may have been derived from a common original, but enough remains of 103 to make the dual 103-112 a special entity amid the family grouping of 21-28-73-79-79^a-80-99-100-103-112-135-138-170-191-220-221. The Sinai MS. 135 is sister of 103-112, and closest to 112 having διαβηματα at xiii. 1.

As to the scribe, he has five peculiarities:

1. He almost always writes φωνή μεγάλη where the dative is supposed to be given.
2. He has a rather peculiar ligature for ὅτι, thus ὅ', occurring not far from a dozen times, and written at the end, at the beginning, and even in the middle of a line, without any apparent reason as to exigency of space.
3. He writes occasionally ϯ for theta, as if familiar with the Coptic alphabet, although the language had long since been dead. [See remarks under No. 135].
4. When he uses numerals he is not content with ᾱ, β̄ etc., but, as in ch. xxi, he writes consistently δ^ος, ε̄^ος, for τεταρτος, πεμπτος, and even ια̃^ος for ενδεκατος.
5. He writes occasionally εὐδομην, ῥαυδω, which means upsilon and not beta, for his beta is a very modern affair; while at xiii. 1 we have διαβηματα for διαδηματα.

At xxi. 9 he has even ἑζ̄ for επτα tertio loco, as at ii. 15 he had καὶ ἑσύ for και συ. [It is rare that we find this, but 119 has τοῦ ἁήλιου at viii. 12, and 200 has ὡς εἱστοιλοι at x. 1].

On the other hand, our scribe is quite partial to ν εφελκ., nearly always against 103.

We have all the generic readings of the larger family group, and nearly all the errors or peculiarities of 103, but by no means all the peculiarities of spelling.

Here is a short list of the more outstanding readings of 112 alone:

i. 5. αμαρτηματων

vii. 3. τῷ μετώπῳ for των μετωπων of 103 (with 40 alone).

xiv. 10. —αγιων (with A and a few, and Coptic).

xv. 3. ὁ βασ. των αιωνων και των εθνων (with arm alone).
4. —σου ult. (with the Latin h alone).
xvi. 11. —των ante ελκων
xviii. 11. γαμον for γομον
12. γαμον again, with deliberation.
(xix. 4. και τα $\overline{κδ}$ ζωα, a mere error doubtless).
5. ουρανον pro θρονου (as B and a few and Prim.).
17. αλλον pro ενα (with ℵ 36 113 146 177 syr sah boh arm pl. ps-Ambr.).
21. ελθουση (non εξελθουση) pro εκπορευομενη
xx. 1. +αλλον ante αγγελον (with $ℵ^a$ 32 113 143 146*com.* 177 *syr*S and $sah^1/_3$ arm pl.).
10. εις αιωνα αιωνος (with Coptic).
xxii. 1. —και ante του αρνιου.

Besides this, he deliberately changes the accusatives in xxi. 2 into nominatives, reading καταβαινουσα, ητοιμασμενη, ως νυμφη, and κεκοσμιμενη quite alone among MSS. (and not shared by 135), and had already with less excuse done so after ηκουσα at xviii. 4, writing ἄλλη φωνή and λέγουσα there, and previously at ix. 13 φωνή μία.

The characteristic major readings of 103-112 alone are as follows:

i. 3. —τους λογους της προφ. και τηρουντες
ii. 6. —α καγω μισω
17. μμάνα
iii. 12. —του θεου sec. (with *syr*SΣ).

9/10. —ουτοι οι λογοι usque ad λεγει μοι
xxi. 17. μέτρων
20. —ο δωδεκατος αμεθυστος.

The characteristic family readings are all there, without correction or change as a rule, as at:

[[Apoc. 113 = Messina Univ. 99. = Greg. 146]].

"I had just obtained permission to transfer this MS. to Rome and have it photographed there, when the earthquake occurred in Sicily, and I fear that this MS. cannot be represented here."

I wrote thus in 1908, but while in Rome in 1912 I obtained the privilege of its transfer there for a time, and it will be found fully dealt with under No. 146.

For Scrivener's old 113 now substitute here the Athens codex Nat! Library 107 (old 67m), formerly Greg. Apoc. 111, later 792, Sod. α 1575.

Our Apoc. 113 therefore now becomes Athens Nat. 107 (Greg. 111. Scr. 149. Sod. α 1575), of which I have finally obtained photographs, but only in 1923. It is a very small codex, containing Gospels and Apoc., and measures about 4 × 3 inches. Single document, ungrouped, but with endless ramifications. [XIII/XIV]. Apoc. 113.

Gregory refers it to Calabria, where it may well have been written. There is much peculiar spelling with 72 and 104.

But this little bit of a MS. is a veritable turk as regards apparent license and actual itacism, and upon confrontation with the authorities we find that the ancient polyglot reflux has much to do with its apparent vagaries, and once again we connect with the important syriacisers 18, 38-178, 40, and with *syr*S etc., which shows how far we still are from getting at the real base of Greek and Græco-Syriac underlying the whole.

The writing of course is minute, and a stub or quill pen was used. Breathings are often a mere dot, and we cannot determine if rough or smooth breathings are intended. There are not many peculiarities. The scribe makes the unusual ligature ό̈ for οτι repeatedly, and in the small close writing this can be confused and taken for ὁ or ἁ or οἰ. It occurs for the first time at ii. 2. The writer once has δ͡ξ for δοξα. ᾿λ is frequent for εστιν. Some iotas are dotted. There is no iota sub- or postscript. τρ occasionally ͞β. He indulges a great deal, but not quite consistently, in single consonants in such words as εκλησιας, μελω, γεγραμενος, τεσαρων, θαλασα, κλεματων, βυσον. It must be XIII[th] or XIV[th] century work, probably about 1300 A.D.

I have already called attention to this very interesting document in the John Rylands Bulletin for Jan. 1924. [The Athens library is singularly rich in important cursive documents of the Apocalypse. See besides this MS. our 111 124 189 and 150].

Polyglot matters obtrude from the very start in 113. Students, who are interested, must follow the matter through the collation, and see the occasional linking up with such MSS. as 38-178, 40, 130, and with the Latin and Syriac and Coptic and Aethiopic and Arabic.

It must suffice here to call attention to a few salient features. Take for example the xi[th] chapter. I have long watched for a Greek MS. which agreed with *syr*S in reading θαλασσης for αβυσσου in xi. 7. Our MS. now does so! Also at xi. 6 init. we add και alone with *syr*S.

In the immediate neighbourhood, that is to say in the very next verse, what do we find? Not another agreement with *syr*S, but one with Gigas! In xi. 8 we add (quite alone among Greek MSS.) κοιτασθησονται between αυτων prim. and επι της, and have σωματα instead of πτωματα, reading: As to xi. 8.

113: και τα σωματα αυτων κοιτασθησονται επι της πολεως της μεγαλης.

Gigas: et corpora eorum jacebunt in plateis civitatis magnae.

Now this is no slavish accommodation to a common base, for we omit πλατειας, which the other Versions do not (except aeth). κοιτασθησονται is brand-new, and not a N.T. word.

Proceed to verse 10. Here we add λεγοντες after αλληλοις, alone among Greeks. Does any Version do it? Yes, the Coptic is alone with us, and aeth (dicent). At xi. 9 we add και before ουκ ἀφησουσιν, again alone with copt and aeth. At xi. 10 we omit και ευφρανθησονται with aeth alone.

Now if a common underlying Greek text were concerned we would also agree elsewhere in this chapter with other singularities of the Versions, such as:

xi. 1. +χρυσους post καλαμος copt aeth.	xi. 6. καταβαινη pro βρεχη *syr*S.
4. +πασης ante της γης *syr*S.	ibid. ταπεινωσαι pro παταξαι *syr*S.
5. —αδικησαι prim. copt.	ibid. +τον δρομον αυτων και Hipp.
ibid. θελησει εν τουτοις sec. Hipp.	13. +και ante ονοματα *syr*S, but we do not. Nor do we distinguish, as Gigas and the Latins do in verse 5, using nocere in the first place and ledere in the second place for the double Greek αδικησαι, which we retain.

In this connection we have to consider other singularities here of our MS. 113, such as:

xi. 11 εισελευσεται alone for εισηλθεν (compare Hipp. in xi. 5 εξελευσεται alone for εκπορευεται), xi. 15 βασιλευσουσιν for βασιλευσει (three MSS. of bohairic read thus. No other authorities and no Greek MSS.), while in xi. 13 —ανθρωπων by 113 points to something unusual, for sah omits ονοματα, aeth reads πνευματα for ονοματα ανθρωπων, boh ονοματων ανθρωπων, 130 and 200 read ανδρων, and Gwynn says *syr*S reads ανθρωποι, while 146 (Oecumenian text) omits ονοματα and ανθρωπων, and Prim. substitutes numero for ανθρωπων.

Cursive keys. No, we are face to face again with the question of Greek MSS. being influenced partly by what they saw in the Versions, and partly by the common Greek base.

It is these questions of surpassing interest, which, patiently studied, may lead us on to some approximation of the basic text or texts.

We have to get behind ℵ, *syr*S, aeth, Gigas, Prim. and the Coptics, and the only remaining keys are in the cursives.

I hope and believe that my examination of these cursives will be fruitful—(after my departure from this mortal sphere)—among willing, studious, and open-minded scholars, and an alignment of the material be attempted, and a digest be produced of some of the lessons ready there to hand. If I were to attempt it, I should have to write volumes, and although illuminating enough to one who has dug up these treasures, it might be found 'dull' or 'dry,' or 'unpalatable' to the ordinary reader, and far too prolix. But one cannot make the point in a word. It has taken many years to accumulate the evidence. I trust that it will be used with intelligent appreciation of the many keys provided to unlock a variety of secrets.

This MS. 113 has been re-worked to some extent to a B type,† but without losing a mass of important detail redolent of its earlier history.

Truthful copying. The text runs along without a tremor, leaping over clauses (due to homoioteleuton or otherwise), rarely, however, injuring the sense, in such a way as to show true and slavish accommodation to a much earlier exemplar.

A good deal of the spelling of the scribe is sympathetic to some MSS. of the Græco-Latin group 7-16-39-45 etc., but after the first chapters, where decided sympathy is shown in readings with our oldest Latin MS. witness, the Fleury palimpsest (h), we go more often with Syriac, aeth, arm, copt, or arab than with the Latin witnesses. What there is of Latin sympathy seems to be basic rather than overlying.

With the Fleury palimpsest h then: 'qui legit et audit,' as the vg, we run at once at i. 3 with ακουων for οι ακουοντες, and so 40, 146 and aeth arm, as against Prim. 'qui audiunt,' and the rest of the Greeks οι ακουοντες.

Again at i. 7 οψονται αυτον for κοψονται επ' αυτον.

Again at i. 14 —λευκαι with 146 164-166, h and arm.

† Notice xx. 5 ανων pro νεκρων only found in B 20 32 34-156-165-188 74 and the eclectic 189.

At i. 17 the order is exactly that of h επ εμε την δεξιαν αυτου (—χειρα επ εμε following), although we have εθηκε, and h has the equivalent of επεθηκε with ℵ many others and text. rec.

With gigas we have several points in common, as at iii. 10 the order επι ολης της οικουμενης. At iii. 16 ἀλ' ὅτι for ουτως οτι. At x. 8 εκ της χειρος for εν τη χειρι. At xii. 10 gig and *syr*S support the order εκ του ουρανου λεγ. At xvi. 13 omit τρια. At xix. 10 and xxii. 9 +ποιησης supported by Prim. as well and a few important Greek cursives. At xx. 11 we write alone ο καθημενος for τον καθημενον, where gig has 'eum qui sedebat' for 'sedentem' of others. And finally the famous +κοιτασθησονται in xi. 8 comparable to gigas +jacebunt.

Among the Greeks we favour ℵ at:

ii. 19. —και την διακονιαν
ix. 20. και τα ξυλινα και τα λιθινα xiii. 5. —εξουσια (while Iren. and Dionys. omit ποιησαι)
xiv. 15. του θερισμου for του θερισαι xviii. 14. ροιπαρα for λιπαρα (ℵ ριπαρα)
xix. 14. ενδεδυμενοις
xxii. 2. καρπους for τον καρπον, while ℵ 65 *syr*S read τους καρπους.

We are with ℵA together at:

xviii. 21. —ισχυρος
xxi. 4. εκ pro απο

We favour A at:

vii. 12. —και η σοφια
xviii. 19. —κλαιοντες και πενθουντες xxii. 2. εμεσω

We are with C at:

xii. 14. —και ημισυ καιρου
xiv. 9. ητις pro ειτις
xviii. 12. —εκ
14. —η ante οπωρα

With P:

xiii. 12. —αυτου fin.

With CP:

xiv. 13. χῶ pro κῶ.

Our relations with important cursives must be studied in the collation.

For instance, we share with 122 alone the unusual readings of κρουων for κρουω at iii. 20, and επιπολυ for πολλα at v. 4.

With 104 we are together in a host of spellings besides vi. 12 —μελας, xix. 5 —ημων, xix. 20 λαμβανοντες, xx. 13 —και εκριθησαν εκαστος κατα τα εργα αυτων, xxii. 14 επι του ξυλου.

With 14-92 at xii. 11 with δια του αιματος, xvii. 6 —αυτην, xviii. 8 ωρα for ημερα.

With 100 very specially at times alone, as at:

v. 6. —και εν μεσω των πρεσβυτερων
ix. 20. τα αργυρα και τα χρυσα xiii. 5. —εξουσια (and ℵ).
16. —αυτοις

xvi. 13. Trsp. και εκ του στομ. του θηριου post ψευδοπροφ.

xxi. 23. —η γαρ δοξα του θεου εφωτισεν αυτην.

With 111 (and some) specially at vi. 11 πληρωσουσιν for πληρωσονται, xxi. 22 αυτη εστιν for αυτης εστι.

With 114 at v. 13 υπο pro επι, at vii. 14 —αυτω, at xxii. 19 και εαν (—τις) as aeth and Ambrose.

Towards the end we agree sometimes with 62-63 as at xxii. 8 —των ποδων, xxii. 17 λαβειν υδωρ (having previously exhibited sympathy with 145, a close relative of 62-3, extant, however, only as far as vii. 5).

With 102 we are quite in sympathy, and besides i. 7, we agree at v. 13 for —των αιωνων, at xiv. 2 for —εκ του ουρανου ως φωνην, and at xiv. 18 (see under Coptic), and at xxii. 9/10 for an omission almost parallel.

With fam 34 we agree at x. 10 to omit οτε εφαγον αυτο, and at xiii. 17 in the unusual order πωλησε η αγορασε [our scribe perpetually writes the infinitive termination thus].

With 98 at xviii. 22 ακουστη (prim.), and many other places.

With 38-178 quite a good deal, and specially at xvii. 14 —και εκλεκτοι, at xx. 6 τω θεω και τω χριστω.

We follow fam 119 at xviii. 5 with των αδικηματων.

With 56 we are alone at i. 6 with ιερεις τω θεω και πατρι (—αυτου), at ii. 27 with συντριβησονται. Add xx. 4 +του θηριου post χαραγμα 56 with 32 f. 95 159 169-216 172-217 (and +αυτου 59 sah boh).

With 81 (cf. copt) we use the unusual δοξαζωμεν την δοξαν αυτου for δωμεν την δοξαν αυτου.

Towards the end we are in close agreement with 32. At xxi. 11 read φωτιζουσαν αυτην (and Prim. Note our corresponding omission in verse 23). At xxi. 18 —αυτης, at xxi. 19 +ομοιοι ante παντι, at xxi. 26 ηξουσιν for οισουσι, at xxii. 11 ρυπαρων for ρυπαρος, xxii. 16 +ο λογος.

With 18 note specially xix. 2 πολιν for πορνην.

With fam 1 note xix. 9 —γραψον (*syr*S substitutes παλιν), besides several omissions and small substitutions peculiar to 12 and our MS.

With the important Syriac-Greek MS. 40, note:

iii. 12. —της πολεως του θεου μου

21. επι του θρονου μου (pro μετ εμου εν τω θρονω) So 18 and 40 (both syriacisers) in combination alone with us and the Oecumenian MS. 146.

vii. 4. —ρμδ χιλιαδες εσφραγισμενοι

xxi. 19. κεκοσμημενη.

With 59 in many places, as at:

xix. 9. +και πιστοι

xxii. 19. —βιβλου prim. (and arm).

With 130 in nearly a dozen special places.

With 146 in quite a few, but scattered here and there.

Note i. 3 previously referred to with h. But at iii. 17 we are absolutely alone with 146 in reading ο ταπεινος for ο ταλαιπωρος.

Again, at:

v. 8. while 146*txt* has επεσαν, 146*com.* has προσεκυνησαν (pro επεσαν), which 113 adds!

13. επι της γης pro εν τη γη

xi. 9. +και ante ουκ αφησουσιν (So also 146 aeth and copt), and 113-146 omit the previous clause.

xvi. 13. —εκ του στομ. του θηριου και εκ του στοματος xviii. 4. πληγων αυτων with 146*com.*

xix. 17. αλλον pro ενα (So ℵ 36 146 159 177 *sah boh syr*S ps-Ambr.)

xxi. 11. κρυσταλιζοντα 113*txt* and 146*com.*,

and finally:

xxii. 17. quite a peculiar place, where 113-146 give λεγουσα for λεγουσιν, 113 applying it collectively to πνευμα and νυμφη, while 146 alone omits και το πνευμα altogether.

Now all this indicates something composite as to base lying rather far back. Our scribe executes his whole document without a tremor, looking neither to the right nor to the left, and certainly never consulting a reference book. Far be it from me to say that his predecessors did not.

But to try and estimate the date of this extraordinary recension, we must also have regard to the following: As to date of the recension.

We are with Primasius alone at:

xvi. 8. εν πυρι καυματησαι τους ανθρωπους xvii. 8. +του αρνιου post ζωης

xxi. 11. +την φωτιζουσαν αυτην

This does not take us back far enough. Let us consult Hippolytus. We find ourselves alone with him at:

xvii. 8. θαυμασουσιν for θαυμασονται xviii. 12. χρυσιου η αργυριου we read, and Hippol. χρυσιου και αργυριου against all the rest χρυσου και αργυρου

xix. 13. εραντισμενον supported by fam 34, 95-127, and the Græco-Arm. MS. 109.

Now we must turn to the Versions for further light.

Aeth (so friendly to ℵ) agrees alone with us as follows:

i. 4/5. ενωπιον του θρονου αυτου και του ιησου χριστου instead of απο, completely changing the sense.

5. υμας for ημας after αγαποντι and λυσαντι

iv. 2. —και επι του θρονου καθημενος

v. 2. +λεγων ante τις (So boh$^{1}/_{2}$).

8. επεσον +και προσεκυνησαν. Cf. aeth 'adoraverunt' tantum.

xi. 8. —πλατειας (legens επι της πολεως)

9. —και εθνων (So also 81 121).

10. —και ευφρανθησονται (So Oec^{com}).

These three so close together, although omissions, seem to point to some community of origin. They are quickly followed by these:

xii. 4. —της μελλουσης τεκειν

xiv. 3. των pro ενωπιον sec. (So a few boh MSS.).

4. See under 'Versions combined.'

15. και εκραζε or εκραξε pro κραζων

xv. 5. ἡ σκηνη pro ο ναος της σκηνης

xvi. 18. —ουτω

xix. 20. —μετα τουτου So also pseudo-Ambrose.

xx. 3. θαλασαν pro αβυσσου (and 30-98).

Now turn to the Armenian. We are with it alone at:

ii. 24. —και λοιποις
v. 6. —εστηκος (half the arm MSS. and 81).
vi. 5. εν τη χειρι αυτου ζυγον arm 4.
11. αποθνισκειν pro αποκτεινεσθαι. No Greek support. Quite alone with arm.
ix. 7 fin. ανθρωπου pro ανθρωπων
21. πορνοιας (—αυτων)
xi. 12. —εκ του ουρανου arm α.
xii. 15. —εκ του στοματος αυτου arm γ.
xiii. 15. +και ante οσοι αν
xiv. 6. επι pro και ante παν 9 fin. +την δεξιαν post χειρα αυτου
20. και εξηλθεν εκ του ληνου αιμα
xv. 3. —δικαιαι arm aliq.
xvi. 4. —την φιαλην arm 4.
xx. 3. —επανω αυτου arm aliq. (—επανω sah vid.).
xxi. 14. —δωδεκα ante αποστολων (and sah).
xxii. 19. —βιβλου prim. (and 59).

Now turn to the Syriac. (I will not report all the salient features of agreement).

i. 13. We read προς τους μαστους and add αυτου after the Syriac manner alone among Greek MSS. with syr (aeth and copt), but not Latin.
ii. 1. χειρι pro δεξια So *syr*S alone with us (and Tyc 2).
13. —οπου κατοικει ο σατανας So *syr*S and 38 [not 178, the sister MS.].
iii. 3. δε pro ουν sec. So *syr*S, 36 only and Prim. (The Græco-Syr. 40 omits).
12. —εκ του ουρανου So *syr*S quite alone with us and arm 1.
iv. 7 init. —και So our MS. with the very important documents 40-210, 143, and *syr*S sah Prim., alone among so many others.
v. 3. και λυσαι τας σφραγιδας αυτου (pro ουδε βλεπειν αυτο). So *syr*S and only 108.
vi. 4. —αλλος Our MS., 130, *syr*S and copt with Tyc 2.
vii. 1. —της γης sec. post ανεμους with *syr*S, copt and a small handful of Greeks.
3. —ημων with *syr*S, copt, and a few Greeks.
ix. 1. επι της γης with *syr*S and 38, 97-122-214 182 (επι την γην P 178).
3. —εχουσιν εξουσιαν (but see 12, 40, 121, 130 and syr).
17. +ησαν post λεοντων So 36. Cf. *syr*Σ and latt [non gig].
20. —δυναται So *syr*S aeth.
x. 1. —ισχυρον So *syr*S only and 146*com*.
8. —το ηνεωγμενον So 130 146*com*. and boh ps-Ambr. *syr*S alone (but some of these retain το).
xi. 6. και αὐτοι pro οὗτοι +και *syr*S arab alone.
xii. 10. See under Gigas.
xvi. 19. η πολις επεσεν pro αι πολεις επεσαν So *syr*Σ and (ℵ).
xvii. 8. εν το βιβλιω pro επι το βιβλιον So *syr*S sah$^1/_3$ and 95-127-215 200 (εν βιβλω fam 21 Hipp. Prim. gig).
xviii. 3. —του θυμου 130 164*com*. *syr*S and Prim.
11. και pro οτι So *syr*S only.

xix. 13. +εν ante αιματι definitely *syr*S and boh sah and a few Greeks.
14. ενδεδυμενοις (agreeing with ιπποις λευκοις) *syr*S Orig. and ℵ 152 f. 178 182 only.
16. +αυτου post ιματιον So *syr*S and copt with f. 35 59 f. 61, 146 152* 164 251.
17. See under Oecumenius.
xx. 1. +αλλον ante αγγελον with *syr*S, sah arm ℵ[a] and 32 112 143 146 177.
11. +του ante προσωπου with *syr*S ℵAP f. 95 and 111 143 200.

Now comes a curious composition of *syr*S and Σ.

At xx. 6. we read τω θεω και τω χω̄ +αυτου (for του θεου και του χριστου).
38 [non 178] and *syr*S give us the dative, and } 111 and *syr*Σ give us +αυτου }

while at:

xxi. 18. *syr*S and *syr*Σ both agree with us alone to read χρυσιου καθαρου for χρυσιον καθαρον.
16. +αυτης post πλατος *syr*S and Σ.

Now turn to Coptic, and note:

xi. 8. τα σωματα pro τα πτωματα with sah and boh (and latt).
10. +λεγοντες post αλληλοις with Coptic only.
15. βασιλευσουσιν pro βασιλευσει So three MSS. of boh only.
xiv. 18. —οτι ηκμασαν αι σταφυλαι αυτης So Coptic, arm 3. and only 50, 102, 218.
xvi. 2. —και sec. with both Coptics and 59 only.
xvii. 6. —αυτην with 14-92 80-138 (—ιδων and αυτην boh).
15. λαοι και εθνη και γλωσσαι εισιν (—και οχλοι) Practically Coptic.
xix. 7. και δοξαζωμεν την δοξαν αυτου (see under 81).
13. —το ονομα αυτου with boh only and 189.
{ xx. 10. την καιομενην εν τω θειω (pro και θειου) with boh only.
{ ibid. +εβλυθησαν post προφητης with sah only.
xxi. 14. —δωδεκα ante αποστολων with only sah and arm ps-Ambr. Tyc. am. (Add *syr*S).
xxii. 12. κατα τα εργα αυτου pro ως το εργον αυτου with sah boh (and f. 21 only and Latins).

I have not listed the sympathy with the Arabic, which I noticed only when adjusting my whole apparatus, but several innate points are involved between 113 and arab. See the apparatus, and observe —εκαστος v. 8 and +και after πολλων in xiv. 2 alone with arab. As to arab.

Now apart from the omissions, which might be due to accident, we are left with plenty of positive readings tracing to these different Versions. We select one of each: As to Versions.

with arm alone vi. 11	αποθνησκειν pro αποκτεινεσθαι with aeth alone xv. 5	ή σκηνη pro ο ναος της σκηνης with *syr*S alone xi. 7	θαλασσης pro αβυσσου with boh alone xi. 10	+λεγοντες post αλληλοις with boh alone xx. 10	+την καιομενην }
with sah alone xx. 10	+εβλυθησαν post προφητης }
with gigas alone xi. 8	+κοιτασθησονται.

Then, further, observe the Versions COMBINED with us:

xiii. 4. Post τω δρακοντι τω δεδωκοτι +αυτω. Thus, +τουτω we find in syr, copt, aeth, Prim., and Iren.

xiv. 4. γυναικος pro γυναικων A most probable reading. Generic. Confirmed by aeth boh and sah, and very likely in the original syriac. (Read also by 157 164-166 189 214* 222* 227* 228 230, non latt).

xiv. 8. ηκολουθησεν +αυτω *syr*S and Σ, copt, aeth arm plur. and Prim.
15. +λεγων ante τω καθημενω copt arm and aeth.
xvi. 6. προφητων και αγιων *syr*S, sah, and 32 109*gr. et arm.*
xxii. 2 init. +και *syr*S aeth arm gig [non copt].
8 init. —και *syr*S sah boh vg aliq.
12. —εσται *syr*S sah boh gig (and 39, 56-108 150sup.).

Surely a very remarkable showing, to be gathered up for us, at this late date in our examination, by this little Greek MS. 113.

Proof of retranslation.

Retranslation.

We might add here, as a proof of retranslation, xxi. 27 where, after κοινον, we add alone +ἢ ἀκαθαρτον. Now it is noticeable that Prim. renders κοινον by inmundum and not by commune as the Vulgate, gigas, and some others, while sah, boh, aeth, *syr*Σ all translate κοινον with words signifying pollutum or inmundum. Hence the secret, spread so long indirectly before our eyes, seems now to be clearly acknowledged.

It will hardly do to accuse our MS. of importing this κοινον ἢ ακαθαρτον from the passage in Acts x. as to Peter's vision of the contents of the sheet, for a similar case occurred before at v. 8 where we added και προσεκυνησαν after επεσον, alone among all Greek authorities, and traced it to aeth.

Before closing these remarks and turning to the readings which remain so far unique, we must recur for a moment to xx. 10, where you will see above one unique combination with the bohairic and another with the sahidic, both in the same verse.

This is a most peculiar place.

Of all MSS. and Versions only our MS. and boh add 'burning in' before fire and brimstone. But our MS. further adds εβλυθησαν after ὁ ψευδοπροφητης. This boh does not do. The only Greek MS. to add anything is 130, which adds εβληθη earlier after το θηριον, repeating the casting in. Now sah apparently does this, and at first sight it looks as if it did after ψευδοπροφητης too, but while boh transliterates ψευδοπροφητης, sah uses προφητης and the Coptic word for mendax: ⲛⲟⲩϫ, having previously used the same word before το θηριον. Now ⲛⲉϫ, or ⲛⲟϫ, or ⲛⲟⲩϫⲉ in Sahidic means to cast down, so some confusion has arisen here, as between Sahidic and Greek 130 and 113 as to this additional εβληθη, a confusion between ψευδο and εβληθη. The thing seems to be indubitable. The Bohairic word used (earlier in the verse) for εβληθη is different: ⲁⲩϩⲓⲧϥ.

UNIQUE READINGS.

What is new in this document is not easily dealt with, for we are face to face with a critical recension evolved somewhere back of the seventh century, but based upon an elder document of major importance.

We know, as it were, that the last retouches were put to this document not later than the seventh century, from the occasional B readings, and B, we know, does not go back of this date.

Behind this we wander, say from 400 to 700 A.D. among Version readings, basic or surface, gathered apparently from all Apocalyptic texts and literature of those centuries.

Ultimate base.

But behind this again, we feel sure that a base, serving as a scaffold, was present, which included some very ancient foundations, as witness some textual variants according with our oldest Greek documents and with Hippolytus, and with our few cursives of really regal parentage.

So that, among the following 'unique' readings of Apoc. 113 may lurk some genuine survivals of the basic text.

I do not hesitate to suggest that the genuine 'shorter text' may also here be present in places, for when we have to accept from other serious witnesses such additions as 'seventh' Heaven, 'of the lamb,' both tracing to a period before 400 A.D.—but spurious—there must surely have been some slow accretions to the text from time to time.

This feature of omissions, however (except perhaps as to the shortened address to Laodicea), must for ever remain indeterminate as to this MS. on account of its many erroneous omissions due to homoioteleuton, errors not due to the last scribe, but errors nevertheless.

Transpositions must also be left out of account.

But additions and substitutions can be weighed. Of the former there are very few. Of the latter there are many.

This feature of substitution I have exhausted as regards comparison with our existing Version material before presenting my irreducible minimum.

We may then carefully consider among the following such readings as: xi. 11 εισελευσεται pro εισηλθεν, xvi. 5 δικαια pro ταυτα, xxi. 10 επηνεγκε pro απηνεγκε, xxii. 11 και ο δικαιωσας pro και ο δικαιος. The rest are more probably errors.

Note then these novelties:

In the above list the only special sympathy of Greek codices is found lurking in 218 and 164, 166, 149-186, 220, but sympathy with the base of arab is emphatic.

Group 114-193-241.

Apoc. 114 = Rom. Vat. gr. 542. [Scr. 114 = Greg. old 153, new 2060. Sod. $A\nu^{42}$]. [Greg. 114 vacat = 39]. Dated 1331. Apoc. 114.

This is a most interesting MS. We hardly expected to find so much light shed by any such modern MS. on the history of transmission at this stage of our investigations.

As is often the case, Apoc. 114, quite a modern looking MS., in a large hand, which, with com̄. of Andreas interspersed, extends to many pages (208) misleads us by its apparent youth.

Evidently copied from an ancient MS. (ιδον consistently i–xiii. (then ειδον), λαοδικια, φιλαδελφια [but ευχαριστεια]), we are soon introduced to important lections.

Now see 193 at Jerusalem a full sister, and 241 at Athos.

I have made it my practise lately to read the MSS. through, before collating. During this preliminary process I thought I noticed much ignorance and indulgence in personal itacism in 114. Such novelties as ἱελῆμ for ιερουσαλημ, and ρ̄ και μ̄δ looked modern. A closer acquaintance reveals something very different. The MS. turns out to be a key to the composite editing of all the old uncials ℵACP as well as the cursive 56. It unites the peculiarities of these MSS. in itself. While not being wild, as 36, 67, 99, 104 at times, yet it reproduces from time to time some of the unusual readings or spellings of these MSS. It does this in an ancient manner and couples up for the history of transmission the bases of the 1 and other important families. While thus clearly a critical text, the manner of it is quite simple and not forced. It develops that the scribe is reproducing something really ancient, and that he is not improvising. His corrections are exceedingly rare. While not much of a scholar, and having certain irregularities in the matter of breathings and accents, his text flows smoothly, copying his curious and interesting exemplar, and reproduces hurriedly, although smoothly, the errors of his forerunner as to intermingling of text and commentary without stopping to notice it or mark the 'κειμενον' as he should when lost in the jungle of the commentary. Hence he was surely copying his MS. in a straightforward fashion. A key-MS.

When therefore we find him writing εμμεσω several times, for ἐν μεσω, alone with C̳A̳ we pause and reflect. When, further, we find him spelling αποκταινω thus at ii. 23 alone with 5̳6̳, we enquire what it means, and when we find him repeating this spelling alone [without 56] several times again, as at vi. 11 αποκταινεσθαι, xiii. 10 αποκταινει, ix. 1 φραιατος, ix. 2 φραιατος bis, but not indulging in this as a rule by any means, we realize that he is copying an old document with this local spelling emphasized, and we deduce, not unnaturally, that he represents some very old monastery where most important traditions lingered, and whose geographical whereabouts would be of vital interest to ascertain. Compare the καιρατα of ℵ for κερατα in xvii. 12. For we find this MS. is the first to relieve ℵ of some of his responsibilities. Notably at ii. 19 with the omission of και την διακονιαν he confirms 113 and is in turn confirmed by his sisters 193-241, and these words doubtless were really wanting in the copy used by the scribe of ℵ. Local forms. Sympathy with ℵ.

For other sympathy develops right through with ℵ, even to the apostrophe over μαγωι' (xx. 8).

Note further:

xvi. 19. —του οινου 114 alone [non 193-241]; ℵ alone omits του before οινου, so that probably του οινου was missing in his Greek copy, and he retranslated vini from his Latin.

xxi. 8. πασιν ℵ 114-241 and 12 50 143; ψευδεσιν ℵP 114-241 and 9 39 50 112 143 180.

A good example is offered that 114 is really old in xviii. 4 where ℵCA 104 read συνκοινωνησηται. In 114 the ν has not been changed to γ but the αι at end has been changed to τε, while λαβηται later agrees only with ℵC 36 and 104.

Yet drastic accommodation to other recensions took place at some time, while leaving the above alone. See such a deliberate place as xi. 7 —και αποκτενει αυτους with 1 12 36 41 59 62/3 67 72 81 87 97 108 etc., and many other such instances.

As to P and xviii. 12. A good deal of agreement with P is deliberately emphasized in the xviii[th] chapter and elsewhere, and at xviii. 12 we are asked to read λιθους τιμιους (for λιθου τιμιου) by 114-193-241 conjoined with CP. So far no other cursive has joined these two uncials, but Gwynn gives λιθων τιμιων for both his Syriacs S and Σ, and Primasius reads in the plural [not gig]. λιθων τιμιων is now found in 169-216 172-217. See also *syr*S at xvii. 4 (and P and *syr*S again with 114 at xix. 10). Earlier in this same chapter (xviii. 2) we omit λεγων ALONE with P copt and *syr*S (now add 193-241). Note also xviii. 16 μαργαριτας and compare *syr*S.

xviii. 2. xviii. 16.

As to C xvi. 6. We actually pick up a curious reading with C at xvi. 6 ἅγιον for ἁγίων. This is not an itacism, for the punctuation is pronounced, and the variation αιματα of its friends ℵ 16 36 39 69 102 is abandoned; for 114 writes deliberately ὅτι αἷμα ἅγιον, with a large comma between ἅγιον and και προφητων.

So also 193-241 confirming ἅγιον·

We have practically nothing to do with the B recension, and nothing with the Complutensian pure group except (curiously enough) in one place (xx. 11) the order ο ουρανος και η γη being given thus by the Compl. group alone with the exception of one outsider 67 and now of 114 [but against 193-241], both belonging more to the Erasmian side of the question throughout.

Not content with showing us all this (and much more) 114 reveals other local peculiarities as:

εγχειρησον for εγχρισον (iii. 18). So also 193 [non 241], and ἵν' for ἵνα, the α elided before a vowel (vi. 11. 114 alone), (xxii. 14. 114 and 241).

This ἵν' also occurs in the scribe's dated subscription notice, and was a peculiarity of his. [See Apoc. 36 for this, with which we have much sympathy (as at xv. 4 οσιος +ει alone 36, 114 thus), 36 writing ἵν' at xii. 4], and 114 gives us quite a new suggestion at iv. 11 τα σύμπαντα for τα παντα (confirmed by 193-241), as at xvii. 12 οὐδέπω for ουπω (confirmed by 193-241) (ουκ A 57 E. 1. 2. 3. Ald. Col.).

But whether πετεινοις pro ορνεοις (xix. 17) is made out of whole cloth, from the propinquity of the word πετωμενοις, or derived from an unknown recension, we cannot say at present. So 241 however (hiat 193).

We have mentioned 56 and 36 (both deriving from very old stems). We would call attention to another important MS., viz. No. 47 (x[th] cent. but of very old and careful stock), for 36, 47, and 114-193-241 are found together alone with 146 at vi. 11 with ετι μικρον χρονον. [Note the others at this place]. Again 47 143 f. 178 and 114-241 alone at xxi. 27 εν τη βιβλω (hiat 193).

With 51-90 our MS. 114 agrees in spots quite alone, as at ii. 23 καρδιας και νεφρους, vi. 17 η μεγαλη ημερα for η ημερα η μεγαλη.

So with 6-31, see xi. 19 —και φωναι †; ix. 20 —τα (ante αργυρα); xviii. 10 αυτων pro αυτης.

So 13-23-55, see xvi. 20/21 addition, plainly marked κειμενον in 114 with commentary following before verse 21 begins.

So 8-24 xix. 14 των ουρανων.

Not content with omitting και λαων at vii. 9, alone with 50, our scribe of 114 shows us that he was copying fairly, when three verses further down at vii. 12 he writes ευχαριστεια with only A 36 50 67 80 and 81 al. confirmed by 241 (and see xiii. 1).

All this shows a combination of a critical unfledged text of uncertain date, but of curious and intensely interesting bearing on some of the family problems and their interrelation. Uncertain date.

It is critical enough, when we consider ix. 5 —ως βασανισμος (cf. 25-78), and note μη (pro ουκ) ALONE just above ix. 4, but I am sure it is not the scribe's fault, but that of his copy (both readings now confirmed by 193 and 241). Even severe cases of homoioteleuton omissions are often to be ascribed to his exemplar rather than to himself, for when we find at viii. 7 και πας χορτος χλωρος κατεκαη omitted alone by 114 (also 193-241) and 30 121 146 182, we recollect several sub-singular readings where 114 and 30 sympathize, as αδικησεις (vi. 6 fin.), σκευει (ii. 26) etc., ἦν pro ἢν (x. 8), προσκυνησουσι (xiii. 12), ἡ pro οἱ (xxi. 24). Also xiii. 4 omission of nearly the whole verse is supported by 29 and f. 1 where the latter is our ally throughout. Also xiii. 7 supported by the 1 family and CAP.

As said before, text and com̄. are often intermingled, and are not regularly marked 'κειμενον' and 'ἑρμν.' Occasionally the com̄. intrudes as at ii. 16 with 7-16-45-69-102*-104; xvi. 20/21 with 13-23-55, and once at xix. 10/11 there is an addition so far alone, plainly marked 'κειμενον,' as follows: Διο μη τω συνδουλω προσκυνει αλλα τω παντ̄ το κρατος εχοντι, with a commentary following.

Opening with δι' αγγελου (—του) in i. 1, which is the reading of f. 21, that is to say, of a well-defined and large family, we expect to find further harmony with this family [114 and 241 do not omit και τα εν αυτω x. 6 with them, but 193 omits], but it is only sporadic.

At i. 7 we plunge into the new combination οψονται by ℵ 1 12 81* 111 f. 119 159 179-208 syr and 114 only (so also 193-241); and so on, we jump about from combination to combination.

It is not carelessness at all. For, taking a long verse like ix. 17 we find absolutely no difference from t.r. except ιδον for ειδον, as written consistently throughout by the scribe in chs. i–xiii. Yet ix. 18 opens with απο (pro υπο) with most, and then flows on omitting πληγων (with t.r.) found in so many. And verse 19 is treated almost if not quite uniquely, Not carelessness.

† This appears to be no accident, for it is repeated at xvi. 18 with the 12 family.

while verse 20 tends to 36 and 46-88-101, and in verse 21, whilst avoiding errors of others, 114-193-241 alone change the order to εκ των φαρμ. αυτων ουτε εκ των φονων (omitting αυτων after φονων with 17* 38 67, but not writing φωνων with ℵ 36 56 al. pauc. and gig).

To make this stand out in all its nakedness we must trouble to run through the whole matter.

We will give first some of the peculiarities of spelling and diction, and then list renderings and readings.

As to fam. 1. It readily develops that the 1 family is the strongest affinity as a whole, and I am driven to the conclusion that f. 114 with f. 119 represents the oldest base of this recension. † It also accords sometimes alone with fam 119, that other old branch.

I had prepared a list of sympathetic readings, but it is too long to print.

In these the eclecticism of the family stands out clearly, but it is largely that of the archetype, and it is clear that we have here a text, however imperfect, which stood about thus before the bifurcation of the present cursive groups and B. However imperfect the fam 1 or Erasmian text may be then, we are bound to examine it very thoroughly, and we will find incidentally that the support of an increasing number of important witnesses, as 56 and *syr*S, may cause us to restore to the received text of Erasmus some lections too hastily ejected.

Now 241, a MS. at Athos (Stauroniketa 48), proves to be copied from the same archetype. It supplies the lacuna in 193, which is very useful, and occasionally furnishes a new reading, where 114 has an omission from error.

† 241 has ξυλον ζωης before εντευθεν και εντευθεν and also after it. Observe ℵ omits ξυλον ζωης.

After the last verse of ch. xxii follows the usual close of Andreas' commentary. Then comes an unusual subscription by the same hand who wrote the whole book, where at the close he gives the date (1331), but fails to record that he was a sinner (whether monk or layman), as is usually the case in such subscriptions. He does not ask our prayers, nor give us the locality where he wrote, and the sense is rather obscure to me, for perhaps I do not properly understand the ποιησει in line 19.† He seems to record the fact that he copied this by chance (lines 5-8 : οὐ φιλοπόνως φυλάξας ἀλλὰ παραρρίψας ὡς ἔτυχεν), but makes only a vague reference to his sources, so that while this subscription might have been exceedingly helpful, I can learn nothing of importance from it, except the reference to : 'εν λογοις χωριοις.' ‡

[See Apoc. 39].

Apoc. 115. Apoc. 115 (Evan. 866) Scr. [=Apoc. 114 Greg. (Evan. 866). Sod. α 1375] at Rome in MS. Vat. 1882.

Gregory says that there are seven leaves (Nos. 10 to 16) [XIV, single col., 26 letters] containing Matt. vii. 24–x. 40, and four leaves (Nos. 93-96) [XIII. bi-columnar, 46 lines] containing Apoc. vi. 17–xii. 2 Græco-Lat.

He even intimates that the MS. as bound is composed of more than one document, for he gives the size of the above seven leaves as 22.6 × 15, and of the four leaves as 26 × 16.8, but he says nothing more of the rest of its contents.

Danesi, for the first time, made a mistake and photographed f[os]. 97-99 and 100-101, which seem to contain an amplified story of 2 Maccabees vii. These are, however, palimpsest, although I cannot read the underwritten words from the photographs.

A very short examination reveals something very interesting. This is simply the missing part of codex 39! The contents are not, as Gregory says, vi. 17 to xiii. 2, but vi. 17 to xiii. 12, exactly the lacuna in the Græco-Latin MS., Vat. 1136 = Apoc. 39. I have brought the photographs together, and there is absolutely no doubt of it. Instead of 46 lines (to the Greek), as Gregory says, they vary from 46 to 59 lines.

So we can restore this part to Vat. 1136 (as I have informed the Vatican authorities) and cancel Apoc. 115 Scr. = Apoc. 114 Greg.

Our 114 is Vat. 542 and Gregory's 153, so there need not be confusion here as to Numbers. Gregory's 115 = Scr. and our 117.

FAMILY E-67-120 (169-216).

Apoc. 116. Apoc. 116 = Rome, Vat. gr. 1976 = [Greg. old 157, new 2063. Sod. Aν[61]].

Apoc. with com̄. of Andreas says Gregory; but he did not examine it carefully enough or he would have seen that it was only the commentary without the text! Therefore delete it from the list.

It is a XV[th] century copy of Andreas' commentary with the κεφ. and merely headings. From these headings, however, it is possible to identify the source of the scribe's family MS., and it is undoubtedly of the 1 family; see xiii. 3 'και εθαυμασθη εν ολη' (τη γη), which is the reading of textus receptus and of 1 12 21 28 36 59 62/3 67 72 73 79 100 103.

These MSS. can be narrowed down to 67 as the nearest parent, for although we find three apparently unique readings:

xviii. 20. ευφραινονται επ αυτην (now confirmed by 120, sister of 67).
xxi. 13. απ' ανατολης πυλῶν:
xxi. 20. χρυσοπραος sic txt. (χρυσοπρασου com̄.) (also confirmed by 120), we pick up 67 thus:

ii. 26. και ο τηρων και ο νικων, a very exceptional order, read only by 26 41 42 53 67 107 120, and further conclusively at:

xii. 5. και ετεκεν αυτον αρσενα. This αυτον (for υιον) is ONLY FOUND in 67-120 and E[mg], and αρσενα here only by P 59-121 67 81-204 f. 95 111 f. 114 120 130 146 152-179 159 169 172 189 216 Method.

If further proof were needed we have it, for at xviii. 9 we read και κλαυσωσιν αυτην, which is given only by E 18 and 67-120 169-216 (κλαυσωσι f. 114), and xxii. 4. και νυξ ουκ εστιν εκει, which is found only in E 17 and 67-120 169 171 172 216 217 (εστιν for εσται).

At xxi. 20. βυριλλιος is read in 116 with 21 59 104 114 120 241 of the same family, but we have recorded βιρυλλιος for 67 with B. However, xii. 5 is conclusive for 67.

Remove 116 from the list, therefore, and note it under 67. (67 and 120 now develop as one MS., and 120 actually reads βυριλλιος).

Apart from the above readings nothing else develops in the scanty matter of short introductory headings to the commentary sections, often consisting of but two or three words.

The list of the precious stones in xxi. is complete:

ιασπις, σαπφειρος, χαλκηδων, σμαραγδος, σαρδωνυξ, σαρδιος, χρυσολιθος, βυριλλιος, τοπαζιον, χρυσοπραος, υακινθος, αμεθυσος, and in ch. vii. the twelve tribes are given in full (with a very long double commentary):

ιουδα, ῥοῦβίμ, γᾶδ, ἀσιρ' (txt. vid., ἀσείρ com̄.), νεφθαλειμ, μανασῆ txt. (μανασῆς com.), συμεών, λευὶ, ἀσαχαρ txt. (so 67), ζαβοῦλων, ιωσηφ, βενϊαμίν, with δωδεκα (pleno) χιλιαδες εσφραγισμενοι after every one.

In the second commentary we find ασηρ, but μανασῆ again, and ἰσαχαρ again as in first com̄., while text reads ἀσαχαρ, with one σ and α init., as only 67-120.

I have entered a few more things in the body of collations, and they will be found there.

Apoc. 117 (Ev. 698. Ac. 268. P. 324) = Rome, Vat. Reg. Gr. 6 = [Greg. old 115 (Ev. 886. Ac. 268. P. 317). Greg. new 886. Sod. Απρ50]. Apoc. 117.

This MS., as regards the Apoc. at any rate, can also be neglected. Gregory says the Apoc. is imperfect, but my photographer only supplied one leaf of some stuff which can hardly be dignified as having any serious connection with a text of the Apocalypse of John.

It is a relief to push on past such things, which have no place in the list.

Apoc. 118 = Rome, Vat. Ottob. gr. 283 = [Greg. old 160, new 2066. Sod. Αν63]. Apoc. 118.
Late MS. with commentary of Andreas.

This again is a document of small importance. It is XVIth century, and the colophon is as follows:

τὸ παρὲγράφη εἰς χίον, πόνῳ καὶ δεξιώτητι του ἐλαχιστου ἐν ἱερεῦσιν ἰωανου (compendio script.) εὐριπιώτου ἐπικεκλημένου, ἐν ἔτει ,ᾱφ̄ο̄δ̄ (A.D. 1574) ἐν μηνὶ νοεμβρίῳ.

This John Euripiotes at any rate was modest, and tells us nearly as much as he of our recent Apoc. 114 with all his long subscription.

But the MS. is plainly derived from a printed edition and has modern chapter divisions, and therefore we shall not wade through it in its entirety. As we have to read practically the whole of the scholia in these commentary MSS. we are glad to be spared this additional burden, and be free to proceed.

So far we cannot identify the edition Euripiotes has copied. It is plainly of the Erasmus family from the unchanged ending in xxii.: ρυπων ρυπωσατω, και ορθρινος, ελθε, ελθετω, συμμαρτυρουμαι γαρ etc., yet it does not appear to follow either Er. 1. 2. 3. 4. 5 or Aldus; it goes with Compl. at v. 6 ἁ εισι and αποστελλομενα, yet is not a Compl. type. It is not taken from Colinaeus. It reads ἰεζάβελ ii. 20 against all the varieties of Er. 1. 2. 3. 4. 5. Ald. and against Beza I.

Further, it has the unique addition of the article to ψευδος in xxii. 15 'τὸ ψεῦδος,' not read by any MSS. so far except 18. This will identify it if it is not a mistake. It is also to be found elsewhere in 121 and in sah boh, (arm a. 4).

Group 119-(123)-144-148-158 (Syro-Greek).

Apoc. 119. Apoc. 119 = Rome, Vat. Palat. gr. 346 = [Scr. 119. Greg. 161, new 2067. Sod. Αν[52]]. Apoc. cum com̄. Andreas. Iota sub. here and there, occasionally wrong as iii. 22 ἀκουσάτῳ, ix. 2 ἐξουσίᾳ, and once with ᾧδε (xiii. 18). Scribe writes μεμιγμ/ον, καιομ/ον, καιομ/ο for μεμιγμενον, καιομενον, καιομενος.

'This late' MS. [xv] appears not uninteresting, although occasionally a little careless. The inscription is with 37 (62) 63 Compl., and, as can be inferred therefrom, is composite in text as to the 1 and Compl. families.†

A diorthotes has corrected some of the scribe's mistakes, and a late third hand a few more. But most of the apparent 'mistakes' turn out to be genuine 'readings.'

It is a large 8° (or small folio) in shape, preceded by the table of chapters (οβ):

"κεφαλαι της αποκαλυψεως του θεολογου αποκαλυψις ιῡ χῡ."

Then follows the Andreas' Preface, headed:

Ανδρεου αρχιεπισκοπου καισαρειας καππαδοκιας ερμηνεια εις την αποκαλυψιν ιωαννου του θεολογου · κυριω μου αδελφω και συλλειτοργω: προλογος:

and finally, after this by the inscription:

αποκαλυψις του αγιου αποστολου και ευαγγελιστου ιωαννου του θεολογου: [with 37 (62) 63 Compl.].
Δηλωσις αυτη των θῡ μυστηριων:— [This heading is not given in the list of chapters, the first being β οπτασια εν η τον θῡ εθεασατο εν μεσω επτα λυχνιων χρυσων ενδεδυμενον ποδηρη].

But no one would suspect for a moment from a cursory inspection what a rich storehouse of 'old' readings this xv[th] century MS. produces. Instead of playing with things like εμμεσω of 114, we are quickly introduced to real ancient variants.

That we have to do with a very exceptional recension, although embracing the stock of Erasm. and Compl. families, is seen very soon.

We have not only quite a new order in:

i. 1. και εσημανε ο δια του αγγελου αυτου αποστειλας instead of και εσημανεν αποστειλας δια του αγγελου αυτου (Augustine seems alone to verge on this order, while h omits αποστειλας), but quickly following we have at:

7. οψονται (for οψεται) with ℵ 1 12 81* 111 113 114 and syr, confirmed immediately afterwards as to syr, at:

9. by the addition of υμων after συγκοινωνος hitherto unique among Greek codices, *but witnessed to by both syr*S and Σ! Also, shortly after, at:

16. we read φαινων for φαινει absolutely alone with 111 226 and Irenaeus[int] 'fulgens,' Priscillian 'lucens' (which seems to come via the Syriac). Note also the Coptic here.

To show that these things concern the base, and are not later fortuitous 'dressings,' consult in between:

i. 10. φωνης μεγαλης, genitive for accusative, alone with 121 146 149 and f. 34 (see remarks elsewhere), and right below:

11. ᾶ (pro ὃ) with a very small group including 34 and *syr*S, while elsewhere near here we are not otherwise concerned with the readings of f. 34. This then is the common old base of f. 34 and 119 cropping up, and nothing else.

† This is at once apparent at i. 16 where we omit χειρι with 10 28 59 61 62/3 72 81 95 etc., two of the small group being Compl., three pure Erasmian, and the others mixed.

Again at ii. 5 we omit εκ του τοπου αυτης ALONE with *syr*S, but we oppose it at ii. 9, retaining τα εργα και, and, more important, at ii. 13 we have τα εργα σου και opposing the strong but small group ℵCAP 38 *gig syr*S. Thus, this MS. has its uses in such a difficult place for fair judgment, because ℵCAP 38 *gig syr*S may all be wrong here. For notice, shortly after at ii. 18 we agree with the tiny group A 36 f. 38 152 latt and *syr*S in omitting αὐτου prim. Which of us then represents the real recension at ii. 13?

It is quite clear that A and 36 on the other hand are wrong in dropping την before υπομονην, as they stand alone in so doing. We have it, but we add και την ὑπακοην σου before και την ὑπομονην σου! At iii. 10 again our scribe substitutes ὑπακοῆς for ὑπομονης, although he has corrected it himself. (ὑπακοη seems to be a recollection of the LXX).

ii. 20. —ολιγα with CABP etc. is a very valuable set-off in this MS. to πολυ of ℵ etc. *syr*S gig substituted for ολιγα, which otherwise looks like fair authority. No doubt CABP are right.

Note αφηκας following, with ℵ[a] 26-107 36 111 121 143 241 *syr*S copt.

Note ii. 22 fin. [αυτων] with *syr*S and few, against αυτης of most with gig and *syr*Σ.

In ch. iii. 4 and 9 we come across a trace of the exemplar used for the fragment 15. We write together η for ἃ in verse 4. We write ανα for αλλα in verse 9. 15 writes αλα. Just below, 15 is included in the same verse in a very small group with us in the reading και for ιδου sec. (And the extraordinary thing is that 123 reads once with 15 γραψον, but not 119 there).

iv. 10. αυτω (for τω ζωντι) / —εις τους αιωνας των αιωνων } Cp. different order in *syr*S and αυτω τω ζωντι 149-186.

iv. 11. εκτησθησαν (sic cum 39 72) και εισιν quite new order (obs. —και εκτισθησαν in A).

We are not quite so true to type as 114 was; that is to say we have a few more B readings. This is recognized in ch. vi. by our having και ιδε for και βλεπε with ℵB etc., which CAP and the 1 fam. with 38 *etc. syr*S Compl. omit. Yet at vi. 6 we find κριθων with ℵCAP 1 12 etc.

In this verse vi. 6 we have φωνης with 56 100 λεγουσης with 56 100 104 and δυναριου bis with 69 alone (so also 158).

These rather local peculiarities seem to argue for one very large monastery as the scene of the activities of these scribes. At vi. 7 φωνης by 67 114 and 119, but not by 56 100.

The Compl. strain holds with P fam 1 and 56 at vi. 12 και οτε.

At vi. 12 we are again with *syr*S ALONE with ἀσκος for σακκος.

At vi. 15 the unusual order of t.r. is maintained with και οι πλουσιοι και οι χιλιαρχοι.

In vii. 4 we pick up the third hand of 16, for what that may be worth, and a curious company with us including 40 f. 61 f. 95 113 164-166 for omission of ρμδ χιλ. εσφραγισμενοι. This is hardly an accident as 18 130 146 and *syr*S with sah omit εσφραγισμενοι.

vii. 9. The unusual order of 29 36 113 f. 178: και λαων και φυλων is found, and later vii. 12 a unique and deliberate change of order, thus: και η δοξα και η τιμη και η ευχαριστια και η σοφια.

At the end of this verse αμην is lacking with only C and 36 166.

We pick up *syr*S once more alone at vii. 10 + και ante λεγοντες. At vii. 17 [ζωσας] with t.r. But at vii. 17 fin. —και εξαλειψει ο θεος παν δακρυον απο των οφθαλμων αυτων we go back to our allegiance to 38, who with 1-152-179-208 251 (+Er. omn. Ald.) alone omit.

In viii. 1 we read ωσει for ως, alone with the (Erasmian) group 46, yet at viii. 3, where fam 46 reads τας ευχας for ταις προσευχαις, we do not follow this Alexandrine form. Hence we remain nearer the Syriac side than the Egyptian.

At viii. 11 αψινθιος for αψινθος. Only ℵ* αψινθιον, yet below εις αψινθον.

At viii. 12 τοῦ ἀήλίου sic for του ηλιου. This is a form not shared by the family. Cf. 'isolis,' like the istaturam of a in the Gospels.

Now compare 200 at x. 1 where we find ὡσ εἰστοίλοι for ὡς στυλοι.

At viii. 13 —και ειδον we go with only 59 f. 62/3 251 and *syr*S, tying up these Erasmians to the Syriac base. [Non copt praeter boh[F*]].

But at ix. 5 with [βασανισθωσι] we oppose βασανισθησονται of ℵAP 1 12 17 36 59 f. 62/3 67 81* 114 146 al. and our friendly f. 38. In the same verse we read [παίση] plainly.

Again ix. 6 we read [φευξεται] against φευγει of AP 1 12 17 36 f. 62/3 67 81 111 114 al. and f. 38 Er. 1. 2.

We therefore remain perhaps nearest to 59.

At ix. 10 we go alone with all fam 38 ειχον pro εχουσιν, but at ix. 11 our ειχον (alone) is not found in f. 38. (Probable retranslation very early. See habebant h latt [non gig]).

However, in this verse fam 38 and fam 119 are quite alone in adding ῥήσει after και εν τη ελληνικη (+γλωσση 200 h gig Prim.).

At ix. 13 occurs φωνης μιας, read by the whole family, for φωνην μιαν, with ℵ[a] 56 59 (38-203-240 omit μιαν! Cypr. Prim. Tyc. gig omit φωνην! and fam 34 substitutes μεγαλην. 130 arm 4. omit φωνην μιαν. 14-92 and 201 226 read μιαν φωνην. 200 reads φωνης ενος).†

Right after this in verse 14: λεγουσης we are alone with ℵ[a], so that we not only abandon 59 and the rest, but the corrector of ℵ is seen to have (local?) connection with us, as 56 and 59 above.

At ix. 17 we are again alone with all fam 38 and 251 only: ἐξεπορευετο for εκπορευεται.

ix. 18. We are again joined by f. 38 (+only f. 21 and 251) in reading των εκπορευομενων, plural for singular.

But at ix. 19 we do not follow f. 38 f. 62/3 251 with ηδικουσαν, but retain [αδικουσι].

Conflation of ℵ at ix. 20.

An interesting place occurs at ix. 20 where we substitute (alone with 149-186) αυτων for ταυταις. We find, however, that ℵ had already conflated (alone) 'αυτων ταυταις' (omitted in Tisch. VIII. edn.). Surely here is a case where we may say that our poor little overlooked xv[th] cent. junior MS. and its group goes back of and behind ℵ! Especially as (same verse) we alone, with ℵ boh [non sah] and *syr*S, give the change of order: και τα ξυλινα και τα λιθινα. No other cursives do this except the extraordinary 113.

The first hand of ℵ, and above as pointed out in ix. 13 the first corrector ℵ[a], are both found with us. What does this mean? Apparently a good deal.

We avoid the φωνων of ℵ et pauc. in ix. 21, which 38 also neglects, showing φωνων was an itacism of ℵ and not the true text. That we are following the 'true text' of ℵ can be seen at x. 2 etc., where we use the t.r. [βιβλαριδιον] with ℵ 1 12 18 59 f. 62/3 67-120 152 169-216 251 and *syr*S, and at ver. 3 —ai.

In this ch. x. we are treated, at verse 3, to the new reading βρυχαται for μυκαται, but this seems to come from the commentary 'βρυγμω λεοντος,' as opposed to μυκαται generally used of bellowing of oxen.

At x. 4 we are alone with 56 for λεγουσης, writing previously φωνης, which 56 does not adopt. Yet, considering that 56 has a peculiar partiality to the genitive, we may fairly say that we correct 56 here, and that 56 intended φωνης [not φωνην] since he writes λεγουσης. Here, too, we see that we can get behind 56, as well as behind ℵ! For at xii. 10 we are alone with 56, writing φωνης μεγαλης against the others' accusative.

When we read x. 6 +θεω post ζωντι with 59 (+τω θεω ante ζωντι) it looks like something modern, yet we must remember 59 is with us in old readings. Immediately following we omit των αιωνων after εις τους αιωνας with 1 12 22 47 81-204 102 152-179-208. That 47 and 22 do this shows at least that these important cursives were consulting a text prior to the x[th] century, and when we retain [και τα εν αυτω] immediately following (against f. 21 f. 62/3 111 193 251, our frequent friends) we show them up in a mistake, and when we retain [και την γην και τα εν αυτη] (against A 1 12* 67-120 81-204 114-241 121 152-179-208) we show them in error also.

† The phrase is 'And I heard a voice from the (four) horns of the golden altar.' Here ℵ* by omitting μιαν εκ των τεσσαρων κερατων read primarily 'And I heard a voice of the golden altar,' while 200 with ενος and the Latin Fathers reads, 'And I heard a voice of one from the four horns of the golden altar.' Evidently this place was in trouble right early.

x. 7. —και is more difficult. Is it basic or not? I cannot say. See the group (Compl.) +gig Tyc. sah arm.

It is followed by ὅ (pro ὡς) with a similar group including a few others, but +*syr*S.

Our scribe often shows us that obscurity in other MSS. also afflicted his text. Thus xi. 4 he writes ἀἶᾶι for ελαιαι. Now, not only do f. 1 12 59 67 81 f. 114 146 omit δυο ελαιαι και, but A writes: αυλαιαι, C 14: αλαιαι, 21 113: αἱ λαῖαι, 42*: ελαι, and 109 200: ελαιε, while 218 has αἰλεα pro αι δυο ελαιαι!

Again we check errors of omission of the 1 family, for, while reading the exceptional οτε for οταν (xi. 7) with 1 etc. Er. Ald. Col., and τελεσουσι (xi. 7) with some of them, yet at xi. 6 we retain [αυτα] omitted by the same groups and Er. 1. 2. Col. [non Ald.]. And again at xi. 11 in retaining τας. And at xi. 18 retaining και before τοις φοβουμενοις.

At xi. 10 we have conjunction of f. 38 f. 119 and *syr*S for χαρησονται alone among MSS.

At xi. 11 we have an unusual change of order: εισηλθεν εκ του θεου with only C and 13 149 (cf. sah). Observe a few omit εκ του θεου.

Note that in xi. 13 we retain εμφοβοι against εν φοβω of ℵ 14-92 f. 44 *syr*S. There being only a small mixed support to ℵ and *syr*S we are probably right and they wrong.

At xii. 3 σημειον αλλον, new order, proves to be Syriac.

At xii. 10 we omit the clause και η εξουσια του χριστου with *syr*S Tyc 2. only. There has been a slight change here apparently by first hand of 119, the θεου may have been χριστου. It now stands και η βασιλεια του θῡ αυτου (—ημων και η εξουσια του χριστου) while *syr*S has θεου ημων (—και η εξουσια του χριστου αυτου). But neither 119 αντιβαλλων nor διορθωτης nor second hand have added anything. The third hand adds in the margin. [123 retains the clause as do the others of the family without hesitation].

xii. 11 init. αὐτοῦ (for αυτοι) is peculiar. We have this alone with 144 [against 123-148-158], but 26? 38 41* 166* write αυτων, ℵ ουτοι, 218 αυτον, and *syr*S omits with 122 218 220*! Prim. turns the phrase with ab ipsis. Surely a grave difficulty of reading the ancient exemplar.

12. We hold [σκηνουντες] against ℵ and C and against a small cursive group for κατοικουντες and κατασκηνουντες. Same verse, where ℵ omits μεγαν, we change the order from εχων θυμον μεγαν to μεγαν εχων θυμον with 149-186, while 113 omits εχων θυμον μεγαν.

14. We hold εις την ερημον against family 1.

18. We hold εσταθην against εσταθη of ℵCA f. 46 56 69 87 92 102 Ald. and a few more. This is probably arbitrary on the part of these, for the true 46 appears with us immediately after. Together, we and f. 46 with 53 130 159 join xii. 18 to xiii. 1 omitting και ειδον εκ της θαλασσης in xiii. 1, but 119 here goes against the other members of its family.

xiii. 2. The family is divided. 119-144 have αρκτου with t.r. and most Compl. codd. (against Compl. itself) and against 1 12 etc. and the large majority.

The omission in this verse of και τον θρονον αυτου with 92 [non 14] is no doubt an error, but is shared by all the family (+*boh*ᴮ ps-Ambr.).

But the omission xiii. 4 of και προσεκυνησαν το θηριον is also the family reading of E 12 36 f. 46 59-121 67-120 81-204 218.

xiii. 10. Runs thus: ει τις εχει αιχμαλωσιαν υπαγει (—συναγει εις αιχμαλωσιαν) ει τις εν μαχαιρα αποκτενει δει αυτον αποκτανθηναι εν μαχαιρα the last three words being inverted as to order by all our five MSS. (Many cursives omit εν μαχ. sec.).

xiv. 2. We run with 56 again, the genitive φωνης (quater).

3. αδοντων alone (so all our five MSS.), except that 100 (our old friend who joined us early at i. 11) writes αδουσων. [See below xv. 3]. Ex syr?

9. Our fivefold group goes with 18 and 111 176-206 200 and 218 alone: επι της χειρος.

10. [των αγιων αγγελων] We oppose our friends f. 62/3 etc. and ℵCEP.

12. We omit του θεου with 1-152-179-208 only (+57 Er. Ald. Col.).

13. απαρτι ναι λεγει το πνα goes with 56 f. 62/3 81 152 159 al.

14. We write δραπανον (with 144) but not in verses 15, 16, 17, 18, 19.

19. —εις την γην is new with arm 3. and Vict., while *syr*S with ℵ and fam 38 writes επι της γης.

In xv. 2 we retain [εκ του χαραγματος αυτου] against the majority.

3. αδωντας 119-144, αδοντας 123-148-158 (for αδουσι) alone with ℵ Prim. vg (ex syr?).

Same verse: βασιλεῦ (for ὁ βασιλευς) again runs with ℵ* and 18 22* 29 40-210 47 51-90 56 98 130 149-186 189 246, most being very friendly to us in places.

xv. 4. We write ει αγιος, new in this order (confirmed by the rest of the family).

6. λίνον plainly in text by all the family.

Same verse: —περι with only fam 1 12 31 80 189 (Er. 1. 2. 3. Ald. Col. 57) is confirmed by the family, but this is a mistake, rejected by f. 46 f. 62 59 159 (208 is missing here).

xvi. 2. —αυτου pr. is new, but agreed to by the five MSS.

Same verse we omit κακον και alone with A 128, but A only omits κακον. Thus also 123*, so probably it was merely an error of A and the father of fam 119, which 119 took the liberty of covering up by omitting και as well. 210 punctuates thus: κακον · και πονηρον επι τους ανθρωπους.

Same verse: προσκυνουντας την εικονα αυτου goes with ℵ 17 152-179 and 189 only.

xvi. 4. Similarly we add εἰς before αἷμα alone with 144-158, but this is not confirmed by our record for 123, nor for 148. However, 176-206 support the addition.

In the next verse, however, xvi. 5 we have ὁ ὅσιος (—και) and take the liberty of correcting 123 which omits και ο οσιος with boh aeth.

xvi. 6. We again correct 123 which (alone with 14-92 149-186) changes the order. Our order remains the same, with ποιειν after εδωκας.

7. Alone with B 1-152-179 (hiat 208) f. 62 200 Compl. (and 123) we retain εκ while suppressing αλλου.

10. επι του θρονου alone with 38 125 149-186 (confirmed by all our MSS.).

Same verse: εσκοτισμενη is supported by ℵ^c^B and few cursives, but confirmed by all our group. We have already been with ℵ^a^ specifically (ix. 13 etc.) as well as with ℵ*. Now here comes ℵ^c^ with B to emphasize matters. Surely ℵ, the MS., was preserved and accessible in this monastery where the original of 119 reposed.

xvi. 11. —εκ sec. by P 12 38 f. 46 69 81-204 101 112 152-179 sah only, is confirmed by the family.

Now comes an interesting place, for we are back again with ℵ^a^. See:

xvi. 13. Our four MSS. 119-144-148-158 write: ωσει βατραχοι with 178-203-240 [non 38] for ομοια βατραχοις. This is new, but is much nearest to ℵ^a^, who has: ειωσει βατραχοι—for ℵ* has ειωσει βατραχους. ABE and the majority have ως βατραχοι. (ως βατραχους is read by 18 36 38 97-214 123 mg 146-155*com.* 149 251).

What does the sister 123* do? Sister 123* furnishes proof of the matter here and reveals the way the critical text was evolved.

123* omits ομοια βατραχοις with 1* 12 81-204 f. 114 121 [non 59] 152-179-208 189 only. It is supplied in the margin by the third hand thus: ως βατραχους with 18 36 38 etc. as above.

We are now getting nearer the truth.

In this monastery both scribes found the words absent as in type f. 1 12 81 114, all true exponents of the oldest Erasmian base.

If you please, our 119 consults ℵ[a], and 123 consults 18 and 38.

Now we see that ℵ ℵ[a] ℵ[c] texts and the 18 38 texts, as well as others of the 1 fam., as 59 f. 62/3 159, were perhaps all lying within the walls of this monastery.

xvi. 15. We preserve [ασχημοσυνην] against αισχυνην of f. 62 etc.

17. We retain [μεγαλη] against A 1 12 36 f. 46 59-121 67-120 81-204 f. 114 152-179-208 189 Er. Ald. Col. 57, which omit, and also against 123 which omits. Thus, that we consulted ℵ or 38 or some other MS. here is almost evident.

Similarly here we retain του ναου, omitted by the same group and 123, plus 18 f. 21 47 f. 62/3 80 81 100 al. pc. ℵ and 38 evidently were our authorities.

18. We go back to our allegiance for 12 f. 46 59 81 f. 114 152-179 189 240, because they are joined here by *syr*S (which could also be consulted probably) in omitting και φωναι.

xvii. 1. A reading found only in 111 211 218, —επτα sec. (is confirmed by the rest of the family).

3. With t.r. [γεμον ονοματων].

4. We go with AE and some: και τα ακαθαρτα της πορνειας αυτης, but 123 deserts us with 148*, having: και των ακαθαρτων των της πορνειας αυτης. This is new; *cf. syr*S 'ακαθαρσιας και βδελυγματος' and the genitive pl. in sah boh and Tyc. 2. 3. and [Reg] Beat. See full evidence in volume II.

6. —ιησου with f. 1 12 36 59 67 81* f. 114 130 (confirmed by 123 and the other three).

8. υπαγει with A 55 59 104 111 146 182 218 (Er. Ald. Col. 57) *syr*S Iren. Prim. boh aeth, not supported by 123. It is curious thus to see 119-144-148-158 and 123 divide. Four-fifths support the Syriac here (against 123), while above (xvii. 4) 123 makes an effort to support the syr (against 119).

11. —και sec. So 55* 95 [non fam] 121 [non 59] and Hipp. only, supported by all my five MSS.

14. —και (ante πιστοι) So only f. 46-88-101 and 119 [non 123-144-148-158], and 38 omits και εκλεκτοι with 113 and 149 only.

16. φαγωσι is new, but supported by 123 and the other three.

17. —τω θηριω by 119 alone, is an error, only shared by 164, not supported by the rest.

xviii. 3. στρηνου is read by us all with C fam 1 and a few.

4. αλλης φωνης, genitive again, only by our five and C 56; and λεγουσης where 56 is with us, but C deserts.

Two new readings follow, both confirmed by the family:

xviii. 4. εξελθετε λαος (— ὁ) μου απ' αυτης.

Only f. 46-59-121 81-204 152-179 drop the ὁ, but ℵCP f. 38 251 give the order: ο λαος μου εξ αυτης, retaining εξ however.

5. ⸆των αδικηματων αυτης the family alone with 113.

6. Though a most difficult verse, runs with textus receptus exactly, as regards the whole family.

Note next xviii. 7 —και πενθος prim. by E 1*-152-179 and the Compl. fam (confirmed by all our MSS.).

A new reading at xviii. 9 απ αυτης (for επ αυτη) 119, not confirmed by 123, which has επ αυτη, but 144-148-158 have επ' αυτης.

xviii. 11. 119-144-148-158 read εφ' εαυτοις (for επ αυτη) with 36 59 62 72 80 136 138 147 184 193 208 251, but 123, with 63, εφ εαυτης. Here we see 123 making the mistake of η for οι so common in 119, and which 123 hardly ever does.

12. We have the unusual order by all our group of: και κοκκινου και σηρικου alone, while f. 62/3 give this order but write συρικου, and fam 1 fam 61 Er. 1. 2. 3. Ald. Col. 57 omit και σηρικου. Here we have an apt illustration of the change of order being due solely to the dropping of a clause in the family, remedied by some, but out of usual order.

13. θυμιαμα by 119-144-148-158 and 1 56 62/3 72 80 95 Er. 1. 2. 3. Ald. Col. 57 *Hipp. Prim. gig sah boh syr*Σ. I have not recorded for 123.

The same applies to —τα (ante λαμπρα) xviii. 14 by ℵC 36 40-210 59-121 106 111 138 [non 80] 146-155 169 176 200 206 216, but it will be observed 59 figures here, while 119 is alone in the family for omission.

xviii. 16. πορφυραν again agreed to by 144-148-158 is not recorded for 123, which MS. below, same verse, opposes the other four omitting και before κεχρυσωμενη, while 119-144-148-158 have the και with many.

Same verse: εν λιθω τιμιω και χρυσω (for εν χρυσω και λιθω τιμιω) is quite new [123 illeg.], but observe that 18 92 146 169 200 omit εν before χρυσω as the Latins, while 56 with 149 omits εν χρυσω altogether.

xviii. 17. ο επι των πλοιων πλεων runs with Compl. group (123 still illeg.), and, end of same verse where 123 has εστηκοτ . . . . , the rest and beginning of verse 18 illeg., MS. 119 now gives us the reading for 17/18: εστηκοτες εκραζον (—και). These verses are joined by fam 62/3 100, but only 73 omits και with sah arm, while 38-203 222 Prim. omit και εκραζον, but none but our group 119 read εστηκοτες.

18. και ελεγον (pro λεγοντες) goes with 36 only (123 not recorded for this), but note that 59 adds και before λεγοντες (also syr), while 56 omits λεγοντες.

19. [εβαλον] 119-144-148-158, but εβαλλον 123 with P and few.

[πλοια absque τα] 119 and 123-144-148-158 against ℵCABP and the mass.

Verse 20 is omitted altogether by 123-148*; not so by us. We (119) read [επ αυτην] with t.r. and +και οι before αποστολοι as also 144-148-158.

xviii. 21. Order: λιθον μεγαν ως μυλον of 119 is found only in 32 and 149 (but is confirmed by 123-144-148-158) and is Syriac order.

Same verse: ειπων pro λεγων is quite new, but read by all our family. ἡ μεγαλόπολῐς sic belongs to our four MSS., but not 123.

22. [wholly with t.r.] So all our family.

23. και pro οτι sec. Only our full family and 56 ps-Ambr.

xix. 1. φωνης of all the family again runs with 56 and fam 21 (as below xix. 6).

[και η τιμη] retained by all the family is against ℵ and *syr*S and some; but —κυριω agrees with *syr*S 22[com] 36 f. 46 47 109 123-148 152-179 176-206. Here, while 123 omits κυριω, 119-144-158 omit κυριω τω θεω ημων, alone and perhaps in error.

3. ειρηκασιν is witnessed to by all the family +56, and only 14-92 fam 25 34-132-156 f. 95 121 146-155 159 169-216 172-217 191 207 220.

ibid. —αυτης by the whole family and 1 12 22[com] f. 46 47 67 81 111 114 al. and Er. 1. 2. 3. Ald. Col. 57.

xix. 4. επι θρονου (—του) is new, a latinism, not confirmed by 123, but found in the other four MSS.

6. —κυριος confirmed by all five MSS., is also omitted by E f. 1 8 12 36 f. 46 59 67 114 al. Er. 1. 2. 3. Ald. Col. 57.

7. δωσομεν confirmed by all our five, is only found in ℵ[a]A 100 146*txt* and 159, but δωσωμεν by P 12 f. 21 59 67 114 al.

Same verse: αυτου (for αυτω) not recorded for 123-148, is read by 1-208 f. 4 12 f. 34 59 f. 62/3 64 81-204 113 152-179 189 207 and by 119-144-158, while αυτων is found in ℵ* 50* ? 102. This apparently small matter involves a good deal.

Next:

xix. 11. επ αυτω with f. 46-113 Hipp. alone (as twice previously). Not recorded for 123.

13. [βεβαμμενον] So the whole family, against ℵ and ℵ[c] and P.

14. —τα (ANTE στρατευματα) with 14-92, 81, 245 arm, but not apparently 123. Followed in same verse with τα in a new order: αυτω ηκολουθει τα εν τω ουρανω. 123 is faint here, but apparently bears this out also. Note 32 Orig. sah have +αυτου τα (post στρατευματα).

16. —αυτου 119* (*suppl. marg) is supported by 12 and fam 61 251 Aug., but not by the family. It is not a family omission.

17. —λεγων E 1-152-179-208 12 17* 36 f. 46 49 59 [non f. 62] 67 74 81 114 170 189 and all our family. Curious that the 1 family can never quite keep together.

18. Is interesting because we retain the [επ αυτων] of t.r., while ℵ 56 176-206 conspire with επ' αυτοις, and A 14-92 Prim. Tyc. with επ' αυτους.

Same verse, however: —παντων fam 119 is witnessed to only by 1-152-179-208 f. 62 149-186, but also by *syr*S and boh.

xix. 20. βληθησονται So our whole family; also 1-152-179-208 12 36 f. 38 59 f. 62/3 67 81 88-101 [non 46] f. 114 189 251 Er. 1. 2. 3. Ald. Col. 57. What I said above about the 1 fam. is peculiarly applicable here, where 46 deserts 88-101, and against the whole of the rest of the family, strengthened by 36 f. 38 f. 114 and our f. 119.

So again, same verse: [την καιομενην] by nearly all and by us, but 67-120 81-204 189 must needs go alone with ℵAP της καιομενης.

xx. i. New order: εκ του ουρανου καταβαινοντα is supported by our whole family group, but by no others. Noteworthy is it, however, that ℵ* alone omits εκ του ουρανου. As I have said, wherever an omission occurs there is room for inversion, and generally occasion taken by some MSS. to invert the order of the clause.

Note that in same verse fam 119 maintains επι την χειρα αυτου with all others against ℵ and f. 38 111 here: εν τη χειρι (=syr and Versions), although there is evidence in 119 that he may have begun to write εν.

xx. 3. πλανα is not recorded for 123, nor αχρις ου (new) same verse. Nor τελεσθωσι (pro τελεσθη) with the unusual group f. 25 40 47 108 111 113 176-206 gig, but 119-144-148-158 agree.

4. We have two new readings: επ' αυτων for επ' αυτους and ταις ψυχαις, both with the unbroken family. Further, a latinism (gig: 'aut') 'ἢ (pro και oct.) επι την χειρα αυτων.' In 123 this is probably illeg. from my notes, the rest are clear for ἢ. This might throw some light on the 119 scribe's Latin mind, of which there have been some indications, but *sah syr*S also have this.

6. We have +και init. with 18 f. 21 22* 29 30 47 51-90 56 and quite a few, plus aeth.

xx. 7. οτε (pro οταν) with 1-152-179-208 12 f. 62 178-240 Er. Ald. Col. 57 141.

8. +και (ante συναγαγειν) with ℵE and certain cursives, *syr*S aeth latt.

10. —των αιωνων txt. with 47 (to whom we have been drawing nearer lately) and f. 178. I have not recorded 123 for this; note that 1-152-179-208 12-59-121 67-120 81-204 114-241 omit εις τους αιωνας των αιωνων.

11. επ αυτω with 81-204 104[non fam] 113 f. 114 159 gig Iren. only (123 illeg., non 148 vid.). επ αυτο 130.

12. [του θεου] against most and ℵABEP του θρονου F. 62 (with Auct. prom. conflates: του θρονου του θεου), but 1-152-179-208 f. 62 80-138 98 and our f. 119 remain with t.r.

Same verse: και βιβλια ηνοιγησαν · και αλλο βιβλιον ηνοιγη is new as regards ηνοιγησαν, but so exactly 123 and all our MSS., differing from all other combinations.

xx. 14. ουτος ο θανατος εστιν ο δευτερος is a new order and form, but exactly with all the family plus only 164.

xxi. 3. λαος is noteworthy, with EP plur. syr latt [non ℵA 1-152-179-208 Iren[int].].

4. —ουτε πενθος usque ad εσται ετι sec. is an error, but an error of the exemplar, as all our five MSS. omit. So do f. 35 98 102 222 Iren. gr.? but not any other sympathizers.

5. [καινα παντα ποιω] with t.r. and only fam 1 *syr*Σ.

11. After θεου is a scholion right in the middle of the text in both 119 and 123, but in them alone with 144-148-158: εν ῆ ή γυνη του αρνιου ῆ ανω ιερουσαλημ υπο θεου κοσμηθησεται και δοξασθησεται. In 123 θεου is illeg. but clear in the rest.

Same verse: —ως λιθω fam 119 and E 1 7 12 17* 18 22 f. 38 f. 46 47 59 al. Er. 1. 2. 3. Ald. Col. 57. Note —λιθω *syr*S.

xxi. 12. We omit εχουσαν sec. alone, and substitute και, with boh (ⲛⲉⲙ), while all f. 21 and 176-206 aeth arab add και before εχουσα.

15. —αυτης prim. by f. 119 is also omitted by 12 only besides and arab [*syr*S omits και τους πυλωνας αυτης] and ps-Ambr. omits αυτης twice.

18. ομοιον (pro ομοια) with ℵABP plur. (123 illeg.) against all the 1 family except our f. 119.

23. φαινωσιν αυτην (pro φ. εν αυτη) by f. 119 and only f. 21 f. 35 f. 114 120 146 152, is confirmed by *syr*Σ aeth sah arm 1. 2. a.

Same verse, punctuation is as follows: και ο λυχνος αυτης· το αρνιον· (The same in 158). xxii. 1. We have a new reading (with all the family) of +και before λαμπρον, and this is read only by *syr*S in addition. (Cf. however, the different order of 18 *syr*S).

2. Is word for word with t.r.

3. εκει (pro ετι) goes with E 1 4 7 10 and many with Compl. and *syr*S. (ℵ* omits).

14. μακαριοι οι ποιουντες τας εντολας εμου (pro αυτου) is new, but is confirmed by all the family and Beat. against Tyc.

16. —επι (illeg. in 123) is omitted by the family and E fam 1 etc. and 47 with Prim. but not *syr*S, which with Σ has ενωπιον.

18. [παντι ακουοντι] cum t.r. Abest τω.

There is no subscription.

Recapitulating, we find various unique readings with 38 and fam 38, besides other agreement; and of most close agreement with *syr*S as follows:

i. 9. +υμων (post συγκοινωνος) also *syr*Σ.

ii. 5. —εκ του τοπου αυτης

vi. 12. ως ασκος
vii. 4. —εσφραγισμενοι (18).
10. +και (ante λεγοντες)
xii. 10. —και η εξουσια του χριστου xvii. 8. υπαγει (A 55 59 104).
xxii. 1. +και (ante λαμπρον) (Cf. 18).

Compare also αδοντων and αδοντας xiv. 3 and xv. 3; και λεγουσι xviii. 18.

(See also i. 11, 20, ii. 3, 20, iii. 3, 4, x. 7, xiii. 16, xvi. 18, xviii. 18 +και, xix. 1).

Observe how little fortuitous the above is. It is not a question of omissions, but of an almost equal proportion of omissions, additions, and substitution.

Further, consider conjunction of f. 38 f. 119 *syr*S (see also ii. 18) at xi. 10. χαρησονται (pro χαρουσιν).

Conjunction of f. 119 ℵ and *syr*S copt

at ix. 20. και τα ξυλινα και τα λιθινα Important matter of order.

Syriac.

Thus, notwithstanding some carelessness of the scribe, we find this deliberate concurrence in very interesting testimony. Such things as ασκος (vi. 12) confirm the Syriac, which Dean Gwynn thought might be a mistake. Our scribe of 119 wrote very rapidly, and there is no hesitation in the incorporation or omission of the above lections, which undoubtedly trace to his exemplar.

x. 3. μυκαται or βρυχαται.

How far the other hitherto singular omissions, transpositions and additions have any other testimony must be left for the future to decide. At any rate, we are face to face with a very interesting proposition; βρυχαται, however, for μυκαται x. 3 of the lion roaring, is new, yet flows in the text without hesitation. But it comes from the com̄. 'βρυγμω λεοντος,' so we must be careful to differentiate between old and new readings, unless, indeed, βρυγμω in the com̄. came from an old reading βρυχαται, hitherto lost to us. But this is revision, as some censor thought the writer of the Apoc. did not know that a lion βρυχᾶται whilst an ox μυκᾶται. Our old friend 36, too, is not to be denied, and frequently joins us, so that what we wrote under that MS. of a possible immediate Syriac-Greek exemplar is now emphasized by our family 119.

See xviii. 18 και ελεγον (pro λεγοντες) alone with 36 (+και syr). Also vii. 12 —αμην C 36. And see ii. 18 —αυτου, ii. 20 αφηκας etc.

But 144 and 158 are much closer to 119 than 123.

Irenaeus.

We must not omit to notice the very interesting φαινων at i. 16 [for φαινει] alone with 111 and Iren. (fulgens) Prisc. lucens. Irenaeus quotes in full i. 12–i. 16 and fulgens is certain. Priscillian also quotes in full i. 13–i. 16 (not noticed by Sabatier or Tischendorf). Examining the context, we find that while 119 and all the family give us φαινων, at i. 15 πεπυρωμενοι is read by fam 119, but probably πεπυρωμενω by 123 and but few others.

Now Iren. witnesses apparently to πεπυρωμενω rather than πεπυρωμενοι. His Latin is 'quemadmodum in camino succensus est' (Clerm. MS. omits est). Priscillian yields: pedes ejus aeramento turino ejecto furnace.

Iren. also quotes i. 17, 18 immediately after, and omits αμην with us, ℵ*CAP and a few, as Er. 1. 2. 3. Ald. Col.

Iren. is extant in Greek at iv. 7 and confirms —το (ante προσωπον) and ανθρωπου for ως ανθρωπος. This flows with B 2 etc. We go with Iren., opposing both the 1 and Compl. families, which in view of φαινων above is interesting.

In the same way at v. 3 we abandon ℵ 12 etc., who omit και υποκατω της γης, having the clause with the rest, and Iren. (nec sub terra).

More important is the omission of του ουρανου at xii. 4. We are the only support for Apoc. 1-152-179-208 (+Er. 1. 2. 3. Ald. Col. 57, following 1), but fam 119, as an entity, omits, and this agrees with Irenaeus' quotation (Inspir. Daem., Harvey, vol. I., p. 371) 'abscidere faciet in cauda tertiam partem stellarum, et dejiciet eas in terram.'

In xiii. 2-14, which Iren. quotes at length, we agree with him in οτι (for ος) xiii. 4, also in +και (ante τις sec.) xiii. 4, also we have και ult. in xiii. 6, and omit with Iren. and CAP and but few the clause in xiii. 7 και εδοθη αυτω πολεμον etc.; also xiii. 8 το ονομα (nomen) for ονοματα. But for the rest, we oppose as often as not.

Notice next xvii. 8 our ὑπαγει (for υπαγειν) with so few [only A 55 59 104 111] is supported by Iren[int] (vadit) as well as *syr*S.

At xx. 11 the order [λευκον μεγαν] agrees with Iren.

Immediately following in eo of Iren. agrees with επ' αυτω of 119-144-148-158 (illeg. 123).

See also xx. 12 magnos et minores. But xxi. 3 the populi of Iren. (as edited) and λαοι of most does not find a counterpart with us. We go with P etc. and syr gig.

This testimony of Iren. with our gig and syr affiliations clearly ties up the Greek, Syriac and Latin very early.

Apoc. 123 was collated in 1908 from the original MS. (before we had seen 119), and is very faint and difficult to read in places. Not appreciating its full importance, the collation was put aside to await entry in the lists at its proper place. We now enter them together. Ap. 119, easy to read from photographs, is now available to check much of 123's fainter readings. We have not had an opportunity to go over 123 again, but it hardly seems worth while.

At any rate, in the recension 119-123 we are face to face with something very old, and it is most useful to have the two exponents of this Text. Else many singular readings would be passed over as errors, which prove to be a very part of the old exemplar, but 144-148-158 now enable us to check fully.

An examination of Gwynn's Syriac reveals how far back we go. Our relations now with one part and now with another of the 1 family recalls how these fam 1 MSS. go sometimes alone against each other with Syriac support. Here again we have a dozen fresh examples in fam 119 with the Syriac, apart from the other fam 1 MSS., as well as with them.

Concurrence of Latin, Greek and Syriac.

Remembering at xxi. 4 an apparent muddle ex Græco in the Syriac, and seeing the enormous sympathy between the Latin gig and Syriac as well as that of certain Greek MSS., we are driven to the conclusion that Greek, Syriac and Latin were concurrent exceedingly early.

Syriac.

We would add that the Syriac not only stares one fairly in the face in this recension in conjunction with a few other MSS., but absolutely alone. Take Syriac order:

xii. 3. σημειον αλλον
xviii. 21. λιθον μεγαν ως μυλον } order confirmed by the rest of the family.

Even φαινων (i. 16) of Irenaeus' translator seems to trace to the Syriac construction, as do ἀδοντων at xiv. 3 and xv. 3.

Going further, at v. 8 we are struck by a substitution τοῦτο (for το βιβλιον). Doubtless due to Syriac form 'it, the book.'

The confusion of cases (with 56) looks like retranslation at some time. Are we face to face with an underlying Syriac older than *syr*S? As to retranslation, note ειχον for εχουσιν ix. 10, 11, where syr is: 'there is to them.' Note genitive for accusative (alone among all MSS.) at xviii. 5.† Also xv. 6 περι dropped after the compound περιεζωσμενοι.

Also xvi. 14. πνευμα, xviii. 13 θυμιαμα, singular for plural, doubtless due to lack of diacritic points in syr.

As to another underlying Syriac, note unique differences of order remaining in our recension 119, and at xxi. 15 —αυτης prim. 12 and fam 119 only, where *syr*S is not extant, as it omits the clause και τους πυλωνας αυτης.

† See note on this under 158.

Apoc. 120 = Rome, Angelic gr. 57 (olim A. 4. 1). [Scr. 120. Greg. 149, new 2056. Sod. Aν[49]]. Collated direct in Rome at the Angelican Library, Feb. 1912. Apoc. 120.

Apoc. cum com̄. Andreas [xv], very neatly written on fine glazed paper. There is no inscription proper beyond the "ἑρμηνεία εἰς τὴν ἀποκάλυψιν τοῦ ἁγίου ἀποστόλου καὶ εὐαγγελίστου ιω̅ͮ τοῦ θεολόγου" clause, occurring in the usual introduction, commencing πολλακις etc.

There is no iota post. or sub.

The MS. is another of the 1 family, but evidently modelled on the same MS. as 67† with which it agrees in common errors, for instance, at once in the first ch. omitting i. 5/6 from τω αγαπησαντι to the end of verse 6; besides such things as:

The groups, as will be seen on reference to vol. II, are quite interesting.

Individualities of 120 are chiefly confined to minutiae, as a tendency to write οὖν for οὐ at first (ii. 11, 25 etc.), and some other matters of spelling. For instance, ους is written οὖσ οὖσ οὖσ οὖσ; λευκαι for λευκον i. 15; μανα ii. 17; λιποις ii. 24.

The few disagreements with 67 (iii. 2. στηρησον txt. 120, τηρησον 67) etc. are of small account.†

γνῶσας (pro γνως) iii. 3 is more noteworthy; 120 has ii. 11, while 67 omits.

The unique reading in i. 2 οσα δε pro οσα τε ειδε is no doubt due to an error and to the Compl. addition following of και ατινα etc. We correct the gross blunder of 67 at vi. 16 where 67 writes κρανιου for αρνιου. As to 120 alone:

These corrections are very rare. This is only the second or third I think. The scribe of 120 must have had another exemplar (since 67 omits), but he did not consult it much. Yet see above with Hipp. xvii. 9, but there 67 is with 120 and Hipp. (alone).

After completing the collation of this MS. I received from Athos† photographs of 'E' (051 new style) and see that 67-120 and E are practically one MS. I therefore recover in 67-120 the whole of the text of E in the first half of the book, where that MS. is missing.

The intrusion of 17 is more difficult to explain.

Our 251 shows much sympathy with 67-120.

This recension 67-120, which now checks itself almost perfectly, is so allied to the 1 family that its evidence in difficult places is most valuable, and therefore I have given the foregoing lists at some length.

† I was not aware when ordering these photographs that Dr. Gregory had already collated 'E' and published in 1909 (Textkritik, vol. III.), but my collation is a good check.

GROUP 59-121-(fam 114)-(189).

Apoc. 121 = Rome, Angelic. Hodie gr. 32 (olim B. 5. 15). [Scr. 121. Greg. 150, new 2057. Sod. α 1576]. Apoc. 121.

[Gregory's 121, new 250. Sod. O^{10} = Coislin 224 at Paris (our 165), which has been published by Cramer in his Catena, vol. VIII., pp. 497/582].

Our 121 is found on pp. 171/205 of this Angelica MS. on glazed paper (XIV/XV) in a fair hand and without commentary, although partially related to some commentary MSS.

Iota subscript occurs from time to time, sometimes incorrectly. A large comma is sometimes given a place (as in some other MSS.) ranging with the letters. Once (ix. 4) δενδρον' receives this comma as an apostrophe. υιος is once abbreviated (ii. 18) thus : υι͞ϲ'.

The inscr. is with 103-112, but the text is in some respects Complutensian, although as we proceed the old base forces more and more agreement with the Erasmian group, but with Coptic leanings.

If the first Angelica codex turned out to be an interesting relation of 67, and the counterpart of the xth cent. Athos MS. E, this second one, although nearly as late in date as the other, proves to be quite remarkable as to text and intimately related to another of our codices, No. 59, which it may be remembered has a good deal of special interest.

The original of 121, however, has been the subject of several revising hands down the ages. The present codex is so smoothly copied that I do not attribute to the scribe himself many of the various new readings which abound in it, but I consider many of them to have been inherited by him from the exemplar which he was using, but towards the end he gets very bold : xix. 6 υδατων σφοδρων, xix. 13 υδατι for αιματι, xxii. 2 πολιτειας for πλατειας, xxii. 15 —και οι πορνοι (the last with 59).

After segregating unique, and other sympathetic readings, we are still left with certain apparently basic readings, to which it is a welcome task to add the testimony of this witness to the others cited below.

Such appear to be :

i. 20. ους (pro ων) ℵCAP fam 1 111 146 *al. syr*S.
ii. 7. —αυτω ℵ Compl. group with f. 46 67-120 and *syr*S Tyc 2. arab.

11. αυτοις εκαστω ℵCAP and many, against B and nearly as many.

Perhaps also :

ix. 3. —εξουσιαν (=' εξουσια ως εχουσιν ') with 40-210 130 149-186 *syr*S and h only.
20. δυνανται ℵCAP etc.
xiii. 4. οτι (pro ος) ℵCAP etc.
ibid. +και (ante τις sec.) ℵCAP etc.

Thereagainst, set such things as :

iii. 7. αδου (pro δαβιδ) with the Latin group 7* etc.

Cp. also possible Coptic influence at v. 12, vi. 1, viii. 4, x. 3, xiv. 18, very definitely at xviii. 4 —αλλην, and in same verse λαοι μου (cf. copt); confirmed by xvi. 3 and xv. 7 +εκ post γεμουσας (copt : ⲉⲧⲙⲉⲣ ⲉⲃⲟⲗ ϧⲉⲛ).

Also xvii. 8 επι βιβλιον (—το) alone, where copt has the weak article. See xiv. 9 where 59-121 alone change the order to εν φωνη μεγαλη λεγων and copt has an omission here.

βουριλλιος (alone) at xxi. 20 may also be noted. Cf. ΒΥΡΙΛΛΙΟϹ copt.

Also xix. 16 —επι sec.; xxii. 6 —και tert. with boh^{C}; and xxii. 8 +ταυτα post ηκουσα with 59 and cf. copt; also xxii. 15 with 18, and xxii. 16 with 35, and cf. copt in both places.

Other ancient readings are emphasized by such codices as 32† 36† 56 and 38 as:

The sympathy of 121 with 59—(ix. 5 at once arrests attention)—is evident in such places as:

iv. 1. —ην ηκουσα
4. επι τοῦ θρόνου (pro επι τους θρονους) } This is simply due to the muddle in this ibid. τεσσαρας (pro εικοσι και τεσσαρας) } verse. We join 59 in omitting καθημενους.
5. φόβου (pro θρονου prim.)
v. 12. +την (ante ισχυν et ante τιμην) =111 and copt only. This in addition to adding την before σοφιαν with 23 f. 25 30 61 98 111 113 226 copt, and is quite deliberate. We leave unchanged 'και δοξαν και ευλογιαν' at the close, against 111.

Thereagainst:

v. 13. —η (ante τιμη solus et ante δοξα cum 125). We also omit η before ευλογια with P 139 159 and omit και το κρατος with 59 alone.

vi. 1. τινος (pro ενος) possible Coptic influence. (f. 61 f. 119 omit).

vii. 1. τας (pro τους)

12. —και η σοφια with A only. Add now 113 164-166 f. 178 220 arm 4.

viii. 4. τῆς προσευχῆς (So 111* corrected by the diorthotes, and 140).

7. και το τριτον της γης κατεκαη (—και το τριτον των δενδρων κατεκαη et —και πας χορτος χλωρος κατεκαη).

This is new thus with 146. For while 75 90 100 109 113 al. gig Compl. omit και το τριτον των δενδρων κατεκαη, they do not omit the next και πας χορτος χλωρος κατεκαη, which only 30 f. 114 182 omit).

10. ὁ αστηρ ὁ μεγας This is bold, or retranslation.

12. φαίνηται [seq. το τριτον αυτης· και η νυξ ομοιως]

13. —πετωμενου Alone with boh and 146*com.*

ibid. —μεγαλη Alone (*syr*S omits φωνη μεγαλη) but τρεις or τρις is substituted for μεγαλη (hence μεγαλη omitted) by 17 36 59 and 120.

ix. 1/2. —της αβυσσου και ηνοιξε το φρεαρ της αβυσσου και ανεβη καπνος εκ του φρεατος. Codex reads: ϗ εδοθη αυτω η κλεις του φρεατος ως καπνος καμινου... [Contra 59]. Note —της αβυσσου 59 113 gig.

10. —και ἡ (ante εξουσια) (—και only ℵAP 17 f. 34 36 al.).

13. —του θυσιαστηριου (Cf. 59 which differs, but with arm manages to omit this).

19. η εξουσια εκ του στοματος αυτων (pro αι γαρ usque ad αυτων sec.).

x. 3. —οτε Probable error, but cf. copt which drops it, expressing 'and he having cried out.'

13. +το (ante πυρ) et sah.

14. —πληγην (inter duas paginas perd.).

16. —και τους πλουσιους et —και τους ελευθερους. No others drop both these clauses. Only ℵP had trouble with the first; and 41 46 67-120 81 100 f. 114 189 omit the last.

xiv. 8. +και (ante της πορνειας)

18. αγγελος αλλος So now 164 only.

xv. 7. +εκ (post γεμουσας) So 251, exactly with copt alone..

xvi. 11 fin. —αυτων

14. —τους βασιλεις της γης και While της γης και is omitted by many (but not by 59) the omission of τους βασιλεις is new with 215[non fam].

xvii. 5. +και (ante βαβυλων) So also 100 only. Coptic says 'of Bab.'

xvii. 8. —το (ante βιβλιον) επι βιβλιου (—το vel του) 58[non fam].
11. +αυτος (post και quart.) So now 189.
xviii. 4. λαοι μου (pro ο λαος μου) So arm 4. Cf. copt ΝΑΠΑΛΛΟC.
5. οτι αι αμαρτιαι αυτης εκολληθησαν. This is the first and only Greek MS. to displace εκολληθησαν here from the head of the verse, as, however, copt arab aeth Prim. Cypr.
13. —και ιππων και ρεδων και σωματων. Although και σωματων is omitted by some, the omission of the whole is quite new. So now 189. (Note strange change in sah).
17. ὁ πλουτος ὁ τοσουτος while 59 omits τοσουτος!
20. —και οι προφηται
23. Transfer of και φωνη μυλου from verse 22 to 23, where it displaces και φωνη νυμφιου ϗ νυμφης.
xix. 6. υδατων σφοδρων (pro βροντων ισχυρων)
13. υδατι (pro αιματι)
xx. 4. —το (ante χαραγμα) So 113.
11. και γη (pro ἡ γη)
13. —και ο θανατος και ο αδης εδωκαν τους εν αυτοις νεκρους. So now 187 211 222 arm 2. 4.
xxi. 8. φονευουσι pro φονεῦσι
19. οἱ τῆς πόλεως (pro της πολεως) (αυτης της πολεως 146-155 ex ind. txt et com.).
20. βουριλλιος Alone. (Cf. copt ϒ in ΒϒΡΙΛΛΙΟC contra 59 : βυριλλιος).
27. εισελθοι So 80-138 143 159 240.
xxii. 2. πολιτειας (pro πλατειας)
6. —και tert. cum boh[c].
7 fin. ταυτης (pro του βιβλιου τουτου) So 146-155 157.
15. και πας ο φιλων το ψευδος (—και ποιων) Cf. 18 et 118 et boh sah arm α. 4.
19. —απο των λογων βιβλου της προφητειας ταυτης. Thus codex reads 'και εαν τις αφελη, αφελει' exactly as Act. Sat. and Prim.: Et si quis dempserit, adimet..... Cf. arm α. β., and gig which omits της προφητειας ταυτης in this clause.

Now see 189, a very peculiar little codex (which only begins deliberately at x. 8 and closes deliberately at xxi. 6), for much sympathy with 59-121.

GROUP 97-122-214.

Apoc. 122 = Rome, Chigi R. v. 33. [Scr. 122. Greg. 151, new 2058. Sod. O[a40]]. [xv]. Collated at Rome from original Feb./March 1912. Apoc. 122.

Contained in a large paper 4° book containing extracts from Ecclesiastical writers. Apoc. on p. 44 verso seq. — with double com̄. of Andreas and Oecumenius. These MSS. are arranged in much longer sections than those of the pure Andreas family. Sometimes iota sub. and post. are given, but old forms prevail.

It develops at once that this is a sister to 97 (collated by Scrivener and incorporated in our lists from his collation). In order to check this family MS. I have collated 122, thanks to Prince Mario Chigi's courtesy in allowing me to visit his library for the purpose. In spots we do not seem to agree with 97, where Scr. names another, as 95 or 98. It is possible Scrivener's alphabetical letters have been occasionally confused, but I cannot say, and it is not of very great moment. But we now have a final check in 214 at Kutlumesi, Athos, an absolute sister also. Group now 97-122-214.

A second scribe with very bad writing begins at xvi. 12, and a third with a very good hand at xix. 17. Three scribes.

The inscription is αποκαλυψιc του αγιου ιω̄ του ηγαπημενου και θεολογου. (Cf. 4 64).

We are with 97 and 214 as follows, a very exceptionally close family in rare or unique variants:

i. 6. —και το κρατος (and 102 164).
14. +και το ενδυμα αυτου (ante λευκον) (ex Dan. vii. 9).
15. —ως εν καμινω πεπυρωμενοι (and so Cass. vid.).

vi. 8. —εν (ante θανατω) (and ℵ etc.).
viii. 5. —φωναι και (and 215, non fam).
12. και μη φανη η ημερα και η νυξ ομοιως (—το τριτον αυτης) (and 38. See 18 251).
13. ἐν μέσουνίματι vid. (*ex em.) (and B pauc.).
ix. 1. επι της γης (and 38 113 182).
15. ἐλῦσαν (pro ελυθησαν)
18. απεκτανθη (and 18 23 36 f. 38 55 80-138 176-206 251).

[Although above in same verse 122 writes και απο (pro υπο) apart from 97, it is clearly correct as to type, for 18 supports with *syr*S boh vg aeth arm arab].

11. κλαυσουσιν επ αυτη και πενθησουσιν οτι (and 38).
23. —εν σοι (ante ετι sec.)
xx. 3. τελεσθῆναι (and 59).
9. +και την πολιν των αγιων (and B 164-166 194^A).
xxi. 19. λυχνιτης (pro χαλκηδων) No others.
23. +αὔτη (post πολις) (and 38 arab).
xxii. 6. γνωρισαι σοι (pro δειξαι τοις δουλοις αυτου) No others; but υποδειξαι σοι 149-186.
12 fin. +ο μισθος

The closest adherent to our recension is clearly 38 (without its sisters 178-203-240), and therefore this recension is junior to f. 178, which represents the elder stock of 38. *Syr*S is also sympathetic.

At viii. 1 we contradict the ημιωρον of 97 and 214 and write [ημιωριον].
" xi. 6 we contradict the υετους of 38 97 and write υετος with 214.
" xiv. 16 we contradict the επι την γην of 97-214 and most and write επι της γης with 36 87 240 only.
" xiv. 19 we contradict the επι της γης of ℵ f. 38 97-214 and write εις την γην with most.

As to Coptic note: v. 12, xi. 19, xvii. 2, 6, 10, xix. 4 etc.

Note that κειμενον is not marked at xiv. 6, and that there is no com. between xx. 10/11, while in Oecumenius there is. After xxi. 5 a bit of com. occurs, distinctly labelled Oecumenius, but only touching on xx. 12.

Conflict of readings at xv. 6 causes absence of com.

Notice that between ch. xv. and xvi. scholia are absent. May this not be due to some conflict between the respective commentaries of Andreas and Oecumenius, for while Andreas knows of and discourses of both readings in xv. 6 λινον and λιθον, Oecumenius apparently only deals with the latter. The com. occurs after xvi. 11 in this MS. as in 155 a real Oec. MS., but is only a little piece of ten lines with nothing about xv. 6.

As a whole the MS. goes with the B group, and follows directly after 109 in our lists, as will be seen, where the intervening MSS. do not sympathize.

The MS. is not reliable enough to use in our apparatus for the real text of Oecumenius, and would only complicate matters.

Here ends Scrivener's old list (3rd Edn., App., p. xxvi.).

The rest are Scr.-Miller and Gregory, and their numbers agree for a space in the Apocalypse, though, unfortunately, their cross-references to Acts and Paul often diverge.

GRÆCO-SYRIAC GROUP 119-123-144-148-158, of which 123 is the least consistent.

Apoc. 123 (Ev. 738. Ac. 262) = Paris, nat. suppl. gr. 159 = Greg. 123 (Ev. 743. Ac. 259). [Scr. 123. Greg. 123, new 743. Sod. Αν⁴³]. Apoc. 123.

(N.B.—Under Evan. 743 Greg. gives the wrong cross-reference of Apoc. 109 instead of 123).

This is a MS. on paper, with commentary of Andreas, by two hands, XIV and XVI, but the younger merely re-copied the older hand, where the older writing had been too much effaced. Much injured by water, and very faint in places, it can still be deciphered, and I have read all but a few words during a short visit to Paris in July 1908. It hardly looks as if it would repay collation, but it turns out to be a most important text.

The MS. is contained in a large folio. The Apoc. stands first in the MS., f^os^. 1-51. A table of contents precedes the text: κεφαλαια της αποκαλυψεως του αγιου ιω̄ ῆς. κεφ. α. Αποκαλυψις ιῡ χῡ etc. Then follows Andreas' prologue on p. 3. The text begins p. 3 verso, in the middle. No inscription proper.

Then follow the three epistles of S. John, and then S. John's Gospel with commentary, which will probably be well worth collating.

It has the peculiarity of ιησου always in full.

Notwithstanding its appearance this is a valuable key MS. See under fam 119. It carries the 1-62/3 family far back to the earliest times, behind ℵ and A, and again lands us in the Græco-Syriac of the Crawford Syriac MS., and also of the early Latin.

The family is alone with Crawford Syriac in omitting εκ του τοπου αυτης at ii. 5, and reads ἀσκος with it at vi. 12. Alone with ℵ twice ix. 20, xv. 3; with A xvi. 2.

So far I wrote briefly, as the MS. was collated out of order. After reaching 119 we at once recollected this MS. 123, and saw that it was an exceedingly close sister, agreeing in nearly all the unique readings with 119. For a brief space (iii. 3–iv. 8) another exemplar was used for 123. At iii. 3 γνῶσ last word on f°. 7 verso. On the next page the scribe who began the book (i. 1–i. 4 ἁ εστιν) goes on and continues to f°. 11 verso bottom. The first half of the page is com̄. Then without warning he takes up a little before the other scribe left off. At iii. 3 he supplies the επι σε left out by the other scribe.

Both were copied in a large monastery, but for further details please refer back to 119.

Now see 144-148-158 to follow.

GROUP 34-35 etc., of which 124 is the least consistent.

Apoc. 124. Apoc. 124 (Ac. 309. P. 300) = Athens, nat. 64 (now 91) = [Greg. old 124 (Ac. 309. P. 300), new 1828. Sod. α 202]. XIII.

After many attempts I have at last secured photographs of this MS. (in 1923).

It proves to be a member of a large (Coptic) family, now established as 34-35-68-87-124-132-156-181-188

(this is again divisible. See under previous MSS., but 124 stands rather apart), and so its characteristics and reliability are easily checked.

We have already collated 132 and ascertained that that MS. is most reliably copied.

This MS. 124 is, however, at times quite independent of the family. It will diverge abruptly, and yet in the same verse give us a strictly family reading.

Thus at xiii. 10 we find the family reading:

ει τις εις αιχμαλωσιαν ἀπαγει · εις αιχμαλωσιαν ὑπαγει · yet, immediately thereafter the omission of δει αυτον by 124 with 81 [non 204] *syr*S gig and coptic, but not the family. (—δει A 140).

I shall have to tabulate the matter to make it clear, for the aberration from type is not due to carelessness, but corresponds to the foundation-text of MSS. like 14-92, *syr*S and copt. By 'copt' we include both boh and sah, for at xviii. 7 the family reading +οτι εγω before καθημαι is read by sah definitely.

It is a MS. very easy to read, but difficult to date. It may be XII[th] cent. (some breathings are square), but probably XIII[th]. There are a few marginal corrections, chiefly alternative readings, some by the scribe or a contemporary, and others later. None of importance.

xviii. 22 and the Coptic. The MS. is mutilated at the end and all is missing after the words πασης τεχνης in xviii. 22, but, by retaining these words for us, it again puts ℵA boh in the wrong, for they alone omit without a single cursive, and sah has them.

It is the more remarkable, seeing that we have the closest affiliation with boh, even independently of the family, which is a Coptic family. Thus, at

vi. 16 we have the order: ταις πετραις και τοις ορεσι alone among cursives, and only with the Bohairic!

Again at ix. 4 we leave the family to omit ινα. So do three boh MSS. (and Horner text) and only these.

Our MS. has one curious characteristic of writing zeta like our own z. We find ⁂ occasionally for δια, 'ǫ̂ occasionally for ουν, once in χρυσουν (χρυσǫ̂ xvii. 4), and an unusual ligature for αν viz. ⱶ even in the middle of words, as in παντα, thus: πⱶ͡τ.

The inscription is: του αγιου αποστολου και ευαγγελιστου ιωαννου του θεολογου, without αποκαλυψις at the beginning, leaving the first word of the text Αποκαλυψις to complete the inscription proper.

Besides the characteristic family readings (which will be found under some of the sister MSS.) we have these unique ones:

ii. 13. ο μαρτυς ο πιστος μου (pro ο μαρτυς μου ο πιστος)

17. εκ του μαννα φαγειν (pro φαγειν απο του μαννα) So 143. (φαγειν εκ του μαννα ℵ aliq.). (Syriac would be indeterminate).

In the above note xvii. 15, xviii. 22, where fam 178 alone supports [this is emphasized on the next list at vi. 17], and earlier where 218 comes in twice. It is not all carelessness, as can be seen from the emphasis at xiii. 16 (amid sundry grave and basic variants)† and from xviii. 22.

And these with other support, when deviating from type (observe later intrusion of 14-92):

The above picture should suffice. The foundation text is clearly as old as or older than that of the rest of the family.

B Grouping.

Apoc. 125.

Apoc. 125 (Ac. 207) = Escurial Ψ. III. 6. [=Greg. 125 (Ac. 235), new 919. Sod. α 113]. Collated from photos at Rome, March 1912. The date of this MS. may be XII–XIII. or earlier. It is written in a hand apparently imitating an older period. Iota post. occurs unequally. ν εφελκ. very unequally. πνευματων in full i. 4, κυριε vii. 14. Breathings are square, psi square. οταν generally ὅτὰν. The MS. is correctly and pleasingly written.

A catena in a late hand begins at ii. 5 but ends iii. 10.

This is another MS. of the B type and holds very true throughout. The limits of the correct copying are shown by the following small list of unique readings:

- ii. 17. εγγεγραμμενον New in this place.
- iii. 17. ταλαιπος * (ταλαιπ^{ωω}οσ **)
- v. 13. ἡ ἡ εὐλογία
- vi. 14. νησοσ. sic
- vii. 1. —μητε επι της θαλασσης* (Supplied marg. ***).
- 14/15 are run together against B, which prefixes και to ver. 15.
- ix. 20. —ουτε μετενοησαν εκ των εργων των χειρων αυτων (So 144* by error against its fam.).
- xi. 4. οἶτοι (pro οὗτοι init.)
- xiv. 8. πεποιηκεν (pro πεποτικε)
- xvii. 1. επι των υδατων των των πολλων sic
- 9. επτα ορη εστιν sic
- 10 fin. εἶναι (pro μειναι)
- xix. 4. επι θρονωι (pro επι του θρονου) New without the article.

The above is an unusually short list. The codex closes at xix. 6 και ως [φωνην βροντων ισχυρων . . . . . being mutilated thereafter. (Read ως φωνην ter with text. rec. in ver. 6)].

One other place may be noticed at xviii. 3 στρηνϲc is the last word on the page. Final sigma as c is unusual. I cannot say from the photograph whether added or not, and whether στρηνου was first intended.

For the rest, we may note (against B):

- i. 20. —τας prim.
- v. 7. —το βιβλιον
- 8. προσευχων
- 13. —ά
- ibid. —η (ante δοξα)*
- vi. 1. φωνὴν
- 5. μεγας (pro μελας)
- 12. —ειδον
- vii. 4. —ρμδ χιλ. εσφραγ.
- viii. 2. εδοθη
- 3. ἔστη sic txt (mg man. rec. γρ εστάθη)
- 12. ϗ το τριτον αυτων μη φανῆ· ἡ ημερα ϗ ἡ νυξ ομοιως
- 13. ουαι bis
- ix. 9. —ως θωρακας
- ix. 16. τῶν ἀριθμῶν
- 21. φαρμάκω– sic
- xiii. 2 fin. —και εξουσιαν μεγαλην 29 30 50 90 93 98 128 129 142 146*com.* 246 Beat.

  [This it will be noticed is the group which recurs most frequently with 125].
- xiv. 3. —αι (vid.)
- xv. 3. βασιλεῦ (pro ὁ βασιλευς)
- xvi. 10. του θρονου (pro τον θρονον)
- xvii. 5. ονοματα [γεγραμμενον]
- xviii. 2. ισχυραν φωνην
- 7. οτι καθως (pro καθημαι).

Group 61-(74)-95-126-(164-166)-218-219.

Apoc. 126 (Ac. 208) = Esc. Ψ. III. 18. [= Greg. 126 (Ac. 236), new 920. Sod. α 55]. Apoc. 126.
[XI].

This is another B type, though an older MS. in point of date and of far greater interest. There is no iota post. or sub., and it is very correctly written.

It is quite close to 61, nearer even than 95, for 95 goes apart from 61-126 after cap. xii. except in a few places such as xiv. 18. Now see our 159 and 164-166 which joins the group partially. And particularly 218 and 219 which complete the group.

One peculiarity of this MS. is to write generally (but not quite always) κυκλοθε εμπροσθε οπισθε. In this 61 sometimes sympathizes, but hardly ever 219, and never 218.

One bad omission iv. 9/10, also shared by 61, is rectified by both 61-126 by adding in verse 10 after αιωνων. Clearly this comes from the common exemplar, but such things can readily be seen throughout, as at xix. 20, where οι δυο (which 75 and gig omit) is transferred to the end of the verse.

The tables which follow will show the exact divergence from the common type.

The inscription is simple: ιωαννου αποκαλυψις with 95 and a few, while the other sister MS. 61 has: αποκαλυψις του ευαγγελιστου παρθενου και θεολογου ιω̄, and the others all differ.

As to Coptic there are a few points of sympathy and contact.

(The amazing thing is to find a family reading alone with Prim. (xvi. 21) and alone with Hipp. (xviii. 5) and twice with *syr*S (xviii. 18, 23) in the midst of all this. They are true readings, since the family nearly as a unit perpetrates them). Ancient readings.

It will be seen from the very few unique readings how excessively true to family-type is 126. These tenth and eleventh century scribes are far more careful than those who preceded and followed them.

Besides this there is apparent agreement of 95-126 without 61 (unless I err for 61) at:

vi. 1. —ενος and 218-219, f. 119 (146).

That the 61-95-126-164-166-218-219 readings precede the B type is now shown by Apoc. 159, a pure fam 1 MS., for it contains a number of these readings. See under Apoc. 159, and see above with fam 1 from xviii. onwards.

The MS. 126 closes at xxii. 1 και εδειξε [...

Apoc. 61 is missing from xxii. 8 onwards, so that there is one leaf more lost from 126 than from 61, but 164 of this family-type is complete and supplies the end, and so does 219, but 218 is also missing at end.

† But from this point onwards 95 drops out of the family apparently, or at any rate after xiv. 18.

GROUP (95)-127-215 (as to 95 after xi.) and 172-217. Cf. 159 and boh.

Apoc. 127 (Ac. 323. P. 429) = Lesbos 55 τοῦ Λείμωνος = Greg. 127 (Ac. 323. P. 429). [Greg. new 1841. Sod. α 47]. [IX vel X (??)]. Collated in 1921 from photographs obtained in 1912. Apoc. 127.

[The Apoc. MS. numbered 132 in that library had disappeared in 1912, torn from the volume. This is Gregory's 1757 a, p, r. Textkritik, p. 1178]. It is not IX–X, but rather XI[th] cent. The date is somewhat important, as will be seen when the readings are examined.

There is no iota sub. nor post., not even with αδης; psi is square and ancient, but ν εφελκ. is rare, and generally speaking the hand is posterior to the X[th] century. Breathings are something between square and round.

It is very carefully and accurately written. In enormous and exceptional agreement with the textus receptus, yet it has a strain which is very interesting. Indeed, one wonders how such marvellous running agreement is reconcilable with the following curious exceptions, which are so far solecisms: Strange aberrations.

until one appreciates that it has other most interesting, although occasional agreement with ℵ, A, ℵA, CA, ℵ 95, 56, 56 95, and 95 alone. Also a good deal of sympathy with *syr*S, culminating in the unique agreement between them of —υιων at vii. 4 (cf. x. 2, xi. 6 etc.).

We are quite alone with 95 at least eighteen times, but only from the xi[th] chapter onwards:

(Now add 159, as above, to this 95-127 group in many places, and partly 169-216, 172-217).

We pick up quite some agreement with that remarkable MS. 56 and (besides xviii. 19 above) we are together alone (127-215) with 56 at:

As I rise from collating this striking manuscript, I feel that I know much more than I knew before, and would be more capable than ever before (if it were my set province) to put together a fresh text for the printer. The check on the big uncials is very good. The MS. runs with them in all good and straightforward things (especially after chapter iv onwards).

Where it withholds sympathy from A or ℵ or C, the chances are that it is right and that they are wrong. Thus it knows nothing of λιθον (xv. 6), although it has some Oecumenian readings (see 146 repeatedly above), nor of —πασης τεχνης (xviii. 22), although in close accord with CA and ℵA respectively in the immediate neighbourhood of both passages.

Reliability of the scribe.

The scribe is absolutely reliable in his copying; one of the very finest scribes whose work I have followed [God rest his dutiful bones and spirit], and what is related to idiosyncracies of ℵ or A or C or 18 or 40 or 56 or 95 was there in his copy, and in no wise due to infirmity or wilfulness on his part. He has not tried to change anything, nor to mix with the grammar of the writer of the Apocalypse.

Word-painting.

The problem of the text deepens as we traverse the later chapters of the book, for there is some word-painting there, which seems superfluous. Thus, the addition of ποιησης after ορα μη in xix. 10, and again in xxii. 9, or of a second ειδον before τας ψυχας in xx. 4 (with 56 sah and the usual small group), or of a second αινειτε before παντες in xix. 5 (with the usual group) savour of unauthorized addition to the regular spasmodic style of the author of the Apocalypse. But, as a whole, the scribe is reproducing absolutely and fundamentally a text which was before him. He is a perfect marvel of accuracy, and I see no reason to doubt that επι for ετι in xx. 3 is genuine and not an error, although so far unsupported (πλανήσῃ ἐπὶ τὰ ἔθνη).

This text, with its quasi-sister 95, its sister 215, its cousins 146 159 169-216 172-217, and with 56, deserves a very high place in our studies and among our critical materials, because, apart from the value and age of the original text, it is a sublime copy and sublimated essence of the exemplar whence it was derived.

Greek underlying text.

A careful inspection, after showing the deep sympathy with ℵA gigas and Syriac, brings up the great questions of an underlying Greek text to Gwynn's Syriac, or of polyglot reaction on such Greek texts from the Syriac itself. The student should weigh well the pros and cons of these questions in the light provided by this new witness.

Where we have unique readings (which are marvellously few for such a text) we cannot believe that they are really unique. Do they come from polyglot tendencies such as influenced ℵ to use all reference books at his command, or are they of an 'improving' order?

I can hardly think that they are of the latter class, and so we must seek further for light on these passages. If good Dean Gwynn were alive, it would surprise him to observe the deepening Syriac 'colour' of some of our Greek manuscripts.

(Observe also the concurrence of the important though critical witness 111 in v. 5, vi. 2, 11, viii. 1, xi. 5, 16, xii. 5, xiii. 8, 13, xiv. 12, xvi. 3, 4, 14, xviii. 2, 10, 12, 16 fin., xix. 18, xx. 11, xxi. 3).

Now see beyond under 215 a MS. at Athos. Dainty MS. of XIth century in exact accord with nearly all the outstanding variations.

But here the problem deepens, because at:

i. 16. ισχυρι* is read by 127, but 215 maintains δυναμει.

vi. 3. δευτεραν is maintained by 127, while 215 substitutes ετεραν, so that the common agreement at iii. 12 of οικω for ναω and at vi. 12 +ολη post εγενετο tert. (instead of post σεληνη) etc., must be weighed with these other synonyms not common to both. And behold once more we are face to face with a polyglot tradition. It is stimulating, but also confusing. Is our hare going to escape us for ever?

B FAMILY: (93-128).

Apoc. 128. Apoc. 128 (Ac. 332. P. 434) = S. Marc. ii. 114, Venice (in the collection of Greek MSS. in 'Appendix' MS. catalogue, not printed). = Greg. 128 (Ac. 332. P. 434). [Greg. new 1849 (non 1852). Sod. α 110] [anno 1069]. Collated in Venice from the original, May 1912.

The inscription is apparently novel: αποκαλυψις του αγιου και πανευφημου αποστολου του θεολογου (thus also in 176-206).

The subscription: αποκαλυψις του αγιου ιωαννου του θεολογου και ευαγγελιστου (corresponding to the inscription in some), is followed by an exact date, and is reported as finished in the month of November, the eighth day, at the third hour, in the year 6578 (= A.D. 1069). The name of the scribe is not easy to make out. He apparently subscribes himself ωθηθ ᾱ.

It is a bi-columnar MS. of 22 lines. Has square breathings, formed ⌝ or ʽ and ⌞ or ʼ.

It is one of the very oldest members of the B family, confirmed at iv. 8 with αγιος nine times.

Its nearest relative is 93, as seen throughout, and confirmed by the common mistake at xvi. 15 of τιμων for τηρων.

Sympathy is also shown by 30-98, 40, 51-90, 61-95-126, as also 9-13-27 sometimes, and 33.

Note the group at vii. 1 including C and 18, and below at vii. 4.

Observe xviii. 3 παντα παντα τα εθνη and compare xvii. 1, where after πορνης a space is left capable of containing some twelve letters. At this place 106 reduplicates, writing της πορνης της πορνης. Possibly 128* did the same. Here it has been erased, but at xviii. 3 the reduplication stands.

It is not a particularly interesting MS. Its idiosyncracies are not very many, and are comprised by the following:

i. 7. αὐτὼν pro αυτον sec. (αὐτῶν 124 163).
iii. 5. εν λευκοις ιματιοις New order with Prim. (but in the singular there: albam vestem).
vii. 5. εσφραγισμεναι prim. ET SECUND.

6. σαλπησωσι (..σιν 152*-179 201).

9. και αγγελος αλλος τριτος So now 189.
xvi. 2. ελκον pro ελκος κακον (See ℵ and A which between them yield the reading).
xviii. 3. παντα παντα τα εθνη
10. τον βασανισμον pro τον φοβον του βασανισμου
19. η μεγαλη πολις (τη μεγαλη πολει sah boh arab).

Not a very formidable list, but iii. 5, ix. 14, xvi. 2, xviii. 10 and xviii. 19 are to be noted.

Add xiii. 14. +τους ανθρωπους after πλανα with 77 alone.
xvi. 15. τιμων for τηρων with 93 alone (τιρων 200).

For the rest, observe the following few passages:

i. 20. —τας prim. with 18, 29, 30*-98, 40, 51-90, 61-95-126, 93, 100 125 al.

SUB-GROUP 29-30-98-129.

Apoc. 129.

Apoc. 129. von Dobschutz is going to call this Greg. 2324. Now in the Pierpont Morgan Library, N.Y. [Noster 108 = Scrivener 108 et 129 = Greg. 129. Vide ad 108].

We accordingly substitute here a MS. of early XI[th] century in our own possession. It was bought (very likely during the great war) in Bulgaria, acquired by me in 1919, and is well and clearly written by a most competent scribe. It is one of the earliest manuscripts with iota postscript, 'nitidissime' imposed, something between post. and sub., that is to say they are inserted post, but low, and very tiny, and very neat. They are given regularly with nouns (not with αδης or ζωον) and adjectives, but not with verbs, except γνωσῃ iii. 3. Breathings are square and round. Psi is angular and also rounded.

Divided into short sentences or στιχοι, all carefully punctuated.

It is a beautiful specimen of an early cursive, on the finest of parchment, and measures 11 by 7¾ inches, with 28 lines to a page. There is no introduction to the Apoc., although there is the usual ὑπόθεσις of Oec. to Hebrews (which the MS. also contains) and the usual subscription "πρὸς ἑβραίους ἐγράφη ἀπὸ τῆς ἰταλίας διὰ τιμοθέου στίχοις ψ̄ῡ."

The Apoc. has no list of chapters, nor are they numbered in the margin, but a (somewhat later) rubricator has exdented capitals in margin, marking the divisions. The same rubricator gives us inscription (of the simplest): ιωαννου αποκαλυψις, and the subscription: τέλος τῆς ἀποκαλύψεως τοῦ θεολόγου, without John's name, which is new.

For purposes of the identification of this MS. I would state that verso of this last leaf there were 23 lines of writing, which have all been thoroughly scratched out, and there remain visible but two red asterisk groups after the twenty-first half line.

The original scribe was a fine penman and most accurate, as can be seen from the following short list of solecisms:

iv. 7. το δευτερον το ζωον
v. 8. —των ante αγιων
vii. 3 fin. ημων pro αυτων
ix. 7. ομοιαι vid.
xi. 2. εκβαλε αυτην Μη αυτην μετρησης (—εξω)
xiii. 10. ει τις εχει εν μαχαιρα, δει αυτον αποκτανθηναι xviii. 14. +και (ante απηλθεν prim.) but καὶ is overdotted in the original ink.
xix. 6. Looks like λέγω̄ for λεγοντας, but leaf is mutilated.
xxi. 17. ανθρωπου μετρον, a new order.

He writes twice thus, at:

iii. 16. ἐ μέσαι, and at vi. 11. ἀποκτεν εσθαι, leaving a blank for another letter, but has not indicated why. In the first case there is a reading εκμεσαι by 100 and 106, which may have been in his mind; in the second he left room for another nu, a well-known reading.

Other interesting readings are:

xiv. 14. —και ειδον with א 130 and *syr*S only. (—και ιδου boh).
xix. 20. και οἱ μετ' αυτου ψευδοπροφητης This οἱ with A 32 41 boh only.

With a less careful scribe, these things would not be worth noticing, but in this case they are.

The most sympathetic cursives are comprised in the little group 29-30-98. We are absolutely alone with 30 at xxi. 22 for the reading ειχον pro ειδον, a perfectly possible variant: καὶ ναὸν οὐκ εἶχον (instead of οὐκ εἶδον ἐν αὐτῇ· ο γαρ κυριος ο θεος ο παντοκρ. ναὸς αὐτῆς ἐστί κ.τ.λ.) (29 98 have ειχεν). And again alone with 30 and boh[N] at xxii. 10 —της προφητειας, a perfectly proper omission if otherwise supported.

We read in xiv. 14 εχοντι pro εχων with 38 and f. 114, two notable MSS., the dative to agree with υἱῷ preceding, which some change to υἱὸν, but 178-203-240 do not support 38 here.

We are alone with 29-30 at:

vii. 13. ποτε pro ποθεν
xx. 3. μετα δε ταυτα So also 111 130 *syr*Σ (where 98 indulges in κατα δε ταυτα, retaining the δε).
14. ουτος ο δευτερος εστιν (—θανατος), and with the whole group 29-30-98 alone, at:

ii. 2. —και τον κοπον σου
vii. 13. οτι pro ουτοι
xii. 15. —υδωρ
xviii. 19. +τον ante χουν.

Other places, which include the group, are:

iv. 6. —και κυκλω του θρονου evidently a basic omission, as our scribe is so accurate.
vi. 12. —ειδον
ibid. εἰς pro ὡς sec.
vii. 4. —ρμδ χιλιαδες εσφραγ.
ix. 9. —ως θωρακας
xiii. 2. —και εξουσιαν μεγαλην xviii. 5. αι αμαρτιαι αυτης
13. —και οινον with 29-30-98 and the large group headed by B, comprising no less than eighty cursives.
xix. 18. +τας ante σαρκας παντων
xx. 6 init. +και ante μακαριος ibid. τοῦτον pro τούτων with f. 21, 29-30 Hipp[ed.] sah$^1/_2$.

A possible error is found at v. 6 (outside the 29-30-98 group), where we read:

εσφραγισμενον for εσφαγμενον with some.

We are outside the group again at vi. 14 with εἱλισσόμενος (for ειλισσομενον). Again:

xiv. 7. +αυτω ante τω ποιησαντι with f. 7, 18, 38, 251.
19. τον θυμον [του θεου] with fam 25 only.
xix. 1. μεγαλου οχλου πολλου with 44-52-82 only.

We close with the curious reading at xxii. 17 of [λαμβανετω] υδωρ (—το) alone thus apparently (with 187), the scribe maintaining λαμβανετω of the textus receptus, i.e. of Erasmus, who retranslated, as the codex Reuchlini was wanting after verse 16. If other cursives have λαμβανετω and υδωρ without the article I have not noticed it. Practically all others have λαβετω υδωρ (—το).

N.B.—The real reading of Apoc. 1 now turns out to be λαβειν υδωρ as borne witness to by 208 (the counterpart of 1) confirmed by the whole group f. 62 and by 113, and 152-179 the remaining members of group 1-152-179-208.

This interesting manuscript 129 is now deposited in the Pierpont Morgan Library, New York City, where it can be examined.

SPECIAL TYPE.

Apoc. 130.

Apoc. 130 (Ac. 359. P. 452). =Athos, Iberorum 25 = Greg. 130 (A. 359. P. 452). [Greg. new 1854. Sod. α 115]. [XI]. (Collated in 1921 from photographs made in 1913).

This very exceptional MS. has a magnificent foundation text, most unfortunately spoiled by some over-eager seventh century re-handling.

Its original polyglot base is veneered with a much later strain of eclectic polyglot readings and re-renderings. In other words, what we had hoped, when we first ran through it, might prove to be a mine of wealth to check our existing material, proves, upon deeper examination, to be a source contaminated—not by the scribe—but by his forerunners.

In nearly every other verse we have a new reading, frequently, however, supported by the oldest MSS. of the Versions—Syriac, Sahidic, Bohairic, Latin, and we even run sometimes to the most ancient Greek underlying the Aethiopic (as at ix. 4 ἀλλὰ for εἰ μὴ absolutely alone with aeth), which is very striking; further, at xiv. 14 —ομοιος 130 and aeth alone; xvi. 7 —ο θεος 43, 130 and aeth alone; xxii. 7 +και ante μακαριος 30, 130 and aeth alone, besides conjunction of aeth and *syr*S as at vi. 6 the special order: και τον οινον και το ελαιον by (36) 130 aeth and *syr*S only; xiii. 2 —στομα sec. 38 59 69 114 130 *syr*S aeth arm; xiv. 14 —και ειδον ℵ 129 *syr*S (aeth); and the substitution of ομως for ομοιως at ii. 15 fin., by joining ὅμως to μετανόησον verse 16 corresponds exactly to aeth: "Et nunc resipisco sinminus...").

These changes are, some of them, probably basic; many others are the product of a later age, and represent posterior undesirable reflex action on the Greek.

All, however, with exceedingly few exceptions, make perfectly good sense. Thus, the omission at ix. 9 of των πτερυγων (quite alone, so far) makes sense enough: "And their sound was as the sound of many-horsed war-chariots rushing to battle."

We do not get a line on the original sources of corruption until we reach chapter vii., verse 1, where the scribe gives us ἰσραὴλ pleno (he writes nearly everything in full, especially ουρανου, as against other scribes) instead of ινα. This at last furnishes some light. The scribe must have misread ΙΝΑ as ΙΗΛ, which shows that his copy was faint and old, the Η being taken for Ν, made like Η, the bar not being visible in the Α, which was read as Λ.

In x. 10 we find ℵ[a] probably dating the last revision of our MS., which reads: καὶ ὅτε ἔφαγον αὐτὸ ἐγεμίσθη ἡ κοιλία μου πικρίας (instead of ἐπικράνθη, without πικρίας). Now while ℵ* reads ἐγεμίσθη with us, it was ℵ[a] who added πικρίας. ℵ* and Prim. agree together (alone) to read "Repletus est venter meus" without amaritudine, whereas the reading of our MS. is that of the group ℵ[a] f gig Beatus.

This MS. puts a quietus on many readings attested by ℵ*B and a comparatively large group of cursives, to the exclusion of CAP and another large group of cursives.

The intense sympathy of our MS. with the base of ℵ* causes us to believe the testimony of 130 rather than that of ℵ*B when such readings are not reproduced by 130.

The fact remains that numerous hitherto unique readings in *syr*S and boh and sah are being picked up by me in each important Greek document which I examine.

Of course, many unique readings remain still in *syr*S unaccounted for, and unaccounted for by the exigencies of any translation from the Greek.

As we reduce these, it may become advisable to list some of them, with a view to their bearing upon the general problem of an original Syro-Greek recension, from which possibly sprang all the rest of the syriacising Greek MSS.

In this latest MS. under examination, No. 130, observe that it is the first one to leave out ἑβραϊστι (as to the name Abaddon) in ix. 11. This is one opportunity out of two† in the Apocalypse for it to act as Evan. 28 or 157 did in leaving out "which being interpreted is"

† At xvi. 16, that other most valuable and important MS. Apoc. 56 is the only one to omit ἑβραϊστι there, with Apoc. 106 and 159.

after local Aramaic expressions in the Gospels, and Apoc. 130 promptly avails of it, thus explaining some of its sympathy with *syr*S, if deriving from a Græco-Syriac MS., as seems quite possible. Thus, at the other place, xvi. 16, please to notice that another strange thing happens. Our MS. suppresses τον καλουμενον εβραιστι αρ μαγεδων altogether after τον τοπον, and substitutes τῶν ᾠδῶν. Swete gives this reading without comment. It certainly is a very extraordinary reading and a still more extraordinary substitution. The commentaries are silent about any such thing, and τῶν ὠδίνων would seem to be more to the point (cf. Matt. xxiv. 8, Mark xiii. 8, Acts ii. 24); yet a slight clue offers, and the connection is not so far to seek, for some of the commentators comment immediately after regarding what they have to say on xvi. 14 seq. by a schole beginning "'Η ἀγγελικὴ φωνὴ οὐρανόθεν φησι ' γέγονε' . . ." So this place of ἀρ Μαγεδών was "the place of songs or of minstrels" in a sense of "the song of the Heavenly Voice." The voice saying γεγονε or γεγονα is followed by an awful tumult: "αστραπαι και βρονται και φωναι και σεισμος μεγας οιος ουκ εγενετο αφ' ου εγενοντο οι ανθρωποι επι της γης τηλικουτος σεισμος ουτω μεγας"—and τῶν ᾠδῶν remains a most curious expression, yet not as wholly illogical as appears at first sight.

Apoc. 130 does not generally run to such extremes. Only in two other places: once at ix. 20 he qualifies the idols as τα κωφα, and again at xvi. 20 he substitutes πας ανηρ for πασα νησος!

He is, however, such a terrible eclectic that it is hard to pin the problem down within threshing distance. Thus, at

vi. 15 we read ὀπὰσ for πέτρας, 130 being the first Greek MS. to make any change here. As to vi. 15.
Swete quotes οπας for bohairic, but erroneously οπης for Apoc. 130. Our MS. reads distinctly ὀπὰσ. † As to boh, it has: ⲙⲓⲭⲟⲗ ⲛ̄ⲧⲉ ⲛⲓⲡⲉⲧⲣⲁ, really "the holes of the rocks" (as most arm MSS.), not using the word for 'mountains' employed above. The expression "πετρας των ορεων" has always seemed a very rough phrase, although no Greeks so far examined have turned it. Translators must have had difficulty, yet the Latins, including Prim., Tyc. and Auct. de Prom., who quote, render literally: "in petris montium," only Auct. l. ad Novat. saying: "in cavernis montium." Aeth. turns εις τα σπηλαια και εις τας πετρας των ορεων into: "in montibus et in recessibus."

The word ⲙⲓⲭⲟⲗ ‡ in Coptic corresponding to οπας, seen by our scribe's forerunner, may indeed have suggested the Greek synonym for οργης in the succeeding verse, where he writes: τῆς χολῆς for τῆς ὀργῆς (our English word 'choler').

This is the first occurrence of the word in the Apocalypse, and the scribe does not use it again in xi. 18, xiv. 10, xvi. 19, xix. 15, showing that some special cause operated in vi. 16 as to χολῆς there. [Swete misquotes: τῆς σχολῆς].

Now when you expect a strange reading in 130 you do not meet one, and the text flows smoothly on, to the very order sometimes of the textus receptus, opposed by the 'middle Greeks,' those without special traditions. The stranger readings of our MS. occur generally in most unexpected places.

It is a fact, and a very strange fact, that all these exceptional cursives—disagreeing in so large degree, as well as agreeing among themselves—have a perfectly easy and seemingly unartificial flow of text. This proves that the type of text which they represent was not elaborated in any X$^{\text{th}}$ or XI$^{\text{th}}$ century scriptorium, but is the product of a much earlier age. This much we can establish with certainty.

But how comes it that these MSS., while individually reproducing part of the traditions and idiosyncracies of particular early authorities, yet fail to agree among themselves to † οπη is used in Heb. xi. 38 and James iii. 11. See Obadiah 3: ὑπερηφανία τῆς καρδίας σου ἐπῆρέ σε κατασκηνοῦντα ἐν ταῖς ὀπαῖς τῶν πετρῶν.

‡ ⲙⲓⲭⲟⲗ is also the word used in Hebr. xi. 38.

reproduce more, and seem to be so eclectic? It must be for the reason that a variety of recensions—all old—were current in different parts of the then limited Christian world, with no opportunity of comparing them.

One thing is beyond cavil. In a certain very ancient exemplar, perhaps underlying them all, there were certain faint or illegible places, for we notice that in all cursives with ancient collateral lines converging back to primal days the same difficulties occur in the self-same places, many of which had already bothered the ancestor of א.

But, besides this, we cannot yet understand when, how, and why the lines went apart. Fortunately the mediæval MSS. became or remained standardized along certain lines, and no great changes have been wrought in the text in more modern times; by that I mean between A.D. 850 and 1200.

The changes are all very ancient.

The Polyglot Character of them All.

Now comes a feature, most difficult to deal with. Of reflex polyglot action there is plenty. This also dates from very early days, but undoubtedly increased during the copying from A.D. 350 to 850. It also occurred immediately after the very first translations were made, and changes re-impressed themselves upon the Greek from the mere sight of a concurrent version in quite the earliest days. This is to be observed as to Syriac, Latin and Coptic reaction all through our existing Greek MSS. of A.D. 850 to 1200, besides those copied in 375 to 500. But how to differentiate between the earliest and the later ones is the problem. The relative importance of certain cursive testimony, now rendered available, will, I am sure, contribute to an understanding and elucidation of this baffling problem.

Partial examination heretofore has led nowhere. What I have done for the Apocalypse can be done for the other books by anyone who is accurate, painstaking, and patient. The record, as we have it preserved, is now spread before us. Let us digest it intelligently.

The collection of this material to me has been most instructive. Where Soden failed—for failed he has—was in the attempt to collect material through others, and digest it for himself without the collator's illuminating experiences. The actual collator must also be the one to present the full table of results. He alone can assess at their true value the testimonies of his various scribes. He alone, who has lived with them in the past in their old Scriptoria, can assess at their just value the relative positions to be established for individual members of large groups, and decide which one shall govern the group.

Our MS. has the short heading:

+ ἰωάννου αποκαλυψις +

but the *sub*scription is:

+ ἀποκάλυψις ἰωαννου +

which agrees with the *in*scriptions of א and C.

Professor Lake, during a visit to Athos, was attracted to this MS., and with good reason; and he provided Dr. Swete with photographs of the MS. or readings of its text, which were used in the textual foot-notes to the edition of 1911 of his book on the Apocalypse, under the same number by which we designate it, viz. Apoc. 130.

The date attributed by Gregory of XI. seems full high at first sight, but is probably correct. There is very little in the way of abbreviation, no numerals, no iota post., plenty of ν ἐφελκ., and ιδου is constant. Accents are wonderfully correct. The scribe writes a nice easy flowing hand, but not that of one of the schoolmen or professional penmen of the period.

Dates, however, mean but little in a matter of this kind except as to the probable accuracy of the copying men in the Scriptoria. Thus, between 950 and 1175 the ratio of accuracy among scribes is far higher than before or later. It reached its highest point concurrently with what Dr. Cram would call the 'Gothic' period, thus substantiating many of his contentions.

The text starts off with an innovation among Greek MSS. at i. 1 by omitting τω δουλω αυτου,† and this prepares us for the strange but highly interesting recension which follows.

Towards the close it has three readings (xxi. 5, 6, 8) close together agreeing alone with 65, a manuscript which is wanting from ch. i–xvi., and this shows what a loss this lacuna is in No. 65.

Apoc. 130 is the first one of our cursives to explain the reading of ℵ, who writes in xii. 13 εδωκεν for εδιωξε. Apoc. 130 says εδιωκε, which I have already reported as the Oecumenian reading (both text and commentary) in the Messina MS. of our No. 146, to follow. This clearly explains the text which lay behind ℵ, whose reading can be meant for nothing else but the imperfect εδιωκεν, and have nothing to do with διδωμι. (146 is now confirmed by 203-240 in their Oec. commentaries).

Dr. Swete does not seem to see the point, as he quotes 130, but does not mention ℵ.

There is no getting away from the compelling interest of this MS., and Dr. Swete has overlooked a very large number of important key-readings, even when quoting other MSS. or Versions for them.

Thus, although he reports the new reading in ii. 27 of καὶ ποιμαίνειν for the usual καὶ ποιμανεῖ or καὶ ποιμαίνει, he misses the connection with *syr*S, as he reports Gwynn's translation for ἵνα ποιμανεῖ. It is true that Gwynn placed this in his text, but his footnote anticipated our reading in 130 by saying that he ought rather to read ποιμαίνειν for the Syriac. So Swete fails to connect Apoc. 130 and *syr*S here.

Now this particular connection would be slight enough, and perhaps negligeable, if there were not other sympathy with *syr*S, but of this there is plenty. Notice then, and very carefully (for Dr. Swete has not reported it at all) that Apoc. 130 in the immediate vicinity of the previous passage cited, viz. at ii. 23 fin. IN ITS TEXT has +καὶ παιδεύσω ὑμᾶσ κατὰ τὰ ἔργα ὑμῶν.

This reading is found in the margin of *syr*S and is translated into Greek by Dr. Gwynn word for word with the Greek reading of Apoc. 130.

Yet, curiously enough, we find no trace in Apoc. 130 of the strange reading which occurs at iv. 8 in the text of *syr*S of: ἀπὸ τῶν ὀνύχων αὐτοῦ καὶ ἐπάνω for ἀνὰ before πτέρυγας ἕξ, this 'claws' clause being duly reported by Swete, and which is about the equivalent of the Coptic text. Of course, our MS. elsewhere is close to Coptic, and in this very place, while avoiding all about the 'claws,' has Coptic order (in those Coptic MSS. which have it) of ἕξ πτέρυγας against every Greek but 14-92.

Now all this and more occurs in the smoothest possible manner in Apoc. 130, without tremor in the scribe's pen, and in the midst of considerable spells of conventional text. Explain it if you can.

Whatever we may think of the scribe, his text (the lines double-spaced, which is quite unusual) flows steadily along, and the stranger readings show no sign whatever of manipulation by him, but owe their origin exclusively to the uncommon exemplar used. And this again, we may fairly judge by inference, contained those rare lections in a straightforward fashion; otherwise, if there had been heavy corrections in that MS., the present copy would show some sign of hesitation in those places, which it does not do.

Therefore the origin of the various readings goes back at least two generations of manuscripts and possibly more.

Swete has omitted to notice or to record a large number of variants, which must be placed before the student ere he can form any judgement as to the value of the text as a whole.

† Carelessly omitted by 170 also apparently, for 99 does not confirm the omission of 170.

Indeed, this is most difficult to assess, because, while our MS. will be in accord alone with a limited but authoritative group like ℵCAP 56 *copt syr*S alone, and that on many occasions, it goes apart and often apparently 'wild' on so many other occasions, that to consider it a balancing factor in the former series gives it undue importance in the latter; and if we accord it no importance in the latter, it does away with its value as a supporter of the oldest MSS. and Versions.

At any rate we may rest assured first that there are effective reasons for the 'wild' readings, which we cannot at present understand, as these occur in the midst of the strictest agreement with a conventional text, and secondly that all these variations trace to quite ancient sources, and have no relation to mediæval ecclesiastical bias.

Thus in the very first chapter we read at:

i. 9. (neglected by Swete) +εν ante υπομονη with Dionys. alone (59, quite a sympathetic MS., is the only other to read εν τη).

And at:

ii. 15. ὅμωσ (for ομοιως or ο μισω) an ancient form of ομοιως not given by ℵ C or A, but strictly it should be ὁμῶς, unless the fine distinction of ὅμως is intentional, meaning 'notwithstanding' instead of 'likewise,' but in the earliest uncials there would be no accent to differentiate the word. The scribe of Apoc. 130 means ὅμως, for he joins ὅμως to μετανοησον in ver. 16 'Nevertheless remember' exactly as aeth. (Dr. Swete does not give the accent). [Occurs in the N.T. elsewhere at Jo. xii. 42, Gal. iii. 15, and 1 Cor. xiv. 7. Note that it is a Johannine word and MSS. seem to concur at John xii. 42 to read ομως (whether ὅμως or ὁμῶς) and not ομοιως. In Codex B it is accented ὅμωc, in Codex ℵ there is no accent].

iii. 16. χλιερὸσ for χλιαρος with ℵ* alone (the Ionic form).

vi. 4. —αλλος alone with 113 and *syr*S copt and Tyc.

vii. 4. —εσφραγισμενοι with 18 146 and *syr*S sah.

viii. 10. —και επεσεν sec. with h and Prim. [non sah boh arm aeth syr]. Neglected by Swete, who quotes Prim.

ix. 3. —εξουσιαν ante οι σκορπιοι with 40-210 121 149-186 *syr*S. Cf. h: eam pro potestatem. Cf. arm. Our MS. has many of these avoidances of redundancy. Either revision or return to the original purer draft. Neglected by Swete. (—εχουσιν εξουσιαν 113, —εξουσια ως εχουσιν 12).

xi. 2. ἐκεῖ βάλε (pro εκβαλε) This is new. Cf. ℵ* και εκβαλε. Again due probably to a faint exemplar. (Obs. Prim. —εκβαλε εξω, and sah εκλειπε οπισθεν).

xiii. 8. οὗ οὐ γέγραπται pro ὧν οὐ γεγρ. This with C 19 124 146 and Iren. only. As A has ουαι for ων ου and ℵ leaves out ου, the original was again not clear; the double ου coming together in uncial writing is confusing, and 130 maintains the right reading, keeping το ονομα following. Swete's text gives οὗ οὐ without giving C 130 credit for this in his notes.

xiv. 13. χω̅ pro κυριω with CP 113 Beat. only. (θω̅ 111 and aeth).

xv. 4. —κυριε with 14-92, 18, 121 gig arm aeth Cypr. Prim.

xvi. 19. —το ante ποτηριον with ℵ 39 95-127-215 146*com.* 154 159 164*txt* 212 only [non copt]. Swete neglects this.

xvii. 15. ταυτα pro τα υδατα with ℵ 200 only [contra Hipp. Cypr. rell. Patr. latt]. Again possibly due to the faint common original. (ταυτα τα υδατα aeth.) Compare the reverse in *syr*S at xi. 6 τα υδατα pro αυτα.

xvii. 17. την καρδιαν pro τας καρδιας with Hippolytus only. This surely takes our text into high antiquity, and sah boh aeth arab support, but Swete overlooks it. 'In corde' Tyc 2(1/2).

xviii. 3. —του θυμου alone with 113 164*com. syr*S and Prim. (Cf. AC —του οινου; *cf. aeth*1/2 veneno pro vino irae).

4. βλαβητε a prima manu ex emend. The scribe inserts the β. With E 67-120 169-216, 170, 172-217 and Tyc. (laedamini).

13. ιπτους pro ιππων with 56 95-127-215 (again that strong old cursive combination) 159 200 and (syr aeth).

xxi. 1. —πρωτη with 13 29 65 boh arm Iren. Prim. Aug. Apr. Tyc 3. [non Tert. vid.].

2. +και ante κεκοσμημενην with 100 only and arm [except 4] Tyc 2. *Auct*prom. (*Iren*int. 'ut').

6. εκ του υδατος της πηγης της ζωης δωρεαν alone with 65, reversing the order of υδατος and πηγης, and giving us the prettiest phrase: "I give to him who is athirst water from the spring of life," bringing this together. Note that A omits της πηγης, and 113 al. της ζωης.

Notice the Orphic appellation of Deity as "πηγὴ πηγῶν" (Proclus in Plat. Tim. II. 137c).

xxii. 11. The form και ο ρυπαρος ρυπανθητω ετι agrees alone with ℵ 18 and 32 178*? Orig. (Neglected as to 130 by Swete, who quotes some of the others). και ο ρυπαρων ρυπανθητω ετι 113 and 178*?

The nature of other innovations is clear to me. They bear the imprint once more of 'bilingual' tradition; or rather, not so much of tradition, as of positive error oculi and error mentis in copying from or referring to bilingual bi-columnar MSS. in early times.

Let us list some of them:

i. 16 init. —και No Greeks except 218 226, but with sah and boh.

ii. 10. ο διαβολος αφ' υμων ενα (pro βαλειν εξ υμων ο διαβολος) ἕνα agrees with arm MS. 4. [Swete records αφ' for εξ but neglects ενα and —βαλειν].

14. ειδωλοθυτου Alone. Cf. Coptic termination.

23. καρδιας και νεφρους This order (neglected by Swete) is confirmed by 51-90 113 f. 114, 127 145 159 200 240 246 and arm 1. boh (non sah) Vict-Tun. Vig.

iii. 2. στῆσον sic (pro στηριξον vel στηρισον vel τηρησον) Alone. Cf. arm. Cf. Prim. +'et stabilis.' [Swete neglects]. Another faint place perhaps in the old original.

v. 10. βασιλειαν pro βασιλεις with (ℵ) A 56 111* 143 f. 178 200 only of Greeks, but so copt latt and arm 4. *Syr*S had already conflated and says: "βασιλειαν και ιερεις και βασιλεις," and ℵ: "βασιλιαν και ιερατειαν." Tert. Prim. and Cypr. also use regnum.

vi. 6. Order: και τον οινον και το ελαιον 36 (τον ελαιον) and *syr*S aeth latt only. [Swete neglects completely].

12. —ως ante αιμα Alone with 226 sah boh arm 3. gig [negl. Swete, quoting arm].

13. επι pro εις with ℵ 22 23 47 55 56 81-204 102 113 140 156 169-216 200 226 233. *copt syr*S. [Negl. Swete, quoting ℵ 47 *syr*S].

15. οπας pro πετρας new with *boh and arm*plur. [Cf. Hebr. xi. 38].

vii. 1 init. —και CA 127 146 201 215 226 latt sah arab arm pl.

12. Order: η δοξα και η ευλογια Alone with *syr*S aeth.

viii. 8. Order: και το τριτον της θαλασσης εγενετο αιμα with copt only. [Negl. Swete].

ix. 12 init. +ιδου with sah and arm absolutely alone. [Negl. Swete].

x. 4. +αὐτὰ post γραφειν with *boh arm*aliq. [Negl. Swete].

x. 4. +εβδομου ante ουρανου New thus, but *syr*S: ουρανου +του εβδομου.

8. το βιβλιον το (—ηνεωγμενον). βιβλιον by CA 14-92 111 127 215, but ηνεωγμενον omitted only by *syr*S 113 and 130 146*com.* with boh ps-Ambr. txt.

[Neglected entirely by Swete, who merely quotes AC 6 14 for βιβλιον, and 6 is wrong]. Curiously enough 130 is the only MS. to use βιβλιον consistently throughout this section, and yet indulges in 'the seventh Heaven.'

xi. 6. και εχουσιν εξουσιαν New Greek order with Versions only [Negl. Swete], but 200 says και εξουσιν εξουσιαν.

19. —αστραπαι και with one arm MS.

xii. 2. —και sec. ante βασανιζομενη New (but quite natural) alone with boh[omn], which suppress all copulas here.

9. —και post διαβολος ℵ boh and Priscillian only [contra sah]. [Negl. 130 Swete, quoting ℵ boh].

11. τας ψυχας with 23 and the 34 family and 113 only and boh Prim. Beat. arm[uno]. [Negl. Swete, quoting 35 87 arm].

14. —του ante αετου with ℵ only and boh. [Negl. Swete, quoting ℵ arm. Articles in arm MSS. are a dubious affair].

ibid. —και sec. ante καιρους 41 42 53 69 75 77 81 90 112 122 136 149 177* 187 *syr*S [Negl. Swete]. This Greek testimony is of a poor and contradictory group.

xiii. 2. —στομα sec. with f. 38 59 69 f. 114 189 *syr*S aeth arm[aliq] [contra Iren.].

5. +και ante δυο with A f. 16 95-127 166 gig syr Iren. [Negl. 130 Swete, quoting others].

6. —τους So 35[non fam] and gig only. (τὸ aeth).

xiv. 13. +μεγαλην post φωνην Alone with 200 and boh.

14. —και ειδον So ℵ 129 *syr*S. (—και ιδου boh).

17. εκ του ουρανου pro εκ του ναου του εν τω ουρανω [Negl. Swete]. Alone with boh (cf. 59).

20. δισχιλιων εξακοσιων pro χιλιων εξακοσιων Alone, yet not alone, for this can only trace to a Latin column in a bilingual which agreed with the reading of gigas (and therefore is most ancient), for while the other Latins, including even Tyc. have "per stadia," and h "per istadio," gigas has "a stad*iis* mille quingentis," this STADIISMILLE being perhaps confused with Bis Mille and transferred to Greek as ΔΙCΧΙΛΙωΝ.

For further proof of such things compare xviii. 18 ομοιος (alone) for ομοια = similis the same for masc. or fem. gender. Or χιλιοις ετεσι at xx. 4 fin. alone with mille annis of the Latins, against the χιλια ετη of all Greeks.

xv. 2. κιθαραν pro κιθαρας Alone with aeth and one arm MS.

3. —την ωδην secund. So arm 2. 3, and boh inverting the clause.

xvi. 6. εδωκεν pro εδωκας [πιειν] Alone with arm a. 1. 3, but εδωκαν fam 178 and 187.

xvii. 1. Δευρο και δειξω So arm a. 2. No others.

xviii. 9. +παντες ante οι βασιλεις New with boh.

xix. 20. Order: και εβληθησαν οι δυο ζωντες [εις] New, with copt and aeth only. [Malè Swete, negl. ord.]. This is a good example of polyglot handling. The usual text is: ζωντες εβληθησαν οι δυο εις την λιμνην. *Syr*S begins και (with us) and eliminates ζωντες. It appears confused. The redactor of our recension refers to copt and finds ζωντες later, so adopts that order. Later on he opposes copt.

xx. 12. —της ante ζωης with 74 and copt, and of course lat. (Cp. other such omissions, alone, xi. 19 —της, xii. 10 —ή).

Others more difficult to trace or assess are:

vi. 11. αναπαυσασθε pro ινα αναπαυσωνται. Alone with one arm MS. See 201.

viii. 2. θρονου pro θεου with 39-69-102-180 arm 4. (but του θρονου του θεου 16 f. 21 37 80).

6. [εχοντες absque οἱ] with few. [Swete neglects to notice for 130 although quoting ℵ 36 arm].

10. —και επεσεν sec. with h and Prim. only [non sah boh arm aeth]. [Negl. Swete, quoting Prim. but not h].

12. Order: το τεταρτον (sic) της σεληνης και το τριτον του ηλιου. This is a new order, and of course τεταρτον (referring to the 'quarters' of the moon) is new. Observe h, which agreed just above, leaves out και το τριτον της σεληνης. Hence our new order, as the common parentage is the same. [Swete quotes τεταρτον all right, but not the new order, so that his quotation applies τεταρτον to the sun !].

ix. 13. —φωνην μιαν. This is new with arm 4. But φωνην is omitted by gig Prim. Cypr., μιαν by 38-203-240 [non 178], and the clause by ℵ*, while 201 226 233 invert the order to μιαν φωνην.

17. —εν τη ορασει [Negl. Swete]. New with arm 1, but *syr*S omits more.

x. 4. +και ante εμελλον with 41 102[non famm] and aeth. [Negl. Swete].

xi. 14. +και ANTE απηλθεν New. The Versions have και AFTER απηλθεν, but against the Greek. [Negl. Swete].

19. —αστραπαι και. New with one arm MS. [Negl. Swete].

xii. 6. οκτακοσιας (pro διακοσιας). So only 14-92 in figures with ͵αωξ̄.

17. πολεμον ποιησαι with ℵ and Tyc. only. [Negl. Swete].

ibid. —των λοιπων. Alone with arm and *boh*B only. Notice another faint place in the original, for ℵ says επι λοιπων and Hipp. αγιων.

xiii. 1. επι ταις κεφαλαις. Alone with gig ('in capitibus'; the rest have 'super capita'), but επι των κεφαλων 111. Cf. sah.

xiv. 3. —τεσσαρες with C alone. [Negl. Swete]. μιαν pro τεσσαρες ℵ*.

Dr. Swete's actual errors in reporting are at:

iii. 16. Where he quotes —ουτως. The MS. omits οτι not ουτως.

iv. 1. MS. has λεγουσα μετ εμου for λαλουσης μετ εμου λεγουσα.

v. 2. MS. has και ιδον αγγελον (—ισχυρον) κηρυσσοντα ισχυρα φωνη (—μεγαλη). Swete quotes with ℵ for κηρυσσοντα ισχυρον.

13. He quotes λεγοντας. MS. has λεγοντος.

vi. 11. Neglecting the construction, he misquotes αποκτεννεσθαι for the manuscript's: αποκτεννεσθε. The MS. has a new reading here, omitting ὡς. He should have noticed αποκτεννεσθε, as he quotes in the same verse αναπαυσασθε for ινα αναπαυσωνται.

15. He quotes οπησ. The MS. is clear for ὀπᾶσ.

16. Malè Swete της σχολης, a very different thing from the manuscript's της χολης (pro της οργης).

vii. 1. Malè Swete +ισραηλ ante ινα. The Codex substitutes ισραηλ for ινα.

5. Malè Swete ρουβειν. The MS. has ῥουβὴμ.

viii. 12. Malè Swete. The MS. has το τεταρτον της σεληνης και το τριτον του ηλιου. Swete quotes τεταρτον right, but not the order, so that his substitution applies τεταρτον to ηλιου.

x. 5. ἴδες pro ειδον. This is new. Swete brackets 130 as for ιδον !

x. 7. MS. has [ως ευηγγελισε] τους εαυτου δουλους τους προφητας. Swete quotes as if MS. read ὁ.

xii. 10. και η σωτηρια (de novo in versu PRO και η βασιλεια). Swete is not clear.

xiii. 15. MS. has προσκυνησωσιν. Swete errs, quoting προσκυνησουσιν with ℵ etc.

xvi. 14. MS. has εκπορευεται (—ἃ) with ℵ[a] 88 alone. Swete notes —ἅ, but apparently makes the MS. read εκπορευονται.

xix. 18. Malè Swete: των παντων. MS. has [παντων].

20. MS. has και εβληθησαν οι δυο ζωντες. Swete neglects this new order, quoting 130 for +και before ζωντες as if 130 read the usual order.

xx. 4. MS. has χιλίοισ ἔτεσι (= Latin, new among Greeks). Swete has χιλιοις ετεσιν.

xxii. 6. Swete quotes 130 alone for the omission of δειξαι τοις δουλοις αυτου, but a good many others omit also.

17. MS. has λέγουσαι. Malè Swete λέγουσα. (113 has λέγουσα).

His omissions are manifold, not so much I think from design, as from carelessness, as he reports similar variations in other places. He neglects altogether some two hundred and fifteen readings, of which not less than half are of very considerable importance. For instance, the following variations are not recorded at all:

i. 3. τον λογον pro τους λογους, although he quotes ℵQ 100 aeth.

6. και ποιησαντι ημιν (pro και εποιησεν ημας), although he quotes others.

ii. 1. εκκλησιων pro χρυσων (New).

3. και υπομονην +ἣν (ante εχεις) (New).

3/4. καὶ οὐκ ἐκόπασασ sic +δια το ονομα μου (pro αλλ εχω κατα σου) (New).

10. +ενα and —βαλειν are neglected, although he quotes αφ' for εξ' in the same verse.

23. Order: καρδιας και νεφρους with several cursives copt and arm.

23 fin. +και παιδευσω υμας κατα τα εργα υμων So 130 with arm and the margin of *syr*S. Swete does not quote at all, and misses this extraordinary combination.

24. οἱ pro ὅσοι So ℵ[a] and 130 alone.

25. οὗ ἂν ἥξω (—αχρις) (New).

26. κρατων pro τηρων with 13-55* only.

28. —τον ante αστερα New. So now 200.

iii. 2. στῆσον pro στηριξον (New).

7. —του ante δαδ although supporting his text with CA 38 *syr*S (read also by 111 146 f. 178).

9. τους λεγοντας pro των λεγοντων Alone with 111.

10. ηγαπησας (pro ετηρησας)
εκ pro επι prim.
—ολης et +κατῴκουν sic ante πειράσαι τους ληστας pro τους κατοικουντας } Swete is silent about these (five) new readings in one verse.

11. ὅσα pro ὃ (New).

fin. —σου (New. So 147 but not fam.).

12. αὐτῷ pro αυτου prim. with ℵ* 47 61 92*txt* 100* 111 167 201 219 241*. Swete neglects, although citing ℵ.

ibid. —το ονομα του θεου μου και 130 with B only. Swete quotes B (his Q) but not 130.

17. ουδε pro ουδενος Neglected, while citing others for ουδεν.

iv. 6. —και κυκλω του θρονου Neglected, citing others.

7. +ως ante αετω (New).

9. τω θρονω Neglected, quoting ℵA. The group is ℵA 56 130 143 169 178 216.

v. 4. Om. vers. Neglected, quoting A 98 (23* 102* 124 140 143 200 also omit).
6. —και οφθαλμους επτα with 1-208 44 61-218 121 143 182 215. Neglected.
9. οτι ἡγίασασ (sic) τω θεω (—εσφαγης και) (New).
13. —και υποκατω της γης Neglects, quoting others.
vi. 5. ερχου λεγοντος sic (—και βλεπε) (New order).
8. εν λιμω και εν ρομφαια και εν θανατω (New order).
9. την σφραγιδα την πεμπτην Neglects, quoting others.
11. —και οι συνδουλοι αυτων Alone with 36.
ibid. οι ελεγον pro οι μελλοντες (New).

[This whole verse is curiously reconstructed. Instead of: και εδοθησαν εκαστοις στολαι λευκαι και ερρεθη αυτοις ινα αναπαυσωνται ετι χρονον μικρον εως ου πληρωσονται και οι συνδουλοι αυτων και οι αδελφων αυτων οι μελλοντες αποκτεινεσθαι ως και αυτοι of the textus receptus, we are treated to the following (which it is useless for anyone to report but partially):

"καὶ ἐδόθη αὐτοῖς στολὴ λευκή· καὶ ἐρρήθη αὐτοῖς· ἀναπαύσασθε χρόνον μικρὸν ἕως πληρώσωσιν καὶ οἱ ἀδελφοὶ αὐτῶν οἳ ἔλεγον ἀποκτέννεσθε καὶ αὐτοί."

Notice the punctuation before ἀναπαύσασθε, and the substitution of οἱ ἔλεγον for οἱ μέλλοντες before ἀποκτέννεσθε with the suppression of ὡς before καὶ αὐτοί.

12. —ως (ante αιμα) New among Greeks with 226, but with sah boh gig arm 3. Swete neglects, quoting arm.
13. —του ουρανου New among Greeks with 113, but with Novat. Tyc. Auct[prom].
vii. 1. +και ante κρατουντας with f. 21 f. 25 f. 44 164-166 and *syr*SΣ. Swete neglects, quoting others [for his 97 doubtless read 79].
ibid. μηποτε pro μητε bis New. So perhaps 111*.
2. —αυτοις Swete neglects, although quoting others.
viii. 6. [εχοντες absque οἱ with text. recept.] Swete quotes ℵ 36 arm 4, but neglects 130.
8. New order: και το τριτον της θαλασσης εγενετο αιμα with copt.
ix. 3 init. —και (New). So now 218 but not fam.
4. ἀλλὰ pro ει μη New with aeth (ουδε 208).
11. —εβραιστι Quite new. Surely this was a place for Swete to notice.
12 init. +ιδου New with sah and arm alone.
14. τῶ pro ος ειχε New thus. Swete brackets 130 with a few others (fam 34 and 111 200) for τω εχοντι which is not very accurate!
17. —εν τη ορασει New thus with arm 1, but *syr*S omits more.
20. —τα before αργυρα, χαλκα, λιθινα and ξυλινα. New thus as a whole among Greeks. So also 200, that other monument of antiquity.
ibid. —α ante ουτε secund ante βλεπειν. New. Swete quotes the new "τα κωφα και χρυσα," but omits the above in this verse.
x. 4. +και ante εμελλον Two other of my cursives (against their families) and aeth read thus.
ibid. +αυτα post γραφειν New with boh and arm aliq. Swete neglects, although quoting εβδομου ουρανου in the same verse.
xi. 6. —εις αιμα Swete overlooks this completely. Now 189 *sah syr*S leave out επι των υδατων and read τα υδατα pro αυτα, while 1 12 etc. omit αυτα, so probably a marginal notice to leave out αυτα was misapplied by the others, and our omission must be noted.
11. εν αυτοις (pro επ αυτους) Swete neglects, although quoting others.
14. +και ANTE απηλθεν New thus. Versions have και after απηλθεν, but against the Greek.
19. —της ante διαθηκης (New). —της διαθηκης 59.

xi. 19. —αστραπαι και (New, with arm 3*).

xii. 4. τικτειν Swete overlooks this, although quoting the others.

8. Order: ἐν τω ουρανω ετι (New with 149, against sah boh order). —ετι ℵ[c] aliq.

9. —μετ αυτου So E al. viginti. Swete quotes 1 186 but not 130.

17. πολεμον ποιησαι with ℵ[sol] and Tyc.

xiii. 1. —και ειδον εκ της θαλασσης, joining xii. 18/xiii. 1 with stop after θηριον αναβαινον· Prim. omits xii. 18 but has xiii. 1 as usual.

3. εσφραγισμενην pro εσφαγμενην Swete neglects this substitution not only for 130 but for the other cursives (I record thirty of them for this).

16. δωσιν Neglected, although he quotes others.

17. δυναται Neglected, although he quotes eleven others.

18. +εστιν post αυτου Neglected, although he quotes thirteen others.

xiv. 3. —τεσσαρες with C alone. Swete quotes neither, although he notices —και quart.

6. —επι της γης (New).

7. —εν φωνη μεγαλη (New with Beat.).

11. τὸ χάρισμα pro τὸ χάραγμα New reading, (a Pauline and Petrine expression). Prim. is colourless with 'notam.' But surely Swete should have noticed this. No MS. or Version agrees (χαριν at xiv. 9 by 218), but at xix. 20 arm 4 has what Coneybeare renders την χαριν for το χαραγμα there, and which Swete sees fit to mention at that place.

13. λεγουσαν pro λεγουσης with f. 25 40-210 146 200. Swete neglects, although recording φωνην for φωνης and +μεγαλην, both in the accusative.

ibid. γαρ pro δε with ℵCAP etc. Swete records twelve others but neglects 130.

14. MS. reads καθημενος υιος ανθρωπου (—ομοιος). New thus with aeth. Swete reports —ομοιος but neglects to notice υιος for 130, although quoting 1 for it, and noting καθημενος for 130.

18. Order: εκ του θυσιαστηριου εξηλθεν with E 17 67-120 169 176-206. Swete neglects this order of E and 130, although noting —εξηλθεν for A, and —εκ του θυσ. for Prim., so the inverted order is important.

18. —λεγων πεμψον σου το δρεπανον το οξυ και Swete quotes —λεγων for 130 alone, but not the rest, which is most misleading, as *syr*S also omits λεγων (besides 14-92, 16, 72, 100), and πεμψον σου το δρεπανον το οξυ is omitted by arm and the cursives 12* 16 72 100, and finally και tert. by 100 gig and arm. Thus 100 and 130 agree.

xv. 2. The unique εχουσαν (pro εχοντας) is neglected by Swete although recording κιθαραν following (with aeth and one arm MS., which Swete does not notice). Apoc. 130 apparently would apply εχουσαν to θαλασσαν.

6/7. The MS. omits εκ του ναου to των τεσσαρων ζωων. Swete says as to λινον or λιθον verse 6 'hiat 130,' but does not indicate what this hiatus amounts to. Really I suppose the MS. should be quoted as —εκ του ναου with many, as well as the other longer omission, which may be an error, or deliberate, but it adds ἃς post πληγας (ver. 6) and before εδωκε (ver. 7) completing the sense, which Swete quite overlooks.

xvi. 9. +την ante εξουσιαν Swete neglects, quoting others.

17. —του ναου Swete fails to indicate this properly for 130 or others.

20. πας ανηρ εφυγεν for πασα νησος εφυγε Swete absolutely passes by this curious substitution, the most extraordinary in the whole MS.! The MS. does not often indulge in such things, but when it does, the business of the critic is to report it, as there is no knowing when collateral agreement may be found in other documents, leading to identification of families, type, and common sources.

xvii. 5. —η ante μητηρ Again neglected by Swete. (New with f. 114 f. 153, cf. copt). ημων pro η μητηρ 98.

15. —ᾶ Alone with 98. Swete does not notice, although citing ταυτα for τα υδατα with ℵ alone (as now 200).

18. εστι πολις pro εστιν η πολις New. Again neglected, as is —ἡ above before μητηρ (xvii. 5), but these things all tend to show a polyglot mind, and must be recorded. Else our labour is vain. (Cf. xii. 10 below among unique variants).

xviii. 2. —και φυλακη παντος πνευματος ακαθαρτου So eleven of my cursives. Swete is silent, although referring to the μεμιαμμενου of 130 in the same verse.

4. —και secund. Omitted by 130 as well as by P 1-208, a dozen cursives, *syr*S and boh. Swete is silent as to all.

7 init. οτι pro οσα (New).

ibid. αυτῶ pro αυτῇ (New). (—αυτη gig. —δοτε αυτη *syr*S).

12. [πορφυρας with text. rec.] Swete is silent as to 130, but quotes ℵCP 7 35 95 Hipp., evidently overlooking it.

13. +και αμωμου not αμωμον New with 124 *syr*Σ. Swete has +και αμωμον in his text, but neglects the genitive of 130, although quoting κινναμωμου for many others.

ibid. θυμιαματος instead of θυμιαματα, following κινναμωμου and αμωμου, with another genitive. Swete neglects, although quoting Q 14 92 for this, and 94 vg for θυμιαματων.

xix. 20. } xx. 10. } καμινον pro λιμνην (New in both places).

xx. 6. αλλα λεγονται pro αλλ' εσονται. New. Swete quotes ℵ for αλλα without mentioning 130. Carelessness can go no further. Such a new reading (making good sense) calls for mention.

8. —ων ante ο αριθμος Alone with 111 and 143. This, with +αυτων post αριθμος with ℵAB mult. should be noticed, for the reading of 130 143 without ὧν appears the best of all: "ο αριθμος αυτων ως η αμμος της θαλασσης," instead of ων ο αριθμος αυτων κ.τ.λ.

9. "[εκυκλευσαν] την πολιν και την παρεμβολην των αγιων [και την πολιν την ηγαπημενην]." This reduplication of την πολιν is to be noticed (*cf. syr*S only. Cf. B 97-122). Swete passes it over, although referring to Q and 97.

10. +εβληθη post θηριον New. Cf. 32 (113) 143 +εβληθησαν post ψευδοπρ.

11. ἐπ' αὐτό· (pro ἐπ' αὐτοῦ) This is new. Others (81-204 104 113 f. 114 f. 119 159, all notable cursives) read ἐπ' αὐτῶ, but 130 is best, and should be quoted, because elsewhere most MSS. read επ αυτον and not the dative after καθημενος. Swete quotes 33 and 35 for επ αυτω (33 is wanting here), and is silent as to 130.

12. ιδον (pro ειδον) with AB al. pc. In all this Swete has been careful to record the small variation ιδον, but here and in four or five other places he overlooks it.

xxi. 10. —και post μεγα 130 reads "επ ορος μεγα υψηλον". Swete neglects this altogether, although over a dozen cursives read thus, and Cypr. omits και υψηλον, which he also does not mention.

13. The MS. reads και απο του νοτου which is a new reading. Swete will not notice it.

16. Nor does he notice δεκαδυο for δωδεκα here, although smaller things are often recorded.

19. χαλκιδων is also neglected, although he cites Q 1 29 98 for it.

21. —ανα New (with one of my cursives 107*).

xxii. 7. +και ante μακαριος So 30 and 176-206 and aeth besides 130. Swete is silent. (μακαριος γαρ Dion.).

xxii. 8. MS. reads ακουων (—ὁ) και βλεπων ταυτα. So ten other of my cursives.
ibid. δεικνυντος Swete quotes others, but not 130.

Some of the above omissions bear on our problems, as he has omitted to notice much basic agreement or collateral sympathy with the elder authorities.

Sporadic agreement with such MSS. as 36, 56, or f. 114 points to critical emendation (always at a remote date) with possible survival of some genuine 'lost' readings, even among our unique series.

We can connect 130 with most of our important MSS., uncial and cursive, but with no one sufficiently to establish a firm 'class' or 'group' relationship in the way we can do it for others. It must therefore take its place singly alongside such MSS. as 18 36 40 47 111 113 143 146 189 226, which all reproduce separate lines of transmission, converging, it is true, as we remount the centuries, but being bounded by the 'blinkers' which envelop their separate and several transmission from remote ages.

The large omissions due to homoioteleuton are doubtless due in whole or in part to similar lacunæ in the parent copy, but which are due to the scribe's own infirmity and which are not it remains most difficult to establish, as we have no sister MS. with which to compare it.

In a general way there appears rather more sympathy with the two Coptic versions than with Syriac or Latin.

Athos former treasures.

It is refreshing to find such a MS. still available among the unequal treasures of Mt. Athos, for I am convinced that in former times the monasteries there were in possession of many important documents which have either perished or still lie concealed. Some of these may come to light later, and help our problem in this book.

I flatter myself, however, that the picture which I have painted in my table of grouped readings will make the path of the future investigator more plain, and enable him more readily to assess at its true value any new evidence which may be forthcoming from the discovery of any other such interesting survivals as the present MS. under review.

Remain the other unique readings not yet tabulated. We ought really to have given a sequent running list of all principal variations instead of separating them. It would have been fairer to the MS.

However, we will close with the other readings, not yet dealt with, which are so far unique, or nearly so.

To sum up: the only 'monstra' really are then in all this ancient medley, but:

ii. 1. εκκλησιων pro χρυσων
iii. 17. αληθινος pro ελεεινος
vii. 1. ισραηλ pro ινα
ix. 20. τα ειδωλα τα κωφα και χρυσα pro ειδωλα τα χρυσα
x. 4. εβδομου ουρανου
xvi. 1. εχετε pro εκχεατε, and, (compared to other MSS., especially the uncials, and A, which has many more), these 'monstra' are well balanced by the other remarkable features of the text, which we have already noticed.

I have been precise about this document because it must contain many keys of which I have missed the import, and which future study may reveal to others.

The student can skip some things, but he must dwell on our accounts of such singular manuscripts as 111 113 130 143 146 f. 178 189 200 226. They will repay study.

Apoc. 131. Apoc. 131 (Ac. 362. P. 455) = Athos, Iberorum 60. = [Greg. 131 (Ac. 362. P. 455). Greg. new 1857. Sod. α 399, 1587]. [XIII].

Gregory reports a mere fragment of Apoc. containing:

i. 1-5, 10. I have no report of this and neglect it.

GROUP 34-35-68-87-(124)-132-156-165-181-188.

Apoc. 132 (Ac. 374. P. 463) = Athos, S. Pauli 2. = "Greg. 132 (Ac. 374. P. 463) manu Mariæ Armeniæ Regiæ? [IX]." [Greg. new 1862. Sod. O^{21}]. Photographed by German Society for promoting Archæological Research in 1911 (but they skipped some pages, since supplied from Harvard). Apoc. 132.

Written in a very neat hand, with chain commentary of somewhat smaller characters, but by the same hand.

A decorated square is left for the inscription (see No. 181), but this has never been filled in. The subscription is:

ἡ ἀποκάλυψις ἰωάννου τοῦ θεολόγου τοῦ μαθητοῦ τοῦ κῦ. ἣν ἐν πάτμωι τῆ νήσωι ἐθεάσατο and is followed by "σταυρὲ φύλαττε βασίλισσαν Μαρίαν" thus:

⁛ σταυ ρὲ φύ λαττε βασίλισ σαν
Μα ρίαν·
⁛

At the side of this in a late untutored hand is the following:

"Μαρία ἡ ἔκγονος φιλαρέτου τοῦ ἐλεήμονος· γυνὴ δὲ γενομένου Κωνσταντίνου βασιλέως, ἡοῦ (vid.) εἰρήνης τῶν συγηροτησάντην τὴν ἁγίαν ἑβδόμην Συνόδον, ἐν Νικάᾳ κατὰ τῶν εικονομάχων· (vid.) ἥτις βιασθεῖσα ἔλαβε τὸ ἀγγελικὸν σχῆμα, ἡσυχάσα ἐν Μοναστηρίῳ· ἐν βυζαντῳ." Personality of scribe.

I see no reason to doubt that this MS. is in a female hand, but its age has been much exaggerated. Thus Gregory put it down as IXth century, and Soden, p. 272 and 429, where it is numbered O^{21}, indicates as the author the wife of the Emperor Constantine VIth, but Constantine VI^{th's} date is 780–797. Intervened Leo VI 886–911, and Constantine VII followed (who was a patron of literature) in 905–959, and Constantine VIII 976–1025, all of which dates are full early for the MS. [Armenia was a kingdom 908–1080]. See note in the sister MS. 34, which can be dated 1064–1068 according to Gregory. As to date.

The MS. is crammed with iota postscript, given to nouns and adjectives as well as to verbs, and is found even after the abbreviation χω̄ι for χριστω. In fact where left out originally the scribe has added them. Psi is indeterminate, but not often square, and ξ is not early.

I should place the MS. not earlier than 1100, but for the dates given above. No MS. as early as 1100, which I have seen, has anything like so many iotas postscript, except our No. 111, which were at first confined to verbs. In this MS. it is even given to κυκλωι (as in No. 111), and appears in ανεωιγμενον. Besides which, ν εφελκ. is conspicuously absent (as in No. 111). It only occurs half a dozen times in the whole book.

But this being said, the MS. is singularly free from errors, and does much credit to her who "adopted the heavenly scheme" while yet a Queen and in her lifetime (as the old chronicler says), and retired to a Monastery in her prime.

The text proves to be of the interesting family 34-35-68-87-124, to which we shall later add 156 al., so that we now have this seven-fold group 34-35-68-87-124-132-156, and 132 is probably the purest and most reliable example of the type and very valuable as a check on the others, of which so far 35 was the more reliable, while 34 and 87 are often aberrant, and 68 is considerably mutilated, while 124 is not only aberrant, but in the most interesting places goes quite apart with 14-92 *syr*S copt gig etc.

Apoc. 34 (with com.). See Gregory under Act. 66, can be dated 1064–1068 and is at Vienna.
Apoc. 35 (with com.) XIVth cent. is also at Vienna.
Apoc. 68 (with com.) XIth or XIIth is at Rome.
Apoc. 87 (without com.) was at Cheltenham.
Apoc. 124 (without com.) XIII/XIVth is at Athens.
Apoc. 132 (with com.) XI/XIIth is at Athos.
Apoc. 156 (without com.) XVth is at Milan, dated 1434.
Now add Apoc. 165 (with com.) XIth is at Paris.
Apoc. 181 (with com.) XIth at Jerusalem, and Apoc. 188 (without com.) XIVth at Constantinople,

So that they are widely enough separated, speaking geographically.

but most of the strange readings do not come from the Commentaries.

This is the family, which, while not being as Coptic as some MSS., has the Coptic reading καρχηδων in xxi. 19 for χαλκηδων. Only 156 varies with χαλκος, but otherwise this MS. is very near the ten-fold type. [188 reads, however, χαλκηδων]. καρχηδων is also read by the remarkable MS. 143 to follow, and by the Oecumenian MS. 146 both text and commentary, and is also the reading of Gwynn's Syriac.

As previously stated the lady-scribe is unusually accurate, and but two cases of palpable error occur in the twenty-two chapters.

1. At xii. 9 she varies the usual order (of Greek and all the Versions) of: και εβληθη ο δρακων, by writing και ο δρακων εβληθη, which is not borne out by any of the family. (124 here leaves out a great clause, skipping from εβληθη to εβληθησαν).

2. At xix. 2 she omits (by reason of homoioteleuton) και εξεδικησε το αιμα των δουλων αυτου εκ της χειρος αυτης against the family. It was not noticed by her, but is supplied by a second hand in the margin without της before χειρος, as usual, unless she herself added it hurriedly later.

Another omission at xxi. 4 is shared by the family MSS., and none of the 'readers' seem to have noticed it.

It certainly is a wonderful record for a woman, or for a man.

Among the characteristic readings common to all, are found :

iii. 18. συμβουλευω σοι αγορασαι χρυσιον πεπυρωμενον without παρ' εμου [124 omits αγορασαι and reads παρ εμοι].

v. 9. the order καινην ωδην for ωδην καινην, and ημας τω θεω for τω θεω ημας.

14. ελεγε το αμην for ελεγον αμην (of the τεσσαρα ζωα).

vi. 9. δια την μαρτυριαν + ιῦ χῦ, where B and a very large group add του αρνιου, and, as usual, ℵ gives away the secret of a faint common original by writing και δια την μαρτυριαν twice over. Notice that *syr*S adds ιησου, and one boh MS. agrees with our 132 group.

12. This family remains with P (against ℵCAB and most cursives) in not adding ολη before or after σεληνη.

viii. 7. The influence of Versions is clearly seen at this place, where χαλαζα and πυρ, grando and ignis (or flamma) are resumed in the singular verb εβληθη and by missa est in all the Greeks and Latins, whereas the Coptic (both sah and boh) with *syr*S agree with the 132 group for εβληθησαν.

This is the more striking as immediately after at:

viii. 8, 9. the group adds μερος with Coptic and Latin. (א joins in verse 9).

This is further emphasized from a polyglot point of view at:

12. where the group reads και εσκοτισθη instead of ινα σκοτισθη as the result of the attainture of the third part of the sun, moon, and stars. So also *syr*S, but not Coptic, and not Latin, which has 'ut' (gigas), 'ita ut' h and Prim., but not 'et,' with which, however, it might be confused.

It is in this same verse that the group reads ουκ εφαινε (for μη φαινη or μη φανη) with *syr*S.

At ix. 13 we are again treated to a rare variation, confined to the family only (except 124), of: μεγαλην for μιαν, but confirmed by 146*txt* (aliter com.), apart from the Versions.

This is a curious place: "Και ο εκτος αγγελος εσαλπισε και ηκουσα φωνην μιαν εκ των (τεσσαρων) κερατων του θυσιαστηριου του χρυσου."

Why φωνην μιαν? The majority Greeks, however, have this.

14-92 vary with μιαν φωνην.

38-203-240 [not 178] leave out μιαν altogether, which reads well.

א* leaves out μιαν and εκ των τεσσαρων κερατων.

Prim. Cypr. gig and Tyc. leave out φωνην,

א^{a} 56 59 and f. 119 read φωνης μιας, but 200 φωνης ενος, which is perhaps getting nearer the original, while the great cursive 130 cuts the difficulty—(or gives us perhaps the primal text)—by leaving out both words φωνην μιαν with arm 4.

At ix. 14 τωι εχοντι for ος ειχε by the group has the support of 111 and 200.

At x. 10 there is another curious sub-relation to Coptic. Our Greek group alone (with 113 and 189) leaves out οτε εφαγον αυτο between και and επικρανθη η κοιλια μου. This is not agreed to by others, nor by Coptic, but Coptic omits the corresponding και κατεφαγον αυτο earlier in the verse. Prim. also agrees to suppress one of the clauses, while gigas leaves out the whole of the first part of the verse up to and including και κατεφαγον αυτο. *Syr*S is straightforward with the common text, and shows no trace of all this, while 124 of our group retains και οτε εφαγον αυτο and adds και ην εν τω στοματι μου ως μελι γλυκυ.

At xi. 19 another polyglot place, for our group alone has σεισμοι for σεισμος, which agrees with Coptic, while Latin is 'double-headed' with terraemotus as usual. (*Syr*S substitutes πυρ).

Again xii. 4 fin. +αυτο post καταφαγη of this family alone (with two other Greeks Nos. 23 and 164) is redundant and unnecessary, because the Greek says: ινα οταν τεκη το τεκνον αυτης καταφαγη. But the Coptic says "if she should bring forth the son the dragon might swallow him." But in Coptic 'him,' αυτο, does not come last in the sentence, which ends with 'the dragon,' but is involved in the verb previously. Therefore considerable premeditation on the part of our group was necessary to perpetrate this, which all the scribes faithfully reproduce.

At xii. 11 with τας ψυχας for την ψυχην we are again with 23 and also 113 as outsiders among Greeks, but also 130, and with both Latin and Coptic, whose MSS. divide somewhat on the subject.

At xiii. 17 my whole family varies the order from αγορασαι η πωλησαι to πωλησαι η αγορασαι and adds ετι. No others vary the order except 45 and 113, but *syr*S is the only one to add ετι with us. (193 reads αγορασαι και πωλησαι). (36 adds τι).

At xiv. 6. For ευαγγελισαι τους καθημενους (or κατοικουντας) επι της γης we read with ℵCAP and the notable cursives 111 130 146 f. 178 200 and *syr*S: ευαγγελισασθαι επι τους καθημενους, which shows that our base is that of the uncials and some of the most ancient and striking of our cursives.

xvii. 4. περικεχρυσωμενη (to form the 'pair' with the previous περιβεβλημενη) is entirely peculiar to our family (but agreed to by all the members) but not quite at variance with Coptic, as Bohairic has: 'and sewn with gold.'

xviii. 12. μαργαριτῶν in the plural (for μαργαριτου), as read by our group, has very notable support, by ℵ and 59 f. 95 111 113 159 f. 178, very noteworthy cursives, besides *syr*S and Σ, gig and Prim., while A reads μαργαριταις and CP μαργαριτας (copt —των or ταις).

23. επλανησας for επλανηθησαν is peculiar, yet read by all our group (hiat 124), and only supported by *syr*S and aeth$^1/_2$; not by Coptic nor by Latin.

xix. 13. ερραντισμενον for βεβαμμενον is noteworthy, because supported by Hippolytus (txt. and com.) as well as by the cursives of f. 95 109 113 164 203*mg-240; while P 36 200 read ρεραντισμενον, and ℵ* περιρεραμμενον (111 ρεραμμενον, 146 ερραμμενον) and ℵ^c περιρεραντισμενον. The Versions and other Fathers also illuminate this place.

xxi. 5. εν τω θρονω pro επι τον θρονου is read also by 127-215 and gigas, the 21 group and 159. The Coptic MSS. are divided between επι and εν. Prim. also reads 'in' but against Iren.

6. —της ζωης } Do not seem to be shared by the Versions, although having other
9. ο πρωτος pro εἷς } Greek cursive support.

24 fin. The unnecessary των εθνων for αυτων by the group has no support except from boh and *syr*Σ (*syr*S omits).

xxii. 6. των πνευματων των αγιων προφητων of the group now has the support of *syr*S as well as of 164-166 169-216 172-217.

This list is not quite exhaustive, but sufficient to show the general trend of the group. To date the recension seems very difficult.

Note that this version lingers in the East. Besides this 'queenly' MS., another is subsequently found at Jerusalem (our Apoc. 181) equally beautiful and early, and another at Constantinople (our Apoc. 188), the latter rather careless.

For true type we must remain attached to 132.

[At xv. 8 the omission of εκ before της δυναμεως by 132 (against the group) has the support of 111 and of 178 but against 38-203-240].

Apoc. 133 (Ac. 384. P. 355) = Chalcide Scholæ 26 (Island of Chalké or Halké near Constantinople, not Chalkis in Euboea). = Greg. 133 (Ac. 384. P. 355) [new 1870. Sod. α 54]. [x]. Apoc. 133.

Owing to the war in the East, and the subsequent Great War, and the Turkish situation arising therefrom, I was unable to obtain photographs in 1911/12 or subsequently, and can get no trace of the MS. up to the time of going to press. I regret this, as it would seem to be early in point of date and may be interesting.

Apoc. 134 (Ac. 386. P. 357) = Chalcide Scholæ 96. = Greg. 134 (Ac. 386. P. 357) [Greg. new 1872. Sod. α 209]. [XII]. Not collated. Apoc. 134.

The same remarks apply to this as to the previous MS.

GROUP 21-28-73-79-80-99-100-103-112-135-138-139-170-191-220-221.

Apoc. 135 (Ac. 399. P. 367) = Sinaiticus 279. = Greg. 135 (Ac. 399. P. 367). [New 1876. Sod. α 504]. [XV. chart]. Apoc. 135.

Careful specimen of the fam 21, and close sister of its members 103-112 (e.g. —κριμα xx. 4). A few times alone with 112 (e.g. xiii. 1 διαβηματα for διαδηματα, xviii. 16 κεκεχρυσωμενην for και κεχρυσωμενη). It runs to the end of ch. xxi, and only lacks the last chapter. (Therefore correct Gregory, who says it ends at xiii. 8). It is interesting to find a member of this family in Egypt, for I have clearly indicated that the family is Egyptian. Another curious link in the chain of evidence is this: that the other Sinai MS. (our No. 250), while being of the Complutensian family, agrees mostly with 37. Now 37 intrudes sometimes into rare readings of the 21 group. It is therefore possible that the Compl. group 10 and group 21 originated or were copied in the same monastery. Where was that?

Nos. 135 and 250 are collated only in 1927. Impossible to obtain them before. Photos are by Hatch, who accompanied Rendel Harris to Sinai a few years ago, and the whole matter has been checked by Professor Lake and a few missing pages in one of them supplied by hand.

Of unique variants there are none. A most remarkable performance, given the unusual type of this recension. No unique variants.

At xiv. 4 the scribe was going to write γυναικος, but corrected it to γυναικων.

So closely did 103-112-135 follow their exemplar that all three omit the twelfth gate at the end of the long verse at xxi. 20, a thing one would think almost impossible for a scribe to overlook. This is a good measure of the faithfulness of their copying.

GROUP 62-63-72-136-147-162-163-184.

Apoc. 136.

Apoc. 136 = Vind. Caes. theol. 69. [=Greg. 136, new 2044. Sod. $A\nu^{601}$]. Said to be dated 1507, but the date is ᾱͅφ̄ξ = 1560, which seems very late for the style of writing, but the last letter is ξ (=60) not ζ (=7). Collated from photographs in 1922.

This is another Andreas com. MS. of the 1 family, practically the same as 62. It is junior in date to 62 by 100 or 150 years, but has not been copied direct from that MS., but from a common original, which has eluded us so far, or, more likely, perished.

Illustrated MS.

Both MS. are illustrated. There is a picture of the dragon with seven heads and ten horns at xii. 3, but in 136 it is by no means a slavish copy of that in 62. Again at xiii. 1 the two drawings of a 'Beast' in the two MSS. differ much, although both look somewhat like a lion. And again, after xiii. 11; and again opposite xvii. 4 in this MS. is a full page illustration of the 'woman' against a somewhat similar one in 62, but the latter is at the foot of the page there in the margin opposite xvii. 1. Now see 184 similarly illustrated, and a third member of the sub-group 136-147-184.

In 136 we find, almost uniformly, ῥαυδω, ἑυδομος, whereas in 62 beta is written β in all these words. In the collation such spelling is only entered for the late xvth cent. MSS. who usually write beta as β, so they intend upsilon when they write u. The earlier ones are understood to mean beta by the u form.

Occasionally 136 has an ν ἐφελκυστ. (evidently retained from the common original) while 62 is without.

The characteristic readings are nearly all present, such as:

i. 5. των ανομιων for των αμαρτιων
ii. 9. πενιαν for πτωχειαν
iii. 9. ηγαπηκα for ηγαπησα
vii. 9. —λευκας

136 now takes rank as the closest sister to 147 in the sub-group of the 1 family 62-63-72-136-147-162-163.

See vi. 9, 12, ix. 6, x. 2, xiii. 18, xvi. 12, xix. 6, 10, xxi. 8, xxii. 4.

Add 162/163 and 184 now to 136-147. They are practically identical.

GROUP 46-88-101-137. General Family 1.

Apoc. 137. Apoc. 137 = Vind. Caes. gr. theol. 163. = Greg. 137 (new 2045. Sod. $A\nu^{55}$). [XIV–XV]. cum com̄.

This is quite an interesting proposition, for it gives us the derivative of the late non-commentary MSS. group 46-88-101. These four MSS. are not only derived from a common original, but most accurately rendered for so late a date.

This MS. 137 is not easy to date closely. It cannot be later than 1400 and may well be somewhat earlier, and probably preceded all the other three. Yet I do not think any of the three were copied directly from it.

The MS. 137 has much short hand, yet all is clear and nearly always correct.

The main features of the group are here in their entirety. There have been a few corrections by first hand, by a diorthotes, and by a second hand, and nearly all these are the readings adopted in 46-88-101.

See back under 46 for a list of the readings peculiar to the group. Our MS. goes apart very rarely, notably at viii. 7 maintaining αιματι for the υδατι of the other three, and at xix. 19 retaining επι του ιππου omitted by the others, and at viii. 3 reading τας προσευχας for the τας ευχας of 46-88-101 and the ταις προσευχαις of text. rec., but the other strange readings are nearly all there, including the +υπο ιωαννου at xiv. 4, and including the three with ℵ: at iv. 10 of +αμην, at viii. 9 of ψυχην for ψυχας, and at ix. 11 ελληνιδι for ελληνικη.

We have a few novelties, such as:

iii. 6. νοῦν for οὖς

ix. 8. τριχας τριχας ως γυναικων (Cf. h).

x. 4. τοῦτοῦ ουρανου pro του ουρανου (Cf. +εβδομου 130 *syr*S).

xii. 4. αυτον pro αυτους (referring to the 'third'). Cf. latin h.

xiii. 18. —ἡ ante σοφια

xiv. 4. +και ante ακολουθουντες

xvi. 18. —αφ ου οι ανθρωποι εγενοντο txt. (Suppl. marg. —οι ανθρωποι cum 46-88-101).

xviii. 8. Post κατακαυθησεται +ἡ καὶ αὐτῆς τῆς ἡμέρας τὸν δρόμον ex com. sed clausula repetita infra in schol.

14. +ουτε ψυχας ανων̅ του λοιπου εμπορευση κ.τ.λ. ut fam 21.
xix. 8. και καθαρον λαμπρον
12. +τις ὁ ante εχων Cf. Prim. Cypr. et copt.
xxi. 4. —ο θεος, id est: απ αυτων pro ο θεος (Contra planè om. 46-88-101 absque απ αυτων).
7. και αυτοι εσονται μοι υιοι
14. —των post ονοματα
21. πυλεωνων
22. ναον pro ναος secundo loco.
xxii. 2. αποδιδουντα pro αποδιδουν
16. +και ante ο αστηρ

so that I do not think there is any probability that 46-88-101 copied direct from 137.

The work, however, as rendered, does credit to all four scribes.

Our librarius has an inscription:

ερμηνεια της αποκαλυψεως του αγιου αποστολου και ευαγγελιστου ἰω̅′ του ηγαπημενου και θεολογου, but no subscription. Another hand has added that the work is that of Methodius (but it appears to be all pure Andreas), saying:

τελος της εξηγησεως μεθοδιου . . . . .

Our scribe uses a good deal of tachygraphy, and sometimes abbreviates Μιχαηλ to μ̓ι with χ above and οφθαλμος and its cases, thus ὀφθ̀, which is most unusual, and he nearly always writes γαρ as ⁊, but his abbreviations are consistent and easily understood, with hardly a chance of error. No trace of iota post- or subscript.

At xiii. 18 after the number of the beast occurs right between text and commentary as a running comment: τέλος κόσμου.

The full agreement of the family and its slight differences will be found fully noted in the body of collations.

GROUP 80-138. General Family 21.

Apoc. 138. Apoc. 138. Vind. Caes. gr. theol. 220. [xv]. [Greg. 138, new 2046. Sod. $A\nu^{58}$].

This is a full sister-MS. to 80 (of the group 21) with com. of Andreas, but later in date. Of same period as 136, which is dated 1507 (or 1560), but without the whole prologue, and differing somewhat in the text of the commentary.

MS. 138 begins at the point πρῶτον μὲν οὖν instead of at πολλάκις, and runs to the end of the introduction. Above (in a contemporary hand) is this inscription:

εἰς τὴν τοῦ ἅγιου ἀποστόλου καὶ εὐαγγελίστου ἰωάννου τοῦ θεολόγου ἀποκάλυψϊν, ἐξήγησϊς ὠριγενους θαυμαστ̄ τὴν ἀσάφειαν ταῦ (ταυτην?)
εἰς φ῀ (φῶς?) παράγουσα: προοίμϊον:

but in the margin in a later hand "Imo Andreae Caesariensis in Cappadocia Archiepiscopi qui . . . ."

The subscription page is arranged in the same way as in 80, but the actual τελος part of the subscription is absent in 138.

80 and 138 appear to derive from a common original, and 138 does not appear to be copied directly from 80, although all the readings special to that MS. (such as τον σωζοντος pro του ζωντος xv. 7, see ante) are reproduced.

138 differs as follows:

20. καὶ pro ναὶ pr. 138 [non 80], but practically all the above are merely due to scribal infirmity.

The special and real agreement throughout with 80 is constant, including the circumflex on κρινεῖς vi. 10, κρινεῖ xix. 11, κρῖμα xvii. 1, and abbreviated πνσ in xviii. 2 before ἀκαθάρτου.

GROUP 21 etc.

Apoc. 139. Apoc. 139 = Paris, Nat. gr. 240. = [Greg. 139, new 2047. Sod. Αν⁶⁷]. [a. 1543]. Collated in Paris, July, 1908.

A XVI[th] century MS. with com. of Andreas, written by "χριστοφθρος ὁ ἀουερος," a German, Christopher Auer, in Rome, 1543.

In a reliure du temps with the French crowned F and fleur de lys.

A contemporary note at the beginning says "publici juris facta inter opera Johannis Chrysostomi. Lege (?) in codicibus 423. 1797. 2279."

It is well and carefully written, although the scribe once writes θυγατειρα for θυατειρα! There are no grave omissions until ch. vii., after which some errors of omission occur owing to homoioteleuton.

Has iota subscript (but not with ἀδης nor with καγω). κυριος, πνευμα often in full; ιησου χριστου always in full except at end of ch. xxii., as also ισραηλ and ιερουσαλημ.

There is no inscription proper. The text (first paragraph in red, rest in black) begins p. 6, i.e. f°. 3 verso. The folios are numbered as pages recto and verso.

It soon develops, from δι' αγγελου i. 1, and other readings that this MS. is of the 21-28-73-79-100-103-112-135 family. As far as I can see, however, it is not copied direct from any of these which have already passed under review. Occasionally, but only very occasionally, it goes with a few others, iii. 18 fin. βλειψης with 16. Alone viii. 11 ἀψῖνθίαν, and xiii. 14 ποιεῖσθαι for ποιησαι sec. (ποιεισαι 73, 79).

It had trouble with χαλαζα for some reason, correctly given xvi. 21, but χαλαρα viii. 7, and χαρα xi. 19.

It reads ἱερεῖς (for ἶρις) iv. 3 with ℵA and the family; —ἁ εστι v. 13 with ℵ 38 47 and the family.

—ανθρωπου at xxi. 17 alone, although leaving a blank space.

+τους post καρπους at xxii. 2 alone.

The characteristic group readings are all here, including the special feature of compound verbs, as:

Apoc. 140.

Apoc. 140 = Paris, Nat. Coisl. gr. 256. = [Greg. 140, new 2048. Sod. α 1172]. [XI]. Collated in Paris, 1908. The date is correct. About 1100.

Written by two hands, doubtless in the same monastery. The first three pages are in a blacker ink and different hand, probably by the chief of the monastery, but has many itacisms, υ for η frequently, even ὕκουσα for ἤκουσα. The scribe who furnishes the rest writes a good hand and is guilty of itacism, but not as badly as the other.

Inscr. ἀποκάλυψις ἰῶ τοῦ θεὀλόγου · ἣν ἴδεν ἐν^{τ} νήσω πάτμω : εἰσ^{τ} ὑπο^{θ} σὺγχώρεσον :

The MS. also contains Antioch. monach. pandectes S^{ae}. Scripturae. Hæreticorum nomina, a Simoniacis ad Messalianos. Anonymi fabula de mediatore, etc.

The Apoc. occurs last in the volume.

At ii. 17 λευκην a marginal chain commentary begins.

The text is of the Greek family, e.g. ii. 5 πεπτωκας not ἐκπεπτωκας, and of the B type, subtype 8-24 of which this MS. forms the third and most important member, with much independent itacism of a very ancient kind.

And a good deal of unique spelling with the uncials is found.

Iota post- occurs but twice I think, plus once with δευρωι. ν εφελκ. is very frequent. Breathings are both square and round.

Of ligatures ν̸ for αν occurs a few times, and is quite unusual, as at xxii. 21 π̸των for παντων, and xiv. 4 εμολυνθησ̸ for εμολυνθησαν.

The subscription is unlike any except 2, and runs (+του θεολογου fin.):

τελος της αποκαλυψεως του αγιου ιω̄ του ευαγγελιστου και θεολογου.

The family peculiarities of 8-24-140 are recorded under MS. 24. As our 140 does not agree with the first three cases (i. 11, i. 14) and agrees with all the rest, it is evident that the scribe who began 140, and was displaced by someone else at i. 19/20, had begun to copy from a MS. of another type.

FAMILY 1.

Apoc. 141. Apoc. 141 = Athenis Bibl. τῆς βουλῆς. = [Greg. 141, new 2049. Sod. α 1684]. [XVI] Chart. or [XV ?]. Photographed Nov. 1922, by Andreou of Athens.

Although Gregory labels this XVI[th] century (after seeing the original), the general style of writing, as seen in the photographs, points to a somewhat earlier date.

In this case, the question of date is vital, because the MS. is a replica of Evan. 1 to all intents and purposes, and presents a very perplexing problem.

If of the XVI[th] century, it may simply be a copy of the printed text of Erasmus, Aldus or Colinaeus, and yet it has no appearance of being a copy of any one of them, although containing their text, and after the most serious examination it might seem to be a sister of Apoc. 1, and to have been copied from a similar MS. It has no Commentary. ναὶ is doubly accented, which we do not find in the printed copies. Final sigma is generally in the form of c, and there are other indications of XV[th] century execution, rather than XVI[th] century.

There are, it is true, half a dozen places where the semicolon of interrogation is used. This is the only real sign of youth. Dr. Bolides of Athens has examined it for me, but refuses to date it closely.

In order to avoid any bias, I carefully refrained from looking at the last page until I had reached this conclusion. Upon reaching the end of the Apoc. and the famous final six verses, supposed to have been re-translated from the Vulgate into Greek by Erasmus when Codex 1 was discovered and found to lack the last leaf, the problem takes on a most important aspect. For if our MS. 141 is not copied from the printed text, then Erasmus would be absolved from the charge for which his memory has suffered for 400 years ! In his own 'adnotationes' he would seem, however, to have admitted that the end ('calce') of his codex was mutilated.

Now note this in the first place. Erasmus does not print his own Latin version—(which occupies the middle column between Greek and Vulgate)—exactly in the terms of the Vulgate, although very close.

He gives us:

e libro	against Vulgate :	de libro
a civitate	,, ,,	de civitate
ex his	,, ,,	de his

and he adds etiam, representing the second ναὶ before ἔρχου κύριε Ἰησοῦ, which his Vulgate column lacks, thus conforming to the Greek as printed, and by his 'e' and 'a' differentiating between the ἀπὸ (βίβλου) and ἐκ (τῆς πόλεως), and giving ex (his quae scripta) against de (his quae scripta) for the Greek τῶν γεγραμμένων, which, if he had re-translated into Latin, might have been rendered otherwise.

So much for that aspect of the case.

The matter really narrows down to a copy of Er. 4. 5, and not of Er. 1. 2. or 3, or Aldus, for, in verse 18, our MS. has ἐὰν εἴτιc and in verse 19 καὶ ἐὰν εἴτιc with Er. 4. 5, while Er. 1. 2. 3. Ald. have εἴτις and εἴτις in each place; and our MS. has in verse 19 ἐκ τῆς πόλεως with Er. 4. 5, while Er. 1. 2. 3. Ald. have πόλεως without ἐκ τῆς. Our MS. has at the end τέλοc with Er. 4. 5, while Er. 2. 3. have τω θεω δοξα, and Er. 1. is without any subscription.

On the other hand, our MS., in order to exhibit its independence—even of Er. 4. 5—has in verse 21 ἡμῶν for ὑμῶν as the last word, which is not found in Erasmus' editions, nor in Aldus, nor in Colinaeus.

Whereas also, in the same verse, Er. 4. 5. print κυρίου ἡμῶν Ιησοῦ χριστοῦ, our MS. contracts two out of three of these words, writing : κῡ ἡμῶν ἰησοῦ χ̄ῡ, and frequently used contractions differing toto caelo from the printed texts, and conforming to more ancient usage.

Now we must go back over my collation and see what else we can find pro and con. There are quite a few singularities, which we must notice first.

Apoc. i. 5. The text (although the scribe is pretty careful) omits, as early as this, on the very first page, the words 'και λουσαντι ἡμας' altogether. And in the margin we find 'και καλεσαντι' apparently by the first hand, and not και λουσαντι or και λυσαντι ημας. Now surely, if copying the printed text, he would have written in the margin the right words from that text. It would seem therefore as if his exemplar lacked the words.

Apoc. ii. 13. We read in our MS. ὃς τε ἀ κτάνθη whereas all have ὃς ἀπεκτάνθη at this place. And our scribe is not given to any such errors.

At ii. 23. We write καρδίασ καὶ νεφρούσ with a few MSS., but none of fam 1, and none of the early editions, which have νεφροὺς καὶ καρδίας. But this may be an involuntary transposition on the part of the scribe.

At ii. 27. We read ὢν pro ὡς prim.

At iii. 4. We read ὃ pro ἃ (oi by 1 etc. and Er. 1. 2. 3, ἃ Er. 4. 5).

At iii. 15 init. We read ἴδά pro οἶδα.

At. v. 11. We read καὶ ἴδον, ϛ ἰδοὺ ἤκουσα pro και ειδον και ηκουσα.

At. vi. 11. We read ἑκάσταις στὸ̄ (i.e. στολαῖς) λευκαὶ by error. The editors read εκασταις, but στολαι.

At vii. 12. We read τοῦ θῦ pro τω θεω.

At viii. 13. We omit γης against MSS. and editors; (138* omits της).

At ix. 3. We read ἀλλὰ βασανισθήσονται pro ἀλλ' ινα βασανισθωσι. None omit ινα except *syr*S, and Er. omn. have βασανισθησωνται.

At ix. 6. We omit ταις.

ibid. We read ἐκείνεσ̄ (αι) sic.

At ix. 7. We read ἵπποις ἡτοιμασμένα with Complutensian alone!

At ix. 7/8. We omit a long clause from homoioteleuton προσωπα...προσωπα.

At ix. 9. We read σιδηραῖς.

At ix. 11. We read ἐφ' ἑαυτῶν ex emend. with 130, for επ αυτων.

ibid. We read ἀββαδδὼν with three MSS. of Compl. family.

At ix. 13. We add τοῦ ναοῦ between θυσιαστηριου and του χρυσου.

At ix. 14/15. We run the verses together without stop.

ix. 17. We read ἀκινθίνουσ pro ὑακινθινους.

At x. 3/4. Another omission due to homoioteleuton "τὰσ ἑαυτῶν φωνᾶσ ἑαυτῶν ἔμελλον γράφειν" omitting και οτε ελαλησαν αι επτα βρονται τας φωνας.

At xi. 4. —αι ante ενωπιον contra fam. et Editt.

At xi. 13. ἔμφομβοι alone.

At xi. 14. —ἰδου with some of fam 1, viz. 46-88-101-137, and 114, but not Editt.

At xi. 15. λέγουσα pro λεγουσαι. More important is

xii. 7. ἐπολέμησαν μετὰ with many and Compl., against the κατα of fam 1 Er. Ald. Col.

xii. 12/13. Another omission from homoiotel. "εἰδὼς ὅτι ἐβλήθη εἰς τὴν γῆν" omitting ολιγον καιρον εχει· και οτε ειδεν ο δρακων οτι, transil. ab. οτι...οτι.

At xiii. 1. καὶ τὰσ ἐπὶ κεφαλὰσ pro και επι τας κεφαλας.

At xiii. 3. ἐθαυμάστη with 62-136 of the 1 family.

At xiii. 5. ἐξουσιαν with 12-63 of the 1 family.

At xiii. 8. ὧν τὰ ὀνόματα οὐ γέγραπται, a difference of order, not likely to occur in copying the printed text at this place.

At xiv. 1. ἀρίον pro αρνιον ibid. γεγραμ̈ένον * Thus 122 and Colinaeus with one μ. [But note: followed by xiv. 4 υπαγει and —τω ante αρνιω against Colinaeus, which rules out anything but a coincidence above].

At xiv. 9. +εἰς ante την εικονα alone.

At xiv. 10. κερασμένου (pro κεκερασμ.) with 1, a few, non Editt.

xvi. 1. [ἐκ χέατε sic] Contra εκχεετε Er. omn. Ald. Col.

xvi. 16. ἁρμαγεδδῶν with two deltas, as Er. 5, but with circumflex against acute accent in that edition.

xvii. 11. —και εκ των επτα εστι και εις απωλειαν υπαγει

xvii. 12. ἔλαβαν *

xviii. 2. κατοι κοι τηριον xviii. 7. τοσοῦ το with 61-126 only, non Editt.

xviii. 11 init. —και alone.

xix. 13. βεβαμενον

xxi. 12. επιγραμμενα

18. ὁ πόλις

20. ὁ πάσιον pro τοπαζιον (τοπαζιος Er. 2).

xxii. 3. λατρευ ουσιν contra Editt.

Besides some spelling apart from the editions, as εχον, φυαλας, πυρος for πυρρος, θυριον, φοναι απολειαν.

The scribe often writes ὁ for το, which I do not think is found in the Erasmian editions Even ὁῦ for τοῦ.

He has a somewhat peculiar ligature for ει, besides the usual one, viz. ϥ, which I note in Delitzsch' facsimile of Apoc. 1.

In the above list, many can be ruled out, as offering no proof, but enough remain, as at i. 5, xii. 7, xiii. 8, xxi. 20, to render it highly improbable that the scribe was copying the printed text.

Add to this these places where all Erasmian editions and the Aldine disagree with Stephen's edition and go apart from our MS. also:

iv. 5. εκπορευονται our MS. (Early editors εκπορευοντο).

v. 3. ουδε υποκατω της γης our MS. (Early editors και υποκατω της γης).

vii. 16. πεσῃ our MS. (Early editors πεσει).

ix. 6. ουχ ευρησουσιν our MS. (Early editors ουκ ευρησουσιν).

xiv. 5. ουχ ευρεθη our MS. (Early editors ουκ ευρεθη).

xvi. 20. ουχ ευρεθησαν our MS. (Early editors ουκ ευρεθησαν).

x. 7. τελεσωσι our MS. (Early editors τελεσουσι).

xi. 9. γλωσσων our MS. (Early editors γλωττων).

xiii. 5. λαλοῦν planè our MS. (Early editors λάλον).

xiv. 7. φοβηθητε our MS. (φοβησθητε Er. 1. 2, φοβειθητε Er. 3. 4. 5, sed Ald. cum Steph.)†.

xiv. 13. αναπαυσωνται our MS. (Early editors all αναπαυσονται).

† But we can rule Ald. out as a source of copying, for other reasons.

xviii. 12. ϛ μαργαριτου our MS. (Early editors all ουτε μαργαριτου)†.
xviii. 19. χοῦν our MS. (Er. OMN. χνοῦν).
xix. 1. αλληλουια our MS. (Early editors το αλληλουια).
xix. 15. του παντοκρατορος our MS. (Early editors παντοκρ. absque του).
xx. 5. ἔτη · αὖτη our MS. (Early editors supply αχρι after ετη).
xxi. 19. χαλκιδών our MS. (Er. omn. καλκϊδῶν, Ald. χαλκηδῶν).
xxi. 20. αμεθυστος our MS. (Er. 3. 4. 5. αμεθυσος. Er. 1. 2. Ald. αμεθησος).
xxii. 13. ὁ ἔσχατος ex industria. (εσχατος absque ὁ Er. omn. et Ald.).

I think we might fairly say that the above would convey presumptive evidence that the last leaf of Erasmus' codex might have contained the famous double ελθε, and ελθετω in verse 17 for the general Greek MS. readings of ερχου and ερχεσθω, and that it was not Erasmus' retranslation of the Vulgate's veni and veniat; and that in verse 18 συμμαρτυρουμαι γαρ for μαρτυρω εγω is not necessarily retranslation of the 'contestor' of Haymo and the Vg., or of the 'testor' of Primasius and Tyconius, for Arethas already says μαρτυρομαι εγω.

And the same applies to the αφαιρη and αφαιρησει of verse 19 for the usual αφελη and αφελει. (The Latins vary in the second place with auferet, demet, adimet and delebit), but fortunately or unfortunately Apoc. 208 has now become available to give us the real ending.

Years ago, I made a careful comparison of the five editions of Erasmus, and collated Aldus and Colinaeus. The full evidence will be found set out in the collected readings. We can certainly rule out any copying by our MS. of Er. 1. or 2, and the late date of Er. 5. (1535) would almost seem to rule out any chance of Apoc. 141 being based on that, even if the proof given above is not deemed sufficient to lay that bogey. Without such a troublesome examination of all the Erasmian editions, I could not have offered the foregoing evidence.

I enter into this detail because the matter might come up again for examination.

† This is peculiarly noteworthy at this place owing to the interruption of the series of και copulas by ουτε, for the series of και continues after this one ουτε.

COMPLUTENSIAN LARGE GROUP 10 etc.

Apoc. 142. Apoc. 142 (Paul. 470) = Escurial T. III. 17. [=Greg. 142 (Paul. 470). Greg. new 2004. Sod. α 56]. [x]?

Curiously both Scr.-Miller and Gregory give us the wrong 'renvoi' to the Pauline number. Miller says 202 and means 470, Gregory says 479 and means equally 470.

It appears from the other E. Miller's catalogue of the Escurial MSS. (Paris, 1848), p. 139, that the volume containing these MSS. (and other matter) is wrongly bound up together, for he states that the Pauline epistles (et alia) are of XII[th] cent., and Apoc. (inter alia) are of the X[th].

Mistakes never occur singly. We have a further complication here owing to another error. Scrivener-Miller's Apoc. 85 is numbered Ψ. III. 17. He means T. III. 17, and thus this Escurial codex is really given twice $\left.\begin{matrix}85\\142\end{matrix}\right\}$. There is no sacred codex Ψ. III. 17.

We have left 85 blank.

Let it be understood now that Gregory's and Scrivener's Apoc. 142 is the same Escurial codex T. III. 17.

[As a matter of fact I believe the mistakes are excusable, and that instead of T the original mark is the Coptic letter ϯ, for on my photographs instead of T they are marked Ϯ and the real library mark to-day is not T. III. 17 but III. Ϯ. 17].

Collated in 1921 from photos made in 1913.

The MS. is written in a good very upright XI[th] or early XII[th] century hand, with a fine hard pen, and has a chain commentary, the latter in a rough tachygraphic hand. Gregory seems to be too early.

The document may have been used by Ximenes and Stunica. The unusual and extraordinarily upright type possibly formed the basis for his unusual Greek types. But the text does not yield the Complutensian printed errors.

While the writing is very beautiful and the scribe very accurate, it is not an easy MS. to collate, as he runs his words together throughout.

An accident happened at some time early in the career of this volume, for a few pages are supplied in the entirely villainous hand of the writer of the chain commentary. These three leaves inserted after xiii. 16, comprising four pages of writing and involving xiv. 10 to xv. 1, are misbound. An old hand has written in the margin the usual "Seek (the continuation) ὄπισθεν on three leaves," indicating that then already the leaves were misplaced.

The main scribe has no iota post., a large number of ν ἐφελκ., and breathings very square and peculiarly delicate. Psi is very square. I can hardly believe that the commentary was added in the same scriptorium. The chain man ought to have been in chains himself. His efforts at writing are those of a person too utterly careless for words.

Our main scribe has but few peculiarities. One is, however, to write ἥμισυ consistently ἥμϋσυ (xi. 9, 11, xii. 14).

His punctuation at xi. 17/18 is peculiar, running the two verses together (with a few other MSS., as 30, 69, 74, 84, 126, 128) and placing the stop after ωργισθησαν in verse 18. Several other cases of punctuation occur, involving the sense, which will be found recorded in the collation.

The MS. is free from any grave errors in copying, and there are but few omissions from homoioteleuton. Nevertheless in the very last chapter we omit (verse 17) "και ο ακουων ειπατω ελθε (ερχου)" which no one else had done but 35 139 and 90 [non 51] and now 200 also. Another omission at iv. 9/10. And one at xiii. 2. Hardly any other errors.

The MS. is of the B type with just a few touches of the 51-90 family. See xxii. 8 ο ακουων και βλεπων αὐτά with 51-90 alone, and the omission shortly after at xxii. 17 (recorded above).

ἡ prim. is omitted in vi. 17 with 38 only, but this is probably an error. At xvii. 5 πόρνῶν is so accented. Of course the photo does not show if both accents are in the same ink. There is also some sympathy with 30.

The small section by the bad hand is of quite a different and older type of text. Here are the principal various readings:

xiv. 10. —του ante κεκερασμενου with 114-193-241 only.
ibid. βασανισθησονται with A 8 14 36 92 95?-127-215 251.
11. εις αιωνων (—αιωνας) αναβαινει New. (So 159*).
12. των τηρουντων with ℵ 36 f. 38 56 f. 95-111, all notable manuscripts.
ibid. —και την πιστιν ιησου New.
13. +το αγιον post πνευμα with 95 and 124[contra fam̄] 159 189 aeth arm only.
14. επι τη νεφελη with 41 f. 62 176-206.
ibid. —ανθρωπου εχων επι της κεφαλης pergens post υιω: "αυτου στεφανον χρυσουν" New.
18. φωνη pro κραυγη with ℵAB 31 f. 38 f. 44 f. 61 f. 95 146 187 *syr*S h gig.
19. —του θυμου with 12 f. 16 33 f. 44 49* 59-121 218.

The main MS. simply enlarges our already cumbersome family, but has the merit of strictly accurate copying.

There is no inscription proper, the MS. beginning:

Ἀποκάλυψις ι̅υ̅ χ̅υ̅ ἣν ἔδωκεν αὐ τῷ ὁ θσ̅ δεῖξαι τοῖσ δούλοισ αὐτοῦ κ.τ.λ.

There is a subscription:

† ἀποκάλυψις τοῦ ἁγίου ἰωάννου † which is new so far in this form.

VERY SPECIAL TYPE.

poc. 143. Apoc. 143 = Escurial X. III. 6 (or rather III. 𝔛. 6) = [Greg. 143, new 2050. Sod. α 1273]. [a. 1107].

This is to be found mentioned in E. Miller's catalogue of the Spanish MSS. (Paris, 1848), p. 397, where it is referred to as a Volume of 292 pages, and forms part (at f°. 235) of a collection of Miscellanies, being immediately preceded by a life of St. Elias, and succeeded by a life of St. Gregory, the Armenian. The MS. is dated 1107, as per the subscription on folio 292 at the end of the whole volume:

> ἐτελειώθη ἡ βίβλος αὕτη μηνὶ ἰουλίω κϛ : ἔτους > ϛχιε ⁘ γραφῆσα δια χειρὸς λεοντίου μοναχοῦ πρεσβυτέρου · > ἀμαθοῦς ϛ ἰδιώτου · εἰς τὴν μονὴν τοῦ ἁγίου > φιλίππου τοῦ μελιτυροῦ. οἱ ἐντυγχάνοντες ϛ > ἀναγινώσκοντες · εὔξασθαι ὑπερ αὐτοῦ διὰ τὸν κν :~

The dear old scribe was weary at the close of his labours, for he subjoins this couplet:

> Ὥσπερ ξένοι χαίρουσι πατρίδα βλέπειν.
> Οὕτω καὶ οἱ γράφοντες τέλος βιβλίου ⁘ ~

Photographed for me by F. E. Manero, of Madrid, in 1913, and collated in 1921. In a rough but clear early hand, the forms of psi and chi being quite ancient. ν εφελκ. is of constant occurrence; iota postscript entirely absent. It is written in double columns of thirty-five lines each. There is no catena, and there are no marginal remarks, nor divisions. There is no subscription until the end of the book, and the inscription is one of the 'ἐν Πάτμῳ' ones, differing slightly from others.

It has lain 'perdu' for many years, but is none the less important for that. This MS. was entirely unknown to the critics until recently, and is, perhaps, one of the most important in the list.

It stands quite apart from any traditional family groups, and is worthy of our most attentive consideration. I commend it to the reader very specially.

The text runs to v. 14, and then, without the slightest sign of an omission, continues with ch. xx. 1 to the end. This 'saltus' occurs on f°. 239 recto, col. i., three lines from the bottom. At first sight it would appear to impair all confidence in the scribe, and nullify any value in the MS. But sufficient remains to interest us very greatly, and possibly to explain the circumstances which led to such apparently unobservant copying, or extraction. Observe, however, that Apringius' rare commentary, as it survives in the Copenhagen codex, only runs upon ch. i–v. and xviii–xxii, the middle portion being a reproduction of Victorinus (there labelled Jerome). Can we connect 143 in Spain and Apringius in Spain and Portugal?

The reading καρχιδων in xxi. 19 points to the provenance of the original as Coptic (καρχηδων is read by part of the 35 family by 146 164-166 200 and Coptic with *syr*S). Other readings prove beyond doubt that the original was a bilingual Græco-Coptic MS. In olden days, the African monks carried about with them single books of the N.T., and in this case a worn copy, from which the middle portion had possibly dropped out, may have formed the basis for transmission; perhaps one leaf happening to terminate at the end of the v[th] chapter, and the next to have on it the beginning of the xx[th] chapter.

nportance this MS. I rise, however, from collating these eight chapters at the beginning and end of the book with a profound sense of having been in the atmosphere and in the presence of the elements of a very ancient text, notwithstanding the frailty of a scribe, who is somewhat crude, but evidently quite honest, and who describes himself in his colophon as unlearnèd and unskilful. And I reach this conclusion without having (as it happens) been able to refer to a single collateral document during the collation.

Upon consulting my ledger of grouped readings, however, my conclusion is abundantly proven, and I find that we are face to face with a situation of the deepest interest.

It had struck me, as I collated, that many of the startling additions, omissions and substitutions were not mediæval, and had a plausibility which pointed to a possible early edition, before all our stereotyped factors had become recognized as a kind of traditional text.

Further examination confirms me in this view. For instance, when the MS. suppresses ἱματίοις in iv. 4, and writes that the four and twenty elders around the throne "were clothed about with white," we pause to wonder whether the original may not have been worded thus, and whether an officious redactor did not very early insert ἱματίοις, thinking ἐν λευκοῖς an insufficient description; whereas the writer of the Apocalypse †, describing heavenly things, would be at liberty to chronicle his impressions of the vision in terms not strictly mundane, and the 'robes' would be unlike any earthly thing he had ever seen. See iii. 4 ἐν λευκοῖς tantum. But the reader may say that we are taking him into a region which is foggy with the mists of antiquity, and that we are again 'subjective,' whereas they of the modern school claim that we must be 'objective,' and surely some collateral evidence would remain that there is probability as well as plausibility in our conjecture that the omission is well-founded and approaches the long-lost basic text. Very well, I accept his challenge and remark that, in this first example, chosen at random, our MS. has the very respectable support of the great MS. ℵ, of the extraordinary cursive 130, and of the Patmos codex 178, and now of our wonderful 200. Thus ℵ 130, 143, f. 178 and 200 arm 4. stand alone in suggesting this plausible reading!

And ℵ 143 are again quite alone with aeth at xxi. 14 in omitting εχον in the description of the wall and the twelve gates. Already, in verse 12, we have been informed that the great and high wall had twelve gates. In verse 14 εχον can be suppressed if we assume that the gates just described in verse 13 formed the principal part of the wall in the vision. The prominence given in verse 13 to the three great gates on each of the N. S. E. and W. sides shows that they were of immense size. However, plausible or not, ℵ and 143 conspire again together alone to omit εχον. I call attention to it here because a very subtle but a very important point is involved. I have noticed that when ℵ writes comparative nonsense, other MSS. and Versions had difficulties in those same places; this merely means that the common papyrus original, lying far back in the limbo of forgotten times, was faint and difficult to read in those same places. Thus, here at xxi. 14, our MS. 143 writes apparent nonsense of: τρειμελίους τρεῖς for θεμελίους δώδεκα, after suppressing εχον.

It is to be observed that in a somewhat similar construction at iv. 7 we again omit εχον with gigas and Vict., and observe without Greek support. At iv. 2 we omit εκειτο with Bohairic.

So again at xxi. 4 our MS. 143 has a unique reading of οτι ταυτα for οτι τα πρωτα. It makes perfect sense, but has no backing. Observe, however, that ℵ had difficulty here, reading: θτι (sic) τα προβατα, *syr*S: επι τα προσωπα, and 59 (which is several times with us alone elsewhere) reads: οτι τα αρχαια, and 189: οτι παντα τα πρωτα. And even Oecumenius (Apoc. 146) mixes it up, writing something I cannot certainly read. It looks like το επρωτα for οτι τα πρωτα. The Latins who quote say prima, or priora, or pristina, the latter by gigas.

Again, as to this faintness in the original parent copy lying back of all, note:

xx. 4. —και εζησαν supported only by Vict. Prim. Aug., and immediately follows οὓς ἴλευσαν for καὶ ἐβασίλευσαν, as if something there were illegible in the exemplar.

Also at:

ii. 24. τοις εν τοις θυατηροις λοιποις is changed order. Consult ℵ.

And ii. 26. τα εργα μου αχρει τελους is a new order with sah boh aeth for: αχρι τελους τα εργα μου, the words αχρι τελους being dropped by *syr*S.

† The inscription, quite exceptionally, declares the work to have been that of the apostle John, as does the opening verse of ch. i.

Also at:

iv. 3. we write ομοια ορασει μιαγδινω. (Cf. 120). Probably also a faint spot in the original.

Again, this faintness may be responsible for our reading at xxi. 27 fin. βιβλιον for αρνιον, where ℵ reads ουρανου and arm υιου θεου.

And again xxii. 3 αναθεμα 143, where ℵ goes wrong with καταγμα.

Continuing, however, with omissions, but slightly supported, or new, observe:

i. 3/4. ο γαρ ιωαννης ταις επτα εκκλ. (—καιρος εγγυς)

16. —οξεια with only f. 46 and 149.

ii. 5. —ταχει with only ℵCAP 56 130 Oec. txt & com.(i.e. 146) 200, a notably strong conjunction for a very early tradition, plus gig syr copt lat.

13. —τα εργα σου και with ℵCAP f. 38 130 Oec.(146*txt*) and 200, another notable Greek conjunction, plus *syr*S copt aeth lat.

iv. 7. —και init. alone with 40-210 and 113 (two notable recensions) but also *syr*S sah and Prim. [Even Irenaeus has enim].

v. 6. —και οφθαλμους επτα with 1-208 44 [non 52-82] 61 121 130 182 215 218 (always rather a redundant expression).

xx. 11. —ο ante ουρανος with 21-73 39 98 113 copt (but this is a weak and partial combination).

xxi. 1. —η ante θαλασσα "and there was not any more sea," not "the sea," with 51-90 155 [non 146] 189 246 and copt syr arm?

xxi. 4. —ο ante θανατος with ℵ 18 22 23 f. 38 47 191 200 204 220 all particular MSS. (I mention the three cases following each other for what it is worth, and see below at xxi. 22/23 for care in this respect).

xxi. 12. —και επι τοις πυλωσιν αγγελους δωδεκα with AE* f. 62 65 67-120 100 241 arm.

18. —αυτης with 20 32 59 113 136 copt.

19. —κεκοσμημενοι with P 92 111 gig Prim. Tyc. arm.

xxii. 16. —ταυτα with Prim. only.

All this is anything but modern, so we cannot lightly put aside, although unsupported, omissions, as at:

i. 8. —λεγει ο κυριος with ps-Ambr. (Cf. Hipp.: "ουτως γαρ και ιωαννης ειπεν," —λεγει ο κυριος).

10. —εν πνευματι So 226.

iii. 10. —της ωρας του πειρασμου της (—της ωρας *syr*S boh).

iv. 8. —ο θεος So 226.

9. —και ευχαριστιαν

xx. 2. ο διαβολος (—και σατανας)

4. —και κριμα εδοθη αυτοις (Cf. 104).

xxi. 3. —εκ του ουρανου ut Apr. et Iren. gr ex Anastas. cit. Tisch. (om. Charles).

5. —ο καθημενος επι του θρονου †

A rather pretty distinction is drawn by an omission of the article as between xxi. 22 fin. and xxi. 23 fin. In the first verse our writer says (alone with 100 and 170): "And I saw no temple in her, for the Lord God omnipotent is her temple, and a lamb." In the next he remarks: "And the city had no need of the sun, nor of the moon, that they should give light to her, for the glory of God shines for her, and her light (is) the lamb."

† This is probably an omission due to the Coptic column, two clauses ending in ⲦⲎⲢⲞⲨ there, and therefore an error of Coptic homoioteleuton, of which there are two or three others due to the Greek.

A careful study of the foregoing will pave the way towards our further acquaintance with this recension. There is nothing particularly careless, or offensive about these omissions, nor do they in any way interfere with the flow of the narrative, and they include practically all of the rarer omissions, and may indeed be basic.

Now let us take a couple of changes of case:

At ii. 9 we read ιουδαιων instead of ιουδαιους, which is supported so far by no other cursive, but is read by ℵ and by C and is so understood by aeth from its parent version. Now attested by 200 and arm 3:

"and the blasphemy of those who say that they are of the Jews," instead of "those who call themselves Jews." It is a fine distinction, but a distinction all the same, and witnessed to by our oldest uncials. In a Version this can be lost, but is nevertheless distinctly found in the Aethiopic.

At xxi. 15 we read ειχεν μετρον καλαμου χρυσουν instead of καλαμον. This also has the support of ℵ[a] 31-106-182 171-174 and 214*. *Cf. syr*S καλαμον μετρου, and see ⲛ̄ϣⲓ sah. The fact that ℵ[a] corrects is rather significant.

And then, let us look at a change of number:

At ii. 22 we read μετανοησει for μετανοησωσιν. This singular for plural is only to be found in 56 (a most noteworthy MS.) and Prim. (Zahn against Sabatier). Cf. copt. It makes perfect sense. "Unless she repent."

And then this change of tense:

iv. 8. εχοντα pro ειχον with P 23 f. 38 50 56 and 111 177 201 226 (habentes Vict.),

to which add:

xxi. 3. εσκηνωσεν pro σκηνωσει alone with ℵ 111 167 203*txt*; but compare *syr*S gig and am.

Again perfect sense, but someone may have thought that it did not accord with εσονται and εσται following. The Latins are all recorded for habita*b*it. An easy change to habita*u*it would be possible, but the reading is not so far given for the Latin except for gigas and amiatinus. The reason, however, in 143 is obvious. The Coptic does not say "will tabernacle with," but "is being with," and the word is ⲉⲥϫⲏ. The forerunner of our scribe and of ℵ, while copying his bi-columnar Græco-Coptic, saw ⲉⲥϫⲏ in the Coptic column, and voluntarily or involuntarily wrote the Greek aorist ἐσκήνωσεν. Sight of the Coptic.

This sight of the Coptic is observable at xxi. 4 where 143 (alone) writes ουδε ter (pro ουτε), xxii. 19 ασμαραγδος, xxii. 13 —ο πρωτος και ο εσχατος, ii. 17 +αυτω (vult αυτο) post οιδεν.

A few changes of order have curious and notable support:

iii. 3. ηκουσας και ειληφας only *syr*S (and now 156).

xxi. 16. το πλατος αυτης και το υψος ισα εστιν, where +αυτης post πλατος sec. has support of 18 39 f. 178 *syr*S and copt aeth Hier., and the omission of αυτης after υψος is supported by f. 46 gig etc. Together it forms a unique reading, yet perfectly legitimate.

All this will prepare us better to consider the additions, if we take note of the character of the foregoing, which are perfectly natural and legitimate changes.

Of additions then observe:

i. 4. +ουσαις ante εν τη ασια with 36 and latt. arm copt.

After weighing the above we shall not be so startled to find at:

xxi. 17. ουρανου in full for ανθρωπου with 114-241 alone (hiat 193).

This is no late change, and may indeed be basic. The additional witness of such a MS. as 143 is most important.

The ordinary text says that he measured the wall of the new Jerusalem, 144 πηχῶν, "the measure of a man, that is of an angel." This seems strange, and the more likely reading "a heavenly measure, the measure of an angel," in contrast to the earthly number 666 at xiii. 18 fin. as we read there: "for it is human numeration, and his number is 666." Heavenly or earthly measure.

In early script οῡνου may have been misread ᾱνου, and perpetuated, instead of vice-versa. At any rate this witness of ours is no XIth or XIIth century fakir, as the previous lists have shown, and this reading is co-aeval with the regular reading ανθρωπου. That is all we are concerned to show. As a matter of fact our MS. here reads a hundred and forty four thousand πηχῶν, which is more of a heavenly measure than that of a man.

We can now proceed to the few remaining unique readings with the greater confidence of not attributing them to vicious or late handling:

i. 3. +ει post μακαριος Cf. aeth.
5. ὁ μαρτυς pro ὁ αρχων
9. επικαλουμενη pro καλουμενη (Lat. 'appellatur').

15. πλῆθουσ λαλοῦ pro υδατων πολλων (Coptic confusion?).
ii. 10. +μεγαλην post θλιψιν Cf. pressuram Tyc. (Rell.: tribulationem).
13. ος αν εκτανθη pro ος απεκτανθη Note the use of an uncompounded verb.

16. μετα σου pro μετ αυτων *cum Prim. et sah*3/4.
22. αυτην pro μετ αυτης A rather notable reading: και τους μοιχευοντας αυτην for μετ' αυτης. The latter and usual reading would be a likely change from the possible αυτην of the original draft.
ii. 23. την καρδιαν pro τα εργα
iv. 8. αλλα παντοτε pro ημερας και νυκτος No trace of this in others except in *Tertullian*orat. "non cesset"...
v. 5. +απεκριθη post και prim. [sed λεγει μοι, non λεγων μοι]. Cp. the Coptic and Hier. which say "He came to me."
9. γλῶττης pro γλωσσης (Thus throughout the Meteora MS.).
xx. 4. επ αυτοις pro επ αυτους
10. +εκει post βασανισθησονται *Ita Cass*psa. et Auct. pr. +illic.
xxi. 12. +τα ονοματα post ισραηλ (pleno). *Cf. Ambr*de virg. (Israel and Jerusalem are written in full throughout).

xxi. 18. ἔνδωσις pro ενδομησις

19. ασμαραγδος (copt. ⲞⲨⲤⲘⲀⲢⲀⲔⲆⲞⲤ) cf. syr.

[In this connection observe Coptic interchange of κ for ⲅ, which throws light on our scribe's unique περκαμον for περγαμον in i. 11 and περκαμω in ii. 12].

xxii. 1. κρυσταλλος (for -ον) Not Greek, but many boh MSS. and sah.

3. ἀνάθεμα pro καταναθεμα

7 init. +λεγει κυριος post ταχυ

8. ὁ ακουων και βλεπων ταυτα +μαρτυρω

9. τούτους pro του βιβλιου τουτου (*cf. syr*S).

14. +ου μη ante εισελθωσιν

17. +της ante ζωης

19. τον λογον pro απο των λογων New thus, but not an unlikely reading. Prim. omits altogether. Another faint place possibly.

20. +ο θεος post λεγει

21. ημων pro υμων (So 141 (error), and arab).

Crux of the problem.

We can now approach the crux of the problem, which we have reserved to the last, for the opening verse of chapter one is quite unique and different from the common texts, including all our uncials and versions.

The MS. has:

Αποκαλυψις ιῡ χῡ της γεναμενης εις εμε ιωαννην τον αποστολον (eliminating completely ην εδωκεν αυτω ο θεος τοις δουλοις αυτου α δει γενεσθαι εν ταχει και εσημανεν αποστειλας δια του αγγελου αυτου τω δουλω αυτου ιωαννη), and continues verse 2: του κηρυξαι (substitute for ος εμαρτυρησε) τον λογον του θεου και την μαρτυριαν ιῡ χῡ with the ordinary text.

[Note that Methodius' third century quotation omits ο θεος and α δει γενεσθαι].

Proof of age of our MS.

But for the previous studied exhibition of the very old text which underlies 143, we might pass this over as some mediæval play of change for change sake. But it cannot be. Are we in presence of a text underlying all? Of a first or early draft?

It has often been remarked, and Swete calls attention to it, that the closing chapter (xxii. 6, 14, 16) reproduces the wording of the opening verses of chapter one. But i. 1, 2 might have been 'accommodated' later to chapter twenty-two.

At any rate, we cannot dismiss this opening of 143 as beneath our notice, given the extremely ancient atmosphere which pervades the whole document. We have established:

1st. That 143 reproduces two readings so far absolutely particular to ℵ (iv. 4, xxi. 14).
2nd. It reproduces a form only used by A (xxii. 2) and another by CA (ii. 1).
3rd. It agrees in a peculiar case with ℵC only.
4th. It has unique agreement with *syr*S.
5th. It has constant and deep sympathy with the text of Prim. (e.g. alone at ii. 16).
6th. It is well acquainted with some of the base of gig.
7th. It has large sympathy with some of our most important cursives as 56, 113, 114, 36, 40, 18, 95, 130, 146, 200.
8th. It agrees alone with the small group ℵCAP 56 Oec., ℵCAP f. 38 syr gig Oec. Prim. etc., a very formidable conjunction for early forms.
9th. It agrees alone with Hippol. (xxi. 8) as well as with Prim. (ii. 16).
10th. It has some special agreement with sah where extant together.

I do not emphasize the special agreement with boh, because I am in entire disagreement with Guidi and Burkitt as to the date of the Bohairic version. But the conjunction of third and fourth century readings in our MS., coupled with the certainty that it was copied from a bilingual Græco-Coptic MS., does not help their case at all for a late date of the Bohairic version.

We are therefore compelled to ask the question as to whether in the dim past, a standardized version of the opening verse of the book was substituted for the original, and whether that original may be represented in whole or in part by our version, which, immediately after this opening, runs with the ordinary fourth-century traditions.

Ancient readings.

We are forced to ask this question most seriously, because throughout our eight chapters available for comparison (and how much more would there be if all were extant in the MS. 143) a steady stream of the most ancient readings is present, together with unfailing indications of the faint spots in an original, which stands at the source not only of א but of other important documents such as *syr*S. In fact, it begins to appear as if we were upon the foot-prints of the precious papyrus document of the Apocalypse which was extant for the whole world at one time in but one exemplar, far back of א.

We have touched on these 'faint spots' already as being the source of trouble and perplexity to the forerunner of א.

The famous passage at xxii. 14 is another case in point. The ordinary text runs: μακαριοι οι ποιουντες τας εντολας αυτου, whereas these important documents: אA 38-178-203-240 127-215, 143, 7-45-104, 146-155(txtt & comm.) sah aeth Fulg. Oec. Ath. Haymo. ps-Ambr. read: μακαριοι οι πλυνοντες (πλυναντες 7-45-104-151 143, πλυνυντες 215) τας στολας αυτων, and that valuable check MS. for ancient traditions, 56-108, conflates the two readings. But all this is against the rest and Tert. Cypr. Tyc. syr arm etc.

The source of this variation is perhaps due to the difficulty of reading the original, but of course may have been imported from chapter vii. 14. A most vicious habit of attempted accommodation in different parts of the narrative obtained from the earliest times.

We will close by touching on another point, not yet referred to, which enables us to go to very high antiquity for light on the subject.

As to xxii. 11.

Probably on the same page of the old archetype occurred xxii. 11. In this verse, with its present fourfold clause:

1. ὁ αδικων αδικησατω ετι
2. ὁ ρυπων ρυπωσατω ετι
3. ὁ δικαιος δικαιωθητω ετι (or: ὁ δικαιος δικαιοσυνην ποιησατω ετι)
4. ὁ ἁγιος ἁγιασθητω ετι.

There are several variations as to the form of No. 2 (א reading (with 18 32 130 and 178* ?) ὁ ρυπαρος ρυπανθητω ετι), while others have ὁ ρυπαρος ρυπαρευθητω ετι etc., but the fourfold clause is made into a threefold one by A f. 34 65 67 97 121 122 164-165-166 208 214 who omit No. 2 entirely. THEY ARE NOW JOINED BY 143.

In order to check this, we go as far back as we can into the records of antiquity, and we find the passage extant and quoted in the letter of the Churches of Vienne and Lyons, concerning the martyrdom of Pothinus and others, in the beginning of the last quarter of the second century.

There it takes the form of

"ἵνα ἡ γραφὴ πληρωθῇ: ὁ ἄνομος ἀνομησάτω ἔτι, καὶ ὁ δίκαιος δικαιωθήτω ἔτι," and nothing is said of a 'filthy' or 'sordid' one, ῥυπῶν or ῥυπαρός, but of a 'lawless' one.

I take it that in this passage also the basic document was faint, and ὁ ἄνομος ἀνομησάτω ἔτι may be the true reading, and the full clauses be:

1. ὁ ἀδικῶν ἀδικησάτω ἔτι
2. ὁ ἄνομος ἀνομησάτω ἔτι
3. ὁ δίκαιος δικαιωθήτω ἔτι
4. ὁ ἅγιος ἁγιασθήτω ἔτι.

At any rate, 143, with A and others, had difficulty, and cut out the second clause altogether.

As a matter of fact, our textus receptus ought to read only two clauses (as Vienne and Lyons), because Apoc. 1, upon which it was founded, reads only:

1. ὁ ἀδικων ἀδικησάτω ἔτι
2. καὶ ὁ ἅγιος ἁγιασθήτω ἔτι,

Erasmus being responsible for ὁ ῥυπῶν ῥυπωσάτω ἔτι, but while the sister MS. 208 omits και ο ρυπων ρυπωσατω ετι it has the third and fourth clauses, making it threefold.

A few other cursives (59 104 120 151 153 210) make this a threefold clause, by omitting καὶ ὁ δίκαιος δικαιωθήτω ἔτι in the third place, and two of them (104 and 153) adjust the matter by previously changing ἀδικησάτω to δικησάτω, thus:

ὁ ἀδικῶν δικησάτω ἔτι καὶ ὁ ῥυπαρὸς ῥυπαρευθήτω ἔτι
καὶ ὁ ἅγιος ἁγιασθήτω ἔτι, while some (f. 21 92 147 arab) omit καὶ ὁ ἁγιασθήτω ἔτι, and 80-138 omit the third and fourth clauses.

* * * * *

Whence did the old monk Leontius draw this long excerpt, including the special inscription? † It would be interesting to find another copy. Meanwhile, we must pass on.

This MS. has been used by Charles (Crit. and Exeg. Com. on the Rev. of St. John, 1920), who is the first one to give some of its readings, but my readers will see from the foregoing that nobody has so far realized its full importance in these studies.

Its grouping with such MSS. as 111 113 130 146 f. 178 200 is too striking, and must not be overlooked. See volume II.

† αποκαλυψις του αγιου ιωαννου του αποστολου και ευαγγελιστου του θεολογου· ην ιδεν εν πατμω τη νησω· κε̄ ευλ^γο/.

GROUP 119-123-144-148-158 (+149-186).

Apoc. 144 = Madrid, O. 19. 7. Now Natl. Lib. No. 4750, pp. 301/385 (in a communication from the Librarian). [=Greg. 144, new 2051. Sod. Aν[68]]. Photographed in 1912. Collated in 1921. [XVI cum com̄.]. Apoc. 144.

And here we come across another member of the interesting group 119-123, which is soon to be joined by two others, viz. 148 and 158, and we have a fivefold group 119-123-144-148-158, which enables us now to check all internal error.

This group is a special branch of the great 1 family, but carries considerable interest when this small sub-group perpetuates readings found otherwise only in ℵ or 56 or 130 or in these combined.

As a matter of fact 119 and this MS. 144 are written by the same scribe, a man who flourished late along, but who, while fairly painstaking, yet copies nearly all the parent errors in both his editions. † The two documents would appear to have been written a good many years apart, if we can judge from the handwriting. And this agrees with internal evidence, for 144 is closer to 123 than to 119-148-158.

There are but few cases of iota subscript, and not to ᾅδῃς, showing that both 119 and 144 were copied from a much older MS., either lost now, or so far not unearthed.

The scribe is not ignorant, for he gives us a new and a very good variant at xiv. 13, writing apparently τρόπων for κόπων (although it may be meant for τόπων) against all the family, and against his own previous MS. 119.

Again, at iii. 7 we have the positions reversed, 119 having ᾅδου in the text, and δᾱδ in the margin, while 144 has Δᾱδ in the text, and ᾅδου in the margin. This substitution of ᾅδου for δᾱδ, adopted by a few MSS. (7 16 33 45 69 104 121) is found referred to in Andreas' commentary as a reading found in ancient MSS.

Gregory says of 144: "Apoc. cum comm. Andr. (?)," but there is no need for the query. It has the text interspersed between the full commentary of Andreas, with the long introduction and conclusion in full.

Among other differences between 119 and 144, note that at iv. 4 where περιβεβλημενους is omitted by 119*txt*, our 144 adds και before the word (alone with aeth), and although in iv. 10 and iv. 11 having two remarkable readings alone with 119, yet in verse 11 Apoc. 144 reads κυριε +ο θεος ημων ο αγιος with 123 and 158, while 119 reads κυριος ο θεος ημων.

And so, although with 119 exactly at vi. 6 with δυναριου bis, and vi. 12 ασκος, and vii. 3 σφραγισωμε sic, yet at vi. 11 we read ινα πληρωσουσι for εως ου πληρωσονται of 119.

The inscription agrees exactly with that of 119.

There is no subscription at the end of the commentary, not even τελος with others, but a later hand has written τέλος κ ῶ θῷ δο ͞ ͞   εἰς οὔ αἰώνας.

In the last verse (xxii. 21) we omit ημων with 123 158, but against 119.

The following characteristic readings identify the exemplar of 119-144:

i. 1. και εσημανε ο δια του αγγελου αυτου αποστειλας
5. Post γης in textu +αυτος γαρ εστιν ο μαρτυρησας επι ποντιου πιλατου ο πιστος εν πασι τοις λογοις αυτου· ο εκ νεκρων πρωτοτοκος ως ζωη και αναστασις

GROUP 62-63-136-145-147-184.

Apoc. 145 = Florence, Laur. VII. 29. [= Greg. 145, new 2052. Sod. Αν[64]]. [XVI cum com̄.]. Apoc. 145.
Collated from the original in 1911. On good paper, glazed, but not highly. It ends abruptly in the middle of vii. 5. The heading was never completed. Another hand has added the first line of Andreas' introduction πολλακις κ.τ.λ., p. 194 verso (pages not numbered). The inscription, in red, simply uses the first verse as such, as far as ταχει.

The MS. is of the 1 family, closest to 62/3.

A curious ligature for εις is used, looking like ειχ (four times: i. 17, 18, iv. 9, 10).

Five verses, v. 1-5, are omitted.

There is one unique reading of importance, viz. at v. 8 fin. δικαιων for αγιων (silet com.). No other Greek MS. so far reads thus, nor the Versions.

A new hand begins at vi. 7.

There is quite a little sympathy with 113.

At iii. 12 we omit μου tert. with only 14-92 and *syr*S.

At ii. 23 we have the order καρδιας και νεφρους.

At ii. 9 we perpetuate the 62/3 reading of πενιαν for πτωχειαν in the text, but the com. has θλιψιν και πτωχιαν.

At i. 5 we omit και λουσαντι ημας with 141 alone.

[Scrivener-Miller's Apoc. 146 (Ev. ?) = Athens, Nat. theol. 12. = Greg. 110 (Ev. 757. Ac. 260. P. 309). 27 × 21. [XII-XIII]. Miller gives the wrong reference for Evan., referring to 757 where he numbers a Paris codex. His Athens numbers begin at 775, but I don't find the renvoi to Apoc. 146].

OECUMENIAN GROUP 146-155.

Our Apoc. 146 now becomes the same as Gregory's old number 146 (new 2053, Sod. O[α31]), and will represent the Messina MS. University No. 99 (formerly of the Monastery of San Salvatore 99). The reason for bringing it forward instead of dealing with it under our No. 113, as originally intended, is that (a) I had not known whether it was available after the earthquake and so have progressed beyond this number before handling it, and (b) that it will thus come somewhat closer in the apparatus to Nos. 155 and 155[A], which are the only other known sister MSS. I have to thank the librarian of the Messina Univ. Library for making it possible for me to use this MS. at Rome in the Victor Emmanuel Public Library.

Apoc. 146. This Messina MS. is described by Gregory in his Prolegomena, vol. III., 1890, as "sæc. XIII. 27 × 21. 2, membr. foll. 138, coll. 2, bl. 24 : Apoc. cum comm. (Oec. txt. integro ?). [Scr. 113]. Vidi 3 Apr. 1886." I make the measurement about 25½ × 20½ and the leaves 139. There are 138 numbered leaves, but the numeration skips a folio between 5 and 6. But Gregory's Date. date is quite wrong. I do not consider it later than 1100.

This MS. is the only specimen of its kind in the world, and does contain the whole of Oecumenius commentary. To Fr. Diekamp is due the honour and credit of pointing this out in the Berliner Sitzungsbericht for Oct. 1901 (Nos. XLII. XLIII., p. 1046 seq.), "Mittheilungen über den neuaufgefunden Commentar des Oekumenius zur Apocalypse, von Privatdocent Dr. Fr. Diekamp." No. 155 is only an ignorant copy of part of the text.

Unfortunately Dr. Diekamp has not yet published its text, although more than ten years have gone by, but he writes me (March 1912) that he hopes to do so shortly. I shall therefore content myself with giving the readings. (Still unpublished 1928).

As Oecumenius com. MSS. are rare I will explain why they passed out of use. His method of arrangement, although a splendid 'control' on his textual situation, is complicated, and scribes and students found it difficult to separate text from commentary. In the MS. under review an attempt is occasionally made to mark the text, but it is often faulty in execution, and I have had to read every word of commentary to get the matter tolerably exact. Thus after 1300 years we find ourselves in possession of one copy of this commentary interwoven with the text. It is a well-written bi-columnar MS. of the early XII[th] century, no doubt executed in Messina from a much older exemplar.

The other two MSS. in existence (Vat. gr. 1426 [our 155] and Turin B. I. 15 [our 155[A]]) derive from the parent in all probability or from another copy, and are abbreviated in the sense that they exclude chs. ii-xiv. inclusive. Otherwise they represent in full this same stock for ch. i. and for xv-xxii. as to both text and commentary.

The old guard-leaves of the Messina MS. are missing, and there is nothing to indicate any provenance. The scribe fortunately is accurate, and the errors in the MS. are due mostly to the old exemplar—of this I have no doubt.

The first chapter is rather muddled, but after ch. ii. matters proceed more smoothly, the text being given first in quite considerable sections and then a bit of general commentary, followed by a repetition of clause after clause, so that we have a double text for a very large fraction of the whole (but few verses not being repeated in whole or in part) and can control the text proper, which thus proves to have been absolutely the text used by Oecumenius when compiling the commentary, and unlike those of Andreas and Arethas in the com. MSS. which we possess of uncertain descent. After each repetition of the text Oecumenius comments again briefly on the section under review. We thus have a text and com. of approximately A.D. 600 hitherto lost to us.† Where I have simply quoted '146' without remark it is to be usually understood that the text so reads, and that the com. is silent, i.e. that it does not specifically repeat the word or phrase. When the com. agrees I print '146*txt et com.*' When they disagree I print '146*txt non com.*' or '146*txt, sed com....*' Lost commentary of Oecumenius recovered.

We have an excellent check on some strange readings, most of which occur in the text proper and not always in the commentary. Thus at:

ii. 7 while the text says ακουοντι, the com. has νικωντι

ii. 10 while the text says πειρασμον, the com. has θλιψιν, but at ii. 5 both text and com. have +εν δικαιοσυνη (post ποιησον), and at ii. 6 both text and com. have +αγαθον (post εχεις), while at ii. 7 text says εν παραδεισω (—τω) του θεου μου which would be new, but the com. says εν τω παραδεισω του θεου μου, which agrees with others.

I refer to an article on this MS. which I wrote for the American Journal of Philology (vol. XXXIV. 3, No. 135, July/Sep. 1913), where some of the interesting matters involved are discussed, e.g. as to λιθον in xv. 6, and as to the word from the cross (Luke xxiii. 34) here quoted, and as to εδιωκε in xii. 13 now explaining the εδωκεν of ℵ, for ℵ and 146 are very close, especially in the second half of the book, whereas 146 seems to favour C and A more particularly in the earlier chapters.

As to ℵ note, among other sympathy, these particular places:

vi. 1. λεγοντων ℵ and 146, but 146 ηκουσαμεν pro ηκουσα ενος (rescript. ℵ*).

viii. 13. —εν ℵ and 146 only.

ix. 6. φυγη pro φευξεται ℵ and 146 only.

xiv. 19. την μεγαλην ℵ 146 *syr*S and textus receptus and a few cursives.

xvii. 12. ἕξουσιν pro εξουσιαν ℵ and 146*txt & com.* only with 155*txt* [non com.] and 222.

xix. 17. αλλον pro ενα ℵ 146 *sah boh syr*S (and 36 113) and 155 159 arm pl. and ps-Ambr.

xxi. 13. —απο δυσμων πυλωνες τρεις ℵ* and 146 only with 155 and 156.

17. εκατον μδ̄ thus only ℵ and only 146 exactly [non 155] (ⲛ̄ⲣⲙⲇ boh).

20. αμεθυστινος thus only ℵ and only 146 exactly [non 155 = αμεθυντινωσ].

xxii. 2. —των ante εθνων ℵ and 146 only and 155 both texts [non com̄.].

As regards the adherence of 155, the sister MS., where extant (that is, everywhere except in chs. ii–xiv. incl., which 155 omits), it will be found dealt with in the grouped collations, and agrees above except where marked 'contra.'

Apoc. 146 is found entering into almost all the good combinations, while having sometimes a strain, the source of which is not easy to determine. Its presence or absence is to be very specially noticed, and in a good many cases it will serve as a balancing factor.

There are so many matters to discuss, that they must be viewed as a whole in their general bearing as indicated throughout the collected and grouped readings in the general collation, or we may over-emphasize some points at the expense or to the detriment of others.

Pending my complete edition of the MS. and commentary, I must content myself with calling attention to these unique readings:—

In xxii. 7 we are surprised to read:

Ιδου ερχομεθα ταχυ both in txt. and commentary (instead of ιδου ερχομαι ταχυ) applying the coming both to the Lord of the Holy Prophets and to the Prophets themselves. This is followed by μακαριοι οι τηρουντες (instead of μακαριος ο τηρων), and the only support is by arm 1. (and by our daughter MS. 155).

Incidentally, I may say, that there is occasional, but not constant, agreement with arm, and arm, as represented by some of its MSS., seems to trace to an early age, although heavily reworked at different times, so much so in fact that at times they represent merely paraphrases of the original. [Notice xix. 7 init. +και (quite uncalled for) by 146 and arm 4. alone of all authorities. Again xxii. 9 +και ante των προφ. alone with 184 and arm 1].

In xxii. 17 we are surprised again to find an unique omission of και το πνευμα, followed quite naturally by λεγουσα instead of λεγουσιν. Now while 113 retains και το πνευμα και ἡ νυμφη, it also writes λεγουσα. This would not be noteworthy but for the fact that 113 is in close sympathy in a score of other places, and we have previously indicated that 113 is no ordinary text. 155 agrees to the omission with 146 in the text, but both have it and emphasize it in the com.

Harking back to the beginning of the book, here are the other singular readings. They are not so very numerous, but are of striking interest:

UNIQUE VARIANTS.

i. 6. προφητας (pro πατρι) Thus: και εποιησεν ημιν βασιλειαν, ιερεις τω θεω και προφητας αυτου. (So also 155).
(The commentary has: και εποιησεν ημιν βασιλειαν και τις η εν τω γενεσθαι ημας φησιν ιερεις τω θεω· και προφητας αυτου ωφελεια, and again: το δε ιερεις ημας θεου και προφητας γενεσθαι.. omitting πατρι).

8 fin. +και κυριος της κτισεως So 155.

9. εν ταις θλιψεσιν (com.: διο εαυτον ωσπερ των θλιψεων, and again: υπερ του λογου προξενουσι θλιψεις). This plural is only found in the bohairic and arm 4, and in the sister MS. 155.

11. +ιωαννη ante ο βλεπεις and 155.

14. —λευκαι txt & com. (for com. says: η δε κεφαλη αυτου φησιν και αι τριχες ως εριον λευκον και ωσει χιων) is confirmed by h arm aeth Tyc 2. and 155 and only 113 and 164-166 Greek.

ii. 5. +εν δικαιοσυνη post ποιησον txt & com.

6. +αγαθον post εχεις So only lux harl lips. Prim. and +καλον Epiph.

7. ακουοντι pro νικωντι (νικουντι A). This must be an error, as the com. has νικωντι.

10. δι' ἃ (pro ἃ) txt & com.

ibid. πειρασμον (pro θλιψιν) txt [non com.].

iii. 3. ου μη γνως ποιαν ωραν ηξω προς σε (pro επι σε) So latin, aeth, arm a, and only the important Greek MS. 56. We omit the first επι σε, and the com. has: εαν ουν μη γρηγορησης φησιν και ως ο εξυπνου της ραθυμιας διαναστης ηξω σοι φησιν κολαστης οτε οὐ προσδοκας.

8. —και prim. (txt & com.) So only 226 and sah boh. The rest mostly have ην pro και.

ibid. fin. τον νομον μου (pro το ονομα μου) So txt, but com. has το ονομα μου. (Note arm 4 has: τον λογον και το ονομα μου).

9. και pro ινα txt. The commentary is otherwise. (Note in this verse omission of ειναι with only 109*gr et arm*).

16. An error of ἐν μέσω (for εμεσαι εκ). *Marg r[f] ἐμαίcαι and com. correctly: μελλω σε φησιν ἐμαίσε (sic) εκ του στοματος μου.

17. ο ταπεινος (pro ο ταλαιπωρος) So only 113. This does not come from Coptic, as both boh and sah transliterate and have ⲧⲁⲗⲉⲡⲱⲣⲟⲥ, but some Latins: 'miser et miserabilis.'

ibid. The order is: και τυφλος και γυμνος και πτωχος, while the com. has: "αγνοεις οτι πτωχος ει και γυμνος (—και τυφλος, =36 *syr*S) τα π̅ν̅ι̅κ̅α̅ και μενοντα."

18. +καινα (ante λευκα) And so the com.: τουτο γαρ εστι τα καινα και λευκα ιματια. (Splendida pro alba boh). καινα και λευκα 203 com. Andr. vult.

iv. 1. και [μετα ταυτα ειδον] No Greek, except f. 178 and 200, but aeth arm plur. boh[duo] add copula, and also remaining boh +ⲁⲉ [non sah].

3. ομοιος ορασει σμαραγδιω sic (—λιθω ιασπιδι και σαρδινω και ιρις κυκλοθεν του θρονου ομοιος) So the text, but the com. shows knowledge of the clause omitted, but confirms σμαραγδιω at the end.

5. εκπεμπονται pro εκπορευονται txt. (Com.: "το δε εκπορευεσθαι...")

8. και αναπαυσιν ουκ εχοντες (pro..εχουσιν) txt, but com. has εχουσιν.
[After this verse follows an interesting bit of commentary about the four living creatures representing πυρὸς· γῆς· ἀέρος· ὕδατος].

v. 4. βλέψαι pro βλεπειν txt (aliter expr. com.) Compare στρεψαι for στρεφειν by 200 at xi. 6.

12. New order: και σοφιαν και πλουτον txt (non expr. com.).

13. τω καθημενω του θρονου (—επι) txt (aliter com.). (—επι του θρονου 200).

14. και τα τεσσαρα ζωα λεγουσιν (pro ..ελεγον) So sah$^3/_4$ and boh. (Dicebant latt).

vi. 1. και οτε (sic) φησιν ειδον οτι (sic) ηνοιξε txt (aliter expr. com.).

ibid. και ηκουσαμεν (pro ηκουσα ενος) εκ των τεσσαρων ζωων λεγοντων (pro λεγοντος). The latter is agreed to by ℵ, and ηκουσα is written over, although ΝΟC of ΕΝΟC stands plainly on the next line.

8. —αποκτειναι com. [Habet txt].

10. ο δεσποτης και αγιος και αληθινος txt (aliter com.). I find no other authority for this και except 233, rather a weak witness.

vii. 4 fin. As text +και λεγει λοιπον απο εκαστης φυλης, δωδεκα χιλιαδας τους σφραγισθεντας, omitting the whole of 5/8 and substituting some lengthy remarks, beginning: εντευθεν σαφως τα περισαντα ιουδαιους εν τωι προς ρωμαιους πολεμῳ δεικνυται τωι ευαγγελιστηι, α προφασει γεγονεν αυτοις του σταυρου.

10/11. Pro και τω αρνιω· και παντες οι αγγελοι habet txt: και των πρεσβυτερων οι αγιοι. The com., however, has και τω αρνιω, and soon after οι θειοι αγγελοι. Observe that 119* omits και τω αρνιω, that 28 adds αγιοι, and ℵ at the end of ver. 10 adds εις τους αιωνας των αιωνων αμην, so that there was some confusion here in the original.

11/12. "προσεκυνησαν τω θεω ημων εις τους αιωνας των αιωνων αμην," omitting λεγοντες αμην η ευλογια και η δοξα και η σοφια και η ευχαριστια και η τιμη και η δυναμις και η ισχυς τω θεω altogether. (The com. has very briefly: ἧς γενομενης ευχαριστιας τα εν ουνω· λειτουργικα ταγματα).

viii. 4. +εν ante ταις προσευχαις both txt & com., but apparently without any other support except *syr*S. (Cum precibus aeth sah boh, De orationibus gig vg Ambr$^1/_2$ Tyc., sed orationum Prim. Ambr$^1/_2$).

5. ελαβεν pro ειληφεν txt [non com.]

12. ινα σκοτισθη το τριτον των αστερων (pro ..αυτων). [—αυτων sah]. Here, after quoting from 2 Peter in the com., Oec. quotes from S. Matthew (referring to the τιτλω εκατοστωι εννατω), continuing immediately thus: ταυτα και νυν διδασκομεθα δια της αποκαλυψεως εσεσθαι εν τη του παροντος αιωνος συντελεια· τι δε βουλεται το μη παντα τα εν τη γη· και τη θαλασση και τοις ποταμοις...

13. +αλλων ante αγγελων txt (silet com.) *+τουτων syr*Σ, +των λοιπων post αγγ. 59.

ix. 11. απ' αυτων pro εφ αυτων txt.

ibid. βανδών sic (pro αβαδδων) txt. (Com.: ἑβραϊστὶ μὲν βάδδον).

12 fin. μετα ταυτα is omitted and joined to the commentary, thus:

ουαι η μια α

19. και εν ταις ουραις αυτων PRO αι γαρ ουραι αυτων. (—αι γαρ ουραι 108).

x. 7. After omitting της φωνης (with 59 and *syr*S arm 2. Tyc 1. 2.) the text proper ceases in the middle of the verse, thus: ὅτἂν μέλλη σαλπίζειν· κατὰσχῆμα ἐλλείψεωσ εἴρηται· (rushing into commentary). It continues: φῆ γὰρ ὅτἂν μέλλη σαλπίζειν ὁ ἕβδομοσ ἄγγελος πᾶσα πληρωθήσεται κ.τ.λ. for nine lines. Then comes suddenly the mutilated text of the rest of verse 7:

οὗ γενομένου τέλοc λήψεται φῆ τὸ μυστήριον τῶι θῶι ὡc εὐηγγέλισεν τοὺσ ἑαυτοῦ δούλουσ τοῦσ προφήτασ as if it were commentary, but this is meant for text, for the com. follows. Read therefore:

xi. 3. δισχιλιας pro χιλιας txt.

8. +θησει post πλατειας (txt). Cf. ponet Prim. The com. is otherwise, and as follows: "ανθρωπος γαρ εσται, οὗ εστιν η παρουσια κατ' ενεργειαν του σατανα καθως ἐναγχος ειρηται· τουτο ουν φησιν το θηριον αποκτενει τους δυο μαρτυρας· και τα πτωματα αυτων, αταφα ριψει εν ταις πλατειαις της ιλημ," and further on: "οπου και ο κυριος φησιν αυτων τουτεστι των δυο μαρτυρων εσταυρωθη."

This αταφα is found as an addition after μεγαλης by all the MSS. of fam 21, and +ριψει in the same place is found in our No. 18 and 189, while 59 adds πεσονται, and f. 62-63 add εσονται. On the other hand, before επι ℵ° adds εσται, 113 adds κοιτασθησονται (=the 'jacebunt' of gigas), and the same group which added αταφα, add εασει before επι. See my article on this passage in the John Ryland's Bulletin.

11. πνευματα pro πνευμα txt (no com.)

See beyond as to 155, which of course confirms most of the text of 146, but is not altogether a reliable guide.

In 203 (at Salonika) and 240 (at Athos) we have now found two other Oec. commentaries. Both MSS. have the double com. of Andreas and Oec., which forms a beautiful check on the text of the com. in 146. But the actual text of the Apoc. in these other two MSS. is quite different, and has nothing to do with the Oecumenian text.

P.S.—While these sheets are passing through the press we have been able to issue a complete edition of Oecumenius' text and commentary based on the MSS. 146-203-240, as it seemed useless to wait any longer for an edition from German sources. Published by the University of Michigan, Ann Arbor.

GROUP 62-63-72-136-147-162/3-184. Family 1.

Apoc. 147. Apoc. 147 = Modena, Estensis W. 4. 21 olim III. E. 1 = [Greg. 147, new 2054. Sod. $A\nu^{500}$]. [xv/xvi] cum com̄.

Contains, besides the Apoc. (p. 122), Anastasii Sin. quaest. on f°. 70, Com. in Cant. Cantic. f°. 73, and various other pieces.

We begin with:

κειμενον:

It is not an attractive handwriting, but the document is very well copied, and absolutely reproduces the 62/63 type of family one, and only has a dozen or so of errors peculiar to the scribe.

See, however, a curious place at xiii. 18 "ἡ δε σοφια εστιν" just after traces of a very old text thereabouts.

Our MS. 147 is a very close relative to the Venice codices 162-163 besides 62-63.

Note 147 at xviii. 4 writes εξελθετε · εξελθετε [εξ αυτης ο λαος μου]. This express dittography is not, however, countenanced by 62-63 nor by 162-163, but is by 136, which appears to be the closest sister of all. See vi. 9, 12, ix. 6, x. 2, xiii. 18, xvi. 12, xviii. 4, 12, xix. 6, 10, xxi. 8, xxii. 4.

Judging from xiii. 3 εθαυμαστη 62, 136, 141 and 147 only, we might have assumed that they were derived from each other (apart from 63, 72), but in the same chapter at xiii. 6 we write κατοικουντας with the 25 family against οικουντας of 36 62/63 70 72, but countenanced by 136.

As the 25 family sometimes joins this group (see ii. 5, v. 3, xxii. 19) we may think both 62 and 147 derive from a common original, which is lost.

147 is extremely true to type, as will be found from the collation.

It seems unnecessary to say more. Besides adding 162-163, there are still other members of this big family to add to the group, viz. 152-159-179-184-187-204, swelling the Erasmian codices now to some twenty-five manuscripts, besides the affiliated fam 29 and fam 119.

But our sub-group here is plainly 62-63-72-136-147-162-163-184. We have not entered 162-163 fully, but have given indications from time to time where they go apart or definitely agree.

136-147-184 is exactly one type.

GROUP 119-123-144-148-158.

Apoc. 148 = Modena, Estensis V. 8. 14 (olim III. F. 12) =[Greg. 148, new 2055. Sod. Apoc. 148.
$A\nu^{53}$]. [xv] cum com̄.

Contains Dionys. Areop. De caelesti hierarchia ad Timotheum etc.
Basil. Magni. Antirrhetici contra Eunomium I-V. etc.
Varia de paschate, chronologica etc. (f°. 308).
Andr. Caes. Apoc. cum com. (f°. 319).
On f°. 321 inscription with 37 (62) 63 119-144 Compl.

The MS. very readily falls into the family of 119-123-144, and so, with 158 to follow, it becomes fivefold:

Paris	Paris	Madrid	Modena	Rome
119-	123-	144-	148-	158,

which is dealt with quite fully elsewhere.

We will note here a very few aberrations, as at:

i. 20. εν τη δεξια with A 81 only (again in combination with the family at v. 13).
xx. 15. εμβληθη alone.

And occasional alternative readings, without cancellation:

i. 5. λύσαντι sic txt.
iii. 2. γένοῦ sic. (ι' above)
iv. 8. γεμοντα sic. (ισιν above) xvii. 4. και των ακαθαρτων της πορνειας αυτης (α above των, α above ακαθαρτων) xviii. 9. ἐπαῦτῆ standing for επ αυτης or επ αυτην.

Where other MSS. join this group in their exceptional readings, the most sympathy is shown by 38, as at iv. 3 λιθων pro λιθω, ix. 11 +ρησει, ix. 17 εξεπορευετο, xi. 10 χαρησονται, xxi. 19 χαλκεδων both txt. & com. with 38 alone against fam 119, occasionally with fam 46, or fam 62, and with 18, 111 and f. 114, and with 56 in the matter of the genitive after ηκουσα, and notably at xviii. 23 και pro οτι sec. 56 fam 119 and ps-Ambr. com. Apoc. only, and with Hippolytus, and a good deal with *syr*S.

148 is much the nearest to 123 of the group.

There are vellum guard-leaves at beginning and end with IX[th] century double-column writing upon them. The one at the end apparently containing an extract from Euthymius.

After the Epilogue we find this:

τοῦ μεγάλου αὐγουστίνου ἐκ τοῦ προς πέτρον · ὄγδοος κανὼν πίστεως ,

Then a blank leaf, and then a page and a half by another hand of matter not worth copying.

† It seems a settled ecclesiastical belief that Jesus breathed upon the apostles, but in John xx. 22 there is no 'upon them' (except in very few authorities), and the Greek merely says 'He breathed hard and said to them.'

GROUP 149-186.

[Apoc. 149 (Ev. 792) = Athens, Nat. 67^{m}. = Greg. 111 (Ev. 792). [XIII].
Scr.-Miller under Ev. 792 gives the wrong Apoc. reference to 111, confusing Gregory's number with his own 149.
This Scr. 149 now becomes our Apoc. 113. Real Athens No. is now 107].

Our 149 now becomes in our list the MS. at Athens in the hands of Γεωργ. Χατζιδακης No. 3, formerly listed by Gregory as 'Dominae Mamoukae' (2) = Gregory's old 112 (Evan. 808. Ac. 265. P. 314) and Scrivener 150 (Evan. 808. Act. 265. P. 403). [Soden's new δ 203 and Gregory new 808]. [XII]. Apoc. 149.

This turns out to be a most interesting help as to transmission and revision of the text. It is written in a fine clear hand of the XII[th] century, but without any subscription to the Apocalypse. Iota sub. is regularly given to nouns and adjectives, and placed very neatly after the letter, thus: τουτωι δουλωι τωι

The MS. at some time has been revised to the B type, but not carefully enough to conceal basic matters, which intrude continually, and reveal a link with a Syro-Greek base. ix. 11 αυτω εστιν pro εχει is conclusive; and so is xii. 3. The MS. 186, now at Jerusalem, is a full sister, but is wanting i. 5–iii. 1, and in some other short sections.

There are a good many somewhat startling new readings (such as δυναστεια in the first chapter, ver. 16, for δυναμει), and quite a little fresh change of order. Some of these changes can be traced to the Versions, but only a few, and the rest appear to me to be simple excuses for the scribe not to scratch or impair the fair outlook of his copy; so that when he wrote the wrong word he changed the order of the phrase and transposed to suit himself. This does not often occur among our MSS. and reveals the mentality of the scribe, who writes good Greek and evidently knew better. So that all Greek novelties must be accepted with great reserve, except where supported by the Versions. [As 186 is not copied from 149, and has the same transpositions I have probably wronged the scribe of 149, and these transpositions are due to the older exemplar]. Mentality of scribe.

Besides the agreement with *syr*S (listed subsequently) we have considerable agreement with such Syriac-Greek documents as 18 and 40, and a most evident consanguinity with that other recension represented by the 119 family, relating us through that ancient stem with the forerunner of the 1 family, itself of Syro-Greek parentage.

But we can adjust our MS. to none of our regular families throughout, and it must take its place as an independent. I think, as it is a MS. containing all the books of the N.T., it would be worth while for some scholar to investigate the text of the Gospels, Acts, and Epistles, especially that of the Acts.

An interesting connection develops between 149–186 and the text underlying the Arabic version.

But here are the new transpositions :

ii. 14. κατα σου εχω (Obs. —κατα σου ℵ). (Hiat 186).
iii. 8. οτι ετηρησας μου τον λογον · και μικραν εχεις δυναμιν [και ουκ ηρνησω] So 186.

But it is where 149-186 add their voice to small powerful groups that they should be observed. This recension had access to ancient critical authorities.

Complutensian Group 10 etc.

Apoc. 150 (formerly listed by Scr. as Dominae Mamoukae, see our previous No.), now becomes Athens nat. 150 (olim 12), a ms. of the whole N.T. [xiii/xiv]. Our No. now corresponds to the Athens numeration. [Scr. 146. Greg. 110, new 757. Sod. δ 304]. Apoc. 150.

Collated Aug. 1923 from recent photographs supplied by Andreou of Athens, and received through the agency of Mr. Bolides late of the National Library, who has kindly superintended the photographer's work throughout.

The present is a straightforward, clearly and accurately written ms. of the type of the Complutensian family (as seen to the last detail at xviii. 21 —ουτως, at ix. 11 in the spelling of αββαδδων, in the accenting of τῶν πόρνων in xvii. 5, and in iii. 18 where we find κουλλούριον sic and Compl. ed. has alone κουλουριον), but needs hardly any comment, as it has no helpful affiliations with the groups bearing on the history of the text.

This Compl. group family of 10 etc. has quite a mixed text, but the group holds the revision quite steadily.

The inscription is with 10-96-110 of the family. The subscription (with Apoc. 13) is by a second supplementary hand, of whom more anon.

The main scribe has an easy-flowing hand, is very accurate and very easy to follow in collating. He does not use iota sub. or post., although writing somewhere about 1300, but he uses ν εφελκ. only once. He doubles the accent on μὴ almost always, and sometimes over ἂν. The breathing over ὧδε is invariably soft, as in ἀρμάτων at ix. 9. His circumflex is very angular. Frequently ου is left without breathing as in ἄχρις οῦ, ἀφ' οῦ, which is a form somewhat fashionable at one time.

The few unique readings are limited to:

v. 3. αποκατω for υποκατω
ix. 5. —οταν
xi. 3. εδοθη for δωσω
xiii. 12. το πρωτον θηριον (but this is corrected), besides these few: iii. 5 φυλαδελφεια, vi. 15 βασειλεις, viii. 5 πυρρος for πυρος (but only at this place), xii. 7 δρακωντος, xvi. 6 εδοκας (with 114), xvii. 17 αχρη pro αχρι.

There are a handful of marginal comments by a hand considerably younger, but they are of slight importance. However, at viii. 1 we notice opposite ημιωριον this: "το του καιρου βραχυ, και αγγελοις και πα αγνωστον ειναι την β— παρουσιαν θυμιατηριον." This last word is to be compared with the disputed diminutive termination in ημιωριον.

At xviii. 13, opposite ῥαίδων of the text, we find "ῥαιδούμ ῥωμαϊστὶ τὸ ὄχημα" by the Commentator.

Apoc. 150sup. But at xxi. 9 the scribe ceases, whether felled by an apoplectic stroke or not we shall never know. For at the close of folio 412 verso he wrote as far as "καὶ ἦλθεν εἷς ἐκ των," and then, contrary to his usual accuracy, begins to repeat an earlier clause, thus: on the line below, ὁ ἐστιν ὁ θάνατος ὁ δεύτερος · καὶ η . . . and ceases for good.

The work is continued and finished by another scribe, who is of a later brand, for he makes his circumflex ˜ and not even ˆ (as against our earlier scribe's ^), and, neglecting to cancel the old scribe's blunder, he calmly commences the next page with επτα αγγελων, as if nothing had happened of any importance. (He writes in double columns). But we soon find out that something had happened, for the exemplar he now copies is a different one from that used by the earlier scribe, and at once accords with Apoc. 13 in this very verse, having "την γυναικα και την νυμφην του αρνιου." This is a different grouping, viz. 13-23-55, but 55 is mutilated and absent throughout this end section. Again in verses 12 and 23 we agree with Apoc. 13 alone, and the subscription agrees with 13.

But at xxi. 19 —τιμιω runs with 21 40 73 103-112, while σαμπφειρος agrees with 32 67 136 147, and in verse 20 χρυσοπρασινος with 9 13-23 27 39 65 102 113, and in xxii. 12 —εσται fin. agrees with 39 56-108 113 *gig boh sah syr*S.

In these few verses we have three unique readings:

xxii. 3. ἀρνῖνου for αρνιου
12. ὁ μῖσθός μος for ὁ μισθος μου, and finally the monstrum:
16. ἀνὴρ for ἀστὴρ,

which no MS. had yet written.

We have entered the readings of this scribe as 150sup.

GRÆCO-LATIN GROUP AS SET FORTH BELOW.

Apoc. 151 (Ev. 922. Ac. 270. P. 407) = Athos, S. Gregorii 3. = Greg. 116 (Ev. 922. Ac. 270. P. 320), Greg. Latest No. 1380. Sod. δ 200. [a. 1112]. Apoc. 151.

Photographed by German Society for Promoting Archæological Research in 1911.

Dated June ͵ςχκ· = 6620 = A.D. 1112, the ε following κ does not belong to the date, but Greg. calls it 1116 having absorbed the ε into the date.

This is another of the Græco-Latin tribe located as follows:

London	Hamburg	Rome	Florence	Rome	Paris	Cheltenham	Athos	Florence
7	16	39	45	69	102	104	151	180, and is much the closest to 104, although it has συντριβεται at ii. 27 with textus receptus against 104, and μεστας at v. 8 with the group (pro γεμουσας) against the exceptional μετα of 104.

A long account will be found of this (Calabrian?) type under our No. 104. Apoc. 151 has the full list of special agreement with 7-45-104, which it seems unnecessary to relist here. And the agreement alone with 104 will be found fully tabulated in the grouped collations.

We find ιδον absolutely constant in 151 throughout, generally with rough breathing. αιων and cases nearly always have the rough breathing, as frequently οὐδεῖς. No breathing is accorded to ρομφαια (or ρομφεα as the scribe writes it). Iota post. occurs rarely, once in αἴδουσιν, but twice with αἴδης. We find also ποιῄσαντι, κατ᾽ οἰκουντων, θυμιάματων, κατοἰκιτηριον, πρὸσ εὐχαι, and ὤσ ἄκισ for ὁσάκις.

Yet the scribe intends to be very careful and is really quite true to type.

Apart from spelling, these readings seem to be new, or nearly so:

vii. 5. +και ante εκ φυλης γαδ (Scrivener says that the sister MS. 7 adds before verse 6).
6. We transpose and write: εκ φυλης συμεων.. εκ φυλης μανασῆ (as does 140 only).
ix. 15. μηναν So 217 and 113 (with which there is much sympathy in orthography).
xi. 4. —αι (ante ενοπιον sic) xiii. 2. ῆ̊ν pro ῆν
xx. 11. μεγα λευκον So 40 176-206 200 207 (λευκον μεγα 38 113 114-241, μεγα και λευκον 143).
xxi. 19. σανπφειρος (but this is only spelling), which practically amounts to nothing.

At xviii. 12 we do not follow 104 with παν ξυλων σκευος τιμιοτατων but write παν σκευος εκ ξυλων τιμιωτατων with the bohairic Version alone.

104 and 151 are quite alone together in the following places:—i. 7 επ αυτω pro επ αυτον; i. 19 —ᾶ tert. (and *syr*S); ii. 15 +ομοιως post συ; iii. 20 ανοιξι μοι pro αι οιξη; v. 8 +παντων fin.; v. 14 Desunt omnia post αμην; vii. 9 και γλωσσων και λαων, xi. 5 —και tert; xi. 11 εισηλθεν εις αυτους εκ του θεου; xi. 13 απεθανον pro απεκτανθησαν; xi. 14 και η ουαι η τριτη (—ιδου); xiv. 14 και ο καθημενος επι την νεφελην; xiv. 16 εις την γην; xxi. 2 εκ του ουρανου εκ του θεου; xxii. 15 —και οι φονεις.

As to spelling, I will not burden these sheets any further, but, curiously enough, when not alone or in agreement with 104, we are in frequent agreement alone with the other sister MS. 7.

At the close of the Apoc., the scribe writes (in cursive):

τῶ σῦντελ'εστὴ τῶν καλῶν θῶ, χάρις :—

Opposite the last page of the Apoc. follows, in rather ornate capitals, the following additional subscription [I have slightly divided the words to facilitate the reading]:

There can be no question but that this is by the original scribe (and therefore the date is secure), as he spells αποκαλυψης here, exactly the same as in the first verse of chapter i., which is done by no other scribe so far.

I had the pages photographed twice, but both times they came out wretchedly; the meaning, however, is all clear except the last two words after the date. The name of the scribe—(δια χειρος seems certain)—appears to be Constantius, although I can only see AN of ΣΤΑΝ above κωντο. The name of Leontius coming in later complicates matters.

GROUP 152-179, slightly differing from 1-208. Family 1.

Apoc. 152 = Rom. Vat. gr. 370. = [Greg. 152, new 2059. Sod. Aν[10]]. Collated in Rome, Feb. 1912. [XI]. Apoc. 152.

Large 4° shaped MS. containing the works of Dionysius Areop. followed by the Apoc., with com. of Andreas, on pp. 149 seqq. No real inscription. It begins:

π̔ ΤΗC ΑΠΟΚΑΛΥΨΕΩC ΚΥ
ΡΙΩ ΜΟΥ ΑΔΕΛΦΩ Ϛ CΥΛΛΕΙΤΟΥΡΓῶ⁀

Follows list of chapters to OB. Then prologue. Then follow on f°. 153 seq. text and commentary without further heading. No indications of κειμενον and ἑρμην. by the first hand except some quotation marks in the margin. A considerably later second hand has added κειμενον and ἑρμ. (sometimes varied by σχωλ.), but has not always correctly indicated the proper places.

The scribe uses iota post. quite freely, even writing (xxi. 6) ὦι for omega, but not with ἅδης; on the other hand, is free with the use of ν εφελκ. His omega is peculiar, ϱϱ, and he writes δ̣ο̣α for δοξα; otherwise there is not much to notice.

The MS. at once ranges itself in the 1 family, and has a few scribal peculiarities with 69 and 72.

It it very clearly, however, close to 1 itself as can be seen at:

iii. 8. εχει for εχεις
iv. 5 init. —και εκ
v. 4. πολοι* (pro πολλα) 1 114 and 152.
vi. 1. —μιαν
vii. 9. —και φυλων
17. —και εξαλειψει ad fin. vers.
viii. 9. —των εν τη θαλασση 13. εν μεσουρανισματι etc.

It is really quite useful as a check, for it confirms Delitzsch sometimes against Tregelles as to Apoc. 1 without the necessity for me to consult 1 itself.

In some agreements with 12 it absolves the scribe of 12 from errors I had imputed to him, and which belong to the common exemplar.

From f°. 200 on there is confusion in the binding of the pages, but nothing is missing. Read as follows: 200 after 208, 211 after 200; 209 after 216, 210 then 219 to 224 after 210, come back to 217 218, then, jumping 225 226 read 227 to 232 after 218. Come back to 225/226 after 232, then jumping 233/4 read 235/240 after 226 and come back to 233/234 after 240. Jump 241 and go to 242/247. Then back to 241 and then forward to 248/251. The MS. may have been rebound correctly since I handled it, as I left the correct list with Father Ehrle the Prefect. Now has a full sister in our No. 179, the second Patmos MS.

The new readings (or almost unique ones) are not of great importance, but may be mentioned (besides νοικτος, μελλας, σαλπηγγας, εμα (for αιμα), ποιεισαι, εἰκουσα, θαλασαν, εθνι, γεγραμενος, δακροιον, γυνεκα, μαργαρητου (xviii. 12) and μαργαρειται with ℵ (xxi. 21)†, αγαλιωμεν etc.):

The most interesting is γεγόναι at xxi. 6, quite a new variation from γεγονε, γεγονα of others, and γεγοναν and γεγονασιν of *syr*S and Iren., while ℵ and his correctors had doubts and difficulties here, and perhaps the plain omission of ℵ^c *lux harl.*223 *aeth boh arm Cypr. The following are bolder, but not probably malicious:

i. 9. και εν τη πατμωι (pro τη καλουμενη πατμω). —τη καλουμενη 1-208, καλουμενη rescrpt. 179.

As a matter of fact this is immediately followed by the addition at xix. 16 of αυτου (post ιματιον) with *syr*S copt and only a few Greeks and omission at xix. 18 of παντων with *syr*S copt ps-Ambr. and only the 1 and 119 family.

Being an XI[th] cent. MS. this 152 is most useful in checking 179 208 and the 1 family.

The scribe sometimes adds above the line a word or part of a word omitted. Then there is a busy early second hand, who corrects, and a late third hand who does more; but sometimes all the correctors leave alone a glaring misspelling or a palpable error. I have tried to enter all I could under the different heads.

At the end of the Epilogue and after αμην is this by the first hand:

τὸν τοῖς λόγοις λέγοντα τοῖς τοῦ βιβλιου· τὸν δακτύλοις γράψαντα· τον κε κτημενον· φυλατται* (φυλαττε) τοὺς τρεῖς· ὠ* (ὦ) τριὰς πάσης βλάβης·

The real sister to our 152 is now found in Apoc. 179 at Patmos (No. 64 in the Library there), a codex of approximately the same age, both derived from an elder exemplar.

Family 1. The more the 1 family is studied the older seems its base, and 152-179 with 1-208 will well repay study.

Curiously enough two hands have also been busy correcting and overhauling 179 down to the matter of accents. Possibly these two MSS. issued from the same scriptorium, though now the distance between Rome and Patmos separates them.

[Apoc. 153 (Scr.-Miller Ev. 1262. Ac. 417. P57?) =Jerus. Patr. Bib. 37. [XI]. No corresponding MS. in Gregory.

Under Act. 417, however, Scr.-Miller says =Paul 64 =Jerus. Patr. Libr. 43 [XII] "came from S. Saba"!

Under Paul 64 he says "of Griesbach is the portion of Evan M. Instead =Act. 417."

Under P. 57 he says (Evan 218)!

Gregory's Jerusalem codices of Evangelia occur at Nos. 450/456 and 607/621.

Jerus. (sepulcr.) 37 would appear to be a mistake, and Jerus. sepulcr. 38 to contain the Apoc. Gregory's latest number for this is "Apoc. 1888."

See under our No. 181].

GROUP 41-42-53-107 153-211-222. } Type fam. B.

Apoc. 153.

We will use this vacant number now for the Apoc. in Evan 935 (Ac. 272. Paul 322) which was not reported as containing the Apoc. [=Greg. new 935. Sod. δ 361]. Apoc. 153.

It is a codex at Athos, S. Dionys. 27; the Apoc. was photographed for me in 1912 by the German Society and collated by me in 1921. Gregory (Textkritik, vol. 3, p. 1113) has corrected his description to include the Apoc. (Sod. δ 361). He calls it XIV, but it is more likely XIth to xxii. 16, where, the last page having perished probably, a later scribe (XV) takes up and finishes. As to date.

The MS. is very neatly written in an educated hand, and is absolutely free from any trace of iota post. or subscript.

It would appear to be the oldest member of the small sub-B group 41-42-53-107, and as it is very free with the retention of ν εφελκ. throughout, and uses ἶδον (sic) for εἶδον, ἴδεσ for εἶδες throughout with the rarest exceptions (45 times out of 51, exceptions at vii. 1, xii. 12, xvii. 8, xx. 1, 4, 11), we may take it that it was copied from an old MS., and doubtless an uncial (and no late one at that), for on countless occasions it joins up verses where the sense calls for a stop.

It is, however, a clear B type, but rarely opposing B and group, yet ranks with the somewhat large 'cursive' group at times, that is the group (composed of various sub-groups) which have the countenance of none of the uncials ℵABCEFP, but really are to be included in the B grouping, where B itself is merely aberrant.

Although favouring 41-42-53 in special places, as in the strange:

λέγω for βαλῶ at ii. 24 and τον τριτον for το τριτον at viii. 10 απηλθα for απηλθον at x. 9 ταύτης for αὐτῆς at xiv. 8 εχοντα for εχων at xiv. 14
ελαβεν for ελαβον at xx. 4, yet, curiously enough, it is not so true to the type of this family but that it ventures off aberrant, Aberration.

once at iii. 14. πιστεως pro κτισεως with the fam 25 211-222 and 166 arab.
and again: xi. 10. —ουτοι with 87-181 159 *syr*S. [Obs. our inscription agrees with 87].
and: xvi. 2. του θηριου το χαραγμα with all family 7, 233 and 211-222 the sister MSS.

and: xix. 1. [Abest ὡς] with fam 7 and very few.
and: xix. 4. και οι πρεσβυτεροι επεσαν with fam 7 and 211, 233.
and: xix. 14. καθαρον λευκον with fam 7 and 211-222 233.
and: xxii. 11. {δικησατω pro αδικησατω with 104.
—και ο δικαιος δικαιωθητω ετι with 104 and 59 120 151 210.}
and: xxii. 19. —βιβλιου prim. with 59 113.

Although carefully written there are quite a few omissions from homoioteleuton, at:

vi. 6. —και τρεις χοινικες κριθης δηναριου with 21 27 35-188 103-112 113 218.
vii. 8. —εκ φυλης ιωσηφ ιβ χιλ. εσφρ. with 14 182 240[non fam] and 211-222.
xiii. 4. —και προσεκυνησαν το θηριον with E al.
xvii. 12/13. —ωραν λαμβανουσι μετα του θηριου ουτοι μιαν Alone with 211.
17. —ποιησαι την γνωμην αυτου και with 16-39-180 63-136-162 120 [non 67].
xx. 5. —οι δε λοιποι usque ad ετη with ℵ aliq. and the fam 41-42-53 [non 107-211-222 vid.].
13. —τους εν αυτη νεκρους και ο θανατος και ο αδης εδωκαν New. (Cf. 121 211-222).
xxii. 6. —δειξαι τοις δουλοις αυτου with a few cursives and the fam.

Accents are very carefully imposed, however, the scribe varying between σφραγίδα and σφραγῖδα. Rather a novelty is οὐαἴ · οὐαἴ · οὐαἴ · at viii. 13. But elsewhere we find οὐαῖ with circumflex.

Yet we find once χαῖρουσιν at xi. 10, where the readings vary between χαίρουσιν and χαροῦσιν.

Twice we have the mistake βαλεῖν pro λαβεῖν (iv. 11), and ελαβεν pro εβαλεν (xii. 15), alone with 211-222. Cf. 53 at xviii. 19 ελαβον for εβαλον, where we do not have it.

Unusual readings, which may or may not be fortuitous, are:

iii. 10. τηρησω σε pro σε τηρησω with 59 233 [non 211-222]. —τηρησω ℵ.
vii. 9. ἑστῶτα pro εστωτες with 19 93 and 211-222 (rest of family has εστωτας).
ix. 19. +αυτων post κεφαλας with 69 233.
xvii. 5. —η ante μητηρ with f. 114 130 and 211-222 only.

Unusual spelling occurs thus:

i. 3. ακουωντες So 154 236.
14. αἱ τρίχαις CB and few.
iii. 21. εκαθησα B and few.
vi. 12. ὡσ σάκος
15. σπίλαια
viii. 2. σαλπιγες Alone.
ix. 17. εχωντας So 154.
x. 1. στύλλοι Alone.
10. μέλν 28 and 233.
xiv. 10. κερασμενον pro κεκερ. 1 aliq. [non fam. exc. 233].
xvi. 10. εσκωτομενη 109.
xvii. 3, 4. κοκινον 1 72 113 187 200 (140).
xviii. 7. βασιλεισσα B etc. and 53[non rel. fam.].
8. πηγαι pro πληγαι Alone.
17. ερημωθη E aliq. [non fam. exc. 233].
xxi. 1. ϛνὸν pro καινον using the abbreviation for και. The only occurrence.
23. εφωτησεν 7-45-151-180 81-204 107 152*.

Unique readings are:

ii. 17. αὐτὴν pro αυτω sec. (αυτον 113 145 222).
iv. 8. ανα πτερυγας· εξ κυκλοθεν... Thus the punctuation.
x. 6. —τα ante εν αυτω
xiv. 19. —του θεου
xvii. 1. —εἷς Now also 211-222 251? arm a.
xviii. 17. ναῦτα pro ναῦται?
xxii. 1. —του θεου Now see 211 and 222 which agree.

Readings opposed to family 41-42-53 to be noticed are:

iii. 1. τηρησον (with 222 against στηρισον of the fam.).
iv. 8. αγιος novies (against octies 41-42).
ix. 3. αυτοις pro αυταις (against family except 211-222).
5. [παίση] (against all the family πληξη except 211-222).
xii. 2. εκραξεν and 211 (against all the family εκραζεν).
xvi. 21. αὔτη pro αὐτῆς and 211-222 (against all the family; —αυτης B).
xviii. 6. Whole verse treatment opposed to family traditions.
xx. 8. ωσει αμμος pro ως ἡ αμμος but with 211-222.
xxi. 4/5 jungens —και. So 211-222.
5. —μοι So 211-222.
xxii. 2. αποδιδους εκαστος So 211-222.
3. λατρευουσιν So 222.

The inscription is:

αποκαλυψις του αγιου ιω̄ του θεολογου ην ειδεν εν πατμω τη νησω and, as the scribe uses ιδεν throughout his text, it is clear that this was not in the original, but is improvised, agreeing almost exactly with 87 (with which we have a few points in common).

Subscription there is none. The last leaf, as in so many MSS., must have perished, for a much later hand has added the text for the end xxii. 16-fin., and concluded with a table of lessons, but no subscription.

A few scholia (by the scribe) begin at ii. 16, gradually increase in importance, but cease altogether after vi. 14 until xx. 12 where they encircle this one page.

Now see 211 a full sister (at Vatopedi) with a few aberrancies which are not without interest, but both were copied from a common original and not from each other. This is clear from the omissions from homoioteleuta, certainly due to the original and not to the infirmity of our two careful scribes.

Perhaps even more than one generation intervenes, as 211 writes ειδον with absolute consistency and insistence (not once ιδον), while 153 writes ιδον consistently and habitually.

This small family group 153-211 is to be further increased by the addition of an immensely important MS. (because dated 1015), viz. our MS. 222 (at the Laura), photos of which reached us just as we were closing our labours in despair at not having obtained the witness of this MS. The catalogue numbers must have been revised and confused. See under 222 for a résumé of the whole matter. All three MSS. 153-211-222 derive from an old document doubtless long since perished. The first hand in 222 ceases at xxii. 7 fin., yet xxii. 8-15 seem to have been in the parent when 153 made his copy. As to Ap. 222.

Somewhat eclectic MS. of the large Compl. family (nearest to 212).

Apoc. 154. Apoc. 154 = Rome, Vat. gr. 1190. =[Greg. 154, new 2061. Sod. α 1588]. [XV/XVI]. Contained in vol. I. of this large folio MS. at pp. 174/184. No commentary.

The inscription is new:

αποκαλυψις του αγιου αποστολου φιλου ηγαπημενου και παρθενου ευαγγελιστου ιω̄' του θεολογου, for φιλου occurs in no MS. so far examined, although ηγαπημενου occurs in 4-64 and 30 166 174, and παρθενου in 61 102 and 108 166 226. (For φιλου see 236).

Collated from the original. Its nearest sister is 212 with which it agrees specifically alone at xi. 18, xiii. 1, xvii. 8, xviii. 20/21, xix. 15, xxii. 6, 8, and see iv. 11, xvi. 13, but 212 falls into line with only about half of the peculiarities of 154.

This No. 154 is not a very interesting MS. although it opens with a strange reading at i. 3 τον λογον with only ℵB 32 100 102 130 f. 178 238. It runs now with B and now against it, and develops no absolute type, although alone from time to time with 16, 99, 100, 104 (and 102 at the end, the handwriting of which MS. it rather resembles), and such MSS. It has the Compl. additions at i. 2/3, xi. 1, and goes with the joint Compl. and Erasm. families and P at vi. 12 +και (ante οτε). See also ii. 2, 5, 7, iii. 18, v. 13 and beyond.

I think we can dismiss it rather briefly, only stopping to record its peculiarities for future reference.

One of the boldest of the above is:

vi. 5. ιππος μεγας μελας,

but perhaps the most outstanding is:

xviii. 8. μεταβολης for καταβολης, and the least attractive:

vii. 9. καλῶν pro και λαων.

Coptic strain. Again in this MS. we seem to see a Coptic strain. Compare i. 6, ii. 6, vi. 6, ix. 15, x. 6, xviii. 19, xx. 9, and note remark in the MS. D^{boh} margin at xi. 18 "not in some copies," although 154 is the first to omit (so 212) "και διαφθειραι τους διαφθειροντας την γην." Also xxii. 8 —ηκουσα και only confirmed by 212 and the MS. F^{boh}. The reason for this can be found at xviii. 10, where we trace to an Egyptian base through f. 34. Latin traces are seen at some places x. 7, xii. 8, xiv. 3, xvi. 1, and sympathy with Græco-Latins at vi. 6, iii. 18 fin., xiii. 1, xiv. 14, xvi. 19 (—το ante ποτηριον with only ℵ 39 95 latt) and with B and gig xiv. 7, P and gig xv. 8.

Where corrections of itacisms are made the double reading is given without cancellation of the error as ποιμένειν (αι above) sic xii. 5. This would point to a faithful copy of the exemplar, itacisms and all. Perhaps the majority of the exceptional readings are therefore not due to the scribe himself.

As to xviii. 21. The relation to the Græco-Latin MS. group is evident in several places in spelling, and is rather prettily brought out at xviii. 21. We had just been with 7-16-39 12 103 at xviii. 19 in a spelling τιμιωτητος. At xviii. 21 we omit ουτως with only 10 77 91 96 110 al. (the Complutensian group), but in doing so we write ορμηματι in a peculiar way, thus: ϕμήματι. Now it is to be observed that the Græco-Latins 16-39-69-180 add οτι here (with ℵ 102 f. 178 and copt), but they implicate a difficulty as to ουτως, 16 writing οτι ορμηματι ουτος and 39-69-180 οτι ουτος ορμηματι. In a common original οτι may have been confused with or taken the shape of the above ligature for ορ in ορμηματι.

This +οτι links up copt. latt and ℵ, and with other sympathetic points for 154 in this combination elsewhere is rather definite.

A few other points may be touched on to complete the record, apart from the incomplete revision to B which took place at some time.

All things considered, it can fairly be placed in the Compl. group, whose readings it favours throughout, apart from the stranger element. This is confirmed by 212, which is a kind of sister without most of the peculiarities of 154.

In Gregory under No. 154 you will find it stated that Simcox considered this MS. to be similar to the Chigi MS. (Gregory's 151 and our 122), but this is hardly the case. For as we show elsewhere the Chigi MS. equates 97 as its nearest relation.

OECUMENIAN GROUP 146-155.

Apoc. 155 = Rome, Vat. gr. 1426. [= Greg. 155, new 2062. Sod. O^{a30}]. [xv]. Apoc. 155.
Scr.-Miller in error gives Ac. 264 as belonging to this MS. and adds "= Greg. Apoc. 121." What he means is this:—

Gregory's Apoc. 121 = (Ac. 250. P. 299) at Paris: Nat. Coisl. 224, which is the same as Scr.-Miller's Ac. 264. P. 337, but he gives no Apoc. On the other hand, he confounds this Greg. Apoc. 121 with his Apoc. 155, which latter agrees with Gregory's number and description.

Therefore we must note that Gregory's 121 Apoc. finds no place in Scrivener, just as Scrivener's preceding 153 finds no place in Gregory.

As regards Greg. 121 it disappears from my list anyhow. See 79^a. Scr. 153 also disappears, as Jerus. 37 does not appear to contain the Apocalypse.

This MS. 155 is contained in a very thick paper folio volume (containing works of Dionysius, Photius, Liberius, Athanasius etc.), of later date I judge than Gregory indicates. It looks more like XV † than XIII. He says "Apoc. cum comm. (Oec. txt integro?)." But for a few † Diekamp agrees with me (Sitzensbericht, Oct. 1901, p. 1046 seq.).

marginal marks > at the beginning the text is entirely buried in what appears to be the complete commentary of Oecumenius (which is shortened generally when it accompanies Andreas' com. MSS.). It may be to this that is due the abandonment of Oec. MSS. in favour of Andreas' com., but Oec. has the advantage of repeating a large part of the text when he begins to comment.

The MS. is thus headed:—

Ἡ τοῦ μεγάλου ἀρεοπαγίτου διονυσιόυ θεοειδὴς

We reach an important point in our studies with this MS. For further information consult F. Diekamp in Sitzungsbericht, Berlin, Nos. XLII. XLII, Oct. 1901, p. 1046 seq. "Mittheilungen über den neuaufgefunden Commentar des Oekumenius zur Apocalypse" and refer back to Apoc. 146 (Messina 99).

Notwithstanding Diekamp's proof that Oecumenius flourished before 600 A.D., and that Andreas' com̄. was rather based upon his than the reverse, the contrary has several times been stated since. Unfortunately Dr. Diekamp never published the full text of Oecumenius' commentary (divided into twelve chapters) as promised. It is rather long, and necessitates the reading of every word to get the text, and as regards this MS. the scribe hastened matters by jumping from the end of chapter i. and from λογος 2 to λογος 8 to the beginning of chapter xv., concerning which, after quoting as in Apoc. 146 to γραψον as follows:

Λογος δευτερος

'μὲν δὴ πρῶτος ἄθλος, τῶν ἐμῶν λόγων τε καὶ ἑρμηνειῶν, τετέλεσται· νῦν ἀνθέτερον βλητεον σκοπόυ· δεικνῦντα τΐς ἡ τῶν ἐκκλησιῶν παραίνεσϊς· πρώτη τοιγαροῦν τῇ ἐν ἐφέσω ἐκκλησΐᾳ, ὡς προκαθεζομένῃ τῆς λοιπῆς ἀσιάς γράψαι δΐα κελεύεται οὕτω πῶς λέγων τῷ ἀγγέλω· τῆς ἐν ἐφέσω ἐκκλησίας γραψον· he says: ὅθεν οἶμαι καὶ τὴν πρόρρησϊν τῷ θείῳ μεγάλω ἱεράρχῃ διονυσίω τῷ ἀρεοπαγΐτῃ πεπληρῶσθαι κατὰ τὴν ἐν τῇ φρουρᾷ τούτῳ τυγχάνοντϊ πεφθεῖσαν θείαν ἐπΐστολὴν· τοίνυν· τὰ πολλὰ προβεβηκότα καὶ παρελθόντα τῆς θείας ταύτης ἀποκαλύψεως παρέασας· ἀπὸ τὸ μεσέτατον τοῦ ὀγδοόυ λόγου, τὰ τ' ἐνεστῶτα καὶ μέλλοντα, ὡς ψυχωφελῆ καὶ ἀγαθὰ, καὶ τῶν κακῶν ἐκκοπτΐκὰ καὶ τῆς αἰωνίου καὶ μακαρίας ζωῆς ἐπικερδῆ· γράψαι σὺν θω̄ καὶ τοῖς φιλομαθέσϊ προσθῆναι ἐπηγομαί· λέγει γάρ·

Then follows chapter xv on f°. 136 verso and full commentary to the end.

The MS. 84 at Turin (not listed in Gregory) is said to be a sister of our MS., but not derived directly from it.

The three MSS. at Messina, Turin and Rome are thus the only MSS. which we know to contain the real text of Oecumenius.

As regards Vat. Ottob. 126/127, given in Gregory under new No. 1824, it is a purely servile copy of our Vat. 1426 and can be neglected. After certain MSS. were sold to the Vatican, the owners had some of them copied (after A.D. 1612). This is one. The text begins in vol. I. (No. 126) at p. 544, and the very heading, incorporating a marginal note in Vat. 1426, shows what took place.

Neglect therefore Gregory's 1824.

Although these Oec. MSS. are very tedious to examine, the texts in the commentary agree more often than not with the readings of the text proper previously given, which shows that we have here the real text which Oec. used, whereas in the case of Andr. and Arethas MSS., several differing Greek recensions were used by scribes, and their remarks merely added to these by them. Oec. frequently repeats whole verses twice over in this way, and I have accordingly marked txt or "txt et com" etc. Where nothing is said, it means, as a rule, that the reading is not repeated in the commentary.

As regards ch. xv. 6 concerning λιθον or λινον, it is to be noticed that Oecumenius is the great authority for λιθον, and says nothing about λινον. Perhaps this is the reason that in MSS. like Chigi R. v. 33 (Apoc. 122) with double com̄. extracts from Andreas and Oec., no commentaries at all on this passage are given.

Here is what our scholia say on the subject:

Apoc. xv. 6. Txt λίθον.

Com̄.: τὸ δὲ ἐνδεδύσθαι τοὺς ἀγγέλους › λίθον καθαρὸν λαμπρὸν δεῖγμα τυγχάνει, τῆς τϊμϊάς αὐτῶν, καὶ καθαρᾶς ϗ φωτεινῆς › καὶ εἰς τὸ καλὸν ἐχούσης φύσεωσ › ἦ ἄρα τὸν χ̅ν̅ ἐνεδέδοτο (ἐνεδέδυτο 146) λίθος γὰρ ὁ κ̅σ̅ › παρὰ τῆς θείας ὠνόμασται γραφῆς › ὡς παρὰ Ἡσαΐα › ἰδοῦ ἐγὼ ἐμβάλλω εἰς τὰ θεμέλϊα σϊῶν (sic, σιὼν 146) λίθον πολυτελῆ ἐκλεκτόν › καὶ παρὰ τῶ προφήτῃ · λίθον ὃν ἀπεδοκίμασαν › οἱ οἰκοδομοῦντες οὗτος ἐγενήθη εἰς κεφαλὴν γωνϊας · τοῦτον ἐνδεδύσθαι τὸν λίθον › καὶ ἡμῖν ὁ σοφώτατος παῦλος παραινεῖ · ἐνδύσασθε (ἐνδυσασθαι 146) λέγων (om. 146) τὸν λίθον ἡμῶν ι̅ν̅ χ̅ν̅ · καὶ τῆς σαρκὸς πρόνοιαν μὴ ποιεῖσθε εἰς ἐπιθυμίαν̸ (sic, ἐπιθυμίας 146)......

As 146 seems to be more reliable than 155, we can generally accept 146 as against 155, but a few places remain where 146 may be in error as to type, and these will be found indicated in the grouped collations.

Apoc. 155A. Nat. Library Turin B. I. 15 (Pasini cat. No. 84). Not listed by Gregory or Von Soden, but described by F. Diekamp in 1901 (Sitzungsbericht, Berlin, p. 1046 seq.). Apoc. 155A.

Sister of previous MS.

It seems hardly necessary to go over the whole ground again, but this MS. exists and is safe, and in case of disaster to the others of this small family, it is in reserve.

The Oec. family then consists only of 146-155-155A [plus the duplicate of 155=1824 apud Greg. (Ottob. 126/127)], to which add as to commentary—not as to text—our MSS. 203 and 240 of Apoc. at Salonika and Athos respectively.

Note Scr.-Miller says Ac. 159 by mistake, and under Ac. 139. Paul 174 he forgets to number for the Apoc.

Bi-columnar codex.

Collated in 1921 from photographs procured some years ago. It is said to be dated 1434, but my photos show no date and absolutely no subscription to Apoc., which ends at the top of a page, with the rest blank.

The subscription is on page 163 and gives a date of ϛ͞ϡ͞μ͞β, and if the last letter be beta it does correspond to A.D. 1434. The scribe Athanasius was apparently six-fingered ἐξεδακτίλου (read ἐξαδακτύλου), and was anything but enthusiastic over his task, and glad when it was finished.

Decadence of later work in the Scriptoria.

There is no iota post. or sub., but some itacism and misspelling, and a good many omissions from homoioteleuton and some additions from the same cause. I collated this after two splendid XI^th^ century scribes' work, and the decadence of the scriptoria in 350 years is as obvious as it is deplorable. μὴ and ὅταν are so written, evidently after the exemplar used. Many smooth breathings occur for rough, and many accents are incorrect, as δῶδεκα.

It develops at once that this is a sister MS. to the group 34-35-68-87-124-132. Besides sharing the various idiosyncracies of the whole group with 181-188, it goes beyond them at times. For instance, while sharing in the addition of κυριος at ii. 1 and iii. 1, 7, it adds κυριος in ii. 8 alone, where the others do not. The inscription agrees with 34.

It deserts the family and has the following unique readings (apart from a number of more or less vicious spellings) at:

i. 12. βλέπων pro βλέπειν

ii. 3. και ουκ εβαστασας
5. new order: και τα εργα σου τα προτα ποιησον (Cf. 226).
8. +κυριος ante ο πρωτος
15. κολαϊτῶν pro νικολαιτων Cf. boh (ⲚⲚⲒⲔⲞⲖⲀⲒⲦⲰⲚ. This means 'of the' (.ⲚⲒ =the) Kolaites, or 'of Nikolaitons').
16. μετ' αὐτὸν pro μετ' αυτων Cf. arm 2. 3. and tecum pro cum illis Prim.
17. —και επι την ψηφον (Homoioteleuton, but see 106 149 *syr*S).

iii. 3. πως ηκουσας και ειληφας This order is countenanced only by 143 and *syr*S! (124 has a separate variation of order. Another bad place in the original).
4. ἄξια pro ἀξιοί
5. περιπατεῖ τὰ pro περιβαλειται
18. ἐὰν pro ινα ult. (Only variation in Versions is και pro ινα arm 4).
20. προς ἐμ ἀυτόν pro προς αυτον

iv. 2/3. καθημενον with Oxyr^1080^ and 200 only.
4 init. και ην κυκλωθεν pro και κυκλοθεν So the sister MS. 188 only. +ην is a clear reflection of both Coptics.
11. +και την πιστιν post δοξαν An absurd addition, showing scribe was somnolent.

v. 7. —και ηλθε with boh^T^ only.

vii. 11. +αυτων post θρονου sec. Others +αυτου.

ix. 6. αυτον pro αποθανειν (Cf. boh et sah$^1/_2$ θανατον, et fam 7 —αποθανειν et —ὁ θανατος).

xii. 4. αυτων pro αυτου (—αυτου 1-208 sah$^1/_4$ et Er. 1. 2. 3. Ald.).

xiii. 15. ἡ εἰκόνα pro ἡ εἰκὼν The original of many MSS. must have been faint here. See variations in others.

xiv. 10. ποταμω pro ποτηριω making perfect sense, but without authority. Compare boh ΠΙΑΠΟΤ or ΠΙΑΦΟΤ. (εν τω θυμω sah: ΠϹⲰΝΤ).

11. και ο βασανισμος του βασανισμου pro και ο καπνος του βασανισμου Equally without authority and difficult to see how such an error could occur. Not boh, but boh^{G} ὁ πυρ του βασανισμου.

14. λευκη νεφελη A new order.

17. +και ante εχων

xvi. 1. του θεου του θυμου A new order.

2. ἔλκακοσ sic pro ἕλκος It is followed by [κακον ϗ πονηρον].

4 fin. +ως νεκρου· και πασα ψυχη απεθανεν εν τω ποταμω και εις τας πηγας των υδατων

8. τεταρχος pro τεταρτος (Found also in 165 of the family).

9. των ανθρωπων pro ταυτας Makes some sense, but lacks authority.

18. —ουτω with only 113 214* 244* aeth and arm.

19/20. αυτῆς pro αυτῇ and νῆφος pro νῆσος

xvii. 4. —τιμιω

6. —εκ του αιματος των αγιων και εκ So 130, however, and 146 189 boh^{B}.

7. +του βασιλεως post θηριου Difficult to understand how this could occur.

8. —τα ονοματα επι

15. οἷα vid. pro ἃ

xviii. 7. αὐτοὺς pro εαυτην

16/19. Ex homoiotel. —η περιβεβλημενη βυσσινον ver. 16 usque ad η πολις η μεγαλη ver. 19, pergens ἐν ᾗ επλουτησαν κ.τ.λ.

xix. 10. ὅραμαμή· pro ορα μη

xx. 14 init. —και ο θανατος Error, for it is followed by εβληθησαν as usual. There is no authority for this omission, but curiously enough, note that boh says "The abyss and Amenti" conveying Hades, and not mentioning "Death."

xxi. 2. ειδον is transferred to the usual place, but καινήν is written καὶ νῦν, which makes some sense (so 207).

7. δῶσω αὐτὰ pro κληρονομησει Observe, and not δώσω αὐτῷ.

17. εστιν pro αυτης This again with the absence of εμετρησε init. makes some sense. Cf. copt. Cf. Prim. dimensus est, (—mensus est init.).

19. χαλκόc planè pro χαλκηδων Remember the sister MSS. have καρχηδων with boh alone.

22. ναος εστιν αυτης (with both Oec. MSS. 146 and 155 and with them only).

23. +του αρνιου και ante του ηλιου In very questionable taste.

ibid. και pro ουδε So sah arm Prim.

25 and 26 are written twice over in error, owing to homoioteleuton.

xxii. 16. ο πρωινος και λαμπρος So 182. A few others write the order, but as ο πρωινος ο λαμπρος.

19. το μετρος pro το μερος.

(In addition to the above, and to itacisms not mentioned, add four or five cases of υ for β, as in εὐασίλευσαν for ἐβασίλευσαν).

A very careless exhibit after all said and done. In only two places do any sisters collaborate, viz. 188 at iv. 4 and 165 at xvi. 8.

Two rather singular agreements with א absolutely alone are to be recorded:

xvii. 18. βασιλείων pro βασιλέων (and so aeth arm boh$^3/_{12}$).

xxi. 13. και απο βορρα . . . και απο νοτου . —απο δυσμων πυλωνες τρεις

In both cases in exact agreement.

On the other hand the general characteristics of 34-35-68-87-124-132 are fully borne out. I will not record them all. But the principal ones can easily be recognized, as follows:

i. 5. ος μαρτυς πιστος εστιν with the fam. only.
ibid. ος ηγαπησεν ημας· και ελουσεν ημας with the fam. and gig (h) *syr*S copt.
7. —των ante νεφελων with the fam. only.
13. +των χρυσων post λυχνιων with the fam. only.
ibid. εν τοις μαστοις with the fam., 38 102 and copt.
ii. 13. —ος post πιστος fam. only with fam 6.
iii. 1. +κυριος fam. only.
iv. 4. θρονους pro θρονοι fam. only.
8. εν καθ εν αυτω εστως εχων with fam. and *syr*S, but αυτω appears new.
v. 2. +αλλον ante αγγελον fam. only with 143 and *syr*S Orig.
vi. 4. +ειδον και ιδου post και init. with (א) the fam. and 119-123 (copt).
9. +ιῡ χῡ post μαρτυριαν with the fam. only boh^{F}. (+ιησου *syr*S).
17 fin. στηναι with fam. only and 36 146.
viii. 1. +και ante εγενετο with the fam. and only 98.
7. εβληθησαν fam. only *boh syr*S.
8. +μερος ante της θαλ. with fam. only and copt latt aeth.
9. +μερος ante των κτισμ. with א the fam. and 36 111 copt latt.
[Curiously enough none of the family add μερος in verse 10, showing that the above additions all trace to one old source].
12. και εσκοτισθη pro ινα σκοτισθη fam. only and *syr*S.
ibid. και η ημερα ουκ εφαινε with fam. only and *syr*S.
ix. 2. ωσπερ pro ως with fam. only. [After this 68 is wanting].
13. μεγαλην pro μιαν with fam. only.
14. τω εχοντι pro ος ειχε with fam. and the important witnesses 111 200.
x. 10. —οτε εφαγον αυτο with fam. only and 113 189 218. Cf. Prim.
xi. 7. τελεσω pro τελεσωσι with 34 and 165 of the fam. but no others.
19. σεισμοι pro σεισμος with the fam., 80-138 146*com.* 203[non fam] and sah$^1/_2$ boh omn. Cf. latt: terraemotus, 'anceps.'
xii. 11. τας ψυχας with the fam. and 23 113 130 copt, latt aliq. Prim. Beat.
xiii. 10. ει τις εις αιχμαλ. ἀπαγει· εις αιχμαλ. υπαγει with 34-124-132-165-181 (35-87) *syr*S and Σ.
13. μεγαλα σημεια with fam. only and 130 sah.
17. μηδεὶς pro μητις with fam. only and 130 200 sah boh.
ibid. πωλησαι η αγορασει +ετι with fam. only. Cf. Prim. quicquam. (Cf. copt. ιε ϭⲧ).
xiv. 6. αγγελον αλλον with fam. only [non 188].
ibid. ευαγγελισασθαι επι with א(CAP) the fam., 111 130 146 f. 178 200 *syr*S.
xv. 2. +την μεμιγμενην πυρι post υαλινην sec. with the fam. and 36 only.
3. φωνην pro ωδην sec. with fam. only. Apparently not a Version influence.
xvii. 4. περικεχρῡσωμενη pro και κεχρυσωμενη with fam. only. Apparently a question of 'pairs' with περιβεβλημενη.

xviii. 2. +και φυλακη παντος θηριου ακαθαρτου with the fam.
10. ουαι ter (pro bis rell.) with fam. and 154-212 *syr*S.
13. —και ult. with fam. only.
16. ουαι ter (pro bis rell.) with fam. and *boh*ᴮ [*non syr*S].
23. επλανησας with fam. only and *syr*S.
xix. 3. εκ δευτερου ειρηκασιν with fam. only and latt.
xxi. 24. των εθνων pro αυτων with fam. and *boh syr*Σ (—*αυτων syr*S).
xxii. 2. +καταγγελλεται post ξυλου with 34-165-188 and 20 32 74 106 113 164 171-174 182 Cass.
11. +και ante ο αδικων with fam. and 164-166 *syr*S, Prim.(autem).

A[gr.] comes in occasionally, as at:

xiii. 5. βλασφημα with A, the fam. and 12 f. 21 22 36 47 109*gr.f.* 119 152 164 f. 178 200 251.
xxii. 11. —και ο ρυπων ρυπωσατω ετι with A, the fam. and 65 67 97 121 122 143 155 164-166 176-206.

The exceptional codex 38 has already shown sympathy. We are alone with it (+the sister 178) at:

iii. 16. +και ελεγχω σε post εμεσαι An addition now confirmed by 165 marg. and 188 of the family. But see Apoc. 200 for the straight half of the conflation, without εμεσαι.
v. 4. ευρεθην pro ευρεθη 38 and 113.

With 36 often in combinations, and alone in iv. 7 with μόσχου.
As to xxi. 12 του pro των υιων read by many, it appears deliberate against all the family.

A curious combination is found at:

xx. 5. ανθρωπων pro νεκρων with B 20 32 74 113 189 and only 34-165-188 of the group. No Versions. (Aug. 'eorum').
xviii. 22. φανη pro ακουσθη sec. with 4 6 20 31 48 64 74 106 171-174 182 and only 34-165.
ii. 17. ειδεν pro εγνω with 26 33 59 88 92 101 106 108 144 161 204 boh.

Larger groups, including the family, are found (involving matters of order) at:

v. 9. καινην ωδην 34-35-68-87-124-132-165-181-188 and 40 56 90 127 161 164-166 170 171-174 211 215 217 Prim. ibid. ημας τω θεω the fam. and f. 7 18 31 36 56 81-204 113 143 169-216 251 latt boh.

Or other matters, as at:

ii. 13. —ος post πιστος with the fam. and f. 6 al.
xi. 1. +και ειστηκει ο αγγελος with fam. and others.
xii. 16. ηνοιξε (—η γη secund.) with fam. and 36 40 41 42 53 etc. gig Anon al.
xiii. 12. τω θηριω τω πρωτω with fam. and 18 41 42 53 55 102 127 149 al.

The group is quite absent at xx. 7 —και οταν τελεσθη τα χιλια ετη with 53 84* 98 218, so we know it is an error (homoiotel.).
So at xix. 15. εκ αυτη pro εν αυτη by 46-88-101-137 is an error from type.
So at xix. 6. ηκουσαν with 72 88 is an error.
So at xii. 12. εν αυτη pro εν αυτοις with 102.

So at xi. 11. —εκ του θεου with 22 55* 74 127 152* latt aliq.
So at xiii. 3. εσφραγισμενην with some, but not the family.
So at x. 5. χειραν with 39 72 98* 222.
So at ix. 5. ως βασανισμον with 120 138.
Or at ix. 11. απολυων with 16 40 56 59 90 98 113 120 151 172-217 226 (but so 188 of the fam.).
Or at vii. 9. οχλος πολλυς with 56 122 200.
Or at i. 9. νησσω with 44 104 201 217.
Or at vi. 14. νησσος with CB 233.
Or at iii. 12. —και εξω usque ad θεου μου sec. with (97 122). Homoiotel.
Or at ii. 5. τα εργα σου τὰ πρότα with 72. (προτερα 59-121).

On the other hand:

xiv. 5. ουτοι εισιν οι ακολουθουντες τω αρνιω pro ενωπιον του θρονου του θεου by 4-48-64 74 is also found in 34-35 132 (hiant 68-87) and the rest of family.

vii. 1. πνευση for πνεη by ℵ (22) 23 40 46 47 88-101 127 130 137 226 is also found in 34-87-132-165-181. (πνευσει 188).

14. ειδας for οιδας by 69 103 121 176 218 is also found in 35.

At i. 11. α pro ο by f. 38 f. 62 f. 119 130 169-216 236 251 *syr*S is also found in the rest of the family.

iv. 4. θρονους pro θρονοι unique agreement is found with the fam. and 146 f. 178 169-216.

I am inclined to think that the lady who copied 132 has maintained the truest and fairest type of the family (which now becomes a nine-fold or ten-fold family). Add 181 and 188 to the group, 165 and 188 being nearest neighbours to 156.

Complutensian Group 10 etc.

Apoc. 157 = Athos, Esphigmenou 186. = Greg. 117 (Ev. 986. Ac. 277. P. 326). [Scr. 157. Greg. old 117, new 986. Sod. δ 508]. XII[th] century, and waterstained. Apoc. 157.

Photographs done by a monk at Athos with the Harvard apparatus reached me in Dec. 1923.

The MS. is of the Compl. family, carefully and honestly copied.

Inscr.: αποκαλυψις του αγιου ιω̃ του αποστολου και ευαγγελιστου θεολογου with 10 96 110 150 of the family.

No ν εφελκ., no iota post., and only these cases of iota subscript:

ii. 2. δύνῃ
xiv. 3. ᾄδουσιν ᾠδὴν [not to ωδην sec. loco].
xv. 3. ᾄδουσι and ᾠδὴν bis.

There are no novelties, with the exception of the following (which constitutes a good record):

ii. 12. —λεγει* (errore)
ix. 21. φόβων pro φόνων
xi. 8. —πολεως
xiv. 14. εἶδον καὶ ἰδοὺ (—και init.),

to which add:

vii. 2. —αλλον with 32 111 and 218 only with Prim.
xiv. 4. γυναικος, the famous generic singular, with 113, 159*ex em.* 164-166 189 214* 222* 227* 228 230 aeth boh sah.
xvii. 4. πορφυραν κοκκινον (—και) with 91 160* only. (κοκκινον πορφυρουν, —και 149-186).
xviii. 12. χρυσοῦν pro χρυσοῦ with P and a few.
xix. 2. πολιν pro πορνην with a few, but not the Compl. group except 49.
xxii. 7. ταυτης pro του βιβλιου τουτου with 121 146-155 only.

Add these six alternative readings, by the first hand:

iv. 8. λεγοντα῾ sic
vii. 17. ποιμᾶνει (αι) sic ibid. ὁδηγήσει (ει) sic (with its sister 110).
xvii. 16. ἠρημωμένην (ε) sic (the inverse occurs in 110).
xviii. 7. ὅσον (ο) sic (the inverse occurs in 92). οσον *latt*¹/₂, εφ' οσον syr and *latt*¹/₂.
xxii. 8. ἔπεσα (ον) sic.

Otherwise it is quite true to type, with the usual characteristic Complutensian readings:

i. 2/3. +και ατινα etc.
iii. 2. α εμελλες αποβαλειν .
18. +επι post εγχρισον
ix. 5. πληξη (without alternative).
11. αββαδδων
xii. 4. τικτειν
xv. 6. ου̅νου̅ pro ναου xvii. 5. πόρνων very definitely, as all Compl. MSS.
xviii. 7. —και πενθος
14. απωλοντο pro απηλθεν sec.
21. —ουτως with the Compl. MSS.

There is one case of omission from homoioteleuton οξυ...οξυ at xiv. 18 involving omission of λεγων πεμψον σου το δρεπανον το οξυ with 16 72 100 130 146 and 154 187 194[A].

There appears to be a one-line subscription but only this is legible:

. . . . ȣ η συχί, τελ[ος] +—

No date is readable at the beginning of the line.

Last of the Group 119-123-144-148-158.

Apoc. 158.

Apoc. 158 (Evl. 389) = Rome, Vat. gr. 2129. [= Greg. 158 (Evl. 561), new 2064. Sod. $A\nu^{62}$]. [XVI] cum com̄.

MS. on stout glazed paper, written in double columns, and probably imitating the parent MS. It is an Andreas com. MS. with the text plainly marked, and is most carefully executed for such a late MS.

It develops immediately that the text is the counterpart of the important group 119-123-144-148, and almost the exact counterpart of 119-144-148.

I have taken the trouble to collate it carefully from the original, because it acts as a fifth check on this very interesting group. A reference back to the Introductions to 119-123 and 144-148 will be all that is necessary to show the exact situation.

158 can be relied upon to give us the true 119-144-148 text, as it is the more carefully executed, and only in spots goes over to 123. It is very rarely alone.

At that peculiar place, xx. 12, we find the five MSS. together:

και βιβλια ηνοιγησαν· και αλλο βιβλιον ηνοιγη, whereas even the family MSS. generally split over this passage.

Enallage. xviii. 5.

A point I did not touch upon under 119-123 was the change of case at xviii. 5, where the four MSS. 119-123-144-158 agree to write ϗ εμνημονευσεν ὁ θσ̄ των αδικηματων αυτης for the accusative ϗ εμνημονευσεν ὁ θσ̄ τα αδικηματα αυτης of all other MSS. here (which I do not find recorded in my collation for 148, but it is also read in 113). It is impossible to date this change, but in view of our other affiliations, which do not give it, it does not go exceedingly far back †. Whether it is bound up in any way with the Latin mind of some scribe or reviser we cannot say, but possibly a sight of the Latin genitive caused the change. While the accusative or even the dative is permissible after μνημονεύω, N.T. Greek generally favours the more usual Greek genitive, only St. Matthew using the accusative (xvi. 9 μνημονεύετε τοὺς πέντε ἄρτους, which St. Mark (viii. 18) turns by: μνημονεύετε ὅτε τοὺς πέντε ἄρτους), and St. Paul once (2 Tim. ii. 8) μνημόνευε ῑν̄ χ̄ν̄ ἐγηγερμένον ἐκ νεκρῶν. Otherwise St. Luke, St. John (xv. 20 τοῦ λόγου, xvi. 4 αὐτῶν, xvi. 21 τῆς θλίψεως) and St. Paul all use the genitive.

The family splits over σημειον αλλον or σημειον αλλο at xii. 3, whilst maintaining this order, and at xiii. 2 as to αρκου or αρκτου, and at xviii. 9 as to επ αυτης, επ αυτη, απ αυτης; but agrees at xxii. 11 as to και ο ρυπαρος ρυπαρευθυτω ετι (except 148).

I do not find any new readings in 158, and there are practically no mistakes. Once at xvii. 3 there is a slip (uncorrected) of εἰσ ἔερημον sic.

† Note that at i. 11, where the family omits the copulas between the various churches named, this is the way Beatus' text read, but I do not find other special sympathy between his text and our family. Beatus' text, however, may here, as largely elsewhere, represent Tyconius and the fourth century. Tyc. is missing in the early part of the Apoc., but Primasius suppresses connecting particles also.

159 is an independent, allied to family 1.

[159 must not be confounded with 59. Both are critical documents].

Apoc. 159 = Rome, Vat. Ott. gr. 154. [= Greg. old 159, new 2065. Sod. Aν[503], and used in his apparatus]. Collated from the original in Rome 1911. [xv chart.] or end xiv. Apoc. 159.

Small book on paper 6 in. × 4½, neatly written in a very small hand. Difficult to date exactly, for the scribe is imitating an older writing. It is of the 1 family with the com. of Andreas. The rubrication was never completed.

There is no inscription proper.

I thought we had about exhausted the small changes to be rung on the 1 family, but this, while in spots supporting 1 alone, runs a new series of readings :

ii. 10. μεχρι (pro αχρι) with 22 and all f. 38 with 113 and 226.
13. —εν αις with CA and 146 f. 178 200 and *syr*S.
26. —ο (ante τηρων) primum with f. 38 172* sah.
iii. 18. εγχριση with f. 38.
iv. 5. —πυρος with 36 *syr*S aeth vg and ps-Ambr. only [against Hier[Dan]].

Nearly all, be it observed, with MSS. of some age, and then it deflects from I to the B type occasionally, as:

ii. 10. παθειν
ibid. ημερας
iv. 7. ανθρωπου (pro ως ανθρωπος)
v. 5. ο ανοιγων (pro ανοιξαι) xiii. 3. —αυτου sec. B* f. 46 58[non fam] 67-120 113 149-186 210[non 40].
xv. 4. αγιος (pro οσιος) B permult.

[It is clearly a critical text, but preserves many old readings and is generally to be counted on in difficult places. For instance we find it in the list above at

xv. 3 fin. for βασιλευς των αιωνων, and shortly afterwards, by omitting εβραιστι at xvi. 16, it gives a sure indication of Græco-Syriac parentage].

As this deflection is accompanied by a particular type of B text, it has its interest, for note:

iii. 5. των ζωντων 61-126-219 80-138.
8. τα εργα (pro τον λογον) 61-95-126-219.
v. 1. κατεσφιγμενον 61-95-126-219.
11. πολλων αγγελων 61-95-126-218-219 166 boh (—πολλων fam 7 omn.).

viii. 8. +εγενετο (ante ως ορος) 61-95-126-218-219 164-166 *syr*S arab.
ibid. +και (ante εβλη sic) 61-95-126-218-219 164-166.

This, with iv. 9 +και προσκυνησουσι (ante τω ζωντι) with 93 and 95 164-166 (219), marks a text before 61-126 and 95 went apart. See also xi. 16 +και (post θρονους αυτων) with ℵ 95-127-215 154 only. Also xii. 17 +και (ante μετα) with 95-127-215 sah only. Also xiii. 8 +αυτων (ante εν) with ℵ* 95-127-215 111 f. 114 122 177 200 syr arm aeth (+αυτου CA 124 130 146 f. 178). Also xiii. 16 λαβωσι το χαραγμα αυτου (pro δωση αυτοις χαραγμα) with 95-127-215 (26-107). Also xiv. 13 +το αγιον (post πνευμα) with 95 124 142*sup* 189. Also xv. 4 τισ σε ου φοβηθη (—μη) with ℵ 95-127-215, and (same verse) +τισ ου (post και prim.) with 95 alone. Also xvi. 3 +των (post απεθανε) with 36 95-127-215 *syr*Σ. Also xvi. 5 +του επι (post αγγελου) with 95-127-215 169-216 251 only. Also xvi. 14 +ακαθαρτων post δαιμονων with 95-127-215 169-216 172-217. Also xvi. 19 —το with ℵ 39 f. 95 130 146*com.* 154 164 212. Also xvii. 6 +του (ante ιησου) with f. 95 136* and Hippolytus. Also xvii. 9 και (pro αι) with 95 187 218 alone. It is true we write αἱ, but it is init. peric., merely omitting the rubricated K (as we do on numberless occasions), and the διορθωτής checks the και, for he adds αἱ thus: αἱ^αι^ἑπτα. Again xviii. 14 +σου (post λιπαρα) with f. 95 only aeth and boh. And xviii. 17 —ὁ (ante τοσουτος) with P f. 95 and 217 only. And xviii. 19 επεβαλλον with f. 95 (A 56). Further xix. 2 +ὁ κσ (ante εξεδικησε) by 159 and 215, +κσ by 95-127 169-216 172-217. Again xix. 5 ἡμῶν· sic +αινειτε (ante παντες) with f. 95 169-216 172-217 again. Further at xix. 15 we write: του θυμου του θεου (θυου errore pro οινου) και τησ οργησ του θυ. By this we mean του θυμου του οινου... as f. 95. Again xix. 16 μετοπον (pro ιματιον) as f. 95 alone μετωπον. Also xx. 4 +ειδον (ante τας ψυχας) 56 (143) f. 95 169-216 172-217 and sah. Same verse +του θηριου (post χαραγμα) 32 56 f. 95 113 169-216 172-217 (59 and copt +αυτου).

The above clearly brings us as a member of the 1 family squarely up against the collateral strain of 95-127-215, which is itself an important mediæval grouplet with stout affiliations with ℵ, and with which 169-216 and 172-217 are in the strongest sympathy; more occasionally 164-166, with such MSS. as 56, 113, 130, 146, 189 more rarely joining this chorus.

Other ancient features of some MSS. also survive here:

In the above list I have underlined 114 (or f. 114) when it comes into the combination, as this MS. (see beyond) has the same exceptional subscription as 159.

The situation is complicated (but not obscured) by many new readings, which I tabulate for reference, underlining the more striking ones, which require explanation.

The most interesting of the above I think, are:

ix. 17. ιπποντων. If ιππευοντων is meant then the lion-like hair refers to the riders and not to the manes of the horses.

xi. 8. +ριφησεται

xviii. 20. +αγαλλιασθε.

Two being additions, I do not think that our rather careless scribe did this himself, but found both in his original. [See the subscription to the volume].

159 runs with 46-88-101 alone at vi. 7 +την (ante φωνην), and with 46-88-101 and 53 119 at xii/xiii which it joins, omitting και ειδον εκ της θαλασσης. [This is one of the few places where 158 opposes its sister 119]. Note also εσταθη xii. 18.

The 62/3 relationship is seen at ii. 13 +οτι πας μαρτυς πιστος.

Referring to the MS. 1 it may be interesting to trace a very close relationship here, (Against 1 see iv. 7 ανου (pro ως ανοσ); ix. 4 fin. [αυτων]; xv. 6 [και περιεζ. περι]; xix. 1 φων. μεγ. οχλ. πολλ. 159 but fam 1 om. μεγαλην; xix. 6 [ως prim.]; xx. 5 ανεζησαν αχρι against 1 62-3 72 80 ανεστησαν αχρι. Of these no doubt at xv. 6 and xix. 1 our 159 is right and the other 1 members are wrong).

As to an indistinct original, consult such places as:

x. 10. κοικηα for κοιλια where 81 also went wrong.

xi. 7. ημεραν for μαρτυριαν where 90 122 had trouble.

And as to this original being polyglot, consult:

xiv. 9. where we write ἐπὶ του μετώτου* for επι του μετωπου αυτου (14-92 and 46-88-101 omit αυτου).

And in the same verse we have καὶ λ τὴν χεῖρα sic exactè for ἢ ἐπὶ τὴν χεῖρα while copt omits επι and 21 with syr omit the clause.

Further note xviii. 20 where we alone add αγαλλιασθε before οἱ αγιοι. Only Hipp. writes αγγελοι for αγιοι. This carries the trouble back far. Is it possible that 159 here preserves a lost reading?

Subscription. We now come to the subscription, which gives us a reason for some of these interesting variants and reversions, for to our surprise we stumble on the same subscription which graced the end of Apoc. 114 (another Vat. MS. gr. 542). It runs, after the close of the Epilogue to the commentary:

> στεον ('I rubric missing) ὡσ ὁ τῆσ πάρουσ' βίβλου συγγραψεὺσ, ταῦτ αἰτήσασ ἐντίμοισ προσώπ πρ' ἐντευξ πρασχόμενος· εἶτα τοῦ ἀναδοῦν τὴν βίβλον ὀκνησάντο› αὐτὸσ τινὰ τῶν σχιδαρι οὐ φιλοπόνωσ φυλάξασ ἀλλὰ παραρρίψασ οἷσ (vel ὡσ ut in Vat. 542) ἔτυχε, πάλιν αἰτηθεὶσ παρ' ἑτέρων τοῖσ μὲν σεσωσμωμενοισ (compendiis) τῶν σχιδαρι εἰσ τὴν συγγραφ' συνεχρήσατο τῶν ἀπολειπομένων (compendiis) [Vat. 542: απολλυμενων] δε τὴν διάνοι (=διάνοιαν) [Vat. 542 διαννοι] ἐν ὀλίγοισ sic (contra Vat. 542 λογοις) χωρίοισ ὡσ εἰκὸσ ἐν ἑτερ (ετεραις?) συνεξέφρασε [Vat. 542: εξεφρασε] λέξεσιν. εἰ (sic) νυν [Vat. 542: τοι νυν] διαφωνία μικρά· τῆς [Vat. 542 σμικρατισ] ἐν ταῖσ λέξεσι φαίνοντο› μηδαμῶς ξενισμ [Vat. 542: ξενισμον] ἐνποιήσοι τοῖσ ἐντυγχάνουσι τῆσ διανοίασ μενούσησ τῆσ αὐτῆσ καὶ ἐν [om. Vat. 542] τῇ βραχυτατῃ παραλλαγῇ τῶν λέξεων.

The outstanding difference here is ἐν ὀλίγοισ χωρίοισ So 139 159 and 203 against εν λογοισ χωριοισ of Vat. 542.

There is no scribe's signature.

The date of the MS. is, however, certainly earlier than 1480, for we have an *in*scription by a subsequent owner as follows:

> ἐν τω ἔτει ϛϡοη (=1470) ἦλθων εἰσμάσιλητάι εισπόλην οἴδρουσίσ: ἐν μηνή ἰουλήω ἡμέρα: κη ἡμέρα παρασκεβι (sic) τοῦ αὐτοῦ ἔτουσ ϗ ἔλαβον αὐτη τῇ (ex emend. prob. τι*) πόλει (ει ex em. prob. πολι*) ἐν μηνή αὔγουστο ἡμέρα ι α τοῦ αὐτοῦ ἔτουσ ἡμέρα παρασκεβι (sic): ἰμ: ι γ † καὶ ἐν τω ἔτεῖ ϛϡοθ ἤλθέν ὠ δούκασ τησ καλαωριασ ἀ προτόσ υἱόσ \\\\\\ ταρίγοσ τῆσ ἀνάπολησ. μετα χιλήάδων. μ. ἀνδρων μετα θαλασίσ. ϛ ἐν γη· ϗ ἦλθέ. ἐν πολει (ει ex em.) ἴδρούσισ ἐν μήνη ιουνήω εἰστε: ι γ. ἡμέρα τεταρτι (vid.) τοῦ αὐτοῦ μίνοσ ϗ ἐπολέμισαν αὐτῆ· τι πόλη· ἑώσ τοῦ σεπτενβριόυ μινὸσ. ϗ ἔλαβεν αὐτή· τι πόλη εἰστε. ι. τοῦ αὐτοῦ μινόσ· ημερα δευτέρα τρεχόντωσ ἔτεί ϛϡοπ (sic vid.) ἰν) ιε.

There is a mistake here of ten years in the date first given. It should be ϛϡπη (=1480), which not only corresponds to the indiction belonging to that year of 13 (here given 'ι γ'), while the indiction for 1470 is 4, but the 11th August cited corresponds to the very day in 1480 when the Turks captured Otranto. See Geschichte der Päpste by Ludwig Pastor, Freiburg i/Breisgau 1904, p. 560 (where other references are given in the footnote), in which place a sketch of the matter may be found, including the Ducal expedition here referred to. The date at the end of our inscription should no doubt be 1481.

The MS. was therefore very likely executed in Southern Italy, as it cannot have been very old when it came into the possession of the owner, who has scribbled this on a fly-leaf.

Notwithstanding the subscription, the text is not the text of 114, but we have now recovered the text of 114 (without the subscription) in Apoc. 193, a MS. at Jerusalem (S. Saba 537), which does not extend to the end. We thus lose the subscription, which might have settled the matter of the reading of εν ολιγοις χωριοις or εν λογοις χωριοις. A third member of the 114 group is 241 (at Stauroniketa, Athos), which has the full subscription and reads λογοις χωριοις.

Complutensian Family.

Apoc. 160. Apoc. 160 (Ev. 1072. Ac. 284. P. 476). Athos, Lauræ Γ 80 = Greg. 118 (Ev. 1072. Ac. 284. P. 333). [Scr. 160. Greg. 118, new 1072. Sod. δ 406]. [XIV] or earlier.

Collated Aug. 1923 from photographs supplied through Harvard College, who have sent me photos of nearly all the Laura MSS. They seem to be all of one type, and this and the next one are pure Complutensian and go to swell the 10 family. This MS. and the next, Apoc. 161, are absolute sisters,—both have a few scholia in the margins,—and evidently copied from the same parent MS. and within fifty years of each other in the course of the XIVth century. They agree in all the characteristic readings of the group, and besides this have certain peculiarities in common, such as writing ὧδε consistently with smooth breathing, ἕως οὗ thus, ἀφ οὗ, ἀνα εἰς without breathing, and so on.

Ap. 160 writes κοιλιαν as if it might be κουιλιαν, thus: κȣιλιαν and πλȣιων for πλοιων. Not so 161. They are inconsistent as to the employment of numerals. Ap. 160 occasionally uses iota subscr. with ᾅδης (although the elder of the two MSS.), but 161 does not. At ix. 5 we find πληξη in 160 (although ηξη has been rewritten by the com. hand). In 161 we find παιση in the text and πληξη in the margin.

Complutensian Family.

Apoc. 161. Apoc. 161 (Ev. 1075. Ac. 286. P. 478). Athos, Lauræ Λ 195 = Greg. 119 (Ev. 1075. Ac. 286. P. 334). [Scr. 161. Greg. 119, new 1075. Sod. δ 506]. [XIV].

Compl. type. Collated from photos supplied by Harvard College in Aug. 1923. See the previous MS., a full sister to this one. Ap. 161 is very undecided as to επεσον or επεσα, επεσαν or επεσον, and gives both readings almost throughout.

But it will be best to indicate the exact differences between these MSS. 160 and 161 as a record of scribal accuracy in the XIVth century at Athos, and pass on, as there is nothing which need otherwise detain us.

The inscription is the same in both MSS.:

αποκαλυψις του αγιου ιωαννου του αποστολου και ευαγγελιστου θεολογου (without του before θεολογου).

GROUP 62-63-72-136-147-162-163-184. (Family 1).

Apoc. 162 = Venice, S. Marc. I. 40. [= Greg. 162, new 2068. Sod. Αν[65]]. (In the manuscript appendix catalogue of MSS. not printed). [XVI] cum com̄. Apoc. 162.

Very late MS. on poor paper with poor ink and poor handwriting. This MS. 162 and the following 163 are both of the 1 family and close to 62-63 and 72 and 136, and practically the same as 147 at Modena. It seems to me it would be a waste of time and space to add 162 and 163 to our apparatus, but for completeness sake I suppose I must do it. The few unique readings in 147 are, however, not found supported in 162.

The Prologue of Andreas begins the MS. Then, before the text and commentary, we read ἀρχὴ σὺν θῷ ἁγίῳ: κείμενον.

At vi. 12 the MS. has ϗ ειδον οτι ηνοιξε την προέκτην (sic) σφραγιδα.

There is no subscription.

I find no detailed collation of this MS. in my Venice notebooks, having evidently put in the readings in my 147 book. I shall try and avoid any errors, and those of omission will be really of no importance.

I have placed a query after a few readings, of which I am not absolutely certain.

GROUP 62-63-72-136-147-162-163-184. (Family 1).

Apoc. 163 = Venice, S. Marc. II. 54. [= Greg. 163, new 2069. Sod. Αν[59]]. [XV. XVI] cum com̄. Apoc. 163.

Large folio on paper. Apoc. on pp. 1–30.

Before the Prologue of Andreas, and on the first page, is a list of the chapters, preceded by "πιναξ των κεφ. της ερμηνειας της αποκαλ/ του αγιου αποστολου ϗ εναγγ. ιωαννου του θεολογου . . ."

No inscription proper before the text. At the end only τελος.

Very neatly written MS. Of the same family as 62/3 72 136 147 and 162, but these Italian codices do not seem to be directly copied from each other; 163 not from 162, nor 147 from 163, nor 163 from 147, for 147 is nearer 62 than the other codices in Italy.

They all derive from an original, which now is probably mislaid or destroyed. If an older codex turns up, these MSS. can be re-compared with it. It would be a waste of time and space to swell our apparatus further with more MSS. of this type. The only result would be to pick up a few individual scribal infirmities.

The same remarks apply here as to the foregoing MS.

They all belong to the sub-group of the 1 family: 62-63-72-136-147-162-163.

In the collations I print 62-63, but 162/163, hoping thereby to avoid ambiguity as to confusion between the two sets of doublet MSS., which happen to have these symbols, a hundred MSS. apart.

GROUP 164-166. Supercritical type of Fam. B and allied to f. 61.

Apoc. 164. Apoc. 164. Hag. Annae XI. Athos. [Early xv cent. with com.]. [Scr. 164. Greg. 164, new 2070. Sod. Αν[403]].

Ms. stained with water, and the first part difficult to read. Collated July 1923 from photographs by courtesy of Harvard College. Taken by a local monk.

This is a real Arethas MS. (misgrouped by Soden), but differing both in text and com. from Apoc. 6 (Oxford) and Apoc. 64 (Paris, Nat. 224). The latter not to be confounded with Paris Coislin 224, which Scrivener failed to catalogue, and which was published by Cramer in 1844 as to the commentary. [See our next No. 165]. Our commentary proves to be very close to the latter, but there are quite important differences.

Below a good arabesque we begin with this introduction :

εξηγησις εις την θε οπνευστον βιβλον ταυτην
της αποκαλυψεως
Αποκαλυψις εστιν ἡ των φρικτων (Coislin 224 = κρυπτων).
μυστηρι̅ δηλωσις · καταυγαζομενου του ηγεμονικου · ειτε δια θειων (Coislin + της ψυχης after ηγεμονικου).
ονειρατων · ειτε καθ' υπαρ εκ θειας ελλαμψεως

Here the text begins.

There is absolutely no trace of iota sub. or postscript, but on the other hand no ν εφελκ. Chi is sometimes made in a peculiar manner like a crossed gamma, thus: χαλκολιβανω.

The text is apparently in red ink and comes out very badly in the photos.

There is much independence in it, but for the first eleven chapters it accords with the peculiar readings of the group 61-95-126.

I don't know where Cramer got his +και οσα ηκουσε in the text of i. 2, for it does not occur in our MS.—nor in Apoc. 6 or 64. It has been found so far by me only in Apoc. 168 (Athos Dochearii 81), a MS. dated 1798 and apparently copied from a printed text.

There are a number of new readings in our MS. 164, some of them quite startling.

Novelties. Perhaps the most outstanding are as follows :

iv. 1. διδαξω σε pro δειξω σοι (without Version support).

[N.B.—In this same verse, we omit ἡ πρωτη with *syr*S only].

ix. 18. απεκρουσθησαν pro απεκτανθησαν

xvii. 16. ερημωσουσιν αυτην pro ηρημωμενην ποιησουσιν αυτην (Cf. aeth and boh; non lat. nec arm. nec syr.).

xxii. 17 init. + εγω ιησους, making it a triad and a trilogy: "Εγω ιησους και το πνευμα και η νυμφη λεγουσιν ερχου."

[N.B.—Complete omission in the text of the following words: και ο ακουων ειπατω ελθε (or ερχου), with 35 90 139 142 200 215 aeth arm Tyc.].

In all the above 166 agrees.

The whole treatment of xxi. 19/20 as to the precious stones is new. In xxi. 19 we read in the text ἄνθραξ pro χαλκηδων. But in 166 καρχηδων txt. +ος και ανθραξ ονομαζεται (Nil in com.).

The com. follows immediately in 164, saying :

"οὗτος καὶ καρχηδών ὀνομάζεται γίνεται γὰρ ἐν' καρχηδόνι τῆς λϊβύης · ἥτις καὶ ἀφρϊκή λέγεται · ὀξϋφοινϊσος μέν ἐστϊ τὸ εἴδει · φασὶ δὲ αὐτόν οὐκ ἐν ἡμέρα · ἀλλ' ἐν νύκτὶ εὑρΐσκεσθαι · πορρωθεν δΐκην λαμπάδος · ἢ ἄνθρακος σπϊνθηρακΐζων · καὶ ὥραν καταπαυόμενος · ἐπϊγνόντες δὲ οἱ τοῦτον ζητοῦντες, ὅτι οὗτος ἐστὶν, ἀπέρχονται πρὸς τὴν ἀπαυγήν αὐτοῦ · καὶ εὑρίσκουσι αὐτόν · βασταζόμενος δὲ, ὁποίοις ἂν ἱματίοις κατακαλϋφθῇ, ἡ αὐτοῦ ἔξω τῆς περϊβολῆς φαίνει · ἄνθρακα γὰρ ὁ ἠγαπημένος θεολόγος τὸν ἀπόστολον ἐκάλεσεν ἀνδρέαν · κατὰ τροπὴν τοῦ δασέοσθ', εἰς τὸ μέσον αὐτοῦ τοῦ δ' ἄνδραξ γὰρ καὶ ἄνθραξ κέκληται ὁ ἀνδρέας · ὡς ἀναφθείσ ἐμφϋσήματι θείω τοῦ παναγ' πνσ."

This is much longer than in Cramer's edition of Coislin 224, where the text is given as: ο τριτος χαλκηδων, and the schol. as: οὗτος ἐν τῷ ἱερατικῷ λογείω οὐ φέρεται, ἀλλ' ἄνθραξ ὃς ἐνταῦθα οὐ κεῖται · σκοπητέον οὖν μήποτε τὸν ἄνθρακα οὕτως ἐκάλεσεν ὁ ἅγιος · ἄνθραξ δὲ ὁ ἀπόστολος 'Ανδρέας, ὡς ἀναφθεὶς ἐκ τοῦ πνεύματος" and no more.

In addition to this we have in our 164 text [but not in 166] +λιθος after ιασπις, and +λιθος και θεμελιος after δευτερος, τριτος, τεταρτος, πεμπτος, εκτος, εβδομος, ογδοος, ενατος, δεκατος, ενδεκατος and δωδεκατος, besides +ὁ before χρυσολιθος and βηρυλλιος and χρυσοπρασος and αμεθυσος, but not before the other stones; while we omit ὁ before ογδοος (with 21 and 67 and 159).

There are long scholia after each stone describing its characteristics and place of origin, and identifying it with one of the twelve apostles, including the twelfth for Judas, although he is not mentioned by name, but only as: "και τον του εκπεπτωκοτος τοπον ανα πληρωσαντος ποθω της προς τον εκλεξαμην ευαρεστεως χ̅ν̅."

Now comes another list of somewhat less startling readings, but all are noteworthy:

ii. 1. +και συνεχων post ὁ κρατων 164 (συνεχων suprascript. super ο κρατων 166).
8. της εν σμυρνηι (—εκκλησιας) 164 (τω εν σμυρνη εκκλ. 166 222, της εν τη σμυρνη εκκλ. 216).
13. οπου ο σατανας κεῖται (pro οπου κατοικει ο σατανας) 164 (κατοικει 166 rell., οικει 240).
19. και την πιστιν και την διανοιαν (pro . . . διακονιαν) 164-166.

iv. 1. —ἡ πρωτη 164 with *syr*S arab and 233 [non 166].

v. 6. ἅπερ εἰσϊ pro οἱ εἰσι 164 [non 166].

vi. 1. εκ του ενος pro ενος εκ [των τεσσαρων ζωων] 44 164 and so arm a. [non 166].
11. και οι συνδουλοι ημων pro και οι συνδουλοι αυτων 164 [non 166. Om. cl. 36 130].
12. και ὁ σάκκος τρίχινος pro ὡς σάκκος τρίχινος 164-166. (aeth omits altogether).
ibid. σκοτος εγενετο και αιματωδης pro εγενετο ως αιμα, continuing straight on with the text of verse 13. This, therefore, is text in 164. The com. has: "το δε μελαντου ηλιου και της σεληνης, το αφεγγες και αιματωδες . ." (aeth. adds 'in-totalitate sua'), but 166 while adding σκοτος before εγενετο omits ως αιμα altogether, and the scholia are silent.

viii. 9. —και το τριτον των πλοιων διεφθαρη txtt. 164-166 (although com. in 164 has at its close: . . . "εν τω καιρω της αυτου συγχωρησεως · το τριτον των εν θαλασση νησων τε και πλοιων και νηκτων διαφθερεῖ · ωσπερ παλαι επι του ἰωβ πεποιηκεν · ειδε και τοις εν θαλασση του βιου δι' εργων ἢ λογων την τριαδα βλασφημουσιν, ο ψυχικος επαγεται θανατος ουδε ξενον, ουδε του σκοπου απεμφαινον."

x. 5. —και επι της γης 164-166. [Habent ver. 8].
7. ετελειωθη pro τελεσθη 164-166.

xii. 6. παρα θεου pro απο του θεου txt (silet com.) 164-166 and 218 [non 61-95-126-219] (of the woman and her place in the wilderness). Cf. John's Gospel i. 6.

xiv. 7. —και την γην 164-166 (and 188 fortuitously).
ibid. fin. +πολλων 164 txt. (silet com.). [non 166].

xviii. 1. —η γη Possibly expressly 164-166. The com. in 164 says: "Καντευθεν το φωτεινον και λαμπρον των αγιων δεικνυται δυναμεων · πολλῷ τω μετρω το ἀστρῷον φωτιστϊκον υπερ νικῶν σέλας."

No variation except γυνη pro η γη by 8 16* 24 140.

xviii. 12. θεῖον pro θυινον 164*txt* (silet com.) [non 166]. No others. [ⲐⲒⲚⲞⲚ sah, ⲐⲨⲒⲚⲞⲚ boh].

13. [και σωματων] και ψυχων (pro ψυχας ανθρωπων) 164 [non 166]. 108 and 176-206 have σωματων και ψυχων but add ανθρωπων, and 14-92 have ψυχων ανθρ. pro σωματων ανθρ.

xxi. 22. ὁ γαρ κ̅σ̅ ὁ θ̅σ̅ ὁ πατοκρατωρ ναος αυτος εστι και το αρνιον 164. This αυτος replaces αυτης of the usual text. [non 166]. *Syr*S, however, agrees, but adds αυτης: "αυτος ναος αυτης." The com. in our MS. is as follows:

"τις χρειαν ναου αισθητου ουτος γαρ εσται των αγιων και ναος και ενοικος · ενοικων εν αυτοις και εμπεριπατων καθως επηγγελται το αρνιον (τω αρνιω*)."

Yet a third class of such variants is to be mentioned, beginning with:

i. 5. ος μαρτυς πιστος εστι (pro ο μαρτυς ο πιστος) 164 with all fam 34 [non 166]. Cf. latt.

8. —ο ων και ο ην και ο ερχομενος ο παντοκρατωρ 164-166.

9. —πατμω. 164-166*txtt*. (Habet 164 com. +οἰκεῖν καταδῖκασθείς).

14. —αυτου prim. 164 [non 166].

iii. 3. οὐ μὴ pro οὖν μὴ 67 164 [non 166]. (—ουν sec. 40 102 166 Verss. aliq.).

7. και τω αγγελω της φιλαδελφειας (—εν et —εκκλησιας) 164 [non 166]. Cf. syr.

18. βαλη pro περιβαλη *txt.*164 et 166. (164 com.: περιβαλη).

20. +μου post θυραν prim. 164 [non 166]. Quite extraordinary. (+σου arm^{alia}).

ibid. ελευσομαι pro εισελευσομαι 164-166.

iv. 11. —και ante την τιμην 164 233 [non 166].

ibid. fin. +παντα 164-166. (+haec Prim.).

v. 5. οτι pro ο ων 164 [non 166].

vi. 8. εξουσια επι της γης αποκτειναι (—το τεταρτον) 164-166 (with 58 fortuitously).

viii. 2. —οἱ ante ενωπιον et +οἵτινες ante εστηκασι 164-166.

xi. 11. θεου ης (ita: θ̅υ̅ησ) pro ζωης 164 233 [non 166]. Cf. boh.

18. διαφθαρηναι pro διαφθειραι 164-166. (So only 146*com.*).

xii. 11. —ουκ 164-166. (Silet 164*com.*).

12. οἰκουντες pro σκηνουντες 164 [non 166] (κατοικουντες ℵ al.; κατασκηνουντες C).

xiii. 7. —και γλωσσαν 164*txt* [non 166] (sed 164*com.* κατα πασης μεν φυλης φησι και γλωσσης).

12. και τους εν αυτη οἰκουντας 164 txt(silet com.). [non 166].

xiv. 4. +υπο χριστου ante ηγορασθησαν 164-166. (Silet 164*com.*). Others have +υπο ιησου.

15. και pro οτι sec. 164-166 arm aliq. (164*com.* = το γαρ ξηρανθηναι τον θερισμον).

xv. 8. σαλπιγγες pro πληγαι 164-166. Absunt schol. in 164.

xviii. 10. αυτου pro αυτης 164 [non 166 vid.]. (αυτων by 31 f. 114).

11/12. αγοραζει · ουτε γομον χρυσου 164-166. Id est ουτε pro ουκετι. (Cf. aeth).

xix. 15. —του θυμου 164-166 *Cypr. Prim. syr*Σ gig boh^{tres}. Id est: "του οινου της οργης του θεου." (164*com.* has του οινου του θυμου tantum, followed by "ὅτῖ ὁ πατήρ οὐ κρῖνει οὐδένα").

xx. 12/13. At end of verse 12 after αυτων +εκαστος (new) and verse 13 omitted entirely by 164-166. Supplied at foot of page by 164, but the net result is an omission of και εδωκεν η θαλασσα τους εν αυτη νεκρους at beginning of verse 13, and to read the second clause as τους νεκρους αυτων (new), and και εκριθησαν κατα τα εργα αυτων (new), εκαστος following, which would eliminate it at end of verse 12.

xxi. 16. μηκος pro υψος 113 164 [non 166].

We have still to add a fourth list of unique readings, of less importance :

i. 4. εν ασια (—τη) 164-166.
16. τη χειρι αυτου pro τη δεξια αυτου χειρι 164 [non 166].
19. +επι τη δεξια μου post ειδες 164 [non 166].

12. +αυτης post πυλωσιν 164 [non 166]. Cf. super eas *syr*Σ (—πυλωσιν).
27. Over καὶ ὁ ποιῶν is written in 164 +ἢ ἀκαθαρτον evidently to follow κοινον as Apoc. 113. And 164*com.* has κοινον και (ex emend.) ακαθαρτον.
xxii. 1. +μεσου post εκ 164*txt* [non com., non 166]. 113 has +μεσω.
ibid. fin. —και του αρνιου 164*txt.* Com. has και δια του αρνιου δια μεσου των υπερ τα των δυναμεων.
2 init. +και το αρνιον 164 joining it to what follows, while 166 has και το αρνιον in text and does not join it to verse 2.

Here ends rather an unpleasant task at this late date of chronicling these things.

For the rest, we find real basic agreement here and there, among all this independence, as between 164-166 conjointly with the small family group 61-95-126-218-219 quite alone as a rule, as at :

iv. 5. καιομεναι πυρος 164-166. We do not repeat fam. 61 below, but it agrees throughout.
10. —ενωπιον του θρονου 164-166.

v. 12. —και πλουτον 164-166.

12. και το τριτον μη φανη η ημερα · και η νυξ ομοιως · (pro και η ημερα μη φαινη usque ad fin. vers.) 164-166.

ix. 1. πεπτωκοτα εκ του ουρανου 164-166.

5. αδικησωσιν pro αποκτεινωσιν 164-166.

xi. 18. +σου post αγιοις 164-166 (and f. 38 sah).

xii. 9. ο οφις ο μεγας ο αρχαιος 164-166 (and f. 95).

But the basic text is not a late one, as can be seen from the following unusual agreement with other authorities back to Hippolytus. We will begin by calling attention to xiv. 4, and then take the other places in order.

At xiv. 4 then we find the generic γυναικος singular for the usual plural γυναικων. "Οὗτοι εἰσιν οἱ μετὰ γυναικός οὐκ ἐμολύνθησαν." This is found in aeth and boh and sah, but only in my Apoc. 113 157 (159) and 189 214* 227* 228 230. This looks like revision, but it is either basic or ought to be in the nature of the phrase.

We now proceed in order:

i. 6. —και το κρατος txt. & com. with f. 97 102 boh[G*] Apr. [non 166].

16. —ο λαμπρος Simply ὁ αστηρ ὁ πρωινος with 35 121 and 166. (Com. in 164 has αστηρ δε πρωινος tantum).

All the above, it will be seen, are of considerable interest. It remains to ascertain how close Coislin 224 (or Apoc. 165) is to our text. The following will show that there is no real relation, except as to the common elements linked up in the 34 family. In the apparatus I have unfortunately sometimes connected 164/5 thus before I came to 166. In reality 164 and 166 are much closer than 164 and 165. (166 is at Athos in a different monastery, Vatopedi 659).

FAMILY 34-35-68-87-(124)-132-156-165-181-188.

Apoc. 165. Apoc. 165 = Paris, Coislin 224. [Greg. 121, new 250. Sod. O[10]].

As the old 165 (Batopedi 90) appears to be non-existent, I have moved into this place the important XI[th] cent. MS. Coislin 224 of the Arethas text and com., so as to bring it next to 164 and 166 (although these are half-sisters and 165 only a distant cousin).

[Scrivener had neglected this entirely, owing no doubt to its being confused with Paris nat. 224 (our Apoc. 64), but it is quite a different MS.]. The MS. was photographed for me in 1923 by Lecuyer of Paris.

It soon develops that 165 is only sister to 164 as to the commentary, for the text of 165 falls into the 34 family pure and simple, with the closest affinity for 34 itself, including the inscription, (thus at xi. 7 both have τελεσω for τελεσωσι).

We have to do with a thoroughly honest scribe, however, for he has no unique readings at all, and but two slight errors (apart from the family text), viz. at xvi. 8 writing τεταρχος with deliberation for τεταρτος (but this is found in 156 of the family), and at xxi. 9 adding (apparently) μοι after λεγων. This is a wonderful record.

The handwriting is very good, and the general execution reminds one of the sister MS. 132, but they are by totally different scribes. Our scribe of 165 makes quite a peculiar alpha with a tail or tongue, thus: ɑ, and this perpetually. He uses iota post. with considerable frequency, but ν εφελκ. rarely.

There is one single marginal addition, viz. at iii. 16, where we add και ελεγχω σε after εμεσαι (which word happens to come at the end of a line), and which is found in some of the 34 family and in 38-178 the 'Patmos' group.

Towards the close we go with the other Arethas family MSS. 4-20-48-64-74 and 6-31-106 +34, but without the rest of the 34 family which are extant. These families all draw together occasionally, but there is no systematic tripartite agreement. *Syr*S joins our smaller group in some interesting places.

The commentaries of 165 and 164 are close, but not always in verbal agreement.

Cramer seems to think that the com. is a mixture of Andreas, Arethas and Oecumenius, but I fail to find many traces of Oecumenian influence (for we now have 146 as the standard checked by 203 and 240), and it seems to be the full Arethas com., and is interesting. Cramer copies it fairly accurately; but on his very first page has added τῆς ψυχῆς to the text in line two without MS. authority. The text headings interspersed amongst the com. have nothing to do with our text. Thus at i. 9 he prints κοινωνος as a text 'renvoi,' but the text (as well as the com.) has συγκοινωνος.

Our MS. knows nothing of ανθραξ in the text at xxi. 19, which is used by Apoc. 164, and our com. is much shorter; merely "οὗτος ἐν τῷ ἱερατικῷ λογείῳ οὐ φέρεται· ἀλλ' ἄνθραξ· ὃς ἐνταῦθα οὐκ ἔσται· σκοπητέον οὖν μήποτε τὴν ἄνθρακα οὕτως ἐκάλεσεν ὁ ἅγιος· ἄνθραξ δὲ ὁ ἀπόστολος ἀνδρέας ὡς ἀναφθεὶς ἐκ τοῦ πνεύματος."

And at xxi. 20 as to τοπαζιον we find "Διὰ τοῦ τοπαζίου ἐρυθροῦ ὄντος καὶ ἐοικότος τῷ ἄνθρακι καὶ ὀπον ἀφιέντος γαλακτώδη ὀφθαλμιῶσιν ἀλεξίπονον...."

The Apoc. is found on pp. 334 to 373, but preceding it we find on 330 verso a heading (in semi-uncials) as follows (printed by Cramer on p. 173):

ἐκ τῶν οἰκουμενίωι τῶι μακαρίωι ἐ πισκόπωι τρίκκηϲ θεϲϲαλίαϲ · θεοφιλῶϲ πεπονημένων εἰϲ την ἀποκάλυψιν λικὴ μετὰ τῆϲ Δεούϲηϲ ὅϲον κατὰ σύνοψιν ἀνελλιποῦϲ ἀνταρκείαϲ · χε̄ ὁ θϲ̄ σύμπραξον ἡμῖν :

Surrounding this and the following pages is a chain list of the chapters, headed τὰ κεφάλαια τῆς ὀπτανθείσης ἐν πάτμω τῶ εὐαγγελιστῆ ἰωάννη ἀποκαλύψεως, and beginning:

ᾱ. Προοίμιον τῆς ἀποκαλύψεως καὶ ὅτι διὰ ἀγγέλου αὐτῶ δέδοται·
β̄. Ὀπτασια· ἐν ᾗι τὸν ιυ̅ ἐθεάσατο ἐν μέσω ἑπτὰ λυχνιῶν· Γ̄. Τὰ γεγραμμένα πρὸς τὸν τῆς ἐφεσίων ἐκκλησίας ἄγγελον· and so forth (printed by Cramer, pp. 177/180).

The text begins as follows (printed by Cramer, pp. 174/5):

Ὅτι καὶ τοῦτο τὸ σύγγραμμα·

I find only the following differences:

P. 173, line 9 of Cramer. ἔδειξε of Cramer should be ἔδοξε.
P. 174, note e of Cramer. Coisl. does not have Κολασσεῖς but κολασσαεῖς plainly.
P. 174, note f of Cramer. Coisl. does not omit τάτε.
P. 174, line 3 from bottom. Read εστιν for εστι.
P. 175, line 5, note k. Coisl. reads συγχυθεντων and not συγχυσθεντων.

Otherwise there are no mistakes.

Next follows a full page painting of St. Matthew, so labelled: ὁ ἅγιος ματθαῖος, and then the Apocalypse proper.

As to the κεφάλαια and Cramer's pp. 177/180, the heading is wrong. The heading of Coisl. agrees with Cramer's note, where it is attributed to Barocc.

It is not necessary to check these pages for minutiae, and I forbear to do it.

But Cramer does not seem to reproduce what we find on p. 329 recto and verso and 330 recto of the Coisl. MS., which is as follows:

F°. 329 recto. Περὶ τῆς ἐν πάτμωι τῆ νήσω συγγραφῆς τῆς θείας ἀποκαλύψεως· ἣν ἀπεκάλυψεν ὁ κύριος ἡμῶν καὶ θέος. τῶι δούλωι αὐτοῦ ἰῶ τῶ θεολόγω.

Not very elegant Greek, nor very illuminating!

The whole surrounded by long and closely written scholia, beginning:

Βουλομένοις ἡμῖν(?) διηγήσασθαι περὶ τοῦ μετὰ πόσους χρόνους τῆς χριστοῦ ἀναλήψεως συνεγράφη ἡ παροῦσα ἀποκάλυψις· ἀναγκαῖον ἐφάνη ἀναποδίσαι καὶ ἄνωθεν ποιήσασθαι τὴν ἀρχὴν· φημὴ(?) δὴ ἀπὸ τῆς τοῦ φανέντος ἀστέρος τοῖς μάγοις· ὡς ἂν εὐδρομώτερος ἡμῖν ὁ λέγων πρὸς τὴν ὑπόθεσιν φανειν καὶ εὐδηλότερον τὰ τῆς διηγήσεως σχοίη· ἀπὸ τῆς ἐν ἀνθρωπήσεως τοίνυν τοῦ κυρίου ἡμῶν ἰησοῦ χριστοῦ· μέχρι τῆς τῶν μάγων παρουσίας· εἰσιν ἔτη β̄ . . . .

I forbear from ruining my eyes by trying to read more from the photographs.

It seems unnecessary to reprint here the characteristic readings of the 34 family. They are all here.

The family now is 34-35-68-87-124-132-156-165, to which we are going to add at least two more, viz. 181-188.

GROUP 164-166.

Apoc. 166 = Athos, Vatopedi, modern No. 659. Greg.-Dobschutz new 2305, not in Soden. [XIII]. Apoc. 166.

I have also removed the old Vatopedi 90bis from this place, as it appears non-existent, and replaced it with the above MS., as it turns out to be a close sister to 164 and is thus brought near to it in the list.

Collated from photos supplied by courtesy of the Univ. of Michigan, on whose behalf Dr. Lake and Mr. Swain photographed numerous MSS. in the East in the Summer of 1925.

To his horror, however, Dr. Lake found that fresh changes had been made in catalogue numbers at Athos once more, and, not content with renumbering at Vatopedi, they had pasted the new numbers over the backs of the old, so that no comparison could be made.

This MS. 166 is of the B family, but of the supertype 164, which accords for the first twelve chapters with the singularities of the small group 61-95-126-218-219,† besides indulging in further liberties, although at times 164 and 166 may be reproducing ancient traditions.

Many of the stranger readings of 164 are present here in 166, including εσκυλευσαν at xx. 9 and λευκος for χλωρος at vi. 8 with the addition in textu of: αλλαχου δε γραφεται χλωρος ιππος 166 (ιππος χλωρος 164); διδαξω for δειξω iv. 1; +παντα iv. 11 fin.; απεκρουσθησαν ix. 18; —το τεταρτον vi. 8; —και επι της γης ix. 5; also γυναικος xiv. 4; —λευκαι i. 14; εκπορευσεται xi. 5; ετελειωθη x. 7; διαφθαρηναι xi. 18; —ουκ xii. 11; σαλπιγγες pro πληγαι xv. 8; ερημωσουσιν xvii. 16; —ἡ γη xviii. 1; —της ζωης xx. 15; —λυχνου και xxii. 4; +και την πολιν των αγιων xx 9; +εκαστος xx. 12 fin.; om. xx. 13; —ο λαμπρος xxii. 16, but does not add καταγγελλεται at xxii. 2. (See back under 164 for further particulars).

Our MS. is neatly executed by a very careful copyist of the XIIIth century, so that all aberrations and omissions are deliberately connected with the exemplar. The same original MS. can hardly have been used for 164 and 166. A whole generation of MSS. must have intervened.

Apoc. 166 has a shortened chain-commentary outside the text. Occasional other marginal notes by a third hand, and a few similar notes between the lines of the text here and there.

A tiny dot for iota postscript and subscript occurs but sparsely, and there is no ν εφελκ. ὧδε is written throughout with soft breathing, and on its first occurrence with a very large soft breathing for emphasis.

Where 164 is wanting at xxi. 11 we recover two new readings, for 166 reads και pro ως ante λιθω secund. (with 207). Only Apr. and ps-Ambr. so far read και ως. And δϊκρυσταλλΐζοντϊ for κρυσταλλιζοντι (so 203? 221 vid.). (The com. here in 166 is: δια της κρυσταλιζουσης ασπιδος · ως αει θαλ^η και ζωοδωρος. In 164 there is added και ως καθαρος).

A most perplexing problem is presented, because, unlike our other family groups, there is tremendous difference between 164 and 166 in between their fundamental agreement as to the strange recension from which both drew. They both write ακουετω for ακουσατω in ii. 17, yet nowhere else does either of them make this change. Yet at ii. 25 164 has αν ΗΞω and 166 ανοιξω.

Here, to begin with, are the more important new readings found in 166 (and not found in 164):

i. 13. +κατα την ταξιν μελχισεδεκ (post ποδηρη)

v. 9. +ἣν εδιδαξε το πνα το αγιον (post λεγοντες)

† The passages are such as —τον πλουτον v. 12; καιομεναι πυρος iv. 5; πολλων αγγελων v. 11; πεση pro πνεη vii. 1; +ινα σαλπισωσι viii. 2 fin.; +εγενετο ante ως ορος viii. 8; πεπτωκοτα εκ του ουρανου ix. 1; αδικησωσιν pro αποκτεινωσιν ix. 5; λαου x. 11; εσαλευθησαν vi. 14; —ημων vii. 3; —τον αριθμον vii. 4.

Now we reach the famous place of καρχηδων and ανθραξ at xxi. 19, and the whole treatment of the matters hereabouts differs toto caelo between the two scribes.

In 166 there is no addition of λιθος or λιθος και θεμελιος everywhere.

In 164 ανθραξ stands for χαλκηδων in the text, with a long note on the subject. There is no separate note in 166, but 166 writes καρχηδων and adds in the text "ος και ανθραξ ονομαζεται," and lets it go at that.

Over each stone in the text in 166 is written the name of the apostle, but by the third hand.

2. —τα ante φυλλα Non 164.
2 fin. [εθνων] Contra 164 πιστων (τοις πιστοις 113).

The writing of 166 has been growing larger. Apparently he had more vellum left than he expected. And at xxii. 3 he begins to write the full commentary after each piece of text, and abandons the shortened marginal comments. A comparison with 164 shows that both scribes used the identical words of the full commentary from here on to the end.

On the other hand, at:

xxii. 6. we add in the text τα μελλοντα γινεσθαι before α δει γενεσθαι εν ταχει, whereas 164 only has this in the com., which, however, 166 reproduces verbatim and includes these words again.
7. We agree both as to the text ερχεται for ερχομαι and in the com.: το δε ταχυ ερχομαι etc.
9. Disagreement as to text:
166 writing μοι · ὅρα μή · συνδουλόϲ σου ειμι, while 164 adds ποιησης after μη.
11. We agree to leave out of the text και ο ρυπων ρυπωσατω ετι, but both scribes refer to it in the com. : οὐχ' ὡς εις αδικιαν και ρυπαριαν 166, while 164 leaves out εἰς.
16. [υμιν] 164, but 166 ημιν with 63 72 122 only.
17/18. There is disagreement as to punctuation. Our scribe of 166 would join δωρεαν to verse 18: , 'δωρεαν μαρτυρω εγω (—γαρ) . .' as 155, while 164 does not do this.

After τουτου com. follows in 166, whereas 164 goes on with the text to the end, and then writes up the whole com. But both agree as to the wording of the commentary.

xxii. 18. επιθησεται is agreed to by both, but at:
19. ταυτης της προφητειας thus, 166 alone changing the order.

In 166 after the last words of the Commentary follows an ornate tailpiece, and below:

εξηγησις ετερα εις την θεοπνευστον ταυτην βιβλον
της αποκαλυψεως.
και εσημανεν αποστειλας . εως, και την μαρτυριαν ῑῡ χῡ
Ο χσ̄ μοι, φησιν, ως δεσποτης, κ.τ.λ.

In 164 a blank follows the end of the last column. I have no photographs beyond it in that MS.

Apoc. 167 (Evl. 642. Apl. 170) = Dionys. 163, Athos. [Scr. 167. Greg. 167, new 2071. Sod. Αν[70]]. Chart. cum com. [XVII]. Apoc. 167.

Photographed by a local monk. Photos supplied by courtesy of Harvard College, Dec. 1923.

The MS. is dated 1621 as per subscription on p. 183, thus:

τέλος εἴληφεν, ἡ παροῦσα πυκτίδα, διὰ χειρῶν δὲ, οἰκτροῦ ἱερεμίου · παριπτεύοντος ἑπτάκις χιλία δων, σὺν ἑκατοστῷ · ἅμα τριακοστῷ τε · σεμπτε βρίου ἄγοντος · εἰκάδι ἕκτῃ :—
τριὰς ὑπερόσεε καὶ ὑπέρθεε · καὶ ὑπεράγαθε τῆς χριστια νῶν ἐφορεθεοσοφῖ · ἴθυνον ἡμᾶς ἐπὶ τῇ τῶν μυστικ λογίων ὑπερ ἄγνωστον καὶ ὑπερφανῆ καὶ ἀκροτάτην

The next page is not given by the photographer.

This date of 26 Sept. 7130, less 5509, yields 1621. Soden and Gregory deduct 5508 and make it 1622, but from 1st Sept. the rule is to deduct 5509.

The use of πυκτίς, a writing-tablet, is curious. Evidently imitating an older inscription. ἴθυνον seems also a rare expression, 'guiding in a straight line.'

The MS. looks far older than this date as a whole, but the main scribe seems to have been successfully imitating a much older script than that prevailing in the XVII[th] century. It is a curious-looking MS., and I can make but little out of the history of its copying from the photos. Nearly every page is much blurred, and it looks like a palimpsest, but I fancy the paper is thin, and that the writing on the under side of the page shows through.

Text and commentary have to be carefully disentangled. At times the breaks are marked with circumspection, and chapter headings inserted. At others not so. A modern hand takes up and leaves off in the most unusual manner, but we have to neglect all this and simply control the text, which seems to be fairly copied from a considerably older document, as ν εφελκ. is most persistent throughout, while iota sub. is intermittent.

It is certainly not copied from a printed text, although occasionally allied to the family 1 readings, but many passages conform to the B group, or to the large cursive 2 group.

A number of quite new and interesting variants occur, which are not due to the Commentary. Thus: New variants.

It is impossible to classify the above document.

Apoc. 168. Apoc. 168 = Athos, Dochearii 81. [Greg. 168, new 2072. Sod. Αν[90]].

This is a very late MS. dated 1798 with a huge commentary. It is not only late, but the text seems to be practically the printed text and of no value for these studies at this late stage. It is the only MS., however, so far, to have the addition with και ηκουσε at i. 2 fin., which Cramer claims for the Arethas text, but which I have not so far found in any other MSS. including the Arethas group. It is not in 6 or 64 or 164 or 165.

See beyond, however, under No. 174.

GROUP 169-216 (Cf. E 17 67-120).

Apoc. 169 = Athos, Iberorum 34. [Greg. 169, new 2073. Sod. Αν[47]. Lambros 4154.] Apoc. 169.

157 leaves. Bound with a treatise of Chrysostom, where occurs the date of 1316. It looks earlier.

This is a very interesting MS., very nearly overlooked, as Lambros intimates that it contains only the com. of Andreas and not the text. But the text is there in full. It has a strong textus receptus base, that is to say a combination of the Erasmian fam 1 and Compl. fam 10, so well represented by E, with the strongest possible leaning to 17 of the Compl. family, so much so that it does not omit ουτως at xviii. 21, which is omitted by all the Compl. MSS. except 17 and 49. In fact we have here the full text of E, which in that MS. is wanting before ch. xi.

Apart from this it has, interwoven in its texture, some of the most interesting variants of A 56 and other important documents. Also 67-120 play a considerable part (as they equate E, especially where E is wanting), and 172-217 another; also 159; sometimes 32 and 36; sometimes fam 38, or 18.

Rarely do we travel alone. The following is all I can pick up under that head, for the scribe is very careful:

vi. 12. ωσει σακκος, vi. 16 κρυψετε (so 29*), xiv. 8 πεπωτηκε*.

xvi. 13. +εξηρχοντο ANTE πνευματα [where 189 has εξερχομενα; and the Latins Prim. and Auct[Q] have exeuntes after πνατα τρια ακαθαρτα, and at the end of the verse Ap. 18 has +εκπορευομενα, 81 εκπορευοντα, and all fam 21 εκπορευθεντα].

xix. 10. +του αγγελου post ποδων, retaining αυτου. A few others f. 95 159 172-217 have του αγγελου PRO αυτου, and f. 16-39-102-180, but these omit των ποδων.

In order to show the very close connection with 17* note at xxii. 6 we incorporated into the text from the commentary +δια μεσου του την οπτασιαν εωρακοτος (μακαριου in ras.) ιωαννου (ante δειξαι). E and 67-120 are close, but have a slight variation. This is followed whole-heartedly by τα μελλοντα γινεσθαι for α δει γενεσθαι εν ταχει. So 120 (E 67).

At xxi. 23 fin. the scribe or diorthotes has added: και η πολις φησι οὐ χρειαν εχει του ηλιου, but this is not text but a missing sentence from Andreas' opening comment, as we have the actual clause above in the text.

The second hand is so absolutely contemporary that his changes and additions have considerable importance. In fact, writing in very neat semi-uncials one can readily mistake the hand for one of the X[th] or XI[th] century instead of early XIV[th]. I give the following double-readings. It is not possible in the reduced photographs (obtained through the courtesy and diligence of Professor Lake) to know whether scribe or antiballōn made the changes:

It is a curious thing that wherever you run across a Complutensian type (or semi-Compl. type) you find some of these alternatives.

There are some other marginal notes by this old hand, e.g.

Singular and plural verbs.

Before giving the interesting readings and their support, I must premise by saying that this MS. is collated late, and after 172-217, 95-127-215, which enter so largely into the list, so we have the benefit of these collations. As to drawing conclusions, we must walk warily, however. In successive verses we have two rare readings. One is probably right, and the other wrong. I refer to xvi. 4/5. In xvi. 4 we read: ..ἐξέχεε τὴν φιάλην αὐτοῦ εἰς τοὺς ποταμοὺς καὶ (—εἰς sec.) τὰς πηγὰς τῶν ὑδάτων · καὶ ἐγένοντο (instead of ἐγένετο) αἷμα. This plural verb is read only by A 36 56 95-127-215 100 111 130 146*txt* 149 186 189 200 aeth copt syr gig h Prim. [non vg ps-Ambr. Tyc.], and now by our 169, a strong combination. It was probably displaced early by the more natural ἐγένετο αἷμα. But, comparing it with that difficult construction in xix. 8, probably the author of the Apoc. wrote ἐγένοντο in xvi. 4, the very obverse, as it were, of the picture and phrase at xix. 8 of: τὸ γὰρ βύσσινον τὰ δικαιώματα τῶν ἁγίων ἐστιν. Here we have the singular compared with the plural, and in the former case the plural (τοὺς ποταμοὺς καὶ τὰς πηγὰς τῶν ὑδάτων) compared with a singular.

But in the very next verse at xvi. 5 we are asked by our MS. to read: καὶ ἤκουσα τοῦ ἀγγέλου τοῦ ἐπὶ τῶν ὑδάτων with 95-127-215, 159 and 251. Of these, group 95 appears in the former combination, but now is without A 36 56 111 130 146 200, all major documents, and without the Versions, for τοῦ ἐπὶ seems clearly an illegitimate addition. The usual text is: καὶ ἤκουσα τοῦ ἀγγέλου τῶν ὑδατων just as, a little below at xvi. 7, we have: καὶ ἤκουσα τοῦ θυσιαστηρίου (for ἄλλου ἐκ has no real place in the text).

Let us take the very rarest of our readings first:

ii. 14 fin. πορνευσαι; with the semicolon of interrogation. This I have found in the XIth century, but it is rare.

xi. 3. +λογον ante ϗ προφ. with 127-215.
5. δοκιμασαι pro αδικησαι pr. with 50 172-217 177 boh.

xii. 11. δια του αιματος (pro δια το αιμα) with 14-92, 36 113, 172-217 only.
ibid. +και δια του αιματος αυτων post μαρτυριας αυτων with (56) 172-217. (Cf. boh).

xv. 4. Order: τις σε ου μη φοβηθη κυριε with fam 178 200 251.

xvi. 9. κατα του ονοματος pro το ονομα with 95-127-215, 172-217 aeth.

An examination of the foregoing will show a double-handling, mixed with genuine survivals of perhaps the oldest base of the Erasm.-Compl. family stem, where the Versions support.

There is no inscription proper, and rather a grandiose introduction to what is after all only an Andreas-Arethas com. MS.

FAMILY 21-28-73-79-80-99-100-103-112-135-138-139-170-191-220-221.

Sub-group 99-170.

Apoc. 170. Apoc. 170 = Athos, Iberorum 379 = [Greg. 170, new 2074. Sod. Αν¹]. [XI] Lambros calls it x. Collated in 1921 from photographs taken in 1912.

It is a commentary MS. of Andreas. It makes a poor appearance at first, being written with apparent hurry and being crammed with tachygraphic symbols, but a closer acquaintance develops a respect for the scribe. Although writing fast and with endless compendia, he is accurate and trustworthy. This is most important, for the group to which this MS. belongs (21-28-73-79-80-99-100-103-112-135-138-139) is not yet large enough for us to do without additional testimony in checking. (Now add 191-220-221). For 21 and 28 are incomplete, and 99, with which our MS. sympathizes especially in the opening chapters, is wanting entirely from iii. 14 onwards.

Our scribe is guilty of but few lâches, and remains very true to type as a whole. This becomes very important in such a section as xviii. 11/20, because 21, 28 and 99 are completely wanting, and the others have an omission from a common error in xviii. 18/19 of τις ομοια to λεγοντες, which eliminates an important place at xviii. 19. Here only 100, extant, reads the very exceptional πλοῦν for πλοια (or τα πλοια), with *syr*S (the Syriac word standing for navem or navigium), but this is now confirmed by 170. To show what was going on in the scriptorium as to books of reference, we need only refer back a few pages to xvii. 15, where we have one of the very few marginal annotations in this MS. of ἐφ' οἷς as a substitute for οὗ (vg. 'ubi') of the text. This is also a reading of *syr*S, translated by Gwynn ἐφ' ὧν, and given by Prim. and Cypr. as 'super quas' in their Latin.

On the other hand, although guilty of very few errors due to homoioteleuton, he falls into a peculiar one in xx. 2/3 apart from the family, which at first is hard to understand. He writes εδησε instead of εδησεν in verse 2, and omits αυτον and all after it until he comes to και εσφραγισεν in verse 3 (which there follows και εκλεισεν). A reference to the family group, however, reveals the fact that they all there substitute εδησε for εκλεισεν αυτον. The cat is out of the bag, and our careful scribe has finally fallen a victim, within the limits of his own preserves, to that fatal error of homoioteleuton, which would not have occurred but for the double εδησεν αυτον in verse 2, and εδησε verse 3 of the family group.

Astronomical symbols. This is the first scribe in one hundred and seventy to use a symbol for ηλιος. He writes ☉ uniformly throughout for ηλιος and its cases wherever the word occurs. He also uses ☾ throughout for σεληνη and its cases, but this has been noticed previously in a few places as to the writer of MS. 45 (at viii. 12 and xxi. 23). None others so far have done this. The scribe was probably accustomed to copy magical and mystical documents, where many astronomical and astrological signs and symbols occur. And as a matter of fact this Apoc. is again found mingled with other miscellaneous documents.

Iota post. occurs, but quite infrequently, and is used in the word αιδης.

Numerals are almost constantly employed (without reference to the family type), which savours of the Coptic habit. This family is a very polyglot one.

The more exceptional forms of our scribe's tachygraphy are as follows:

For:	δυναμις and cases	δυ
	πρεσβυτεροι and cases	πρ πρ, or πρ πρ, or πρε
	μαρτυρων	μρ μρ
	ημερα and cases	Η μ, μ
	μηνας	μ, μ
	ωρα and cases	ωρ occasionally
	χειρ and cases	χ and plural forms, or χχ (once)
	μεγας	μ (once)
	αδελφων	αδδ (once)

besides, as above stated, ☉ for ηλιος and cases, ☾ for σεληνη and cases. εστι, εισι and οτι are almost invariably contracted, and τα is very frequently written τ÷. At xxi. 10 we find ♃ for απο or υπο, I do not know which.

The new readings appear to be confined to the following:

i. 1 fin. —τω δουλω αυτου So 130 (whereas A has του δουλου αυτου and 99 τω δουλου αυτου).
4. απο ων (—του ὁ) So 151.
5. —εν ante αιματι (=sanguine h, contra in sanguine gig).
8. —λεγει So perhaps 99 and certainly 200 Hipp. Tert.
11. ᾱ και ω̄ (—το bis)
ii. 10. —και prim.
18. +ελεγεν vid. (compendio) post αγγελω
vii. 11. μεσον vid. pro επεσον viii. 4. —εκ χειρος του αγγελου (Ambr. lib. solus 1/2 et 104 om. εκ χειρος του αγγελου ενωπιον του θεου).
ix. 3. επι pro εις =sah boh [non al.].
18. —του ante πυρος
x. 5. ειδεν (errore)
xi. 5. δεῖν pro δεῖ (before αυτον)
11. —και ημισυ (Cf. C in xii. 14).
13. του θεου pro τω θεω
xiv. 8. εποτισε pro πεποτικε xviii. 3. εποτισε pro πεποτικε { This, therefore, is very deliberate. Alas, there is no papyrus fragment to check it, as there is for the converse of the double perfect at iii. 21: νενεικηκα και κεκαθικα in Oxyr[1080].
xvi. 14. εχεις vid.? pro εις xvii. 15. [οὗ *txt] sed marg: ἐφ' οἷς (alia manu, eodem tempore) cf. ἐφ' ὧν 146*com. syr*S Cypr. Aug. vett et copt.
xix. 13. —ο (ante λογος)
xx. 5. συντελεσθωσι pro τελεσθη (cf. latt: 'consummati sunt' gig, 'consummentur' vg, while Prim. Aug. have 'finiantur'). The other members of the family have τελεσθωσι without συν.

This is not a very formidable list, and exceedingly interesting as to chapter one, since four out of the twenty-one instances occur there including the reversion to 200 Hipp. Tert. conjoined (of the omission of λεγει). And observe xiii. 16 infra.

The main characteristics of the family have been dealt with previously. Practically all the strange family readings are present, starting with δι' αγγελου in i. 1 (cf. δι' ἀστερων xii. 1), —του θεου in i. 2, του θεου for αυτου in i. 4, as well as:

ii. 8. και εζησε +πρωτος
20. πολλα pro ολιγα
24. οσοι pro οιτινες
28. απο pro παρα

and, passing to the more important ones:

iii. 8. +οὐ ante μικραν
21. —εν τω θρονω μου
ix. 12. παρηλθεν pro απηλθεν Confined to this family. Cf. ⲁϥⲥⲓⲛⲓ copt = praeterivit, not abiit as Prim. and vg.
13. εκ των κερατων κεγραγοτος
15. +μερος post τριτον (also latt copt).
xi. 8. +αταφα post μεγαλης

xii. 11. ονομα pro αιμα (Cf. v. 9 ονοματι pro αιματι by 170 also without family support. Only 95* has this reading there, also without family support).
xiii. 11. —ο δρακων
xiv. 6. +ερχομενον post αιωνιον
16. εξηρανθη pro εθερισθη Cf. lat: vg et vett: 'demessa est' 'anceps'?
20. αχς (pro χιλ. εξακοσιων)
xviii. 8. +ο παντοκρατωρ post θεος
13. σμυρναν pro μυρον
xx. 2. —τον οφιν
8. +και ante τον γωγ
xxi. 12. +και post υψηλον
16. +αυτης post μηκος (*Cf. syr*S).
19. +λιθος post δευτερος
23. +και ante το αρνιον
xxii. 5. +φως ante λυχνου
ibid. βασιλευσει
6. Post πιστοι +ως εκ της αληθειας προφερομενοι
9. μη · ορα · pro ορα μη (*Cf. syr*S xix. 10 μή! tantum).

The agreement with part of the family is seen here:

i. 11. +το ante βιβλιον So 99 (and ℵ only).
ibid. και εν σαρδεσι So 99 alone.
12. τις pro ητις So 99 (alone with 200).

iii. 19/20. +βαβαι της φιλανθρωπιας etc. So 21-73-79; and 152-208 169-216. (99 ceases after iii. 13).
vi. 11. εκαστω αυτων So 28-79-103-112-139-220 and *syr*SΣ.
xi. 18. +διο φησιν etc. So 80-138 and 12 36 f. 62-3 81 f. 114 138-139 159 152-179-208.
xiii. 14/15. Punctuation μαχαιρας. και εζησε και εδοθη So 100 (and 130 146 152).
xviii. 11. κλαυσουσιν etc. See evidence in extenso in volume II.
21. μυλου pro μυλον So 100. (μυλων 103 124).
xix. 9. +εισι(ν) post μακαριοι (21-73)-79-100-103-112-139-191-220.
xxi. 22. —το ante αρνιον So 100. (Add 143).

Opposition to the family develops at:

ii. 16 fin. Addition with the 7 family.

GROUP 6-31-106-(164-166)-171-174-(182).

Apoc. 171. Athos, Iberorum 546. [Greg. 171, new 2075. Sod. Αν 48]. Lambros catalogue, p. 169, gives a wretched description of it and calls it XIV. I think it is more likely XV. Apoc. 171.

A paper com. codex, badly preserved. Has been mended, rebound, and much of it is out of order. I have recovered all the text, however, except i. 1-12, 14/15, iii. 5/7 ζωης . . δαδ, vi. 10, 11, vii. 1, 2, 9, 10, xiii. 3 part ver. 3, xv. 7, xvi. 19 fin., xviii. 12 after ελεφαντινον to end 13. I have indicated on the photos the misplaced leaves. Towards the end a much later hand has rewritten the older pages, which were doubtless then perishing. He (171^sup) continues the type of text except for the extraordinary introduction of the printed text readings of ελθε bis, ελθετω and λαμβανετω το υδωρ at xxii. 17, and the variant μαρτυρω παντι εγω (—γαρ) in xxii. 18 with E 169-216 172-217.

171 is a full sister to 174 in the same monastery, which is complete, and affords a definite check. The above variants in xxii. are not given by 174.

It develops that 171-174 now fall into the 6 group, which becomes thus enlarged to 6-31-106-171-174-182.

As to the commentary see under No. 174.

GROUP 172-217. (See 51–90 up to xi. 15).

Apoc. 172. Apoc. 172. Athos, Iberorum No. 58 to-day (in 1925), formerly 594. =[Greg. old 172, new 2076. Sod. α 1570]. [XVI].

In a volume of Miscellanies (Lambros, p. 180) and heading the book, which contains some thirty pieces of literature. It is said to be dated 15. . something, and is undoubtedly XVI or earlier, and not XVII as regards the Apoc.

Photographs, due to the courtesy of the University of Michigan and Messrs. Lake and Swain, taken in 1925.

A bi-columnar codex, copied out by a later scribe in our Apoc. 217. [Iber. 137 (olim 589)].

Inscription: αποκαλυψις του αγιου ἰῶ' του θεολογου.

Iota subscr. is plentiful, is applied to κᾀγω, ᾇδον, and even to the α in ῥᾴβδῳ (ii. 27, xi. 1, xii. 5), φιλῷ (iii. 19), θάλασσα ὑαλίνῃ (iv. 6), ᾠδίνουσα (xii. 2), δυνῃται (xiii. 17), περιβάλῃται (xix. 8), φάγῃτε (xix. 18), ἀφέλῃ (xxii. 19).

Ordinary straightforward example of B or cursive type to start with. Very correctly written for a XVI[th] cent. Athos scribe, and only one real omission from homoioteleuton throughout, at xviii. 14. None in xviii. 22/23. When we near the end of the third chapter, however, we pick up the true sub-type in 90 (a MS. at Dresden) of the family 51-90 (51 being at Paris), and our MS. clearly joins this little group 51-90 in some not uninteresting variants, favouring, however, 90 more than 51, and 90, a much older MS., came from Iberon If the reader will look on to our No. 217 (referred to above as written by a somewhat later imitator), he will find that the type is exactly the same. Therefore some MS. stand between these, which is probably no longer at Athos. We have identified one above as our Apoc. 90 (of a somewhat indeterminate date), which came from the same monastery, and if we go on to our Apoc. 246 we find another XI[th] century source in a dear little MS. now at Moscow, which most likely also came from Athos in the days when some needy Hegoumenos was trafficking in MSS. or when some earlier traveller tempted the monks. We must not, therefore, neglect our 172-217 because they are XVI[th] cent. MSS., as they form a check on the common parent's true readings. The composite type, as I have stated elsewhere, is a genuine but old B type, going near to or beyond the B sources, and very sympathetic to 169-216, MSS. in the same monastery.

As our two junior MSS. of the group are written in two columns with carefully marked short sections (of a somewhat interesting type), and as the elder XI[th] cent. MS. 246 is in single column, it may be that 172-217 derive from an earlier MS. than either the XI[th] cent. MS. 246 or the XIII[th] cent. MS. 90, and now perhaps is lost. The group is large enough at this time to check itself pretty thoroughly.

This, however, only lasts until the eleventh chapter. At xi. 6 we have unique agreement with 90, but at xi. 18—[the true point of cleavage is at xi. 15 exactly where the E MS. begins]—† we drift away (for good) from the 90 type, and, beginning with a leaning to 56 and the 178 (Patmos) group and the Oecumenian 146, we go on picking up unusual readings

King of the Ages. xv. 3. with 67-120 and others, until at the famous place xv. 3 we have 'King of the Ages' with ℵC 18 56 111 95-127-215 159 169*mg*-216*txt* 203*txt syr vg ps-Ambr. sah*$^2/_3$, and thereabouts (e.g. xvi. 9 κατα του ονοματος) run close to 95-127-215, with a distinct Coptic trend.

At xviii. 12 we have a new Greek reading of λιθων τιμιων—so 169-216 172-217 only—(=Prim. syr boh pl.), but λιθους τιμιους is found in CP 114-193-241 aeth (against the singular);

† I have stated elsewhere that 67-120 give us the E text from i. to xi. 15, but in the light of this double recension in 172 the statement must be taken with reserve.

and another plural of μαργάρων for μαργαριτου, which is legitimate [faithfully copied by 217], although only a few have μαργαριτων, viz. ℵ 35 59 87 95-127-215 111 113 132 159 f. 178 181 syr boh$^1/_2$ gig Prim.

Towards the close we favour the E group, and finally run to an unique reading at xxii. 18 with E alone of 'μαρτυρω παντι εγω ακουοντι,' the εγω only finding this place in E and 169-216 and 172-217 MSS.

The matter will be more clearly apprehended by a short table from i. 1–xi. 15, and from xi. 15 to the end. The readings are jointly those of 172-217.

Thus:

iii. 7. ανοιγων (—ὁ) with 90. (ℵ και pro ὁ alone).

17. τι λεγεις: 'πλουσιος ειμι' και πεπλουτηκας instead of οτι λεγεις (οτι) πλουσιος ειμι και πεπλουτηκα . . .
51-90 both support τι for οτι prim., and 90 supports πεπλουτηκας.

18. εμβλεπης pro βλεπης So 90 and 111.

v. 5. ὁ ανοιξας pro ανοιξαι So 51-90 and 246.

N.B. xi. 5. δοκιμασαι pro αδικησαι pr. This with 50 169-216 177 and boh, not 51-90, whose influence is now on the wane, and ceases after:

xi. 6, where we read τη γη οσακις etc. alone with 90.

Now we enter new territory. Again 172-217 agree in every case:

18. μαρτυρω παντι εγω ακουοντι So E 169-216 only.

A moderate number of unique variants remain, in which 217 agrees in all places, in the first and also in the second sections:

iii. 18. και μη φανερωθης αισχυνη (—ἡ)
22. τι λεγει το πνα as arm a. 4.
iv. 4. εικοσι τεσσαρους (sec. loco) xxii. 6. —τοις δουλοις αυτου xxii. 17. —και tert. ante ο ακουων

In all these things 217 faithfully copies. (See under our No. 217).

As regards a common source for Bohairic and our MS. the passage at xi. 5, where δοκιμασαι is substituted for αδικησαι, seems conclusive. This is before the point of cleavage. Thereafter other sympathy develops, as will be seen above.

As regards 169 (since collated) in the same monastery, which has much in common, it was not the source. The common source lies much further back than the XIV[th] century.

Apoc. 173 (Athos, Iberorum 605). Greg. 173, new —. Sod. M[70]. Lambros, p. 184. Can be neglected.

GROUP 171-174.

Apoc. 174 (Athos, Iberorum 644). [Greg. 174, new 2077. Sod. Αν⁷¹]. [XVI ?]. Apoc. 174.

As regards the text see under 171, of which this is a full sister. Lambros No. 4764 (p. 189) claims it is dated 1685, which seems very late. Unfortunately the photo of the last page of the com. is missing. However, the exact date is not so important, since it reproduces the original of 171 and supplies the few missing places in that document. The text, as said previously, falls into this family group: 6-31-106-171-174-182 (with touches of 169-216, E and 67-120).

The commentary is another affair, for the rather grandiloquent opening is, I fear, rather misleading. The MS. says:

ἀνδρέου · γρηγορίου τοῦ θεολόγου · καὶ κύριλου (sic) · προσέτι δὲ καὶ τῶν ἀρχαιοτέρων · παππίου · εἰρηναίου · μεθοδίου · καὶ ἱππολύτου τῶν ἁγιωτάτων · ἀρχιεπισκώπων, τῆς πρὸς τὸ ἀργαίω · ἑρμηνεία · εἰς τῆς ἀποκάλυψιν τοῦ ἁγίου ἀποστόλου · καὶ εὐαγγελίστου ἰωάννου τοῦ θεολόγου : κυρίω μου ἀδελφῶ καὶ συλειτουργῶ · ἐν κῶ χαίρειν.

The Andreas' preface beginning Πόλλακις and ending ἀνταποδόσεων is as usual.

This commentary would indeed be a find if the above claim could be substantiated. But instead of a clue to the compilation, the rest of the page is occupied by a preface to a work on astronomy by Ptolemy, which has no business here and must have been misbound in the original.

As far as I can make out the commentary is an enlarged mixture of Andreas, Oecumenius, and Arethas, with considerable liberties taken with the wording and arrangement of these critics, and what there is new seems more modern than ancient, and is of but slight value.

The inscription proper is ιωάννου τοῦ θεόλόγου · καὶ ἠγαπημένου · ἀποστόλου ἀπόκαλυψις

Then verses 1 and 2 to ιῦ χῦ before the com. begins. Com. begins: Τινὲς τῶν ἀρχαιοτέρων νοθεύουσι ταύτην τῆς ἰωάννου τοῦ ηγαπημένου γλώττης, and runs a long while before resuming the text at οσα τε ειδε, to which is added και οσα ηκουσε και ατινα εισι, και ατινα δει γενεσθαι μετα ταυτα.

This whole section (Andreas) agrees with Cramer's print, p. 181 seq.

The scribe is quite impossible in the matter of breathings, but in these early pages many are omitted as if he were copying a document of x^th century or earlier.

The inscription appears to be new. At vii. 9 init. we add και with no Greeks but only *syr*S and boh (171 is missing here for two verses), while μετα δε ταυτα is read by 216 [non 169] as *sah*¹/₄. No others add a copula.

The com. really appears to be a counterpart of Cramer's print, with some rearrangement of order on the part of our MS.

On i. 11 fin. I notice ἀφέταις (for προφήταις) in our MS. com. After com. on i. 11 ending φιλοχωρειν there is an addition headed φίλωνος, ἰουδαίου, ἱστορία ·:·

running for a page, and then two blanks, as if the quotation had been filled in later and too much space reserved for the quotation.

It does not seem profitable to pursue the matter in detail.

However, let me note that at xv. 6 we agree again with Cramer's synopsis, but we recover 'παγίως' of our MSS. 203-240, which 146 left blank, and where Cramer prints πλαγίως. Undoubtedly παγίως is correct.

GROUP 176-206.

Apoc. 176. Apoc. 176 (Athos, Konstamoniti 29). [Greg. 176, new 2078. Sod. α 1686]. [XVI].
In the middle of the vol. between Chrys. περὶ τοῦ Πνεύματος and Joh Damasc. περὶ τῶν ἐν πίστει κεκοιμημένων.

Photographs by Prof. Lake, 1926.

Lacuna. Two pages are quite illeg. in the photographs and the next two pages missing, the whole containing iv. 1 to vii. 9 med., but this does not matter as the MS. appears to be a copy of our important and much older No. 206 (see beyond), which ties up to a lost Sahidic base. See for the exceptional readings of the pair beyond under 206. No two MSS. could look more dissimilar. The bi-columnar 206 is open and flowing, the uni-columnar 176 is cramped and squeezed.

Apoc. 176 has the following, not found in 206, and most are doubtless errors. Some have a Latin trend:

vii. 11. ενωποιον (tantum)
13. —εκ (But so ℵ 91 111 130 216).
14. ειδας pro οιδας (with a few).
viii. 5. τον λιβατον
ix. 4. ουδεν pro ουδε pr. (So 63).
16. των στρευματων

xii. 2. —κραζει ωδινουσα (Cf. sah).
5. —υιον (but so E* 189 Prim. Tyc 1. arm a. γ).
xiii. 2. +την μεγαλην post δυναμιν αυτου ibid. —και εξουσιαν μεγαλην 14. μαχαί pro μαχαιρας
xiv. 2. —ηκουσα sec.
11. —και την εικονα αυτου
xv. 2. —και εκ της εικονος αυτου
4. —και προσκυνησουσιν (So 218).
xviii. 12. ἀργυροῦ So 208. (206 ἀργύρου).
17. ὁ ἐπὶπλέων (—πλοιων) ut ps-Ambr. 'a longè.'
20. —αποστολοι (So 217 [non 172]).
xix. 11. ῆ δικαιοσύνη κρίνει pro ἐν δικαιοσύνῃ κρίνει. This is the most startling, and can only be compared to ps-Ambrose's 'Et justitia judicat,' a nominative being misread for ps-Ambrose's undoubted justitiâ.
18. —και ante μικρων (with many).
xx. 10. του θειου pro και θειου (So fam 7 146 218; 206 has και του θειου).
14. —ουτος εστιν ο δευτερος θανατος (So E 1 etc.).
xxi. 2. κεκοσμενην
19. τίω pro τιμίω
22. οτι pro ὁ γαρ (So ℵ). —γαρ boh[tres].
xxii. 15. φωνεις

In most cases of considerable omissions, the missing words can be accounted for by skipping a line or two in 206 from similar words and endings, but it is not quite certain that 176 was copying 206. It may be that he copied a common parent, now lost.

Do not overlook this strange recension under No. 206, which was collated before the photos of 176 reached me.

B FAMILY.

Apoc. 177 (Athos, Konstamoniti 107). [Greg. 177, new 2079. Sod. α 1373]. [XII]. Photographs by Prof. Lake, 1926. Apoc. 177.

Quite a different MS. from the last, and of a plain B type (sub-type the cursive group including 50 53 etc.). These are the only two MSS. of Apoc. at Konstamoniti, and entirely at variance. This one, four centuries older than 176, is of no great value, while 176, written after the introduction of printing, confirms a recension of much value in our search for the bases of the structure, the keys having become utterly disseminated throughout all documents, and inherent in no particular MS. or Version. Relative age of documents.

There are a few marginal scholia, stereotyped and of no great interest.

New readings are confined to the following:

ii. 12. —εκκλησιας, but as MS. reads της εν περγαμω it is probably a mere error. (See Tert.).

iv. 6. αυτου pro του θρονου tertio loco (See sah).

viii. 7. κατεκαιη pr. loco [κατεκαη sec. and tert.].

xiv. 8. +ἡ ante βαβυλων (Only 159 ἡ βαβιλων).

xvi. 7. ἀληθινὲ και δικαιαι (αληθινη ϗ δικαια only 111).

18. —σεισμος ουτω (—σεισμος sec. 106, —ουτω 113 156 214* 244 arm aeth, —τηλικουτος μεγας σεισμος ουτω 189 218 arab boh[omn.] Prim. ps-Ambr., but no other seems to omit σεισμος ουτω).

xviii. 2. +και ante βαβυλων (+ἡ B pauci).

7. καθως pro καθημαι (οτι καθως cursive group including 50 53 etc.), besides one notorious error at xix. 20 of θυσιαστηριον pro θηριον, which no reader has observed or changed. And τῆς θᾶλάσ̄η at xx. 8 fin. As to xxi. 6 γῆς pro πηγῆς* it is shared by 50*.

xix. 1. +το ante αλληλουια 1 80-138 179-208 222 Er. Ald. Col. 57.

3. ανεβη f. 21 50 and *syr*S.

17. αλλον pro ενα ℵ 36 112 113 146 159 *syr*S sah boh arm ps-Ambr.

xx. 1. +αλλον ante αγγελον ℵ[a] 32 112 113 143 146*com.* sah$^1/_2$ *arm syr*S.

4. ελαβε pro ελαβον f. 26 50 pauc.

8. ὃν pro ὧν only 113.

11. μεγαν και λευκον No Greeks except 143 μεγα και λευκον, but supported by Prim. Aug. Auct-Nov. ps-Ambr. and arm.

xxi. 4. —ουκ εσται ετι sec. loco So only 50 164 Prim. Ambr$^1/_2$ (—ετι ps-Ambr.).

6. γῆς pro πηγῆς* So 50* only. (—της πηγης A).

From this it will be seen that the closest adherent in singularities is our No. 50, but this does not give the full picture, for we are often with the big cursive group including 53 etc. without 50.

See what I wrote long ago under 50 as to B and sub-types of B, which stands to-day unchanged.

At xv. 6 λίνον is thus written: λί νον (two letters erased). We write τεσσαρεις in the early chapters, but not later, and occasionally use κδ̄ for twenty-four, but numerals are scarce. μεσουρανισματι twice thus by original hand, and once μεσουρανη σματι. πνευματικῶς is written exceptionally in full. ἀκοσάτω occurs once. κριμα is written both κρίμα and κρῖμα in different places.

As to the B font.

On the whole the document gives us an early type of B. The large group of cursives standing alone, with which we agree throughout, simply represents another perished uncial of the B type, which signalizes variants between two B recensions, and very often this cursive group is to be preferred to B itself, which is aberrant.

There is no subscription except a prayer to be said by the celebrant of the 'bloodless sacrifice.' Inscription is αποκαλυψις του αγιου ιωαννου του θεολογου και εῢ (ευαγγελιστου), preceded by a short extract from Andreas 'τριμερῆ. . . λογισμῶν' filling the first page.

A plain straightforward document.

Apoc. 178 (Apl. 161) = Patmos, S. Johannis 12 = Greg. 178 (Apl. 161). [Greg. new 2080. Sod. α 406]. [XIV] or earlier. Not used by Soden, and quite unknown hitherto. Apoc. 178.

Mut. xvii. 1-14, xxii. 16 fin., but the missing part is available, as Apoc. 38 (Vat. Rome gr. 579) is a close sister to the Patmos MS. and is complete in those sections. Now see 203-240, also available. No commentary to Apoc. 178.

Collated in 1921, partly from photographs and partly from the manuscript of a local Greek copyist (employed at my request by Professor Kelsey, of the University of Michigan, who was travelling in that neighbourhood). Since then, in 1925, good and kind Professor Lake has succeeded in taking photographs for me of all I need to check any possible errors, and which have been most useful. I can now bear witness to the scholarly care with which the well-educated scribe has fulfilled his task of faithfully reproducing this very unusual type, quite different from most.

For fifteen years I have been trying to obtain full photographic copies of the two Patmos MSS., Apoc. 178 and 179, but without complete success. I could not go there myself, or a collation would have been easy, but my emissaries, although armed with authority from Patriarchs and other authorities, were not allowed by the monks to photograph the MSS. in their entirety. It is due to the late lamented Professor Kelsey's initiative and personal supervision that I can at last dare to represent Apoc. 178 with some confidence.

It would never do to publish my volume of collations without reproducing Patmos manuscripts, since the Apocalyptic visions were vouchsafed to the writer on this island. It does not of necessity follow that our MS. is important, or a genuine local relic whose archetype dates from Apostolic days. But, as there is such a possibility, the MS. 178 can be examined in order to see what its particular bearing may be on our general problem. And while we find that we have to rule it out from any paramount place in the collection of MSS., because it bears undoubted evidence of having been either carelessly copied in the early stages of its reproduction, or somewhat 'reworked,' probably at the very outset of its career down the ages, its general text is so ancient and so bound up with other most important documents, that it is of very considerable importance and interest; especially as in a variety of its more striking readings it has the support of the Crawford Syriac, not alone but with other high authorities, e.g.: Patmos and its MSS.

15. θεου pro κυριου 38-203-240 *syr*S.

† I must say here, once for all, that 203–240, which are XVth century sisters of 178, have been in places somewhat accommodated to a more standard text, while their commentaries equate Oecumenius commentary in 146.

Thus it bears directly on the question of an old, if not original, Græco-Syriac recension or redaction.

It has no direct affiliation with 56 as a whole, yet at xxii. 14 it runs with the small group ℵA 38 127 146 (7-45-104-151 143 215) and 203-240:

for οι πλυνοντες τας στολας αυτων in place of ποιουντες τας εντολας αυτου and the conflation of the two readings by 56.

But in order to see the composite character of its most ancient readings, we must look further, and observe these passages: 178-203-240 therefore read together as follows, except where 203 or 240 deflects, when it is noted:—

i. 1. +του κυριου ημων post αποκαλυψις with 12 176-206 (hiat 203).

The above are nearly all exceedingly interesting, but it shows how far apart were the recensions before the time of ℵ, and 'the true text' is no longer to be found at Patmos, but The 'true' text.

is scattered through our documents. (Observe in a few places how 47 comes in; small places overlooked or not deemed worthy of change by the redactor).

It remains to exhibit where 38-178 (to which add 203-240) are together alone, representing no 'true text' it would appear, but a certain stage, where distinct revision obtained before 38 was again revised. These are (38-178-203-240 absolutely alone, except where otherwise marked):

xxii. 2. εκαστος αποδιδους

One of the most interesting of the above is the κατεχων pro και εχων at x. 2, because we shall meet with it again in that very important document Apoc. 200 at ch. i. 16, and the question is whether they are errors in copying και εχων or whether the original had κατεχων in places—(a very likely reading)—which descended as και εχων. As to κατεχων.

Finally here are the readings, which remain so far apparently unique, that is without 38, but all agreed to by 203 and 240 except where marked:

† This βλεμματων is an error of my copyist, unfortunately printed in my notice of 178 in the John Rylands' Bulletin for July 1924. Remove it.

The 38-178 recension does not seem to favour Coptic as a whole, yet at times the only clues available as to unique readings go back again to Coptic, or possibly to the 'underlying' Greek text of those Versions. Strange readings, however, that at first sight we should look for in Coptic or Syriac or Latin are not to be found there.

The lacunae in 178 are filled out in 203 and 240, where we pick up unique agreement with א.

Later we will find that No. 203 (at Salonika) and 240 (at Athos) are counterparts of 178 as regards their texts (but counterparts of 146 in their commentaries). See beyond.

I have dealt with them above and brought them into the lists for 178.

I did not always group 38-178-203-240, preferring often to let 38 stand by itself, and group 178-203-240, even when all four are in agreement, for 38 is a very different MS., in the sense of having been heavily revised and many family readings removed at some time.

In vol. II, and also here, when I cite fam 38 it means all four MSS., when I name fam 178 it means 178-203-240 unless the three are not in complete accord. Fam. 38. Fam. 178.

It is a fine group, and very important when in other good company. It represents a very early strain, and if only redactors had let it alone, we would be fairly close to the original, but they have spoiled it, made its testimony unequal, and invalidated it as a prime factor.

GROUP 1-152-179-208, main stem of the large 1 family.

Apoc. 179. Apoc. 179 = Patmos, S. Johannis 64. [=Greg. old 179, new 2081. Sod. Αν[21]]. [XII]. In 1925 Prof. Lake got an opportunity to photograph the first part of this MS. and has supplied i. 1–viii. 11 fin. Mr. Swain in 1926 continued and completed the operation.

It is much older than it looks at first. The writing is only semi-professional (like that of Apoc. 130), and we must put it back into the XII[th] cent. and possibly into the eleventh. All the breathings are square. Nobody much after the XI[th] century could keep this up consistently. ν εφελκ. is fairly constant. Words or ends of words and beginning of the next are run together. Breathings are sometimes omitted altogether, and sometimes a rather peculiar composite circumflex takes the places of breathing and circumflex. Partiality is shown for rough breathings, and the old form of ὅτἂν is retained.

Psi is very square. ξ begins on the line and terminates far below. Altogether a neat scribe, and guilty of only a few errors due to homoioteleuton, some, however, due to his copy, for it soon develops that this is almost the counterpart of 152* in which MS. much the same errors obtained, but 179 is much the better copied. Now 152, at Rome, is an XI[th] century MS. with plenty of iota postscript, and thus all chance of 179 being derived direct from that may be ruled out, as our Patmos MS. never once adds an iota.

The two doubtless derive from a common original with curious errors of spelling intruding occasionally. Thus, at vii. 1, both 152 and 179 write δ̅ for the first τεσσαρας in the verse, but for the second and third they both write τεσσαρης twice! Yet at x. 2, 8, 9, 10, our 179 writes alone βιβλαρειδιον, not shared by 152 (unless corrected out and missed by me).

Scribe not a Greek. The scribe of 179 has a tendency to leave out the Greek article, and he cannot have been a Greek, for he writes at ii. 3 και κεκοπιασας.

At ii. 7 he is alone with ℵ[c]P writing εν μεσω τω παραδεισω του θεου.

The corrector of the MS. had access to the 21 and 34 family types. Thus at ii. 20 he adds σου πολλα οτι αφιης, where the first hand had merely written 'αλλ εχω κατα την γυναικα ιεζαβελ.'

Every time I collate a member of the 1 family, I cannot get away from the insistent way in which it impresses me with its great basic age.† It is curious to find at Patmos, in the only two manuscripts which the Island Monastery now possesses of the Apocalypse, such important documents of two special types. In reality the truth of which we are in search lies between these two recensions.

The 1 family. Textus Rec. As to the 1 family we have been for over 400 years under a misapprehension. If Erasmus had not exedited from it a number of things throughout, we should have had a much sounder 'textus receptus.' There are many omissions in the 1 family (which Erasmus supplied) which I think are probably basic. Take the following and consider them in their whole bearing—for it is proper to take stock of the position at this time when we find family 1 also lingering at Patmos :—

ii. 1. —εν μεσω των 152-179. Plain omission, as against substitution of επι for εν μεσω by the other members of the 1 family.

19. —οτι εας as well as —πολλα nearly all the 1 family, including the new 208.† In supplying this void we have οτι αφεις and οτι ποθεις (with teneret of Tert.) and a change of construction later.

iii. 2. —α μελλει αποθανειν οὐ γαρ ευρηκα σου τα εργα πεπληρωμενα. So 1 and 179 and 208 [not even 152]. Reading:

'γινου γρηγορων και στηριξον τα λοιπα ενωπιον του θεου,' making perfect sense, the preceding clause explaining the situation without this further amplitude.

† Now see beyond under No. 208, the exact counterpart of Apoc. 1.

viii. 9. —των εν τη θαλασση 1 12 152 179 208 Er. 1. 2. This is really unnecessary, as the previous verse indicates that των κτισματων refers to those in the sea, and it may have been filled out by the zealous.

x. 6. —των αιωνων fam 1 fam 119 and 47.

xi. 6. —αυτα fam 1 al. pauc.

7 fin. —και αποκτενει αυτους fam 1 and some others. It follows και νικησει αυτους and is not necessary.

xii. 3 fin. διαδηματα absque επτα fam 1 and but few. But originally this may have been right and the επτα brought back from a passage further on.

4. —του ουρανου in the phrase συρει το τριτον των αστερων with fam 1 fam 119 and Iren. Surely redundant.

14. —εις την ερημον fam 1 (follows εις τον τοπον αυτης, and is unnecessary in the sentence, the οπου or οπως τρεφεται following referring equally well to τον τοπον as to any τοπον εν τω ερημω.).

xiii. 2. και το θηριον ο ειδον ομοιον παρδαλει (—ην) family 1 and gigas.

xiv. 7. —αυτου by 1 and 179 (hiat 208 [non 152]). This is radical. A change from οτι ηλθεν η ωρα της κρισεως αυτου to 'Because the hour of Judgement came.'

12. —του θεου by fam 1 fam 119 only. This again is radical. A change from 'οι τηρουντες τας εντολας του θεου και την πιστιν ιησου' to 'those who keep the commands and the faith of Jesus.'

xv. 6. —περι (following περιεζωσμενοι) by fam 1 and a few others. This, however, is complicated somewhat by the compound, and need not be considered.

xvi. 12. το υδὼρ (—αυτου sec.) fam 1 and some others and boh. This is clearly unnecessary. It may have been removed, but it may have been added in an over-zealous mood.

10. —ομοια βατραχοις fam 1 and a few.

xvii. 6. των μαρτυρων (—ιησου) fam 1 and a few, including 36 and 130. This is radical, but quite possible. (Hiat 208).

xviii. 4. —εξ αυτης fam 1, 67 and a few. The change of order by ℵCP and our other Patmos group in full (38-178-203-240) is suspicious, and ἐξ αυτης possibly an early marginal addition.

7. —και πενθος pr. (So easily added from the sequence) by E Compl. group and 1-152-179-208 fam 119 of the 1 family.

15/16. —και λεγοντες E fam 1 and some other. Quite unnecessary words, and more graphic without than with them: κλαιοντες και πενθουντες (—και λεγοντες): ουαι ουαι ἡ πολις ἡ μεγαλη, actually wailing, not saying, the words.

xix. 3. και ο καπνος (absque αυτης) by fam 1, 47 111 189 and some others.

5. —λεγουσα, another graphic touch, by fam 1 and 47 189 al. again.

7. ἡ γυνη (—αυτου) by fam 1 etc. arm 2. Apr.

9. —γραψον A bold touch by fam 1 and a few important documents including 67 and 113. Note that *syr*S substitutes παλιν.

ibid. —του γαμου quite changing the aspect of the phrase with ℵP fam 1 etc., gig boh omn. arm 4.

17. —λεγων by E and fam 1 some others, 170[contra fam] 189 and sah pl. ps-Ambr. Another touch. 'He cried to all the birds that flew in the mid-heaven,' without 'saying.'

ibid. —και συναγεσθε by E fam 1 and Prim.

18. —παντων by fam 1 *syr*S copt ps-Ambr.

xxi. 10. μεγα υψηλον (—και) of the mountain by most of fam 1 [not 1 itself] and 130. This και may have been brought back from verse 12 of the wall.

11. —ως λιθω by E fam 1, 18 etc. and the other Patmos family.

xxii. 16. —επι by E fam 1 etc. Others substitute ἐν. Both ἐπι and ἐν may be additions. The phrase is: μαρτυρησαι υμιν ταυτα ταις εκκλησιαις, with επι (curious expression) or εν inserted after ταυτα.

I have excluded a number of passages, where greater support is vouchsafed to the 1 family.

The MS. 179 is highly interesting. Two correctors have been at work on it, but do not succeed often in disguising the original readings. One undertakes to revise all the accents, yet he has left undisturbed every case of ν εφελκ. Sometimes the corrector scratches out a whole syllable or a monosyllable. Thanks to 152 I can recover what is gone.

The free (but eclectic) use of numerals might bring down the date of the MS. somewhat [although 200 of the x[th] cent. has them], but it must be very early XII[th] cent. I should judge.

Of unique readings there are but few. I have picked up these:

i. 8. —ὁ ante ην

iii. 9. —των ante ποδων

12. τη καταβαινουση pro ἡ καταβαινουσα (της καταβαινουσης ℵ[a] sol. et noster 179*ex em. a pr. man. cum* 251 et Tyc 1. Beat. descendentis [non Tyc 2. = quae descendit ut rell.].

viii. 1. ημωριων

x. 2, 8, 9, 10. βιβλαρειδιον txt & com. 152 has it in verses 9 and 10, and 208 supports.

xi. 13. σεισμοσι μεγας vid.

xii. 16. ἤοιξεν pro ηνοιξεν

xviii. 13. —και ante ιππων (init. peric.)

xxi. 8. δὲ δειλοῖς (—τοῖς) (init. peric.)

13. —απο νοτου πυλωνες τρεις

[xxii. 8. εβλεπον και ηκουον ταυτα but this is . See 206].

The most interesting follow, quite close to the end:

xxii. 14. μάκαροι for μακάριοι So only Cypr.: 'Felices.' All others 'Beati.' This is not a slip, for the ι in μακαριοι has been effaced!

15. πόρναι 179* (pro οι πορνοι) but 152 here supports. 179 changes to αἱ πόρναι, and E 12 etc. support.

The other rare readings are nearly all found in 152:

ii. 1. —εν μεσω των

iii. 5 init. —ο νικων

8. εχει pro εχεις (also 1 80-138 91 102*).

iv. 11. ὃ pro οτι

vii. 16. πειvασωσιν . . διψησωσιν

ix. 2. εσκοτησθη

xi. 3.* προφητευσωσιν

10. πεμψωσιν

xiii. 10. ει τις εις αιχμαλωσιαν συναγει tantum

xiv. 7. θαλασσας (Note the aeth here has θαλασσην και ποταμους as well as και πηγας υδατων).

15/16. Uno tenore.

xvi. 12. τω pro των sec.

xvii. 4. και τα ακαθαρτα +τα 8 init. +και (και has been erased in 179).
xx. 7. και οτε ετελεσθη
xxi. 5/6. Uno tenore.

At xiv. 9 we substitute αλλος for τριτος with 1 12 14-92 and 152-208 only.
xvi. 15 we substitute εαυτου for αυτου with 12 81-204 137 152 only.

But with 1 alone (now confirmed by 208) we find ourselves at:
iii. 2. —α μελλει αποθανειν ου γαρ ευρηκα σου τα εργα πεπληρωμενα
xiv. 7. —αυτου
xix. 1. +τὸ, ante αλληλουια (and 80-138).
With 12 251 alone at xviii. 12 ἢ pro και ante μαργαριτου.
With 1-208 and 152 alone or almost alone:
vi. 1. —μιαν Also 203-240 (against 38-178).
vii. 9. —και φυλων (followed by Er. 1. 2. 3. Ald. Col. 57).
viii. 9. —των εν τη θαλασση (and 12).
xvi. 10. —πεμπτος (and 12; hiat 208).
14. —και της ante οικουμενης xvii. 14. οτι εκλεκτοι και πιστοι.

Very occasionally we go away from the family, as at:
xi. 5. αποκτειναι pro αδικησαι sec. with fam 21 36 176-206, but this may be second hand.

An interesting and unusual change is at:
xxii. 17. λαβειν υδωρ (for λαβετω υδωρ) with fam 62 and 152, but also 113 and arm α, which is now confirmed by 208, and therefore must have stood in the missing page of Apoc. 1.

Now see further under 208.

GRÆCO-LATIN GROUP 7-16-39-45-69-102-104-151-180.

Apoc. 180 (Ac. 149. P. 349) = Florence, Laur. Conv. Soppr. 150. = Greg. 180 (Ac. 149. P. 349), [new 620. Sod. α 207]. Collated from the original in 1912. [XII. XIII]. Apoc. 180.

Græco-Latin. The Apoc. is distinctly of the other Græco-Latin tribe, although not all of these have a Latin counterpart, as has this MS. 180. Our present MS. 180 is not only closest to 39 in its details, but reproduces all its errors. The Latin is on the right-hand side. Apoc. 39 is wanting i. 1 to iii. 17, so this MS. supplies the want.

Although the Greek portion is poorly written and many errors in breathings and in spelling occur throughout, we find in this MS. all the characteristic readings of the rest of the group, without change, even when they oppose the Latin column opposite; so that the Greek in many ways is independent of the Latin, and yet this cursive group hangs perfectly together, and only goes asunder in minor matters.

The inscription agrees with that of 16.

At ii. 16/17, where a commentary reading is incorporated into the Greek text (+και εν τη απειλη η φιλανθρωπια), the Latin opposite is quite unaffected.

But at i. 3 +ταυτης (post τους λογους της προφητειας) finds a certain equivalent in the Latin 'verba proph. libri hujus.' This reading is not young, being found in gig harl and also in copt syr Vict. and Prim., and also in 23, 111, 146-155 (Oec.) and 151.

At iii. 7 τοῦ ἄδου pro του δαβιδ (δᾱδ) is found to be the equivalent of the inferni opposite (ex gr. ΤΟΥΔΑΔΟΑ[ΝΟΙΓΩΝ] ?).

Here is where the greater family agrees approximately alone:

At xxii. 20 there is a sharp division in the family, 39-102-180 retaining ναι sec., while 7-16-45-104-151 substitute (alone) και. [Hiat 69].

GROUP 34-35-68-87-(124)-132-156-(165)-181-188.

Apoc. 181 (Ac. 416. P. 58) = Jerus. Patr. 38 = Greg. 495 (Ac. 495. P. 495). [Greg. new 1888. Sod. α 118]. [XI]. Apoc. 181.

Scr.-Miller gives Apoc. 181. Act. 417. P. 64 = (Jerus. Patr. Lib. 43 [XII]).

He means Act. 416. Paul 58. Jerus. Patr. 38 [XI].

Gregory's 181 is our 107.

[Jerus. Sepulcr. 38 appears to contain the Apoc. (now Gregory's latest No. 1888), while 37, referred to under our Apoc. 153, would appear not to contain Apoc.].

It was only in 1926 that I was able to secure complete photographs of this very beautiful XI[th] century MS. It is a com. MS. most tastefully arranged. At first sight it reminds one so strongly of 132 that I thought it was by the same hand; but it is not, although of the same family. I have little doubt that they were both executed in the same scriptorium, and perhaps the author of 181 was the teacher of Queen Marie, or possibly her pupil. Gregory and Soden speak of one Theophanes as the writer of 181, but there is nothing as to this which I can control from the photos of the Apoc.

There is a XII[th] century library-note at the close saying the MS. belonged to the Laura monastery in Palestine. (On the next leaf is a confused later medley of prayer and praise, ending with a medical prescription!).

This MS. very happily completes our tenfold group of:

34-35-68-87-124-132-156-(165)-181-188.

The inscr. (missing in 132) is ἰωαΝΝΟΥ τοῦ θεολόγου ἀπὸ κάλυψις · ἣΝ

ἐΝ πάτμω τῆ
Νήσω ἐθεάσα
το ⁘

There are distinct punctuations indicative of an ancient scheme of stichometry in the original, and this document shows us that all the XI[th] century MSS. of this family were copied from some foundation-source of a tenth century cursive type, like 200, or from an older uncial. They are not copies of copies, but all evidently based on some precious archetype in Armenia. Archetype.

This MS. indulges more freely than the others in ν εφελκ., but, unlike 132, has but few cases of iota postscript, only seven altogether: (i. 9 πάτμωι, i. 18 ἀίδου [non alibi], ii. 7 δώσω αὐτῶι, iv. 9 τῶι ζῶντι, xi. 19 οὐρανῶι, xiv. 5 τῶι ἀρνίωι, xvii. 17 τῶ θηρίωι).

On the other hand, the sacred names are frequently left expanded, as also ουρανος, ανθρωπος and their cases. There is no rule (except that σωτηρια is never contracted), and the same applies to some other members of the group.

The proof that 34 35 68 87 132 181 are copied on the same original, and that none derive from each other, is furnished by a glance at the varying conjunctions among these copies. Our MS. and 87 seem to have the greatest number of exceptional points in contact, where the original readings have been reproduced tel quel. Thus:

with 35 we agree at	vi. 6.	—και ante το ελαιον
	and xii. 12.	διὰ τοῦ pro διὰ τοῦτο with 35 and 68 at vi. 5. δαυϊΔ and xxii. 2. φυλα pro φυλλα with 35, 68 and 132 at xxi. 21. ἵνα εἷς καὶ ἕκαστος pro ἀνὰ εἷς ἕκαστος (hiat 87) and xxii. 19. εγγεγραμμενων pro γεγρ.

with 35-132 at xviii. 2 fin. after μεμισ. +και φυλακη παντος θηριου και μεμισημενου, whereas 34-156-165-188 add και φυλ. παντ. θηρ. ακαθαρτου after ακαθαρτου sec.

with 156 at xiv. 8. πεποτηκε

And the proof of the basic variations in the common exemplar can be seen in such a passage as xv. 3 in the heavenly song: φωνην pro ωδην sec. by the whole group.

And, as bearing on the Queenly character of the recension, note that at xviii. 7 the group as a whole combines alone to say ὅτι ἐγω κάθημαι βασίλισσα, and no others add ἐγω. The others vary between κάθημαι, ὅτι κάθημαι, ὅτι καθίω, ὅτι καθώς, and ὅτι εἰμι καθώς. Εγω, however, is found in sah. This group has been long since classed by me as Coptic.

New variations are very scarce. Observe, however, αἶμα thus at vi. 12. At i. 20 τὸ μυστήριων. And beyond at:

vii. 4. τὸν ἐσφραγισμένων
ix. 11. επ αυτων αγγελων
xi. 11. ἔστησα (errore)
16. επε is quickly blotted and και not inserted. (και omitted by 87 and copt).
xii. 5. παντα τα τα εθνη
14. οπως τρέφειται
xvii. 14. οὖτο pro οὖτοι (errore) ibid. κύριωσ κυρίων sic.

The squarest divisions of the family are perhaps at xvii. 17, where {γνωμην αυτων is read by 35-87-132-181, but {γνωμην μιαν is read by 34-124-156-165-188 with many others} hiat 68 and at xxi. 9. ὁ πρῶτος pro εἷς by 35-87-132-181 against the rest. The latter conforms to the Latin 'habentibus.' This trend is borne out soon after at xxi. 12 επι ταῖς πυλωσιν by 87-132-181 only, reminiscent of the Latin gender.

ibid. τὰς ἔχουσας pro τὰς γεμούσας.

Occasional rough breathings are interesting, thus:

vii. 11. επι τα προσωπα αὑτῶν So 221, and ἑαυτῶν 37.
14. αὑτῶν pr. So only Er. 2. 3. 4. 5.
viii. 3. ἑστάθη

ὅτὰὺ is invariable. Always ὧδε. Twice ἅμμος and ἅμμον. Once καθῄμένων.

Accents favour the circumflex, e.g. στῦλον once, (but στύλοι), παταξαι, γεμοῦσας. Even καταβαῖνοντα once. At viii. 1 σιγῆ. ix. 21 φονῶν for φόνων. And ουαῖ nearly always.

At xv. 6 λίνον in the text, λῖνον in the commentary.

We write κρίμα consistently, and μύρον, μύλον.

One curious reading, apparently quite outside the family, cannot be passed by in silence. I refer to xxi. 27. The ordinary printed reading is:

καὶ οὐ μὴ εἰσέλθη εἰς αὐτὴν πᾶν κοινοῦν καὶ ποιοῦν βδέλυγμα καὶ ψεῦδος.

Most, however, read κοινον, and then ποιων or ὁ ποιων.

We read, however, κοινῶν as if the participle of κοινόω. Thus only Apoc. 1 (Erasmus' codex !) [not even the sister of Apoc. 1. our 208]. Obs. sah ὃ κοινοῖ (vel μιαίνει).

Now see the last of this family under No. 188 (Constantinople, Holy Sep. 303.2).

GROUP 6-31-106-(164-166)-171-174-(182).

Apoc. 182. Apoc. 182 (Ev. 1094. Ac. 287. P. 480) = Athos, Panteleemon XXIX. = Greg. 120 (Ev. 1094. Ac. 287. P. 335). [Greg. new 1094. Sod. δ 307]. [XIII–XIV].

(Greg. 182 = Scr. 112).

Photographed in 1912 by the German Society. It is written in a very minute hand, and is found at once to fall into the rather interesting family group 6-31-106, but with some idiosyncracies. It is much nearest to 106 with a good many agreements alone with that MS. But only about fifty per cent. of its peculiarities go with the family. Most of the rest may be errors, but ix. 14 is very curious. There is no family or Version support for the +τω λεγομενω before ευφρατη.

Commencing at the xi[th] chapter we begin to leave the family altogether, and run into a number of new readings unsupported by Greeks or Versions. But after the xvi[th] chapter we appear to resume our relations with the family (see xvi. 19 —και tert. alone with 6-31-106) and at xvii. 7 run again alone with 106 having δωδεκα for δεκα, and at xviii. 13 reading very exceptionally ραβδων for ρεδων, again with 106. But in between at xviii. 7 we are absolutely alone with C in reading βασιλευουσα for βασιλισσα at that place. A very subtle relation with C is further seen at xvi. 6 where we read αἷμα ἅγιον. This is not an itacism on the part of 182, as the accent is carefully differentiated. Note also xi. 13 εν φοβοι alone with C.

C sympathy.

The puzzle therefore continues, and is hardly lightened by finding a commentary reading of Andreas intruding in the text of this non-commentary MS. at xviii. 14/15, where we find the straightforward addition of ουτε ψυχας ανθρωπων του λοιπου εμπορευση. This is also found in 47 and the family MSS. 6-31-171-174, but apparently not in 106 !

Yet at xviii. 16 the unusual dropping of και before κοκκινον (reading: βυσσινον και πορφυρουν κοκκινον) is supported by 6-106-171-174 as well as by P 4 20 21 48 64 73 74 † 106 113 218; and at xviii. 22, while the omission of the clause και πας τεχνιτης κ.τ.λ. is not a family omission, the family 6-31-106-171-174 all support the substitution of φανη for ακουσθη secund.

At xix. 9 we find the Arethas (not Andreas) addition by mistake (ex com.) of καὶ δή γε καὶ ἀπιόντες ὡς δεῖ, which is found also in 6-31-171-174, but not in 106.

At xix. 16 the omission of και secund. by 106 and *syr*S is not witnessed to by 182 nor the rest.

ενδεδυμενοις (for ..οι) at xix. 14 is read by ℵ and *syr*S Orig., but is not a family reading. (It is also now found in the Patmos group 178-203-240 and in 113 as well as in 152-179). I think 182 can fairly be dated XIII[th] century, and not as late as XIV.

The inscription is αποκαλυψις του αγιου ιωαννου του θεολογου agreeing with that of 31-106, as well as with other important MSS., including 23, 28, 38-178, 51-90, 109.

Here are the new readings:

ii. 13. —ο πιστος ος This seems to agree with Arethas com., as published by Cramer (vol. 8). ος is omitted by 6-31-106-171-174 and 34-35-68-87-132-156-165-181-188, 164 and 176-206, 226 aeth.

15. νικολαοτων sic (—των)

6. —και tert. ante κυκλω

vi. 1, 5. καὶ εἶδε· pro και βλεπε (102 108 218).

Apoc. 183 (Apl. 163) = Salonika ἑλλην. γυμνασίου 10 = Greg. 183 (Apl. 163). A fragment at the end of the book. Four leaves containing vii. 16–viii. 12. [x] cum com̄.

Von Dobschutz says this is the same as F.

We leave 183 blank.

GROUP 62-63-72-136-145-147-162-163-184. (Family 1).

Apoc. 184 (Greg.) = Amsterdam, Isaaci Voss gr. 48. [a. 1560] cum com̄. Apoc. 184.

Apoc. 184 Scr. [Act. 422 q. non est ad p. 306, vide Suppl. p. 396*. "Act. 422 = Gotha Ducal Libr. Ch. B. 1767 [xvi]" (sine Apoc.)]. (Vacat igitur Scr. 184). [Greg. old 184, new 2083. Sod. $A\nu^{602}$].

This Amsterdam MS. is of the Erasmian family, sub-type 62/3-72-136-145-147-162/3, and was doubtless copied by the same scribe as 136 or 147. Since we have procured photographs of it through the courtesy of the Librarian, we add a full collation, although it only swells this group slavishly. But its very slavish accuracy is a good check on the others, even to απο εκ πασης (pro εκ πασης) at vii. 4 perpetrated by the whole group, and indeed they join εκ to πασης, treating εκπασης as one word.

To be precise this MS. completes the trio: 136-147-184, of which the larger strict family is 62/3-72-136-145-147-162/3, being an important sub-group of the whole large 1 family.

To the very many unique readings of this group, sometimes 80-138 adhere, and not infrequently 1 itself is the only other adherent.

It is headed πιναξ των κεφαλαιων της ερμηνειας της αποκαλυψεως, του αγιου αποστολου και ευαγγελιστου ιωαννου του θεολογου, followed by full table of κεφ. and Preface of Andreas.

Heading of Apoc. is:

ἀρχὴ τῆς ἀποκαλύψεως; κεφάλαιον ά: κείμενον

as in 147.

Our MS. is illustrated in exactly the same places as 62 and 136.

New readings are excessively rare. Observe only i. 7 πασαι αι της γης φυλαι. Twice we get a breathing midway on a word: i. 13 περιἐζωσμένον txt & com., and v. 8 προσεὐχαὶ sic. At vi. 7 ἔργου καὶ ἴδε is corrected in margin* by χου. And xiii. 4 πολεμισαι (compendio). And note:

xxii. 9. +και ante των προφητων with 146-155 arm and no others.

Add:

ii. 14. —εκει with 62/3-136-147 and f. 97 200 boh (τινας pro εκει sah).
15. κρατοῦντα with 62/3-136 and 146.
iii. 9. ηγαπηκα pro ηγαπησα with 62/3-136 and 108 176-206.
vii. 5 init. —εκ with 62/3-136-147.
9. —λευκας with the same.
xiii. 3. εθαυμαστη 62-136-147.
xiv. 14. ἐπὶ τῆν νεφέλη sic with 72 only.

The readings common to 136-147-184 are as follows:

ii. 14. —ος εδιδασκεν εν τω βαλακ txt. (136).
iii. 15. εἶδα pro οἶδα 136 (and 69 79).

19. σαμπφειρος
xxii. 4. και οψονται αυτον, προσωπον προς προσωπον tantum pro versu.

Also, in common, note the following marginal remark opposite xviii. 13 :

ὢ τῆς αἰσχύνης, ὅτι τὰ δοκοῦντα ἡμῖν ἐν τῷ βίῳ ὡς ἐπὶ δοξα καὶ τερπνὰ καὶ εὐώδη · καὶ διὰ τοῦτο καὶ περϊσπούδαστα δῆθεν ἡμῖν τε καὶ περϊμάχητα · ἵνα τὴν σάρκα τούτοις κοσμήσωμεν · ταῦτα τοῖς φρονήσασϊν ἀληθῶς ὡς κατὰ πτυστα · μᾶλλον δϊασύρεται καὶ δϋσώδη · καὶ εἰς ἔλεγχον ἡμῶν ὀνειδίζεται.

Here ends Scr.-Miller's list for the Apoc., except that on p. 377 he refers to an uncial ℷ at Kosinitsa, ἁγια μονη 124, MS. of the whole N.T. [x] = Greg. ? [vide Textkritik, p. 96].

Apoc. 185 (Ev. 1277. Ac. 418. P. 484) = Cambridge Univ. add. 3046. [Greg. 185, new 1277. Sod. α 194]. [XI. XII]. Vacat.

The Librarian at Cambridge assures me this MS. does not contain the Apoc.

[On p. 303 of Scr.-Miller, under Acts 303 (Lesbos τοῦ Λείμωνος 132) he numbers the Apoc. 185, although it does not appear on p. 326 at the end of his list, which ends there at No. 184. But it does not matter, as it is reported to me in 1912 that the Apoc. has disappeared from the Lesbos MS. 132, having been torn out of the volume].

Leave 185 blank.

GROUP 149-186.

Apoc. 186. Apoc. 186. Jerusalem, S. Saba 665. [XII]. [Gregory old No. 500. Latest No. 1893. Soden α 117]. Photographs of Vester & Co., 1926.

This small MS. (like 113, written with a stub pen) is as unlike as possible in appearance to our 149, but it soon develops that in text it is an absolute sister. I did injustice to 149 in attributing the many transpositions to the scribe's desire for a clean copy, as all the same transpositions occur in 186. They are certainly not copied the one from the other, although of approximately the same date, and therefore the curious variants and all the transpositions go to a common ancestor, now probably lost to us. It is unfortunate, as it would seem that such unusual deviation from the standard texts must be due to a critical recension having to do with some lost commentary.

Lacunae. It is regrettable that 186 lacks a number of pages and is thus missing from i. 5 to iii. 1, from x. 6 to xii. 11, from xvii. 5 to xix. 2, from xix. 21 to xxi. 4, but it is so completely the counterpart of 149 elsewhere that we can count its adherence to the 149 recension in these missing chapters. In the important lections in these omitted sections I have followed the number 149 by 'hiat 186' to call attention to this matter.

Date. Gregory suggests the eleventh century for 186. It is more probably late XII^th, but there is no trace of iota post. or subscript, whereas the beautiful sister 149 indulges frequently in a special kind of iota subscr. placed a little to the right below the letter. Nor does the scribe of 186 indulge in the frequent double μμ of 149. Nor do we punctuate ὅρα μή as does 149. We write · ὅραμή · thus.

I can only repeat what I said under 149 as to the remarkable readings present, and call attention again to the Syriac leanings of 149-186 and to their agreement with 18 and 40, besides the strange solecisms, such as:

iii. 2. τοῦ λοιποῦ pro τα λοιπα
20. ἑστηκα εν τη θυρα (pro ἑ. επι την θυραν) Cf. xiv. 16 εν τη νεφελη, xvi. 3 εν τη θαλασση.
ix. 11. αυτω εστιν pro εχει (Cf. syr).
xv. 2. +και τινας αλλους
xvi. 17. —εις τον αερα
18. αφ ου οι ουρανοι εγενοντο (pro ανοι) (But so also 26-107).
xxi. 5. —ουτοι
xxii. 6. υποδειξαι σοι (pro δειξαι τοις δουλοις αυτου).

The aberration from 149 is slight indeed. Confined principally to these places:

iii. 9. και ουκ εισιν in 186. (149 omits και).
vi. 3. ζωου present in 186 (omitted in 149).
9. εσφαγμενων in 186 (εσφραγισμενων 149).
vii. 5. Habet 186 και εκ της φυλης γαδ ιβ χιλ. (omitted by 149).
16. παίση pro πέση 186 contra 149. (No other MS. writes παίση here).
xiv. 11. We have a double reading thus: οὐκ ἔχωσιν* Not so 149.
15. [επι της νεφελης] while 149 has επι των νεφελων.
xix. 7. [χαιρωμεν 186] χαιρομεν 149.
9. [αληθινοι 186] οἱ αληθινοι 149.
xxi. 12. —των ante υιων 186, but —των υιων entirely 149.

However, at xiii. 5 our MS. 186 writes νβ, while 149 has κβ, both variants from the μβ of the others.

At xiii. 18 our 186 writes ψη φισάτ, showing probable original intention of ψηλαφισάτω. Not so 149.

At xiv. 7 our 186 punctuates: προσκυνησατε αυτον · τον ποιησαντα with 55. Not so 149.

At xvi. 13 ὡς βατραχους is read by 149, while we abbreviate ὡς βατρᾶχ· probably βατραχοι.

We do not share the errors of 149 at xv. 5, nor at xxi. 18, at which latter place 149 adds gratuitously ἡ γουν του τειχους.

And at xix. 12 we supply ονοματα γεγραμμενα και, missing in 149.

We have no subscription any more than had 149, but whereas at the end of ch. xxii. a small blank space is left at bottom of the page, we add, without any line intervening, the heading of the list of the twelve apostles, thus:

τῶν Δ̄ ἀποστόλων ὀνόματα. ἔστι ταῦτα followed by the beginning of the list.

Serious study should be given to this recension.

DOUBLE RECENSION ER.-COMPL.

Apoc. 187. Apoc. 187. Jerusalem, S. Saba 676. [xv not xi]. [Gregory old No. 501. Latest No. 1894. Sod. α 210, α 1670]. (Old Greg. No. 504 = Jerus., Kreuz. 57 he now says does not contain Apoc.).

Inscription is: ἀποκάλυψις τοῦ ἁγίου ἰωᴺᴺ τ̄ θεολο῀ (= 17 23 etc.).

Photographed in 1913 for me by the German Society.

Rather carelessly written. No iota post. or sub., although the MS. is so late.

Rather a puzzle. Very close to the printed text, especially at first, but drifts away afterwards to composite readings of the Erasmian and Complutensian families. Certainly not copied from a printed text, however, although it has a couple of readings (iii. 5, 9) with Er. and Ald.

Curiously enough it has two errors in close proximity, once with ℵ alone and once with *syr*S alone. So do kindred careless spirits embroil our problems. Consult:

iii. 20. ανοιξω pro ανοιξη with ℵ.
21 init. +και ante ὁ νικων with *syr*S.

Upon a closer study, however, we find this rather interesting state of things. The MS. embraces in itself both of our early types of the printed text. From i. 1 to iii. 12 the Erasmian text governs. Here the scribe was interrupted—(he cancels two lines and leaves a blank line before resuming)—and thenceforward clear Complutensian traditions obtain to the end (with slight exceptions), showing that he used another document, but not the printed Complutensian text. Of the Compl. MSS. we are nearest to 77.

[See our 243 at Athos for a similar state of things].

There are a number of new readings, which, under the circumstances, are of no intrinsic importance, as we have already sufficiently fixed the types of Erasmian and Complutensian family groups, and we know that these varieties of reading do not belong to the regular family traditions.

We cite them, however, for the sake of regularity, and in order to trace the possible peripatetics of the MS. in the future:

… its comparative lateness there is carelessness in 188 and errors not shared by the … in places convicting others of the same (cf. A 81 at ix. 14, 12 and 100 at

… no iota post. nor sub., unlike the earlier sister 132.

… 188 is not quite true to type, but seems to run nearest to 34-156. In fact, … only MS. of the Apoc. at Constantinople, it is the faultiest of the whole family, … not go to Jerusalem or to Constantinople to find reliable copies to-day.

… quite a unique preference for ει over η, in words like:

We open fair and square with the family at i. 5: ος μαρτυς πιστος εστιν for ο μαρτυς ο πιστος, followed by the ος ηγαπησεν for τω αγαπησαντι, and ελουσεν for λουσαντι of the family +h gig syr copt.

SINGLE TYPE.

Apoc. 189. Athens, Nat. Sakk. 142. [XIV–XV]. [Gregory old No. 511. Latest No. 2091. Sod. Av^{502}]. Collated in 1924 from photographs supplied by T. Bolides, ex-librarian of the National Library. Apoc. 189.

Neither Soden nor Gregory intimate that this is only an extract from a commentary MS., for it begins at x. 8 at the $\overline{\kappa\theta}$ chapter (λογος ῑ) and has this prologue:

κέφαλαι ἐκ τῆς ἀποκαλυψέως ἰῶ' τοῦ θεόλογου:

Ιστέον ὅτι ἡ ἀπ̃ŝ (ἀπουσια?) ἀποκαλυψέως ἐστὶν· λόγοι $\widetilde{\kappa\delta}$· καὶ ἐνταυθα εἰσὶν λόγοι: $\widetilde{\iota\beta}$· εἰσὶν οἱ ἑρμηνεύσαντες ταύτην γρηγόριος ὁ θεόγονος· κυριλλος ἀλεξανδριος περ(?) εἰρηναιος· μεθοδιος ἱεροσολυμιτης· ἱππολιτος ῥωμης, καὶ ἀνδρεας καισαρειου.

Ἀνδρέου καισαρεῖ^ας· κέφαλαι ἐξηγημεναι ἐκ τῆς ἀποκαλήψεως τοῦ ἁγίου ἀποστολου καὶ εὐαγγελιστου ιῶ' τοῦ θεόλογου κε^λ $\overline{\kappa\theta}$· ὅπως τὸ ὑϊβλαριδιον ἐκ τοῦ ἀγγέλου ὁ εὐαγγελῖστὴς εἴληφεν λόγος ῑ:

After mutilating chapter xx., omitting xx. 1/3 †, and then reading xx. 7/11, 4/5 (omitting 6), 11/12 (omitting 13), 14 (partim), 15, it continues with ch. xxi., but closes at the end of the sixth verse, and at foot of the page has this subscription: Changed order.

εἴπερ παρ' ἐσφᾶ μεν δέκτυνοι (sic) τυχ͂, ἄν̅ο̅ι̅ μὴ κρινονται (vid. comp.) βροτὸς κἀγώγε:—

From this short subscription we are left to deduce that the scribe invites us to believe he may have been guilty of the ordinary oversights and lâches of any other mortal and no more, but this is rather imposing on his readers, for in the course of these studies of MSS. and their copyists it has not fallen to my lot to meet with anything more deliberate in the way of critical editing.

For instance, at xxi. 2 he adopts to-day's view of the coming of the Kingdom, or the second-coming, by a flagrant change in the text.

Instead of giving us the ordinary text:

"καὶ τὴν πόλιν τὴν ἁγίαν Ἱερουσαλὴμ καινήν εἶδον, καταβαίνουσαν ἐκ τοῦ οὐρανοῦ ἀπὸ τοῦ θεοῦ..."

or that of the textus receptus:

"Καὶ ἐγὼ Ἰωάννης εἶδον τὴν πόλιν τὴν ἁγίαν Ἱερουσαλὴμ καινὴν καταβάινουσαν ἀπὸ τοῦ θεοῦ ἐκ τοῦ οὐρανοῦ..."

he writes this:

"καὶ τὴν πόλῐν τὴν ἁγίαν εἶδον. τὴν ἄνω ἰλη̃μ τὴν μετρόπολιν, (—καινην) καταβαίνουσαν ἐκ τοῦ οὐ̅ν̅ο̅ῦ ἀπὸ τοῦ θεοῦ..."

and he continues the change in verse 3 by writing: και σκηνωσει εν αυτη μετα παντων ανθρωπων δικαιων.

The same remark might be applied to the change at xi. 18 of τον αγιον ναον του θεου for την γην. (See beyond under UNIQUE READINGS).

The changes, including numerous omissions, are deliberate, for the scribe is perfectly † Compare Charles' guesses as to order. I sent him the photographs of this MS., thinking it might interest him to see some confirmation of his idea of the proper order of certain passages, but he was absent-minded enough to refuse to look at them.

capable of straightforward and accurate copying when he has a mind to do so, and his aberrations are proved to be distinctive—I will not say personal, for his predecessors may be responsible—as we have a certain check on the basic text chosen for an exemplar, which we can identify in a considerable measure with the MSS. 59-121, which have already passed under review.

Thus at:

xi. 3. —περιβεβλημενοι σακκους } 121 and 189.
4 init. +και }
15. —εγενοντο sec. 59-121 and 189.

xvii. 4. χρυσὸν (sic) ποτηριον 121 and 189.
ibid. —και ult. 59-121 and 189.
8. και μελλει εκ της αβυσσου αναβαινειν 59-121 and 189.
14. —οἱ 59-121 and 189.
xviii. 13. —και ιππων και ρεδων και σωματων 121 and 189.
xix. 9. κληθεντες pro κεκλημενοι 59-121 and 189.

Also:

xviii. 12. μαργαρου pro μαρμαρου 10 30 47 90 107 121 [non 59] 122 178mg.* 203 and 189.
xix. 2. —ητις εφθειρε την γην 59-121 and 67-120 [non E] 81-204 114-241 120 and 189 arm a.
10. και προσεκυνησα pro προσκυνησαι P 21 59 aliq. 189 and *syr*S.
xxi. 3. ιδε pro ιδου 12 fam 46 59 67-120 81-204 114-241 137 and 189.

There is a large element of the 1-12 family throughout, and I do not believe there is anything of value in the text or commentary, which leads to a belief that the scribe reproduces much or anything which may have been dropped by the way between the time of Hippolytus and Irenaeus and that of Andreas of Caesarea.

As to xi. 6 and *syr*S.

There is one rather peculiar place, however, where 189 goes quite alone with *syr*S, viz. at xi. 6, where instead of επι των υδατων στρεφειν αυτα εις αιμα, he gives us:

μεταβάλαι (sic) τα υδατα εις αιμα, substituting τα υδατα for επι των υδατων and αυτα, as does *syr*S alone and exactly. The significant thing is the change of μεταβαλαι for στρεφειν, as if 189 were retranslating (cf. boh arm 3), for no Greeks vary στρεφειν (except 200 with στρεψαι, and 36 with στρεφουσιν), and the Latins are content with convertendi.

Add to this xii. 8 αυτοις pro αυτων (—ετι) ℵ^{c} *syr*S and 189 alone with 217.

And with ℵ* 75 at xviii. 9 we omit και στρηνιασαντες.

Speaking of 36 we find these coincidences:

xi. 13 fin. —του ουρανου 36 and 189 alone and Tyc 2. *syr*Σ [non S].
xii. 4 fin. καταφαγη (καταφαγει 36) το τεκνον αυτης Order of 36 and 189 alone again with *syr*Σ.
xix. 7. δόσωμεν sic 36 and 189 alone, to which add:
xiii. 8. —της ante ζωης 36, 189 and also 111, 193 [non 114-241].

One curious coincidence occurs with the Latin h quite alone at xi. 16 επι προσωπον pro επι τα προσωπα αυτων, where h has 'in faciem suam' with boh and aeth. (αυτων omitted by 189).

We are once, but only once, with 18 alone at:

xi. 8. +ριψει post μεγαλης

With 40-210 alone at:

xviii. 2. —παντος prim. (Since both 40 and 210 have the omission, the word was really wanting in their old exemplar).

With Prim. (and E*) alone at:

xii. 5. —υιον (Cf. 146*com.*).

We meet the unusual γυναικος for γυναικων at:

xiv. 4 with 113 157 159*ex em.* 164-166 222* 227* 228 230 and boh sah aeth.

We are with the Oecumenian 146 at:

x. 9. φαγε pro καταφαγε.

With bohairic (omn., non sah) we go (alone with 218 Prim. and ps-Ambr.) at:

xvi. 18 omitting τηλικουτος σεισμος ουτω μεγας, and note in this connection:

xix. 6. +το ante αλληλουια alone of Greeks, where both sah and boh prefix ⲭⲉ.

This in conjunction with βοαζει in xii. 2 for κραζει is important, for boh, and less often sah, substitutes βοη for φωνη in many of these connections.

A certain Latin order is found alone at:

xiv. 14*fin.* οξυν (sic) δρεπανον as Cass.: acutissimam falcem.

But the various novelties hardly lend countenance to any strict polyglot affiliations, as will be seen below, yet of unnecessary retranslation there is a good deal. (See xii. 2 as to βοαζει pro κραζει referred to above).

As regards the scribe's orthography he uses a few itacisms, but not to excess. A fair number of cases of ν εφελκ. occur, as if he were perhaps using the worked-over remains of an elder codex. Iota postscript does not occur, and iota subscript is reserved solely for ᾠδην and ᾠδης.

His principal peculiarity of spelling, because consistent, is to spell θειος for θοιος and similarly its cases throughout.

At xix. 10 begins a general shortening by tachygraphy as if he were anxious to economize vellum, yet, although he ends at xxi. 6, he has left half a page blank, whereas he might at any rate have squeezed in the rest of ch. xxi.

COMPLUTENSIAN GROUP 10 etc.

Apoc. 190. Apoc. 190. Jerus., Saba 101. [Greg. No. 1328. Sod. α 1470]. [XII].

In Gregory's index no Apoc. is indicated, but in vol. i. p. 255 of Textkritik he credits the MS. with the Apoc. According to Soden the Evan. and Apoc. are two codices bound in one, his Nos. ε 1419 and α 1470.

Soden says that from indications furnished by the former Jerusalem Patriarch Germanus (1549/1550) the MS. was given to the Monastery of the Holy Sepulchre by one Simeon a monk.

The MS. was photographed for me by Jantsch in 1912, and collated in 1921.

It is correctly written in a large hand. It begins two-thirds down the first page without decoration. The inscription is in two lines:

+ ἀποκάλυψις τ̃ ἁγίου ἀποστόλου ς̀ εὐα > γγελιστ̃, ἰω̃' τ̃ θεολόγ̃ :~ (with 37 63 119-144 Compl.).

There is no superfluous ν throughout, but also no iota post. or subscript except once at xii. 1 τῷ οὐν̄ῶ. Sometimes a word in the line below seems to be accented to serve the double purpose of accent on the lower word and iota subscript to a letter on the line above, but no certain case can be made out. Errors from homoioteleuton are rare. There are only three, and two of these occur close together towards the end.

The MS. is of the pure Complutensian type, the family now consisting of:

10-17-(21)-37-49-77-91-96-110-150-154-157-160-187 (iii. 12—fin.)-190 to which at least fifteen more will be added.

One photograph (or page from the MS.) is missing, containing x. 9, after the words και πικρανει, to xi. 6, but we can safely adjudge the missing readings to the Complutensian type.

Here are the new readings which are very few, but one of them is of surpassing interest:

ix. 18. και του θειου και του καπνου (—εκ sec. et tert.) Change of order, with *syr*S.
xv. 6. καθαρὸν λεπτὸν (—και) sic
xix. 16. τῶν μηρῶν (with *syr*S and arm).
xxii. 7 fin. —τουτου (Cf. gig; cf. 121).

As to λεπτόν xv. 6. I refer, of course, to the second case above at xv. 6. This is all the more curious, as it follows λῖνον and not λίθον. Is it possible that the λιθον of CA 38-178 48[non fam] 146 et Oec[com] am fu (preferred by the recent editors), is genuine, and that the qualifying λαμπρον is not, but the above λεπτόν is, which is an attribute of stone or metal, see Homer, Iliad 20. 275: "λεπτότατος χαλκός"?

As regards this exceptional reading of our MS. it must be remembered that it occurs here in the smoothest and most innocent way, and springs out upon us after the careful dissection of 200 MSS. Λεπτόν can hardly come from the scribe's brain [it is not a New Testament word], especially as he uses λινον and not λιθον, for he is not addicted to improvisations, and in the twenty-two chapters he rarely departs from type.

It thus most surely comes from the older exemplar from which he was copying, and may indeed be a long lost relic of the genuine text and an explanation of λιθον, and when λιθον survived in CA and the Patmos MS. 178 and Oecumenius, λαμπρον had already been substituted (because used freely elsewhere in the book) or λιθον had been put back for λινον, and the change back to λεπτον overlooked. The English and American revisers found it a difficult matter to translate,—this stony clothing. They could not or would not say "clothed with stone" so they interjected 'precious,' and made it "clothed with precious stone."

Sah boh syr, ℵ Tyc. and the rest, with fleury and Prim. insist on λινον, so that λιθον καθαρον λεπτον (a filmy, 'tenuissima,' transparent covering of chalcedony or jade, or a more precious stone) if genuine, must have been displaced before their day, and the Aethiopic apparently recognizes a difficulty (as so often) by omitting the word.

The other rare readings are also few in number, as follows:

i. 7. πας ὁ οφθαλμος So only 87[non fam] and 187, the latter another S. Saba codex, but not otherwise particularly sympathetic except as below.
ii. 2. —και tert. ante οτι So only A and boh.
v. 1. —επι του θρονου So only 74[non fam].
ix. 11. αββαδδων So 77-96-110-150-157-160 of the Compl. family, and more to follow.
xii. 7. —ὁ ante μιχαηλ So only 13 164-166 and Coptic.
xiii. 2. αρκτος pro αρκτου vel αρκου So only 77 and 187 and 229*mg.*
xviii. 5. —αυτης fin. So only 77 of the Compl. MSS. and 187
xxi. 22/23 Conjungit. So only 47 48 61 65 108 182 200 *syr*S [non fam].
xxii. 2. εντευθεν tantum (—και εντευθεν seq.) So (ℵ) 12 and 92 111 147 204*.

In a few places only do we seem to oppose Compl., sometimes with the MSS. of the group against the printed text, sometimes against group MSS. and Compl.

iii. 5. ουτως Aliq. fam, non Compl.
iv. 6. κρυσταλω B aliq., non fam.

And elsewhere:

iv. 9. δῶσι Aliq. fam, sed Compl. δωσει.
10. βαλοῦσι fam et Elz. Bez., non Compl.
viii. 1. τας προσευχας 17 et aliq. fam.

xiv. 12. +ἡ ante υπομονη Contra Compl.
20. εξωθεν pro εξω Non Compl. vid.
xvi. 10. εμασωντο Multi et fam, contra Compl.
xviii. 4. εξελθε pro εξελθετε Aliq. sed non fam. nec Compl.
17. —ουτως Ita fam. sed non Compl.
xix. 6. [λεγοντας] contra Compl. txt.
xx. 10. [οπου το θηριον absque και] contra Compl. et fam.
xxi. 20. αμεθυσος MSS. fam. aliq., non Compl. txt.
22/23 *Jungit. Aliq. et syr*S, non Compl. fam.

The following are the few errors due to homoioteleuton:

v. 14. —και τα τεσσαρα ζωα ελεγον αμην So 19 f. 61 82[non fam] 89* 95 113.
xxi. 4. —ουτε πενθος ουτε κραυγη ουτε πονος ουκ εσται ετι So fam 35 98 102, and fam 119 137 140 149 187 222.
11. —εχουσαν την δοξαν του θεου So only A 30-98 35[non fam] 104[non fam] 155[non 146] 166 187.

Double readings (a regular feature of Compl. MSS.) occur only at:

vii. 17. ποιμαν^αι^εῖ *sic (ποιμανεῖ first copied is the correct family reading.)
xiv. 14. καθήμενο^ς^ν ὅμοιο^ς^ν *sic. Here the corrected reading is that of the Compl.

GROUP 191-220. Family 21-28-73-79-80-99-100-103-112-135-138-139-170-191-220-221, composite; also Complutensian.

Apoc. 191. Apoc. 191. Andros. τῆς παναχραντου 13. [XI]. [Greg. No. 1384. Sod. δ 100].

This MS. contains the whole N.T., but it is only in 1926, after many attempts to secure a copy, that Dr. Bolides has succeeded in getting photographs of the Apoc. for me. The library is badly cared for. This is a straightforward non-commentary text by a capable scribe, but unfortunately lacks iv. 1 to xvi. 15. However, as 220 is a full sister at the Laura on Athos (collated previously) we have the gap filled out. We also lack xxii. 12 to the end. It is supplied by another smaller hand, but this, the last page, is illegible.

There are very few unusual readings which are not shared by 220. These unique variants appear to be confined to the following:

xvii. 3/4. +και λεγει μοι (to introduce the clause, brought back from xvii. 18 and given by P aliq.) = however, 220. But 191 writes alone βλασφημιαν with the alternative βασιλειαν.
xviii. 11. κλαυσουσιν εν εαυτοις pro κλαιουσι ϗ πενθουσιν επ᾽ αυτη (Ap. 220 has εν αυτοις).
xix. 4. προσεκινησαν (So 194).
17. —ειδον ενα
18. χιλιαδων pro χιλιαρχων
xx. 1. ὑπο την χειρα pro επι την χειρα
4. πεπελεκυσμενων
xxi. 6. των αγιων και (sic) προφητων.

It is possible that I missed some of these in 220.

As regards unique agreement with 220, observe the following conclusive places:

i. 15. και pro ὡς
ii. 25. ἄχρις οὗ ἥξω (—ἄν)
iii. 8. +και ante ιδου (also 111 and syr).
9. ἥκωσι pro ἥξωσι (So 220 marg.).
xviii. 1. και ειδον μετα ταυτα
xix. 15. +διστομος POST οξεια
xx. 4. εκαθισεν pro εκαθισαν
xxi. 16. σταδιων χιλιαδων δωδεκα ibid. οσον pro και quint. ante το πλατος sec.
27. ἡ pro και tert. ante ψευδος xxii. 5. φωτος λυχνου και ηλιου.

Add ii. 2 δύνῃ with iota subscript, the only place in the book, for both 191 and 220 (except ἐμπορευσῃ by 220 later).

The MS. opens with the Complutensian addition at i. 2/3 and the inscription agrees with 37 etc., but it soon develops as a whole-hearted adherent of the 21 recension, which has a very important and now quite numerous group, with considerable Coptic and Syriac sympathies. As our MS. is of the eleventh century it becomes an important witness to the accuracy of transmission of this recension, as, for instance, in the omission of και ο αγιος αγιασθητω ετι in xxii. 11. To this group 18 and 40 frequently adhere, as also sometimes ℵ.

I forbear to list the places here.

Note some slight deviation from the fam 21 traditions at:

xix. 2. πολιν pro πορνην with 14 18 aliq. and 220 contra fam 21.
xx. 13. —εδωκαν (sec. loco) with 82 217* 220 arm Tyc. (lib.) contra fam 21.
xxi. 4. —ὁ ante θανατος with ℵ 18 22 23 38-178-203-240 47 143 200 204 220 contra fam 21.
7. αὐτῶν pro αὐτῷ with A 1 etc., contra fam 21.
xxii. 9. +της προφητειας post λογους with 32 38 176-206 219 220 (arm) contra fam 21.
11. ρυπαρωθητω with 46 aliq. contra fam 21.

I am well satisfied not to have been forced to neglect this eleventh century witness.

Complutensian Group 10 etc.

Apoc. 192 = Laura A 99. [XIV]. [Greg. old 1503, new 1503. Sod. δ 413]. Apoc. 192.

This is a neat early XIV^th^ cent. bi-columnar codex with the usual Laura inscription: αποκαλυψις του αγιου ιωαννου του αποστολου και ευαγγελιστου θεολογου and the usual addition at i. 2/3 of: και ατινα εισι · και α χρη γενεσθαι μετα ταυτα · but it has a colophon by one Neilus in verse, which contains an acrostic date and a lament and dirge for a very dear friend and helper Constantius. If we read the third line as five times five it yields a date of A.D. 1317. This is close enough for our purposes, as the handwriting quite bears this out, and might indeed be older. The subscription is as follows, as far as it is readable from the photograph:

χιλιάσιν ἐξ̑ τοῦ κυκλου μου ἔτους βάλλουσιν εἰς νοῦν τὴν στερη . . . . ?

οἱ χρώμενοι γοῦν τῆ παρούση πυκτιδι, the next photograph is missing.

The MS. is of the pure Complutensian family.

ν εφελκ. is conspicuous by its absence. There is no iota post. and very rarely iota sub., which, however, intrudes at v. 9 ᾄδουσιν, again xv. 3 ᾄδουσι (but not at xiv. 3); xv. 3 ᾠδην bis [but not elsewhere]; xviii. 21 ᾖρεν, xviii. 22 κιθαρῳδῶν, xx. 14 ᾅδης [but not otherwise], and once in the subscription to πιναρᾷ.

Rho is made peculiarly open, but not uniformly.

Double readings are sometimes present, as in other MSS. of this type (again showing how faithfully some of them were copied), notably at:

iv. 8. λεγοντα̈ sic
vii. 17. ποιμάνει^αί^ sic
ix. 5. παίσῃ^πλήξῃ^ sic
xvi. 19. ἔπεσαν^ον^ sic
xvii. 10. ἔπεσαν^ον^ sic 16. ἐρημωμένην^ή^ sic
xix. 10. ἔπεσα^ον^ sic.

ἄχρις οὗ is written ἄχρισοῦ, and ἀφ' οὗ: ἀφου sic, and ἕωσοῦ. κρῖμα is thus accented, and μαργαρῖται, and στῦλος, and μῦρον, and μῦλον, but μεγιστάνες and ἶρις.

At xvii. 5 we find πόρνων, regular Complutensian style. ναὶ, ἂν and μὴ are thus written sometimes, but not invariably.

There is a very abbreviated chain commentary of no particular importance.

GROUP 114-193-241.

Apoc. 193. Apoc. 193. Jerusalem, S. Saba 537 = [Greg. 2302. Sod. —]. [XIV/XV].

Collated by Gregory (with Pickering's tiny edition of 1828) and published in the third volume of Textkritik, pp. 1207/10.

Collated by me from photographs supplied in 1913 by the German Society. My photographs lack three pages, and in those sections I have used Gregory's collation, which is in the main quite accurate. If anyone uses his collation, let me note the errors and omissions which I have picked up—in no spirit of fault-finding let me say, but to show that even Gregory falls short of the proper standard.

Gregory errs in the following places:

i. 20. He quotes ους ειδες. Should be ους ιδες.
ibid. He quotes αι επτα λυχνιας (—ας ειδες). Should be λυχνιαις (So 114).

v. 7. He says "tilgt το βιβλιον gewiss aus versehen." Nothing of the kind. The scribe, who does not use ν εφελκ. throughout, here deliberately writes ηλθε̲ και ειληφε̲ν̲, because without το βιβλιον, ειληφε would come before the vowel in εκ της δεξιας. Besides, many others omit το βιβλιον and some transfer it to the end.

10. Malè Greg. εποιησαν̲ αυτους. Codex εποιησας̲ αυτους.

vii. 3. αχρι pro αχρις οὗ Malè Greg. —οὗ, as if αχρις.

xi. 7. He cites —αποκτενει αυτους, but codex is minus και̲ αποκτενει αυτους.

xiii. 5/6. He quotes βλασφημιαν̲ in ver. 6, where there is no difference with Pickering. He means ver. 5 for βλασφημιας.

18. Malè Greg. "tilgt ὁ vor αριθμος." Habet.

xiv. 4. Malè Greg. —εισιν sec. Habet. Lege: —εισιν tert.

xv. 8. Codex —επτα secund, ante αγγελων. Gregory does not indicate which.

xvi. 9. Gregory would read δαυμα for καυμα. I think he is wrong.

19. Codex has [η πολις η μεγαλη]. Malè Greg. —ἡ ante μεγαλη prim.

xviii. 3. Codex has τοῦ στροίνουσ. Malè Greg. στρίνους.

(This is confirmed in verse 9 where codex reads στροινιασαντες, which he records).

All the above are quite involuntary on his part, as he has striven to be accurate and record every minute difference.

This second member of an important tripartite group is provided with commentary of Andreas, very closely interwoven with the text and written in a minute hand, with but very rare indications of κειμενον or scholia. No iota post. or sub. Rather a difficult MS. to date without seeing the original.

It at once develops in the very first chapter that 193 is a close sister to that interesting MS. 114 (see back) and they hold the relationship throughout, so that although 193 is mutilated and ends at xviii. 13 after the word σεμιδαλιν, we can take for granted that it would confirm the very exceptional readings of 114 thereafter, viz.:

20. ἀνέρχομε pro ναι ερχομαι (So 121).

The MSS. 114 and 193 are derived from the same original. They have not been copied one from the other. (How many old MSS. must have perished during the middle ages). At xxii. 14 our MS. 114 writes the unusual ἵν' pro ινα (where 193 is not extant). This goes back to the time of ℵ and the fourth century. Each in some respects retains the elder forms. 114 is much more partial to ν εφελκ. and to ιδον (up to ch. xiii), while 193 holds the very exceptional θιω and θιον (with C 200) against θειω θειον of 114.

In essentially strange readings they agree throughout, but they vary among themselves quite a good deal, and their errors inter se can now be controlled. I think probably 114 is rather the more accurate of the two.

114-193 belong to the large 1 family, having special relations to the 1-46-62 MSS., but representing quite a definite branch of it, as does the 119 family in other respects, although fam 114 and fam 119 come together in certain particular places.

In some of these places, as in yet other special ones, the curious and important MS. 130 links up, which is so independent in others. As, for instance: i. 17 —ως ante νεκρος (i. 18 +ωσει ante νεκρος 114-193, +ως 178, 200), ix. 20 —τα ante χαλκα, xiii. 2 —στομα sec., xiii. 8 εν βιβλω (—τη), xvii. 6 —ιησου etc.

Group 33-194. B Family.

poc. 194. Apoc. 194 = Staurou 94 at Jerusalem. [Greg. new 1352. Sod. δ 396]. [xiii–xv].

Collated 1926 from photographs (Vester & Co.). The condition of the parent ms. must have been bad. This copy is made by three scribes, and yet has a lacuna from i. 1 to ii. 10 and xii. 13 med. to xiv. 8 med. From ii. 10 to ix. 2 is the work of the youngest hand. I call him 194. From ix. 2 to the end is the work of 194^{A} a neat scribe, perhaps somewhat senior to the others. But one page 22, containing xxi. 3–16, is the work of the third scribe 194^{C} who is probably contemporaneous with 194^{A}.

The type of text is that of B [the most outstanding example being θυμιαματος at xviii. 13, and +και την πολιν των αγιων at xx. 9] and of a certain cursive group. Occasionally we show innate sympathy of a peculiar type with No. 33 (at Vienna) a ms. which has also suffered much mutilation. We identify them at:

xvii. 11. —και εκ των επτα εισι 33 and 194^{A}.
15. μὴ pro λαοὶ 33 and 194^{A}.
xviii. 3. —της πορνειας 33 194^{A} and ps-Ambr.
xx. 3. —αχρι τελεσθη τα χιλια ετη 33 194^{A} and *syr*S.

This ms. 33 is the only one to which we are really directly related.

We have a subscription, thus:

αποκαλυψις του αγιου ἰωαννου του θεολογου · τελος (with 9-19) followed by a second line with τελος εἰληφ† ὼσ παν σό† φω ῥητω†ρ γλώττη † sic

On glancing at the end, I found a new reading at xxii. 16 of ὁ φαεινὸς for καὶ ὀρθρινός and expected other valuable hints, but they were not forthcoming. As a matter of fact the reading here at xxii. 16 is peculiarly punctuated, for we have ὁ πρωινος as well; thus:

16/17. ὁ λαμπρὸς ὁ φαεινὸς · ὁ πρωϊνὸς καὶ τὸ πνεῦμα καὶ (ἡ) νύμφη · λέγουσιν κ.τ.λ.

The other rare or unique readings are as follows:

iii. 20. και κρουω εαν τις ακουση της φωνης μου uno tenore. Scribe^{B}.
v. 3. —της ante γης pr. (So only 57 and Colinaeus). Scribe^{B}.

16. μεγέδων Scribe^{A}.
xvii. 4. και μοι (—ἡ) γυνη ἦν vid. Scribe^{A}.
16. +γῆν ante πόρνην, id est: μϊσήσουσι τὴν (comp.) γῆν πόρνην. (αὐτὴν pro τὴν πόρνην 36). Scribe^{A}.

xix. 18. —και μικρων και μεγαλων Scribe^A.
(At xx. 12 we again omit μικρους και μεγαλους with 1. 2. 9 etc.). Scribe^A.
xx. 15. και οὐ τις οὐχ ευρεθη Scribe^A.

xxi. 13. και ἀπο βωρρὰ Scribe^C.
15. μετρήση sic Scribe^C.

xxii. 11 init. —ο αδικων αδικησατω ετι (Cf. 53). Scribe^A.

The first scribe (194) always writes ἴδον for εἶδον. Scribe^A also begins thus at ix. 2, but soon has εἶδον and so throughout thereafter.

The first scribe has a peculiarity, which I have not noticed elsewhere, of writing πνευματα, ονοματα, θυμιαματων, μεσουρανηματι and αιματι by suppression of α thus:

πνεύμτα, ὀνόμτα, θύμιαμ'των, μεσουρανημ'τι, αἷμτι.

Scribe^A does not do this, but he writes εξέλεύσεται, εξέδίκησε etc., without breathing on the first syllable. This is a marked peculiarity of the scribe of 146 (the Oec. codex).

At iii. 7 we write ἅδου for David. 'The Key of Hades' with 7-16 etc., and at xix. 15 we omit του θεου with 200 alone (hiat 33).

Occasionally we abandon the usual associates, as at:

vii. 17. ποιμένει
xiv. 11. τω θηριω και τη εικονι αυτου
18. —λεγων πεμψον σου το δρεπανον το οξυ xviii. 7 fin. εἶδω
xix. 14. ενδεδυμενον with fam 61 only.
xx. 4. ελαβε pro ελαβον

There is no trace of iota post. or subscript except may be a tiny one at xviii. 6 (hand^A) to ὧι.

[N.B.—33 is missing xiii. 5 to xiv. 8 (just where 194 begins again), xv. 7 to xvii. 2, xviii. 10 to xix. 15, xx. 7 to xxii. 21, and lacks subscription; all this must be noted in assessing the remaining peculiarities of 194].

I understand from Dr. Bolides of Athens, that during the late war the Bulgarians (or their German officers) made away with all these MSS., and they have doubtless been sold, after obliteration of Library marks, and may not easily be identified.

The same applies to No. 205 beyond, which was reserved for the Soumela MS. 41 at Trapezunt.

There appear to be or to have been three MSS. of the Apoc. at Meteora, which have never been catalogued in our lists of sacred codices. We shall number them 200, 201, and 202.

Two of these are by the same scribe in part, but the texts are of widely differing interest.

Apoc. 200 (Meteora 573) is by far the most important, in fact in the whole range of our documents there is none more important.

Apoc. 201 represents a Commentary MS. and runs only to xiii. 18.† The last leaf extant is crumpled and damaged, and the remaining portion has doubtless perished long since. This is said to be bound with the previous document.

Apoc. 202 (Meteora 237) is an XI[th] century and merely an early exponent of the Complutensian type.

† Von Soden (Text Band, p. 896) says it runs to xiv. 5. (If so the photographer has failed to supply the extra page). This is apparently his α 1072, but he says it has a "chain" commentary, whereas it is our 202 which has one.

Von Soden's α 1073 must be our Apoc. 200 (Meteora 573, although he gives no library mark). This MS. is said now to be in Germany.

Harnack gives us to understand that the scribe of 201 is the same as the scribe of 200, but this is incorrect. The writer of 200 begins 201, but quite another hand goes on at i. 16 fin. At iii. 14 the original hand resumes, but is displaced again after v. 5 by the second (contemporary) but rounder hand, and they hold on and off thenceforward alternately.

NEW TYPE. Our oldest cursive.

Apoc. 200 =Meteora 573. X. 1. Unknown to Gregory (=Soden α 1073). [x]. Apoc. 200.
Dobschutz now numbers it 2321.

This MS. was photographed for me by the German Society in 1912, with two others of the Apoc. in this monastery. It appears that there are other monasteries with libraries on the mount, but these three are from the main Meteora monastery. A notice appeared in Neue Jahrbücher für das Klassische Alterthum for 1912, pp. 542/553, by J. Draeseke, on the whole subject of this Thessalian mount, and another in Zeitschrift für Neutestamentliche Wissenschaft Jahrgang 13 (1912), pp. 260 ff.; the latter dealing with our MS., but I have not seen this article. The volume would seem to be one of Miscellanies, and, like that containing Apoc. 143, to have a rich surprise in store for us.

It is said that many of the Meteora MSS. were taken away to Europe in former centuries, and many found their way to the library at Athens. But this one was worth a long journey to resurrect from the dusty shelves of Meteora, and we must deal with it, late along as it comes in our lists, with very particular attention.

The inscription is αποκαλυψιc ϊωαννου τ̄ θεολογ̄ · (cum Steph.)

but it is with the subscription that we must concern ourselves, before dealing with the text, for it has a peculiar character of its own.

Immediately after the close of the last chapter we read:

επληρωθη ἡ αποκά· λυψιc τοῦ ἁγίου ϊω
άννου τοῦ θεολόγ̄.
`cτιχῶν α̃ :~

and then, immediately following, a touching subscription:

κ̄ε δια πρεcβειων τοῦ ἁγίου ϊωαν νου τοῦ θεολογου · cυγχώρηcον (με in ras.) παcαcμου τὰc ἁμαρτίαc · καὶ ἐὰν ἔcφαλον ἐντιν(ι)ρηματι ἢ λέξει ἢ αντιcτοιχω ἢ τόνω ἢ λογω ἢ ἄλλοτι κατα αγνοιαν ἢ κ(αι) γνώcη· ~ θεοδοcιοc ἁμαρτωλοc ϋπερ παν κ̃ε ἐλεηcον και τα
π̄νικαμου τεκνα·
φιλουc κ(αι) αδελφοὺc· αμην : ~

which can be rendered:

"O Lord, through the good offices of Holy John the theologian (or God's spokesman), concede [forgiveness] for all my sins, and if I have tripped in any sentence or phrase or in the order of words or in an accent or in a single word or in any other thing, unwittingly or wittingly,—pity Theodosius, O Lord, sinner above all men, and my spiritual children, friends and brethren. Amen."

Theodosius the scribe therefore claims that he copied as faithfully as he knew how to do. Fortunately we have an extraneous check, because another MS. at Meteora (apparently bound up in the same volume as this one), was partially executed by him, and this type is quite different.

I believe therefore that Theodosius did his best with the transcription of Apoc. 200 from a very ancient text.

This can be proved in many ways. One thing quite noticeable is the spelling of χειλια, χειλιαδες, which is constant throughout, although not found in other MSS., while in the other copy which he executed in part, this peculiarity does not appear; nor θιον, θιω for θειον, θειω which Apoc. 200 has throughout alone with ℵ. (We have even θιωδεις alone in ix. 17).

On the other hand, κρυσταλ... or κρυσταλλ... varies, and we waver between ενωπιον and ενοπιον, μετωπων and μετοπων.

Certain other itacisms are rarely present, and ι for η not very often. υ for ι only once. Iota postscript once only (iii. 3 γνωσηι). ν εφελκ. occurs throughout. ϊδον throughout, and without breathing. Where breathings are given they are throughout absolutely angular.

We have to do with a very old (x[th] cent.) cursive. Accents are irregular and rather sparse. It is an educated handwriting. Therefore the mass of itacisms and blunders evidently represent a faithful copying of an older and uncial MS., confirmed by the very touching and humble subscription of the scribe, where the reader can see for himself the way in which breathings and accents are intermittently given in that place. It is the same throughout the text.

The breathings, all very square, are often incorrect, as οὐ for οὐ, and many accents are missing altogether on a series of words at a time.

We have here a very interesting proposition. Not only does he write uniformly φιλαδελφιαν, λαοδικιαν, πτωχιαν, but the converse ευχαριστειαν, an equally good signal of age, all pointing to an intrinsically old exemplar, but when we meet with ιουδαιων for ιουδαιους in ii. 9 we know we have the real thing and a most ancient base (see ℵC 143 aeth). Immediately following this we have a novelty, the MS. being without the word 'synagogue.' It will not do to put this aside too summarily, for it may (in the earliest times) have been imported from the other passage (iii. 9). It has always seemed to be a strange and rather objectionable phrase "but of the synagogue of Satan." Our MS. simply says: "ἀλλὰ τοῦ σατανᾶ", ιουδαιων and του σατανα now corresponding, without συναγωγή. The other MSS. which read ιουδαιων in the genitive do not suppress συναγωγη, so that this MS. may take us back to a still older substratum of text than they do.† The first chapter makes this clear, for the exceptional readings have good and sufficient support to entitle them to our most serious consideration. Thus, although i. 2 is a surprise (αυτου pro ιῡ χῡ with Dion.), the omission of λεγει at i. 8 is confirmed by 170 and was apparently so read by Tertullian (Prax.) and by Hippolytus, than whom we can produce no earlier witnesses; therefore while βιβλιον (—εις) at i. 11, and ως εκ καμινου pro ως εν καμινω at i. 15 have no support as yet (but see 36), τις pro ητις in i. 12 is supported by 99 and 170 (both sister-witnesses of unimpeachable ancient bases), and —ναι at i. 7 = boh (cf. h) while Prim. has ita and not etiam. So we are in the midst of very old things (which really go behind ℵ, behind Irenaeus' translator and Gwynn's Syriac) as to all these important key-cursives like the present and like 130, 170 etc. It will not do therefore to dismiss the κατέχων of our MS. for καὶ ἔχων of the mass at i. 16, for the whole Patmos group 38-178-203-240 so reads in another similar place (x. 2), and και εχων may just as well have grown out of an original and forcible κατεχων as κατεχων have been miscopied for και εχων.

† Our MS. makes a point of this matter, because at ii. 24 it adds του θεου αλλα between βαθη and του σατανα, reading υμιν δε λεγω και τοις λοιποις τοις εν θυατηροις οι ουκ εχουσι την διδαχην ταυτην οιτινες ουκ εγνωσαν τα βαθη του θεου αλλα του σατανα, ως λεγεται ουν ου βαλῶ κ.τ.λ.

Basic text.

A special feature here is that the stranger readings do not have the usual Version support. At least, where they support, it is due no doubt to a real part of the underlying Greek text, and is not reflex Version action. The difference between this and other exceptional MSS. lies in this very thing, that when we look into the majority of the idiosyncracies of our MS. we do not find *syr*S and other Versions conspiring with it, and this rules out secondary Version influence. So that, whatever be its merits, this text is very old, in fact amongst the oldest which we have. Its continuous agreement with uncial forms proves this, but much else besides.† Yet at xiii. 11 +τω ante αρνιω is only found in the Græco-Latin family 7 (all its MSS.), and therefore the source of this must be retranslation from Latin, where the translator unconsciously added the Greek article. Again at xvi. 8 τοις ανθρωποις might be retranslation. Observe Prim. has hominibus.

Note at x. 3 the participial form for the Lion roaring, only countenanced by 19 and Prim. (aeth). Yet Horner so translates his boh, although the boh appears to agree with Greek μυκαται (or βρυχαται), so easy is it for a translator to glide into error. So Prim. 'rugiens.'

The only unusual contractions are $\pi\alpha\overset{\theta}{\rho}\nu o\iota$ for παρθενοι at xiv. 4, and $\alpha\overset{\circ\circ}{\pi\pi}$ for αποστολων at xxi. 14. Some forms go with MSS. 81-204 and 104. May be our scribe was a stranger, transplanted to Thessalian soil. There is also sympathy with 12 and 14-92. Possibly πεπτωκα at iii. 17 for πεπλουτηκα, and vii. 2 ανεμοις for αγγελοις are due to the original or to infirmity. There are half a dozen 'monstra' (notwithstanding the subscription), e.g.:

στοματος for θρονου (water proceeding out of the mouth of God) at xxii. 1 (of which 92 and 111 are also guilty); λυχνιας for δεξιας at i. 20; εκαθαρισθη for εθερισθη at xiv. 16. As to xxi. 1 'empty' for 'new' it is deliberately supported by ℵ twice over, as well as the variation και ην for καινην in xiv. 3.

βιβλαριον and variations.

At x. 3 βιβλαριον is agreed to by A, but is more consistently used by Apoc. 200 and may have preceded both βιβλαριδιον and βιβλιδαριον, because βιβλαριον or βιβλιαριον would seem to be the correct form (Justin, however, uses βιβλιδιον).

There are practically no corrections, and nothing in the margin except at xiii. 3, where του θανατου omitted, is supplied in margin, and in ch. vii. and xvi. there are numerals marg. opposite the lists of tribes and angels.

The mention in the subscription of a thousand στιχοι is interesting, but these are not clearly enough shown, and I have not tried to count them.

Note on iii. 16 and conflation.

One of the principal innovations, which should assist to date some of the readings, is to be found at iii. 16, but even here the reading was in doubt in the time of ℵ. If our reading were the real one, it would be strange, however, that the εμμεσαι reading should have become so stereotyped in all other documents but two. I refer to the church of Laodicea. Instead of: Because thou art neither cold nor hot, "μελλω σε εμεσαι εκ του στοματος μου," ℵ had already substituted: "πανσε του στοματος σου" ("cease thy drivel") and aeth[Walton] omits the clause, having probably found a conflation, marginal notes, or something unintelligible in his copy. Now the conflation is exhibited by the whole Patmos group 38-178-203-240 and 156-188, who write: μελλω σε εμεσαι και ελεγχω σε εκ του στοματος σου (178-203-240; μου 38 156-188). It remains for our MS. 200 to give this half of the conflation in full without the εμεσαι clause, reading thus: ελεγχω σε εκ του στοματος σου. There is no support except by arm 1. 2. 3., who, however, reverse the order and adopt St. Luke's order "out of thine own mouth will I judge thee." In St. Luke, however, the word used is κρινω and not ελεγχω, and this may be a coincidence on the part of arm.

Let me make clear the general situation here, lest readers do not grasp the full import of the matter.

† Note that where Oxyr[1080] (IVth century fragment) is extant we go with it (iv. 2/3).

None of our Latins or Church Fathers seem to know any reading but the standard one of μελλω σε εμεσαι εκ του στοματος μου, nor does Gwynn's Syriac, nor the Coptic.

But already in Aleph's day, however, there was a variation known, and an altogether strange one, viz. the substitution: πανσε του στοματος σου, the σε remaining, the εκ disappearing, and μου being replaced by σου.

Along comes Apoc. 200 with another substitution: ελεγχω σε εκ του στοματος σου, the εκ now remaining, and the ελεγχω naturally followed by the σου of ℵ.

The unimpeachably ancient testimony of 38-178 † now comes in to exhibit the double reading: "μελλω σε εμεσαι και ελεγχω σε εκ του στοματος σου."

Again, at iv. 4 we join that most notable combination of ℵ 130 143 f. 178 arm 4. for εν λευκοις (—ιματιοις), surely the basic reading here. (See my note under Apoc. 143). And we go beyond them all at iii. 4 omitting εν λευκοις altogether there, and alone.

Here are the readings which agree especially with our 'uncial' transmission (remember after elimination of two hundred cursives):

i. 19. +δη̂ post ἃ tert. with ℵ*C alone (no other cursives) δει pro μελλει 143.
ii. 5. κεινήσω with A alone (no other cursives).
9. ιουδαιων ειναι εαυτοις with ℵC (and 143 aeth arm 3).
iii. 1. εκκλησιαις with C 156 187 arm 4.
iv. 2 fin. καθημενον with *Oxyr*1080 Prim. alone (no other cursives).
6. και εμμεσω with A alone (and 114 130).
v. 6. εμμεσω bis with A alone (no other cursives, but 130 pr. loco).
vi. 6. εμμεσω with CA alone (no other cursives).
8. αποκτιναι with C alone (no other cursives).
14. εκεινηθησαν with C (and 159 201).
vii. 1. —της ante θαλασσης with A (and 127-215).
ibid. επι δενδρον (absque τι vel παν) with (A) (111 226 and perhaps 55*). Cf. 19 Prim.
7. χειλιαδες ter with ℵ alone (ℵ semel in versu).
8. χειλιαδες ter with ℵ alone (ℵ bis in versu).
viii. 3. —το ante ενωπιον with ℵ (and 164-166 aeth arm pl.).
10. ωσπερ λαμπας with F-178-203-240 only (no other cursives).
11. ως αψινθιον with F-178-203-240. (Cf. 177 201 218 *h boh syr*S Prim.).
ix. 1. αστερας πεπτωκοτας with ℵ* 182 alone (and 120).
4. αδικησουσιν with A 201 alone (no other cursives).
5. αποκτινωσιν with ℵ (and 67 201).
17. θίον pro θεῖον with ℵCA alone and 193 [non 114-241].
18. θιου pro θειου with CA alone and 193 [non 114-241].
x. 7. τους εαυτου δουλους και τους προφητας with ℵ alone (no other cursives) and sah aeth.
9. βιβλάριον with A* alone here, but A abandons this, while Apoc. 200 uses it all through.
xi. 18. τους μικρους και τους μεγαλους with ℵCA 201 (no other cursives).
xiv. 3. και ην pro καινην with (ℵ* alone, no cursives).
10. θιω pro θειω with C 193 alone [non 114-241].
18. +ὁ (ante εχων) with CA alone (no other cursives) and syr gig vg.
19. τον μεγα with A (and 18 152-179 251).
xvi. 6. δεδωκας with CA 111 alone.

† My 178 is the Patmos MS. No. 12 (Greg. 178. Soden α 406, but apparently not thought worthy of a place in his apparatus!). We add 203-240 to 178.

xvii. 6. ἴδα pro εἶδον with A alone (ειδα ℵ) no other cursives.
15. ταυτα pro τα υδατα with ℵ* (and 130).
17. αυτων pro αυτου with ℵ[a] (and 178-203-240).

xviii. 3. πορνιας with ℵC (and 104 113).
11. εν αυτη pro επ αυτη with A alone (no other cursives).
18. +ταυτη post πολει with C (and 104-151 latt arm boh).

xix. 15. [του οινου] της οργης του θυμου (—και) with ℵ alone and sah (no other cursives).
20. ἐν θίῳ (sic, —τω) with ℵ alone (no other cursives).

xx. 10. του θιου agrees with ℵA alone.

xxi. 1. ουνον κενὸν· with ℵ alone and arm 4 (no other cursives).
ibid. καὶ γῆν κενήν· with ℵ alone and arm 4 (no other cursives).
ibid. απηλθαν with ℵA alone (no other cursives).
6. —τω ante διψωντι with P (and 146-155).
8. θιω with ℵ alone (no other cursives).

xxii. 8. εβλεπων (vult εβλεπον) with A (and 146-155).

Before going further, I submit that the above is a very remarkable showing indeed, if we remember that we have traversed the ground of 230 cursives to arrive at it. It shows indubitably a direct foundation text of no inconsiderable age, by which I mean that we can say confidently that a document directly underlies Apoc. 200 coeval with our oldest uncial witnesses.

We will proceed now with the rarer readings and their attestation. Instead of separating them into groups we will take them in order as they come:

A careful study of the above will show endless combinations with all our most striking documents (besides the uncials) such as 18, 56, 130, 146 and the Patmos MS. 178, and no less than five times alone with 40, and quite five times alone with 130.

All this does not seem to point to eclecticism, but to a base reaching even beyond all these. It is important to consider in this connection the Syriac element underlying such MSS. as 40, with the agreements with the Patmos MS. 178 and with Gwynn's Syriac, for some possible common Græco-Syriac original base. Base.

Next we must consider the new readings, and the list would be a fearsome one indeed, but for the lesson conveyed above, where from Tertullian and Hippolytus to h gigas Prim. and Gwynn's Syriac we find such intense sympathy, so that, ruling out a few which may have come in to the text later, the bulk of them must be relics of a text antedating all uncials and that of the important cursives 18 36 38 40 47 56 65 95 111 113 114 130 143 146 164 178.

Transpositions.

And these transpositions:

iv. 1. μετ εμου λαλουσα pro λαλουσης μετ εμου (So 178-203-240).
ix. 18. εκ του καπνου και του πυρος και του θιου (sic)

xvi. 17. απο του θρονου εκ του ναου (—του ουρανου) λεγουσα
xix. 8. και λαμπρον καθαρον (Cf. 188).

These very few unique transpositions indicate no careless copying, for careless copying always involves transpositions (and one agrees with fam 178, which had escaped me when this was written).

It will be noticed that additions and omissions nearly balance one another.

The striking ones will easily meet the eye.

The substitutions can be weighed carefully as to their historical connection.

It is unnecessary to add a word more. But it is worth while having waded through so much material to reach this long-lost witness.

We present this document with the assurance that there is much to be learned from it, and that the future may perhaps furnish evidence of its integrity and bona fides.

NEW COMMENTARY MS.

Apoc. 201. [x]. Not in Gregory. (This must be Soden α 1072). Dobschutz now numbers it 2322. Apoc. 201.

This is a second MS. from Meteora, but Jantsch has not supplied the library mark. It must surely be from there, as one of the hands by whom it is written is the same scribe who wrote 200.† The other and rounder hand at first sight looks younger, but only at first sight, as he is evidently contemporary, alternating with the other scribe. I should date them both about 1000 or earlier. The second hand omits just as many breathings and accents as the other.

Inscription: ʽΑποκάλυψις τοῦ ἁγίου ἰωάννου τοῦ θεολόγου :—

No subscription, as the MS. ends at xiii. 18.

The two monks may have lived in Thessaly, but their itacisms savour of other regions. This MS. maintains ευχαριστειαν of the last (a very ancient form), but does not reproduce χειλιαδες, which with χειλια etc. was maintained uniformly by Apoc. 200. Yet it has βλασφημειαν, not given by 200. Zeta of the round hand is interesting and exceptional, and reminds one of the Irish Latin z.

The most affinity we have is for 14-92 (which combination has long sought a sister) and the extraordinary MS. 130.

Thus at vi. 11, while substituting αναπαυσασθαι for ινα αναπαυσωνται with 130 (αναπαυσασθε), we have a new and very likely reading of μικρον (tantum) without ετι χρονον, thus:

"και εδωθη αυτοις στολη λευκη και ερρεθη αυτοις αναπαυσασθαι μικρον, εως πληρωσωσιν και οι συνδουλοι αυτων και οι αδελφοι αυτων και οι μελλοντες αποκτενεσθαι ως και αυτοι."

There is always something new to be learned in every MS. examined, as only by their whole witness can we hope to recover long lost original phrases. Thus—for better or for worse—this MS. at last pretends to solve the great difficulty at xii. 7. The awkward πολεμησαι μετα disappears, and μετα (minus επολεμησαν or πολεμησαι) becomes intelligible, the whole hanging together thus: Καὶ ἐγένετο πόλεμος ἐν τῷ οὐρανῷ· ὁ Μιχαὴλ καὶ οἱ ἄγγελοι αὐτοῦ μετὰ τοῦ δράκοντος, καὶ ὁ δράκων ἐπολέμησε καὶ οἱ ἄγγελοι αὐτοῦ, καὶ οὐκ ἴσχυσεν (rather than ισχυσαν)...

Hitherto we have had to read επολεμησαν κατα (or μετα), or πολεμησαι (some τοῦ πολεμησαι) μετα.

Notice also the strange εχει for εστιν prim. in xiii. 18: ωδε η σοφια εχει, abandoning the Semitic formula.

The MS. is provided with a short commentary, which is not that of either Andreas, Arethas or Oecumenius. Chapter i. 1 is written in capitals, without variation from text. rec. to ιωαννη, where the first section of the commentary begins, thus:

ʽΟυ μαχεται τῶ λεχθέντι ὑπο τοῦ σρσ̅ προσ τοὺσ γνωρίμουσ· οὐκέτι καλῶ ὑμᾶσ δουλουσ ἀλλα φίλουσ το ὑπ̓ αὐτῶν ομολογουμενον περι αυτῶν ὡσειναι δουλοι του κῡ. καγγαραυτοσ τιμην ϛ υπερουσην(?) [Harnack: υπεροχην] αὐτοῖσ δωρούμενοσ: φιλουσ καὶ τεκνα ϛ αδελφουσ αὐτοὺσ καλεὶ. ἀλλ᾿ οὖν αὐτὸι ευγνομονεσ ὄντεσ ομολογουσιν ὡσ τυγχανουσι δοῦλοι· αξιομα (sic, malè Harnack αξιον και) μεγιστον ηγουμενοι θῡ δεσπότην ἐχειν· ἐνγου ταισ επιστολαῖσ αἶσ γράφουσιν ὡσ ἄλλοι τὰ θνητῶν ἀξιώματα προταττουσιν τοῦτο αὐτο· Καὶ γοῦν ὁ ἰάκωβοσ ϗ παῦλοσ ϛ οἱ λοιποὶ συμφώνωσ πράττουσι τὸ αὐτό· ελαττωτικοὶ γαρ ἑαυτῶν δια ατυφιαν υπαρχοντεσ. τα τῶν ὑπεροχῶν δηλωτικὰ γεγραμμενα περι αυτῶν (sic, malè Harnack εαυτων) σιωπῶσι.

The text follows to i. 2 οσα ιδεν (—τε) and then very short scholion, thus:

Τὸ ἀπαγγεῖλαι τὰ γνωσθεντα ϛ φανερωσαι τον περι αυτῶν λόγον μαρτυρίαν εἶπεν·

† According to Harnack this is bound up with the previous MS.

After i. 4 at θῦ (pro του prim.) there are twelve lines of com., and then the text continues ο ων και ο ην...

The text now in cursive. After i. 7 fin. thirteen lines of com.

At. i. 16 after και εχων εν bottom of fifth page, the second (round) hand goes on at top of sixth page, continuing to middle of verse at "επτα." Then follows com. of fourteen lines in same hand, marked ερ at the beginning. And so on.

The MS. ceases in the middle of a long comment on xiii. 18. The text itself ceases at αυτου omitting the number χξς. The commentary follows, beginning: ὁρμὴ ὁ δράκω πολεμήσασ μετὰ τῶν ἀγγέλων ϛ θληβεισ, βληθεὶσ κατω ἐκ τοῦ οὐνοῦ ἔσυρεν πίπτων τὸ τρίτον τῶν ἀστέρων· ἅτινα αστρα θειασ δυναμισ (sic) ουσασ συναποστατηκέναι (sic, Harnack συναπεστατηκεναι) αὐτῷ ϗ συγκατενεχθῆναι τῷ δράκοντι· ὡσ ἠσαΐασ φησιν· πωσ ἐξέπεσεν... and continues for several pages, finally reaching a point where χξς is mentioned. After another page αριθμοσ γαρ ανου εστιν χξς is found as a quotation, and the scholia continue. We never reach the text of xiv. 1, as the MS. is mutilated after f°. 290 before the scholia on xiii. 18 are finished.

[Harnack, however, gives the text of xiv. 3/5 lacking in my photographs].

There are four cases of iota postscript at i. 13, x. 10, xi. 19, xii. 15 and xiii. 12, with μέσωι, ἐν τῶι στοματι, ἐν τῶι ναῶ], ποιήσηι, and ἐν αυτῆι.

The scribes repeat the σφραγηδας of Apoc. 200 and some such itacisms, and such things as νήσσω, but the text is quite different (although they agree to join up i. 19/20), and involves these new readings:

i. 6. +ημων post θεω

The scholia in this MS. have already been dealt with in "Der Scholien-Kommentar des Origines zur Apokalypse Johannis, Diobouniotis & Harnack, Leipzig, Hinrichs 1911."

However interesting Harnack's deductions as to the Origenistic source of the commentary, the printing of both text and scholia is woefully deficient in accuracy.

Too many of the manuscript's readings are relegated to the footnotes, and give place to suggested emendations. Punctuation is arbitrary. Iota subscript of the printed text of course is absent from this old manuscript. Accents are supplied, and the scribe's, where he gives them, often changed, but this is of no importance, as when 201 was penned accentuation was in its infancy and largely deficient in the MS. But far worse than this, both editors are guilty of simply innumerable errors.

Thus, from the text, in the very first verse, the words τω δουλω αυτου (between δια του αγγελου αυτου and Ιωαννη) are omitted by mistake, although plainly in the text. This is the more vexatious, because two important MSS. (130 and 170) do omit these words, and 201 may in future be quoted with them in error.

The commentary fares equally badly. In the very first section, sixth line, Harnack prints "ἄξιον καὶ μέγιστον" whereas the codex reads plainly "αξιομα μεγιστον," and "τὰ θνητῶν ἀξιώματα" occurs in the next line but one, for control. The footnotes afford no indications of the above mistakes.

Again in the third commentary section (after i. 3) in the fifth printed line Harnack gives μακαρίζεται and the footnote adds "μακαριουσιεῖ?", but the codex is quite plainly μακαριοποιεῖ.

Again in the fifth commentary section (after i. 8) in the fourth line Harnack prints τὸ ᾱ καὶ το ω̄, but the codex is absolutely without the articles.

Again in sixth commentary (after i. 16):

Fifth line he prints τῶν μὲν τῶ θεῶ, and in his note "τῶν μὲν τῶ ego, τω μὲν cod.", but codex is τῶν μὲν θω̄.

Seventh line he prints ἔχοντος for ἔχων, although here the footnote corrects it, but why invent a reading? The object is to make the case agree with υἱοῦ ἀνθρώπου preceding, but the other method is the more usual method of the author of the Apocalypse, copied here by the commentator, and of course to be retained by an editor.

In some other cases the notes correct the text, but often not. Next section (7) line 10 read νεκρος not νεκρον; twelfth line delete μεν.

Eighth section, line 1, γῆς should be τῆς.

Ninth section, eighth line, delete και before κἀκεῖθεν.

In line ten he has changed επι του προφορικου λογου of codex to επι τω προφορικω λογω, and then proceeds to change τιθετω of codex to ετιθετο.

Tenth section, third line, text has μαχομενον and note says "μαχόμενο," but codex plainly μαχομενα.

Fourth line, text given is ἀποβαλεῖν, without note, but codex is ἀποβαλῶν.

Sixth line, ἐγεγόνει should be γεγονει.

Eliminating then all places dealt with in the square brackets, except where an error has been made, we have to report the following as the true readings of the codex.

The wording of such an important and unique document should be given with the utmost care.

Students are warned when they use this publication in respect of any textual niceties involved, that they must refer to the original.

My photographs of the MS. will be found at Ann Arbor, in the library of the University of Michigan.

COMPLUTENSIAN GROUP 10 etc.

Apoc. 202. [XI]. Not in Gregory. Dobschutz now numbers it 2323. Apoc. 202.

This other MS. from Meteora numbered 237, is, although an early cursive, of quite a different standard.

It falls at once into the well-defined Complutensian family, and need not detain us long. χριστοῦ is twice written in full (xi. 15, xii. 10).

The inscription, as in 10-96-110-150-157-160-161-192, is αποκαλυψις του αγιου ιωαννου του αποστολου και ευαγγελιστου θεολογου.

There is a short chain commentary, apparently small extracts from Andreas.

Collated in 1921 from photographs supplied by Jantsch in 1912. ν εφελκ. is absent throughout, which is strange in an early cursive. There is no iota post., except, curiously enough, once and with γλυκύι at x. 10. The MS. is quite stereotyped, down to the retention of μονους (ix. 4), and the viii. 12 clause verbatim with text. rec. down to φαίνῃ and not φανῃ.

In only two places does it wander, viz. at ix. 4 χόντον pro χορτον with 25-78 (two of another family of seven or eight members, which agrees elsewhere at x. 7), xviii. 22/23, where on the first occasion ετι εν σοι is given in this order with fam 61 and 146, and a general mix-up of order ensues, not apparently countenanced by the family. Otherwise the MS. is very correctly written indeed. There are no unique readings, and very few slips of any kind. Only at xiv. 2 do we find αι for Και, the rubrication having been omitted, and at xiv. 5 οὐχ' χευρέθη, a reduplication of χ at the end of one line and at the beginning of the next. The scribe has one peculiarity (shared by a few others) of withholding any breathing from ου wherever αχρις ου occurs.

Some of the most characteristic readings are:

ii. 7. —αυτω with ℵ fam 10 fam 46 67-120 121 191 218 220 *syr*S Compl.

iii. 18. +επι ante τους οφθαλμους which is almost wholly a Complutensian reading.

vi. 9. +των ανθρωπων post ψυχας with ℵP, and chiefly the Erasmian and Compl. families combined plus copt aeth arm.

12. +και ante οτε P aliq. et fam.

ix. 6. ζητοῦσιν fam. et aliq.

7. χρυσοῖ (pro ομοιοι χρυσω) B etc.

11. αββαδδων 77-96-110-150-157-160-190 of the family.

xv. 4. αγιος +ει fam. et f. 95 109*gr.* 159 169 171 176 al.

6. οὐνοῦ pro ναου most of the family with 56 178 and Compl.

8. —επτα sec. ante αγγελων EP etc.

xvii. 5. πόρνων pro πορνῶν most of the family.

xviii. 7. —και πενθος prim. E 10 al. Compl.

17. και πας ο επι των πλοιων πλεων fam. et aliq.

21. —ουτως Omn. praeter [17-49].

xx. 11. [εφυγεν] ο ουνοσ και η γη E fam. et 67-120 f. 114 169 172 200 tol. Prim. Aug.

xxii. 18. +επτα ante πληγας BE etc.

There are a few alternative readings, thus:

iv. 8. λεγοντᾰ intended doubtless for λεγοντες ex emend.

vii. 17. ποιμᾰνεῖ sic

ibid. ὁδηγῆσει sic

ix. 5. παίσῃ sic, but πληξη is by the com. hand. πληξη is read by 10-37-49-77-96 of the Compl. group and by 26-41-42-53-107.

At viii. 3. θυμιαματα πολλα is written thus: θυμιάμα ꝑ πολλά.

and xxi. 8. For δειλοις δε we have τοῖς δὲ δειλοῖς.

Otherwise there is nothing peculiar.

There is no subscription.

GROUP F (38)-178-203-240.

APOC. 203. Apoc. 203. των βλαταιων 53 teste Greg. et rectè (23 teste v. Sod. perperam). [Greg. 1778. Sod. O[a41]]. [XIV/XV].

This is not old Apoc. 183, which was labelled Hellenik. Gym. No. 10, if it ever existed, but this MS. is still safe in its monastery outside the town of Salonika. Prof. Lake very kindly took some photographs of it in 1925, and the University of Michigan photographer, Mr. Swain, completed them in 1926; and it now proves to be of very great interest indeed.

Although junior in years to many others, it is copied by a very careful and neat writer, who probably flourished about 1400, and it has, most exceptionally, the double commentary of Andreas and Oecumenius, thus enabling us to check the commentary in our 146, for the only other examples, one in Prince Chigi's library at Rome, our 122, and the other abbreviated cursive MS. at Athos, our 240, are not wholly reliable or legible everywhere.

But the text turns out to be the counterpart of that of our well-defined family F 38-178-240.

At first we rather favour 38, and then we drift to 178†, showing clearly that a document has intervened between all these and that our MS. does not derive from the XII[th] century Patmos document 178, and is only related to 38 and 240 as a sister. The plot therefore thickens. All detail will be found in the merged collations, and I have tried to be careful to state when the family is not quite at one. I quote fam 38 when all agree, and fam 178 when 203-240 agree without 38.

Unfortunately this MS. is wanting from i. 1 to i. 8, but it becomes very valuable thereafter where 178 is missing at xvii. 1-14 and xxii. 16 to end, as it thus controls both 38 and 240.

vi. 1. −μιαν 1-152-179-208 and 203-240 against 38-178.

There are very few novelties. They are limited to the following:

ii. 11. ὁ μὴ ἀδικηθεὶς
15. την διδαχην κρατοῦσα in a difficult place. See grouped readings.
8. —κυριος But so 240 of the family against 38-178.

xvi. 1. —επτα ante αγγελους with *sah*¹/₃ and boh, seems to have the countenance of 240, but 240 is nearly illegible there.
7. ναὶ ναὶ as a doublet is quite unique. (Cf. ταχυ ταχυ 146 in xxii. 12).
13. —και sec. (ante ἐκ τοῦ στομ. του θηριου)
15. κλεπτωσι pro βλεπωσι
xviii. 22. και πας τεχνιτης πασης τεχνης is re-written and very much squeezed in. Possibly scribe omitted πασης τεχνης at first with ℵA (no minuscules).
xix. 16. —το ονομα (against the family) seems to have support by 146*com.* 217 gig vg Fulg. and ps-Ambr.
xx. 9. εκυκλωσε
10. εἰς τον αιωνα (—των αιωνων) Om. των αιωνων 178-240 et 47 f. 119.
xxi. 2. αγιαν is re-written. No variation except magnam of Prim. Aug.
16. —ἡ ante πολις.

At vi. 9 μαρτυριαν is re-written, doubtless εκκλησιαν was first copied from the source which influenced 38 146 and 220 to write this.

A very curious thing develops at vi. 10, where in 178 I saw in the photograph κοινεις for κρινεις. I supposed of course that the tail of the rho was effaced, but I find the same thing in 203. In fact here in the text κοινεις seems the deliberate copy of an original with this reading, and a feeble attempt has been made afterwards by the scribe to add a little tail to omicron to make it rho. In the com. of Oec., where the phrase is repeated, the converse obtains. At first κρινεις seems to be hesitatingly changed to κοινεις. What is the reason? Well, the matter of the earlier part of the commentary would justify this reading of the Lord "commonizing" his people, and so doubtless the κοινεις crept into the text of the older exemplar from which our copies derive. In 240 the word in both text and com. is κρινεις, but even in that rough MS. there seems to have been some hesitation. As to vi. 10 and κοινεις.

There may be traces of this in some other codices, but it is a difficult thing to pick up unless one be on the watch for it, as it is so easy to amend κοινεις to κρινεις. Compare Tertullian and Acts xxi. 28.

At xv. 3 fin. we are favoured with the τῶν αἰώνων "King of the Ages" reading, against the family, (with ℵC 18 56 etc.). As to xv. 3 King of the Ages.

At xv. 6 the writer places λίθον in his margin against λῖνον of his text, and does the converse in the com. (where only λιθον is treated of) by placing λῖνον in the margin there.

One of the grave questions to be settled is the relation of the text to the double com., and to the sister-texts, and to the Oec. com. in 146.

Considerable light is forthcoming.

First, it is only on the rarest occasions that the scribe is influenced by his own commentary. An instance occurs at ii. 13 where he writes τοὔνομα for το ονομα against all others, and Andreas notes begin: "Αντιπας τοὔνομα . . ." whence undoubtedly it came.

Secondly, the relation between the sister-texts is very uneven and fluctuating, although in the main they agree together in the very rarest of their family or communal readings.

As to ii. 20 ποθεῖς.

Thirdly, as to a very important innovation like ποθεῖς at ii. 20 (instead of ἐας or ἀφεις or ἀφηκας) how do we stand? Well, all the texts 38-178-203-240 conspire to make this rather startling innovation, for it seems to be an innovation, since all the Versions disagree, and all the Latins say sinis or permittis or dimittis or permisisti, and if we accept the final clause as 'διδασκειν και πλανασθαι' the expression ποθεῖς would be impossible to fit in. But with the correct reading 'και διδασκει και πλανα' it fits perfectly. The question then is what is its age? We look at Oec. com. in our 146 and find he repeats αφεις of the text. I therefore entered '146*txt* and com.,' but I did not look closely enough or I would have seen that it did not make very good sense. When, however, I looked forward in the Oec. com. to 203 I found ποθεῖς there, and then I saw the proper sense. The expression is:

"ἀλλ' ἔχω κατὰ σοῦ · ἵνα δειχθῇ τὸ τελέως ἀναμάρτητον μόνου θεοῦ · τί δὲ ἔχω · ὅτι ποθεῖς τὴν γυναῖκα Ἰεζάβελ · καὶ οὐ διώκεις αὐτήν."

So Oec. com. is responsible for ποθεῖς. This takes us back to 500 A.D. Can we go further? Well, it seems to me that the teneret of Tertullian, alone among Latins, is of some force here and takes us back to the second century. Tertullian says:

"Spiritus mandat habere se adversus eum: quod teneret mulierem Jezabel, quae se prophetam dicit, and docet atque seducit servos meos ad fornicandum et edendum de idolothytis."

What Oec. in 203 says is to find fault, 'that thou art unwilling to forsake,—that thou dost hug to thy bosom,—that thou has sighed for and thy soul hankers after' the Jezebel-woman, instead of 'CHASING HER AWAY,' she who forsooth calls herself a prophet or prophetess, and teaches and leads astray my servants, to cause them to commit whoredom and participate in meats sacrificed to idols.

Then, how is it we do not find ποθεῖς in the commentary of 146? I looked again at the photographs, and I now see that the word αφεις has been re-written there!! So the secret is out. Apoc. 203 preserves the true Oecumenian expression, and 146 does not. Whether the text of 38-178-203-240 came from the com., or whether the com. repeated it from the text of the day is the question, and here Tertullian's evidence seems rather decisive that ποθεῖς is quite possibly genuine. A new reference to the com. in 240 also confirms ποθεις there, though it is hard to read.

Taking this textual matter in connection with others of considerable importance and certainty of age (by reason of their agreement with א and the very important documents 130 143 200 *syr*S copt) we feel sure that a close view of our group 38 will amply repay detailed study.

It is now quite clear that 203-240 is one recension of the Oec. com., and 146 is another; but in most essentials they are together throughout.
